LIBRARY
OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
052
TRU
v. 34

The person charging this material is responsible for its return to the library from which it was withdrawn on or before the Latest Date stamped below.

Theft, mutilation, and underlining of books are reasons for disciplinary action and may result in dismissal from the University.

To renew call Telephone Center, 333-8400

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY AT URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

SEP 2 8 1982

L161—O-1096

Class 50 . Book 34
Lowell City Library.
Ac. 25182
052
TRU
v.34.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 862. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, July 6, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

An Index to the Thirty-third Volume of Truth will be forwarded, post-free, to any address on application to the Publishing Office, 10, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, E.C. The half-yearly Volume can be obtained at the same address, price 25s.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE wedding, which was originally to have been "as small and as private as possible," has developed into a much bigger function than was ever intended, with the result that there have been daily alterations in the programme, and the "Ceremonial" has been printed four times. The arrangements at St. James's Palace have excited universal dissatisfaction, but the fact is that to attempt to squeeze a fourth of the people who expected to be present into the chapel would be as chimerical an undertaking as to try and put a quart of wine into a pint bottle. The Royal pew, the gallery which is usually occupied by Peeresses, and the small gallery opposite the organ, will be crowded with Diplomatists and members of suites, packed like figs in a drum. Very few members of suites can be accommodated anywhere in the Chapel, so most of these, when the processions arrive in the outer corridor, have been ordered to "form up," and, after the Royalties have entered the Chapel, they will occupy places outside during the service. "Her Majesty's guests," who have been invited to the State Rooms, will merely see the successive processions of guests, bridegroom, and bride pass to the Chapel. They will not get a glimpse of the Queen's procession; and as it has been decided (in order to save time) that the registry of the marriage is to be signed at Buckingham Palace before the déjeuner (and not in the Throne Room at St. James's, as was originally proposed), none of the processions will return through the State apartments.

It is quite untrue that the King and Queen of the Belgians are to be present at the wedding. The guests from abroad are the King and Queen of Denmark and Prince Waldemar, the Grand Duke of Hesse, the Czarewitch, Prince Albert of Flanders, Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia, and Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. The Emperor of Austria is to be represented at the wedding by Count Deym.

Our Epithalamium:

July 6, 1893.

Prince and Princess! On this your wedding-day
We wish you happiness, with all sincerity.
May care and trouble never on you prey!
May your linked lives be joyous ones in verity!
May Fortune send you her best gifts alway,
Health, length of days, and riches and prosperity!
In short, we wish you all those pleasant things
That in its train a happy bridal brings.

And who does not? When marriage music swells,
On hope and joy men's thoughts perforce must tarry;
A touch of nature vibrates in the bells,
And to our hearts a message seems to carry,
Which strikes a chord, and kindly thoughts impels,
Alike when Princes mate or peasants marry:
So is it now, when in the summer's prime
We hear the jangle of your wedding chime.

Yet snobs, 'tis true, your wedding-day have made
A pretext for their snobbery surprising;
Toadies and tufts of every rank and grade
Projects, for their own ends, have been devising;
Gross sycophants have artfully essayed
To make their loyalty self-advertising;
But spite of what they've done, and what they'd do,
The land still turns with loving thoughts to you.

For you can't help the self-assertive aims
Of those who've sought to serve their own ambition;
You cannot help the way they've used your names
To link themselves with people of condition;
'Tis not your fault that they have urged your claims,
In order to enhance their own position,
And cankered with the blighting touch of gold
The sentiments that all should sacred hold.

But none the less you surely must have seen
How ostentation has been thus paraded;
What 'tis that all these fussy efforts mean
By which Society's been lately raided;
And what the actual motives must have been
Which all these Wedding-Present puffs have aided;
Yes, it has been your fate the lengths to know
To which this so-called loyalty can go.

And this is why we write these lines to-day—
To tell you there are many in the nation,
Who in a good old honest English way
Would greet your wedding with congratulation;
And frankly, unaffectedly convey
A message of sincere felicitation;
Hoping true love may in your hearts make growth,
And that true happiness may bless you both.

Considering that every inch of space in the Chapel Royal will be of priceless value on Thursday, it does seem in the highest degree absurd and foolish that it should be necessary for the Court officials to provide adequate accommodation for seven officiating clergymen, arrayed in their ecclesiastical garb, and especially as it has been settled that the whole service is to be performed by the Primate. The Bishop of London, being the Dean of the Chapel, has a right to be present in his robes; but there is no reason whatever why the Bishop of Rochester, Canon Dalton, Canon Hersey, and Messrs. Glyn and Dalton should have been commanded to attend. Surely it might have sufficed to have invited these superfluous divines and their spouses to the luncheon at Buckingham Palace.

Many further communications have reached me during the past week from parties who have been squeezed for contributions to the Royal Wedding presents. In view of the fact, however, that we are now on the eve of the wedding, I have closed this account. It is a satisfaction to me to know that what has been said on the subject in TRUTH has had a good effect in numerous quarters, and that is enough. The only observation that can be appropriately made in connection with the Royal Wedding to-day is to wish joy and prosperity to the happy pair. This I do the more cordially, as both of them seem to be endowed with many gifts—notably modesty and amiability—which are rare in their station, and on that account the more precious. The effusive demonstrations on their wedding ought to teach them one useful lesson—namely, to beware of snobs and toadies, who are the worst enemies of all exalted personages.

I ought to mention that I have heard from a correspondent at Bedford that the fund raised at the Grammar School there has not been expended on a personal offering to the Duke of York and his bride, but has been given to a local fund for sending poor children to the seaside. In such a case, of course, the end goes some way towards justifying the means. But I remain of opinion that all touting for subscriptions among school boys and girls by those in authority over them is in the highest degree objectionable. In this view I feel sure that I shall have the support of all parents, regardless of rank or party.

A Public School boy of my acquaintance lately turned to good account a subscription-list floated in his school. With that knowledge of parental foibles which some children are so quick to acquire, he wrote to his father pointing out how desirable it was that his name should appear in the list with a handsome subscription attached to it. The father rose greedily to the bait, and sent a £5-note for his son to contribute. He subsequently discovered that after the receipt of the money the lad's views had undergone a change. The young hopeful was down in the list for 10s., and the remaining £4. 10s. was unaccounted for. The lesson to the father was hardly dear at the price.

None of those whose craving for notoriety has inspired them to participate in the Wedding Present movement, has been more successful than Mrs. Essery, wife of the Mayor of London, Ontario. Mrs. Essery gave but a modest 5 dols. to Lady Derby's Fund for a wedding gift from the Women of Canada, but, like the widow's mite, her contribution stands out above all other offerings; for, so far as London was concerned, it was the only one. Her 5 dols. not only headed the list, but filled it up entirely.

It is not, perhaps, generally known that under no circumstances can the Duke of York become Duke of Cornwall, and enjoy the use of the revenues of the Duchy, except as King. The direct heir to the Crown only becomes Duke of Cornwall if he is born when his parent is on the Throne. Where there is no such heir the title and the revenues go to the Sovereign.

Next Tuesday Lord Acton (who is now in attendance on the King of Denmark) and Lord Edward Pelham Clinton are to replace Lord Camoys and Sir Michael Biddulph as Lord and Groom in Waiting on the Queen. If Lord Acton is still in attendance on the King of Denmark, then his place will be taken by Lord Bridport. Lady Ampthill will go to Windsor next Tuesday as Lady-in-Waiting, in succession to Lady Downe, and she is to accompany the Queen to Osborne.

There was a tremendous crowd at the State Ball on Friday night, and the room was quite full long before the Royal procession came in. The opening dances of the Royalties are regulated by etiquette on these occasions, and they went off as usual, but most of the "exalted personages" appeared to be very tired, as well they might be after such a hard day. The supper procession was of unusual length, owing to the large number of Royalties, and the Diplomatic Corps had mustered in great force. The supper-room, which has been lately redecorated (and the fine parquet floor has been renovated) was arranged with a buffet round three sides. There was a magnificent display of gold plate from Windsor, both on the table and on scarlet shields which were fixed on the walls. The room was decorated with palms and flowering plants. The Royal party remained at the centre table, the side ones being available for the guests. The staircases were profusely decorated with plants and flowers, the beauties of which were enhanced by the electric light.

After attending the Levée last week, "a loyal but practical" subject went home and wrote to TRUTH to suggest that "this stupid function" should be turned to a useful purpose by allowing ladies (and others, if they are willing to pay) to gaze on the show for a small fee—say 5s. per head. My correspondent's idea is that the proceeds should be given to the hospitals or some other charitable purpose, and this would have the advantage of being good for everybody. It would afford pleasure to those who paid, profit to those who received, and comfort to the parties attending the Levée, who would know that they had an appreciative gallery to admire their splendours, and that they were doing something for the suffering and destitute, instead of feeling that they are making an exhibition of themselves for nothing. The idea is such an excellent one that I would suggest its immediate adoption, not only at Levées, but at Drawing Rooms and all Court functions.

For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see pages 42, 43 in the present issue.
For AMUSEMENTS, see page 41.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see pages 37, 50.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught are going in a few days to Osborne Cottage, and will stay there until the end of August, when they are to proceed to Scotland, for a two months' residence at Abergeldie Castle, which the Queen has lent to them for the autumn.

Next week the Duke and Duchess of Fife are going to Scotland, and they will reside for a month at Duff House, their family place in Banffshire, before proceeding to New Mar Lodge, Aberdeenshire, for the shooting season.

Mr. Bayard obtains a considerable rise in the matter of precedence by being promoted from being a Minister of Legation to an Ambassador. Since 1840, the rule at our Court has been that Foreign Ministers take precedence before Marquises and after Dukes, while Ambassadors, who are supposed to represent the person of their Sovereigns, have precedence of everybody. Until 1840 the Foreign Ministers took precedence before Dukes, but in that year the Duke of Sutherland (grandfather of the present Duke) addressed a formal remonstrance to Lord Palmerston (then Foreign Secretary) against Foreign Ministers (not Ambassadors) having places given to them at the Court entertainments before himself et suos pares, and although he was snubbed in the first instance (being told that the Queen "would exercise her own pleasure in such matters in her own house"), yet after a few months he achieved his object, and the present arrangement (Dukes before Ministers) was settled by her Majesty and Prince Albert.

Even Viceregal duty can at times wear a stern aspect. The alternate experiences of undergoing gales at sea and the receiving and answering of addresses on land, which have been Lord Houghton's during the past fortnight, could hardly be looked on as pleasant by the most determined optimist. The weather did not favour the Viceregal tour of inspection and inquiry throughout Western and Southern Ireland, especially last week, when the Enchantress was storm-stayed off the coast of Kerry. Lord Houghton, with his private secretary, Colonel Jekyl, and attended by Mr. Dundas, A.D.C., was present on the opening day of the Limerick Horse Show. The weather was again rainy, as well as windy, which, however, did not prevent a large attendance. It is well that those who have a leading part in governing a country should visit all parts of it, and understand its needs. Prosperity, however, comes neither through official tours of inspection nor philanthropic effort. The royal way to it lies through a practical appreciation on the part of the people in the country of the fact that "Providence helps those who help themselves."

I am asked to state that the annual meeting in connection with the Countess of Dufferin's Fund for supplying Female Medical Aid to the Women of India will be held by permission of Lord Brassey at 24, Park-lane, on Wednesday next (July 12), at 3.30 p.m.

Lord and Lady Derby are expected to leave Canada about the 18th on their return to England, and they intend to reside at Knowsley for several months.

Sir William Mackinnon, who has recently died, was, I believe, really actuated by higher motives than desire of gain in his connection with the British East African Chartered Company. He was a notable instance of the sagacity and perseverance which are the characteristics of Scotsmen. When a mere lad he went to India with no stock of capital beyond brains. On his arrival at Calcutta he perceived the advantages of substituting a steam service for the native craft engaged in the coast trade, and he laid the foundations of what ultimately became the British India Steam Navigation Company. This brought him into connection with East Africa, and when Sultan Seyd Burghash came to England in 1873, he formed a friendship with him, which led to the formation of the British East African Company. On this he, as well as other members of his family, spent large sums. Sir William Mackinnon's private charity was always on the largest scale.

There was not a better known man in Scotland than Mr. John Hope, of Edinburgh, who died last week at the age of eighty-seven. He was the son of a very famous Edinburgh solicitor, and became a Writer to the Signet in 1829, and he was the last remaining link with the old legal and social circles of Edinburgh. Mr. Hope, who possessed an enormous fortune, was an enthusiastic promoter of temperance and ultra-Protestant principles, and he spared neither trouble nor money in advocating his views. He was long a very prominent member of the Edinburgh Town Council. He gave very large sums for the benefit of the charitable and benevolent institutions in which he was interested, and when the Volunteer movement commenced he enrolled and equipped a company of 600 cadets entirely at his own expense. Three years ago Mr. Hope set apart £200,000 to endow the "Hope Trust," the object of which is to forward the "Anti-Popery" movement, and to promote total abstinence principles.

Mr. Hope inherited from his father one of the largest and finest private cellars of wine and spirits in Scotland. He gave away in the course of time a considerable quantity of the wine for the benefit of the sick poor. About three years ago, when Mr. Hope settled his affairs, he decided to get rid of the remainder of his cellar, in order to avoid any mention of its contents in his will. The various bins were accordingly overhauled, and several dozens of old wines were poured down the kitchen sink, and with them also went a number of kegs of brandy, rum, and whisky, which had been in wood since the beginning of the century, and which would have been absolutely priceless in the estimation of any connoisseur. That one of the most sagacious men of business in Scotland, and so shrewd a lawyer, should have acted so foolishly, not only in the small matter of Electric Cooking.—Messrs. B. Verity & Sons' Exhibition of Cooking and Heating by Electricity open daily, 3 to 5.30 p.m., at 137, Regent-st., W. Admission free. Most interesting exhibition.

Bournemouth.—Royal Bath Hotel. The only hotel on the East Cliff. Grounds of Five Acres. 1,000 feet sea-frontage. South aspect. Moderate charges. Tariff on application. Comparison invited.

the cellar, but also in the nonsensical trust to which he has left more than £200,000, only shows to what extravagant lengths a man will go when he once gets saturated with fads.

Mr. Edmund Sturge, who died last week at the age of eighty-five, was a brother of Joseph Sturge, the famous Abolitionist, and was himself a distinguished philanthropist. Mr. Sturge worked hard for many years in the anti-slavery cause, and he was mainly instrumental in carrying out many important reforms in the West Indies. He was for thirty years the guiding spirit of the Anti-Slavery Society. Mr. Sturge was a Radical of the old Manchester school, and a "peace at any price" man. He was an enthusiastic supporter of Mr. Bright at Birmingham.

The beautiful Aldermaston estate, in Berkshire (which includes about the finest woodland domain in England), was offered for sale last week, when a bid of £100,000, to include the timber, was refused. The property has since been sold for £80,000 to Mr. Charles Keyser, who is to buy the timber at a valuation.

The county of Cornwall is organising a Fisheries Exhibition on a large scale, to be held at Truro from July 25 to August 16. The show will comprise exhibits from all parts of the world, and it is to be made the starting point for a permanent Museum and School of Fishery.

Rarely has cricket been "played so low down" in a first-class match as in the encounter between Oxford and Cambridge on Monday, when the Oxford "tail," in order to secure a "follow on" before the wicket had been knocked to pieces, endeavoured to get out without making runs, and the Cambridge bowlers endeavoured to checkmate this sportsmanlike policy by bowling wides and no-balls. If the Oxford men really intended the tactics attributed to them, their conduct seems to have been worse than low, for it was stupid. It is difficult for a batsman to get out if the other side do not want to put him out; while it is absolutely impossible for him to prevent the other side bowling wides and no-balls. I have heard it said that University teams never do themselves justice at Lord's. This certainly seems to have been the case in 1893.

A correspondent complains of the charge for a dinner for eight persons at the White Hart Hotel, Windsor. I give the particulars below. The menu comprised spring soup, a piece of salmon, mutton cutlets, two ducklings, and currant and raspberry tart. I am always averse to express an opinion as to whether a dinner which I have not had an opportunity of tasting was or was not dear at the price. I have paid half-a-guinea for a dinner of eight courses which would have been dear at half-a-crown, and I have paid half-a-crown for a dinner of four courses for which I would not have grudged half-a-guinea. On the face of it, however, 8s. per head for the above-mentioned fare seems a large demand:—

	£.	s.	d.
Dinners	3	4	0
Dessert and ices	0	8	0
Wines	0	6	6
Brandy, &c.	0	1	0
Aërated waters	0	4	9
Attendance	0	4	0
	£4	8	3

A lady writes with reference to the complaints of "Fellows" against the management of the Imperial Institute:—

> Fellows may justly complain of the way in which their promised privilege of admission on two days when the public are excluded has been whittled down. But their friends have also cause for complaint. I and another friend were taken to the Institute one evening last week by a lady who is a Fellow. To our surprise, we were called upon to pay 1s. 6d. each for admission. We might have passed over this, if there had been anything to see for our money. But 1s. 6d. for looking over an unfinished building in an empty state, and wandering about with about a dozen other stragglers, struck us all as exorbitant. What the Imperial Institute may ultimately become I cannot say, but at present I would recommend intending visitors to select a sixpenny day, and they are not likely then to feel that they have had too much for their money.

Mr. F. W. Bain, Fellow of all Souls', Oxford, has called my attention to an extraordinary series of literary coincidences between his book "The Principles of Wealth-Creation," and the Duke of Argyll's work on "The Unseen Foundations of Society," with the praises of which the Press was lately ringing. Charges of plagiarism are thorny subjects, which I am averse to handle. Moreover, I have not read the Duke of Argyll's magnum opus, and I have only glanced at Mr. Bain's book. It is therefore not for me to express an opinion. It seems, however, beyond dispute that the two books teem with passages closely parallel, not only in thought, but in language. Here are a few samples:—

Mr. Bain.	The Duke of Argyll.
The economical system which rests upon a mathematical, statical, deductive, and hypothetical method, assumes throughout an economic man . . . . In direct opposition to this, a scientific analysis of Wealth-Creation sets man as he is, in society as it is, a weird and thousand-sided being . . . . ("The Principles of Wealth-Creation," p. 187.)	It has been a just complaint made against the older economists that they have set up a maimed image of humanity as their model, that they have created what has been called an "economic man," an artificial being which does not exist, because man, as he actually lives and acts, is an infinitely more complex being than they have represented him to be. ("The Unseen Foundations of Society," p. 28.)
Value springs from the relation between the valuing mind and the thing valued, and it is pure absurdity to suppose that value in use and value in exchange are two things that we can separate (p. 52).	In fact, exchangeability is merely one of the innumerable forms of use, so that value in exchange cannot be separated, generically, from value in use (p. 57).
But longing, however great, will not effect anything. Wish must become act, will (p. 81). [This is in relation to the question of demand.]	Vague aspirations, not leading to any effort, are not, in the full sense of the word, desires; still less do they constitute that which we all mean by the word demand. This word, in itself, has the force of a desire so strong and so definite as to lead to effort and to sacrifice. . . (p. 57).
It has often been pointed out that Adam Smith never gives a definition of wealth (p. 16).	It is a curious and a memorable fact that Adam Smith made no formal attempt to define the word or the thing which constituted the great subject of his inquiry (p. 34).

C.O.M. Whisky.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to C.O.M. Whisky. every Railway Station.—Andrews & Co., C.O.M. Whisky. Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand.

Pfungst Frères' Extra Quality Champagnes.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. Pfungst & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

It is obvious that it [Smith's definition of wealth] is no definition at all. It is a mere vague description. . . . Smith never meant the phrase to be a definition (p. 18—text and note).	The vagueness of the words does not serve the purpose of a definition at all; . . . indeed, they were not intended or thought out by the author as serving such a purpose (p. 67).
Till that question is decided, it is vain to imagine that you can decide what labour is productive, what unproductive (p. 191).	Till men are agreed upon what they understand or will accept as products, the use of the words productive and unproductive must be indeterminate and unintelligible.

The foregoing are merely samples taken at random from some ten MS. folios of similiar coincidences in argument or illustrations, or both. Among the champions of the rights of property the Duke of Argyll is a stalwart of the stalwarts. I do not suppose that he would convert to his own use the thoughts, arguments, and language of another man without owning the obligation. But if this is merely another of those accidental coincidences which from time to time startle the literary world, it is certainly one of the most extraordinary of its class.

Alexander Smith has been convicted at Edinburgh of fabricating historical and literary documents, and he appears to have carried on this trade for several years on a very large scale. From the evidence of the experts who had examined the documents which Smith sold, one would be justified in concluding that such collectors and their agents are congenital idiots; for they do not appear to have ever taken the slightest pains to verify the alleged relics of Burns, Scott, Oliver Cromwell, Charles Edward Stuart, and other literary and political celebrities, for which they were ready to pay large sums. The paper on which the Burns poems and letters were written did not in the least resemble that which was invariably used towards the close of the last century. The poems, indeed, were written on modern cartridge-paper. As to Scott's letters, a collection purporting to have been written in 1801, 1804, 1818, and 1820 were all indited on paper of the same size and watermark. The Jacobite documents were described as being palpable forgeries, defective not only in the handwriting and signatures, but also in the materials and in the contents, while the dates were outrageously wrong. All these fabrications, however, had deceived the intelligent collectors of such relics, who seem to have accepted anything which Smith brought to them without a glimmer of suspicion. Collectors were so gullible, indeed, that they went to Smith and told him precisely the sort of relics which they desired to purchase, and when they presently returned to find out whether he could comply with their wishes, lo and behold! the letter, or poem, or document which had been indicated was sure to be forthcoming.

The Minnehaha Minstrels of Manchester are again able to report a most satisfactory financial result for their last season (1892-3), no less than £1,055 having been distributed among various local charities, as the result of six performances. In all, the Minnnehaha Minstrels have now distributed £8,098. 19s. 10d. since 1880. Other amateur associations, please copy.

A subscription is being promoted among Old Wellingtonians for the purpose of presenting a testimonial to the Rev. E. C. Wickham, who is vacating the Headmastership of Wellington at the end of the current term. The circular contains the familiar announcement that "it is proposed to publish the names of subscribers," though not the amounts. Is it always impossible to get up a testimonial without resorting to this expedient? I fear so. No doubt the system becomes less objectionable when the amounts given are not published, but I fear that the end in view may be defeated when a place in the list may be obtained for a paltry donation of a shilling or sixpence. In the case of a schoolmaster there is special danger of such a result. Many lads take away from school tender recollections of the Headmaster, but it is not always tenderness of the affections.

It was only the other day that I commented on the lamentable manner in which Wellington School has failed to fulfil the intentions with which it was founded. Mr. Wickham has doubtless been a successful Headmaster, judged by the usual standards, but he cannot be acquitted of a share of responsibility for this failure. His successor, whoever he is to be, will do well to bear this in mind.

The Master and Fellows of St. John's College, Cambridge, have presented the Rev. W. F. Pryke, Headmaster of Lancaster School, to the living of Marwood, Devonshire, which is worth about £500 a year, with house. Mr. Pryke is a late scholar of St. John's, and he took high mathematical honours in 1866.

The Crown living of Bradworthy, North Devon, which is worth £400 a year, with house, has been placed at Mr. Gladstone's disposal by the death of the Rev. J. B. Clyde, who had been Vicar for forty-eight years, having been presented by Sir Robert Peel in 1845.

Bishop Sheepshanks is to be enthroned in Norwich Cathedral on Thursday, the 13th, and he will at once take up his residence at the Palace and commence his work in the diocese. Bishop Pelham, who has taken a place near Norwich, has refused to accept more than half of the retiring pension to which he is legally entitled, so his successor will commence with a stipend of about £3,400 a year.

The Bishop of Rochester is to be the special preacher at Westminster Abbey next Sunday at the evening service in the nave.

"ALWAYS REFRESHING." Osborne, Bauer, & Cheeseman's "INCOMPARABLE SMELLING SALTS," as supplied to the Queen, are invaluable in hot assemblies, and of great value in the sick-room. The best companion also at Church, Chapel, Ball, Theatre, or any heated assembly.—Sold by all Chemists and Perfumers in Bottles, 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s., and 2s. 6d. Post free (for stamps) from OSBORNE, BAUER, & CHEESEMAN, Sole Proprietors of Bauer's Head (and Bath) Soap, "Nafatha Soap" for tender feet, "Baby's Soap," &c., &c., 19, Golden-square, Regent-street, London, W. — Be sure to ask for Osborne, Bauer, & Cheeseman's.

Mr. Gladstone has caused much satisfaction in Evangelical circles by presenting Canon Acheson, of Chester, to the important rectory of All Souls', Langham-place, which has always been a Low Church stronghold. Canon Acheson has been rector of St. Peter's, Chester, since 1873, when he was presented to that living by the late Bishop Jacobson.

An amusing correspondence has been published in some of the Scotch papers between the Rev. J. K. Cameron, Free Church Minister of Brodick, N.B., and Mr. Cassimo Latona, a boatman of the same place. The Minister, who has previously distinguished himself by his fanatical Sabbatarianism, wrote:—

Free Manse, Brodick, May 31, 1893.

My Dear Latona,—I am exceedingly sorry to hear it reported that you were out on Sabbath last in a rowing boat with some strangers. I hope it is not true. I should be sorry were it so, not only because of the violation of the Sabbath law involved in it, but also because it would necessitate our taking measures to put it down, and the people would rise very much in rebellion against you. I should be exceedingly sorry were anything of this to happen.

I would call upon you, but I leave to-day for a small holiday. —Believe me, yours very truly, (Signed) J. K. Cameron.

For the proper understanding of this edifying document it should be explained that Mr. Latona was not a member of the Free Church flock, or in any other way amenable to the jurisdiction of its pastor. He accordingly wrote back, as he had every right to do, that the letter was a gratuitous impertinence, and demanded its withdrawal. In view of the threat used, he also informed the reverend gentleman that he had placed the matter in the hands of solicitors at Glasgow. As the "meenister" then took refuge in silence, Mr. Latona next wrote him a pretty stiff lecture on the error of his ways, and sent the correspondence to the Press as a proof of what religious bigotry would do if it could. It would have a most excellent effect if a few more exponents of Sabbatarian intolerance could be tackled with equal spirit.

A retired Sergeant-Major named Hathaway, of the Wesleyan Methodist persuasion, died the other day at Ewelme, Oxfordshire, and, the sexton having refused to toll the bell at his funeral, the matter was referred to the Rector. That worthy replied:—

The church bell is tolled for those funerals only which are conducted according to the Prayer Book service.

H. K. Simcox.

It is impossible to say what sectarian animosity is or is not capable of; but I should have thought that even a country Rector would have been ready to waive his professional prejudices in honour of an old soldier, who has served his Queen and country faithfully for the best part of his life.

I have received £1. 1s. from "Mr. Walls" (Truth Puzzle Prize, No. 742), towards the Toy Fund, and £5 from Paris towards Lady Jeune's Holiday Fund.

The Committee on soldiers' rations which Lord Roberts appointed before he left India has come to the conclusion that great improvements both in quality and quantity can be effected without the expenditure of a farthing beyond the present cost of messing. This is very much what has already been demonstrated in actual practice at Aldershot. There can therefore be no excuse for delay in carrying the recommendations into effect. The Committee seem, however, to have also expressed a very strong opinion that the unsatisfactory feeding of the soldier in India has been in a measure due to downright dishonesty. It is a pity that this should not be brought home to the right quarter.

An officer sends me the following, apropos to some recent lucubrations of a Service journal upon the treatment of Army Service Corps clerks at Aldershot:—

Everybody knows that not only the Officer Commanding the Army Service Corps at Aldershot, but also the second in command, are practical, able, and efficient officers, who fully sympathise with their men. It is therefore needless to drag them into the discussion. They are only Executive Officers, and if they have in any way failed in this matter, it is only in not calling attention by incessant remonstrance to (1) the fact that there are too many clerks, butchers, and bakers at Aldershot; (2) the injudicious and indefensible system of employing such men as labourers—not at, as the Broad Arrow ignorantly calls it, the Corps' "own fatigue work."

The establishment of the Supply Branch, A.S.C., is not supposed to be in excess of the number that can be legitimately employed in time of peace. Consequently, if from reduction of stations, redistribution of work, or alteration of system, the establishment becomes in excess of the requirements, the Headquarter Staff should bring the fact to notice. Under no circumstances should it permit men to be employed except for the duty for which they are, with the sanction of Parliament, enlisted.

Every man is tested as to trade proficiency prior to enlistment, and the supply of recruits for the A.S.C. has always been in excess of the demand. Consequently, if inefficient clerks, butchers, or bakers, are enlisted, the responsibility rests with the administration. Again, there is no difficulty in getting rid from the A.S.C. of "loafers," "skulkers," and "Queen's hard bargains," to adopt the favourite expressions of your contemporary, as all the men get continuous departmental pay irrespective of employment, the Adjutant-General never refuses approval for discharge of any incapable man. To enlist men who are not efficient clerks or tradesmen, or to retain "loafers," "skulkers," or "Queen's hard bargains," enlisted as clerks, in order to employ them as labourers, is a foolish policy, and unjust to the soldier and the taxpayer. To any one who knows the facts, this lame defence in the Broad Arrow would seem to have been inspired by the Headquarter administration.

With reference to the last paragraph in Truth about Hamilton Depot, I hear of several other Depots where there are Colour-sergeants who have passed the regulation limit of their tour of service at their Depots. At Beverley there seem to be two, if not more. So far as I can learn, these irregularities are the result of arrangement between the Officers commanding Battalions and the Officers commanding at the Depots; but it is a strange state of things that the Queen's Regulations should be systematically set aside in this way.

When will the "Spending Departments," as they are so well called, learn the folly of paying enormous sums for new inventions which have never been tested in war, and are certain to become speedily obsolete? The latest example of this fatuity — if it be not something worse—is the Watkin Range-finder. For this invention the helpless taxpayer, but a few years back, paid the inventor £25,000 down, supplemented by a permanent salary of £1,000 a year. Now we have the satisfaction of hearing from Colonel Richardson, Commandant of the School of Gunnery, a sweeping condemnation of the Watkin and all other Range-finders, even for the coast defence—the one purpose where their value was supposed to be indisputable. The story of the Brennan torpedo over again.

Rational Dog Feeding.—Give wholesome and nutritious food (Spratt's Patent Meat Fibrine Dog Cakes). Do not give tit-bits and dainties because your dog, like a spoilt child, prefers what suits his palate. See that the Dog Cakes are stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "×," as cheap and innutritious imitations are often substituted for extra profit. Pamphlet on Canine Diseases post free, Spratt's Patent, Limited, Bermondsey, London.

The Imperial, East Cliff, Bournemouth.—Position, appointments, and cuisine unsurpassed. 100 rooms. Luxuriously furnished. Electric light. Private omnibuses meet trains. Telegraphic address, Imperial, Bournemouth.—Chas. A. Reingpach, Manager.

There are some points in connection with military administration which no one outside a Government office can hope to understand. Perhaps some one in authority can explain the meaning of the following communication. To the uninitiated, it appears a downright swindle :—

Probably few people are aware that fully one-fifth of the N.C.O.'s in some regiments in India receive no pay for their ranks. Every month brings to these unfortunates a charge in this form :—

"Pay Examiner's Office, Calcutta.

"Final disallowance of Pay for the month of ———. To be credited to Government by the end of the current month.

"Item: Difference of Pay between Lance-Sergeant and Sergeant [or Lance-Corporal and Corporal].

"Total Rs.———."

This goes on month after month without a word of explanation. The disallowance cannot be explained as back pay overdrawn. One man in this regiment has held rank since last August, and had drawn but three months back pay, yet the disallowance continues to come in. A Sergeant in this regiment has held his rank for a year, but has only drawn Corporal's pay as yet.

Mr. George P. Hogan, now residing at Auckland, New Zealand, enlisted in the 19th Regiment in November, 1852, at the age of eighteen. He served as an N.C.O. through the Crimean campaign and the Indian Mutiny, was wounded at the Alma and at the capture of the Redan, received a commission as Ensign in the 4th West India Regiment in 1867, and was gazetted out in 1890 at his own request. Being in straitened circumstances, with a family of six dependent upon him, and feeling the infirmities of age approaching, he wrote last year to apply for one of the pensions promised to the Crimean and Mutiny veterans. This was the reply from the War Office :—

Sir,—In reply to your letter of July 2 last, requesting that you may be granted a special pension in consideration of your services in the Crimea and in the suppression of the Indian Mutiny, before you obtained a commission, I am directed by the Secretary of State for War to acquaint you that a Chelsea Pension cannot be awarded to any one who retired from the Service as a commissioned officer, even although he may have been promoted from the ranks.

So that this gallant old warrior is denied a pension because he has served his country too well. His fatal mistake was that he won a commission. Some means ought to be found of putting this matter right. Failing that, Mr. Hogan remains an awful warning to young soldiers against trop de zèle in her Majesty's Service.

I have lately been hearing a good deal about Mrs. Atkins's wash-tub. The latest news on the subject comes from the Depot of the Medical Staff Corps at Aldershot, where the privates' ladies complain that the Staff-Sergeants' ladies get an unfair share of the Depot washing. I should have thought that a Staff-Sergeant's lady would have had a soul above taking in washing, and this seems to be the case; for Mrs. Atkins's great grievance is that Mrs. Staff Sergeant, having got the washing, hires a woman from the town to negotiate it—the sweating system again. I don't know that this is a case where I can do much; but I should have thought that it is just the sort of matter that some of the old women at headquarters would delight to deal with.

Sundry growls have reached me respecting the manner in which the profits of the annual Military Tournament, now amounting to a very considerable sum, have been applied. If there is any foundation for these complaints, several military charities have serious cause for dissatisfaction at the way they have been treated. This, however, I shall not assume, unless I have authority for doing so from the charities in question. If the governing authorities of any of these charities care to communicate with me on the subject, I shall be glad to hear what they have to say; if they do not, I can hardly be expected to take up the cudgels for them.

The military authorities at Gibraltar no longer notify beforehand the exact hour at which alarms will be sounded; but a margin is fixed within which the event is to come off. Thus the Gazette of June 15 announced :—

According to to-day's Fortress Orders an alarm will be fired at some time between 2nd Evening Gunfire to-night and 2nd Evening Gunfire on Wednesday, the 21st inst., with a view of testing the readiness of the troops.

This alteration follows immediately on a remark upon the subject in Truth, and, as it is a decided improvement, I venture to make the further remark that the alarm should be given next time at some other hour than 6 a.m. That was the time selected under the above order, and it strikes the unprofessional mind as being of all the twenty-four hours the one when the troops are most likely to be ready for a summons.

From Battalion orders of the 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers, dated May 27 and May 30, I gather that recent remarks in Truth on the official price of khaki have had some effect. An order of the latter date announces that the monthly contribution of Rs. 10, paid to the regimental funds by the Master Tailor, will cease, and that, "owing to this concession," the price of khaki obtained from the tailor's shop will be Rs. 5. The strength of the battalion in question is, I understand, fully 1,000, which would mean for the tailor about 2,000 suits per annum. The reduction of 3 annas per suit, which has now been made, therefore represents about Rs. 500 beyond the Rs. 120 per annum which the tailor would have contributed to the regimental funds—a very substantial matter. The question still remains, however, why the men have to pay the regimental tailor Rs. 5 for a suit which can be bought in the bazaars at Rs. 4. 6a.

The following arithmetical puzzle appears among the Battalion Orders of the 5th V.B. The Cameronians :—

Bisley Competition.

The Commanding Officer will give £50 towards defraying the expenses of ten men, but no one to receive more than £4.

Unless the C.O. expects £10 change out of his £50, how

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one-half West-end price.—Phillips & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate-street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to atest fashion.

Mariani Wine is an aid to intellectual exertion, and is indispensable to brain-workers and others who suffer from mental depression, insomnia and dyspepsia. "A powerful rejuvenator."

is this to be managed? By the way, this £50 which the C.O. so kindly promises to "give," comes, I understand, out of the Battalion funds. A curious kind of gift!

The appointment of Sir Michael Culme Seymour to be Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean has given great and universal satisfaction in the Service, for he is a first-rate sailor, and is altogether a man of high capacity, and is very popular. The Admiralty have done well to select a really strong man for the important post at the present juncture.

Among the "pulpit references" to the loss of the Victoria, the Rev. C. Marson, Vicar of Clevedon, has particularly distinguished himself. His reverence said:—

> The calamity was not alone. Blow upon blow had come to the nation by the same hand. The recent death of the heir to the throne, the drought of this year, the appearance of cholera, the state of men's minds, the insane attempt to break up the union of our Empire, and, under the name of Home Rule, giving (sic) an undue influence to the Roman Catholic majority over the Protestant and industrious Irish—all these were evils direct from the hand of God.

In his allusion to the present "state of men's minds," the Rev. Mr. Marson is presumably alluding to his own mental condition. No doubt it is almost a national calamity that so many pulpits should be occupied by clerics in this afflicted state. Supposing, however, that this good man has any information tending to show that the loss of the ship is due to "the act of God," it is to be hoped that he will be called as a witness at the Court-martial—if it is not impiety to hold a Court-martial at all under such circumstances.

Mr. W. A. R. Hoare has expressed his willingness to take ten boys, sons of blue-jackets lost with H.M.S. Victoria, and to clothe, feed, and educate them on board his training-ship Mercury. I invite the attention of the Lord Mayor and others officially connected with the Victoria Relief Fund to this munificent offer, which is a good example of charity in the most practical shape. The offer is equivalent to a subscription of £1,000 to the Relief Fund, and if accepted it will insure to every one of the ten boys selected an efficient training for a naval career under the best possible conditions.

The first article in the Naval Uniform Regulations, which were recently issued, orders that "no deviations are to be authorised without special Admiralty sanction previously obtained." Nevertheless, Sir Algernon Heneage has just issued a special order at Sheerness (which has caused much grumbling on the station), that officers on certain occasions "are to wear white gloves." This order is a distinct violation of the Regulations, as it makes compulsory what the Admiralty decided to be optional.

A few years ago the Jumna, one of the Indian troop-ships, was condemned. An offer of £20,000 was made for the vessel, which, however, was refused by the Government authorities. The Jumna, having since remained in dock, was sold the other day for £6,500. It would be interesting to learn who are the officials whose fatuity has thus caused the country a loss of £13,500.

Following on the advice which I last week gave, apropos to the La Plata fiasco, I would advise all intending excursionists by the numerous yachting tours now advertised, to ascertain whether the vessel which is to carry them has a Board of Trade certificate, and flies the British flag. The practice is increasing to a dangerous extent of buying up worn-out ocean-liners and running them as public yachts, with the most hyperbolical advertisements of their accommodation and sea-going qualities. When, as in the La Plata case, the Board of Trade officials refuse to pass these craft, the law is occasionally evaded by transferring them to a foreign flag. My readers will probably agree with me that if one must be drowned, one may as well be drowned under the Union Jack—and there seem to be quite enough opportunities of perishing under those circumstances.

I have been asked to state that the Yacht Owners' Association, of 28, Albemarle-street, is in no way connected with the "Clubs Yachting Association," which is responsible for the proceedings in connection with the La Plata. It would certainly be unfortunate if any misapprehension should arise on that point; for the Yacht Owners' Association is formed for the benefit and protection of the yachting fraternity against the tricks of shippers, yachting agents, and the legion of harpies who prey upon the amateur shipowner. It would not be a bad thing if the Association could extend its operations for the benefit of the yachting excursionist as well as the yacht-owner.

As the present Government has accepted the principle that the State should aim at being a model employer of labour, it might with advantage to its reputation look into the case of Richard Holland, formerly foreman of the Royal Gardens, Hampton Court. Holland, after being employed with credit at Hampton Court for thirty-six years, was discharged owing to deafness; but as he did not hold a Civil Service certificate, and the Superannuation Act of 1887 had stopped "compassionate allowances," he got no pension. In lieu thereof he was awarded a gratuity of £33, which was hardly calculated to support him and his wife for the rest of their days, and they are now within measurable distance of the workhouse. In the last House of Commons Mr. Plunket stated in the most unanswerable way the legal obstacles which prevented Holland receiving a pension, but it seems to me that what is required is the removal of those legal obstacles. Apparently, if not removed, they can be very easily got round, for I hear that Holland's successor, who was in the same position, has somehow got a pension, although he had not been in the service so long.

It is, I believe, a fact that letters posted in London after 3.45 p.m., and on Saturdays after 2.45 p.m., are not delivered in Croydon till the following morning. Croydon is about ten miles from the Royal Exchange; trains are running there from London every few minutes. The borough has a population of over 100,000, and to all intents and purposes it is a London suburb. That in the matter of postal communication it should be as far off as Fashionable Stationery.—Invitations for Weddings, Dinners, Dances; Ball Programmes, Menus, Visiting Cards, &c.—Parkins & Gotto, Court Stationers, Oxford-street, London. Patterns free.

Herefordshire Cider & Perry, six distinct varieties. Gold Medal, Paris, 1888. The Bishop of Ely writes, 1892, "Your Cider & Perry are excellent." List from H.P. Bulmer & Co., Rylands, Hereford.

Manchester or Plymouth is indeed a striking illustration of the inability of the Post-Office to move with the times—more especially as representations on this subject have been made again and again, and have been promised consideration.

It may be hoped that the Government will lose no more time in giving teachers in Board Schools legal security against wrongful dismissal; for hardly a week now passes without the papers reporting some case in which a certificated teacher has been very badly treated by his employers. The case of Mr. Copsen, the Master of the Board School at Bishop's Castle, is, of itself, sufficient to justify the decisive interference of the Whitehall authorities. One of the members of the Bishop's Castle Board is the Rev. Joshua Biggs. Mr. Biggs, at a Board meeting, brought a charge of immorality against Mr. Copsen, who placed his case in the hands of the National Union of Teachers. Mr. Biggs was required either to withdraw his charge and apologise for it, or to prove it in a court of law. This exemplary minister of religion could not prove the charge, and would not withdraw it, so Mr. Copsen brought an action for slander. Mr. Biggs then put in a plea of "privilege," and Mr. Justice Wright very reluctantly gave a verdict on the legal point for the defendant, observing, "It is very unfortunate for the plaintiff, but he has cleared his character. I would venture to hope that the reverend defendant will not find it necessary to insist on the costs." As was to be expected, however, the Rev. Mr. Biggs did "insist" upon costs, and at a meeting of the Bishop's Castle School Board, which was held a few days ago, Mr. Copsen received three months' notice of dismissal. It would appear, therefore, that a member of a School Board may bring charges of the most serious kind against a teacher, and when called upon to prove his statements he may wriggle out of the scrape by the plea of "privilege." Then if the teacher takes legal steps and clears his character, he is to be dismissed by his employers.

From a communication which has been addressed to me by a Dover gentleman, I learn that the Weights and Measures Act is still allowed to remain more or less a dead letter in that borough. At the meeting of a Corporation Committee a few days since, a report from an Inspector of the Board of Trade was read, complaining that proper administrative action had not been taken under the Act, and that the people of Dover were consequently not receiving the protection which it was the duty of the local authority to give them. No notice was taken of the letter from the Board of Trade, and, as I stated in TRUTH some time ago, the Corporation have similarly ignored previous reminders as to their duty. Why the Act is not satisfactorily enforced is more than I can say. Not for a moment do I suppose that it is because the Council comprises an Alderman who is a grocer, a Councillor who is a baker, and another Councillor who is a coal merchant. Nor do I care even if it is a fact, as I am informed, that the Inspector of Weights and Measures is a grocer's assistant. Possibly the explanation is that, in the opinion of the Town Council, Dover tradesmen are so superlatively honest that they do not stand in need of that constant watching and checking which is found desirable elsewhere. I shall be surprised, however, if their customers are of the same mind.

Mr. Thomas Weir, Clerk to the Trades House of Glasgow, writes as follows with reference to a paragraph in last week's TRUTH:—

> I beg you will allow me to state for the information of your readers that no part of the expenses of the Trades House excursion, which was held on the 30th ult., and to which presumably your paragraph refers, was paid out of the funds of the Trades House. The arrangements for the excursion were made by me, and the expenses in connection therewith have been met by the payments of past and present members of the House, who were present on the occasion, and, so far as these were insufficient, by the Deacon-Convener and Collector. The revenues of this ancient Corporation are strictly applied towards the maintenance of "decayed brethren," as originally intended.

I am delighted to give publicity to this statement, because up to quite recent times a very different state of things prevailed, and hence arose the misapprehension on which my paragraph was founded. I understand that for a long period £130—not £30 as erroneously stated in a local journal—was annually voted for the entertainment of office-bearers and their friends; and although this scandalous malversation of funds has been temporarily suspended, there seems to be no security but the force of public opinion against its being revived on the occasion of the next summer outing. During the long period that the funds were systematically misapplied in this manner, not a penny was ever spent on the entertainment of the "decayed brethren;" nor is there apparently any intention of calling upon those responsible for these breaches of trust to refund the amount so spent. Under these circumstances, I should say that the less this "ancient Corporation" boasts of the strictness with which its funds are devoted to the "decayed brethren" the better.

An amazing instance of landlord rapacity lately occurred at Burton-on-Trent. A plot of land was held of a body called the Burton Feoffees on a lease for lives at a yearly rent of three shillings. In 1861 it became vested in a tenant who built four cottages upon it, rented at a little under £50 a year. The net rental is worth £18 or £19. A few months back the last life fell in; the land thus reverted to the Feoffees, who have the audacity to demand £25 a year for the renewal of the tenancy. It may be said, of course, that the man who built the cottages knew the risk. But what does this come to? That he ought to have acted on the assumption that the landlord will rob him if he can? He might reasonably assume that the landlords would take a big ADELPHI HOTEL, LIVERPOOL, the Hôtel de Luxe of the North. Electric Light and Telephones in every room. Free Library for guests. Louis XV. Restaurant for highest class French Cooking. No charge for attendance.—WM. TOWLE, Manager. Note!—Midland Railway Company's Hotels at Bradford, Leeds, Derby, and London (St. Pancras). Excellent Cooking. Choice Wines.

HEALTH AND ELECTRICITY.—The Electropathic Belt should be worn by all sufferers from Nervous, Muscular, or Organic Weakness. It is beautifully designed, scientifically constructed, very comfortable to wear, and is recommended by the highest authorities. Pamphlet and consultation free on application to the MEDICAL BATTERY CO., LTD., 52, Oxford-street, London, W.

share of the proceeds of his investment; but he could hardly be expected to assume that they would endeavour to confiscate it all—or more than all.

The House of Lords' Committee, which has been considering the operation of the Debtors Act, recommends a modest instalment of reform by the reduction of the maximum term of imprisonment for contumacious debtors from six weeks to three. Beyond that, the Committee seems to have played the part of Balaam to the Act. So far as I see, however, from the published summaries of the report, their lordships devote little or no consideration to what has always seemed to me the strongest objection to the existing practice—namely, that the Act is used as a means of extorting money, not from debtors, but from their sympathising friends. The Committee parade some imposing statistics showing how many debtors pay on arrest. At Westminster in one year 604 debtors out of 848 committed paid on arrest, and only 25 remained in prison for the whole period of their commitment; but this does not go very far with me, unless it can be shown that all those who paid really paid out of their own means. It is admitted by this report that there is great diversity in the practice of different Judges. What I still think is required is a code of rules which will reconcile the procedures of the various small-debt courts, not only with one another, but with the principle of the Act, that a debtor shall only go to prison if he can pay and won't pay.

The Midsummer Quarter Sessions have produced an unusually prolific crop of charges of attempted suicide. In Somersetshire there must have been quite an epidemic, for no fewer than six persons—two women, four men—were brought before Sir R. Paget, M.P., for this so-called offence, and condemned to terms of hard labour ranging from three months to one month. In Monmouthshire Mr. S. C. Bosanquet sentenced a young man of twenty to three months', and an old man of seventy to one month's imprisonment; at Kesteven, the Rev. G. Carter committed Henry Phillips, aged nineteen, to gaol for one month; and in Gloucestershire Mr. Russell J. Kerr imposed fourteen days' hard labour on a charwoman who had taken some laudanum.

To inflict any punishment whatever in these cases is surely the height of judicial absurdity. If people who try to kill themselves and fail are temporarily or permanently insane, they ought to be placed under proper protection and treatment in an asylum. If, on the other hand, they are not of unsound mind, it is perfectly childish to suppose that they will be reconciled to life by a period of hard labour and prison discipline. The course so often adopted by purblind Chairmen of Quarter Sessions is precisely the one most likely to drive the would-be suicide to carry out his project in deadly earnest the moment he regains his liberty.

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. It demonstrates once more that the administration of the law by the Magistracy is, if possible, more glaringly uneven and uncertain in Quarter Sessions than in Courts of Summary Jurisdiction. The so-called justice dispensed in both spheres is vitiated by the same topsy-turvy notion of the relative sanctity of property and person. From this point of view the record of the Essex Sessions is exceptionally monstrous. I doubt, indeed, whether the Pillory has ever contained a more amazing contrast than that between the ferocious nature of the sentences passed by the Essex Bench for two trifling robberies, and the lightness of the punishment inflicted in the same Court for odious crimes against children. The cases given are only choice samples of the work of Mr. Andrew Johnston and his colleagues, for every third prisoner who came before these Dracos last week was sent into penal servitude. No doubt I shall be informed that these victims of Magisterial savagery were old offenders; but I hold that no number of previous convictions can justify such terrible sentences for such small offences — sentences which none of her Majesty's Judges would dream of passing. The cumulative sentence theory is unjust and irrational, and, moreover, it is not even worked out consistently. As the cases from Derby and Gloucester show, it is applied for repeated thefts but not for repeated assaults. Regarding the Police-court list, it may be observed that at Birmingham the Justices appear to distinctly disapprove of the chivalrous rescue of a wife who is being kicked to death. This, at least, I infer from the extraordinary lenity with which they treated the husband by whom such a rescuer had been maimed for life. And the Rhyl J.P.'s seem to be of very much the same mind:—

Essex Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. Andrew Johnston, Colonel E. Morrell, Colonel F. Dawson, Canon Norman, and other Magistrates. William Smith (37) pleaded guilty to indecently assaulting two girls, both under 13. One month.

Thomas White (25) pleaded guilty to indecently assaulting Florence Whimp. One month.

George Pearson, indicted for unlawfully wounding Robert Bland, whose leg was broken. Convicted of common assault. Fined 40s.

Glamorganshire Quarter Sessions. Before Judge Gwilym Williams. John Campbell (64), convicted of indecently assaulting a child six years old. Three months.

Derby Borough Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. M. C. Buszard, Q.C., Recorder. George Raven, charged with inflicting grievous bodily harm upon Wm. Blurton, who, in consequence, was in the hospital for eight weeks. There were forty-five previous convictions against the accused, several for assaults. Three months.

Gloucestershire Quarter Sessions. George Cook (30), convicted of indecently assaulting Annie Fletcher. Several previous convictions for assault, including a similar one last year. Three months.

Essex Quarter Sessions. Before the same Bench. George Roberts (55) pleaded guilty to stealing 4 lb. of cake. Seven years' penal servitude.

Martha Wilson (62) pleaded guilty to stealing a handkerchief. Seven years.

Before Lord Rookwood, the Rev. E. F. Gepp, Mr. H. C. Wells, and Mr. F. Chancellor. Clara Atter 26), charged with being an incorrigible rogue. Her last offence was to break six panes of glass in West Ham workhouse. Twelve months.

Glamorganshire Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. J. Coke Fowler. William Williams (64), convicted of stealing two pigs. Eight months.

Derby Borough Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. M. C. Buszard, Q.C., Recorder. Joseph Smith (40), charged with stealing a gun, and with obtaining a ham by false pretences. Previously convicted. The Recorder said he would give him another chance. Nine months.

Gloucestershire Quarter Sessions. George Ingram (21), pleaded guilty to stealing a pair of trousers and a waistcoat. Previously convicted. Six months' hard labour and two years' supervision.

The Burgundy of the season, Clos de la Grotte, vintage 1889 (Santenay), 21s. per dozen cash delivered. Sample Bottle, 2s. per post. A trial order will convince of its sterling quality and value. Arnold, Perrett, & Co., Ld., 7a, Lower Belgrave-street, S.W.

Fire Protection of Mansions.—Water Supply to Mansions and all Buildings. Practical pamphlets and designs, free, of Merryweathers', 63, Long-acre, London.

West Riding Quarter Sessions, Bradford. Before Colonel Brook and other Magistrates. Albert Senior, charged with unlawfully and maliciously wounding Richard Harper and Eliza Caveney. Fined 40s. and costs.

Staffordshire Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. T. F. Twemlow, chairman. William Siddall (23), pleaded guilty to inflicting grievous bodily harm upon Abraham Arme. Twenty-one days.

Durham County Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. J. L. Wharton, M.P., and other magistrates. James Laing pleaded guilty to indecently assaulting Ann Howard. Six months.

Cardiff Police-court. Before Dr. Paine and other Magistrates. John Hankerd, charged with violently assaulting Catherine Casey. He inflicted a severe wound on her head. Fined 10s. and costs.

Birmingham Police-court. Before Messrs. Colmore (Stipendiary), Harding, Bolding, Smith, and Gilliver. John Bullmer (37), charged with doing grievous bodily harm to Albert Yates. The latter saw prisoner kicking his wife and threatening to kill her, and rescued the woman. Bullmer then attacked prosecutor, kicking him in the lower portion of the abdomen. A doctor said prosecutor, who had been in hospital over three weeks, would probably suffer all his life from the injuries inflicted. Dealt with as a common assault. Fined 40s. or one month.

Newbury Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor (Mr. A. Jackson), Alderman Hickman, S. Hemsted, and H. J. Midwinter. George Butt, charged with cruelty to a mare. Defendant, who was working the mare, admitted that she had a fractured knee, but said it did not give the slightest pain. Fined 1s. and 11s. costs.

Leicester Town-hall. Before Mr. J. Safford and other Magistrates. Mrs. Saul, charged with assaulting Mary Newell, domestic servant. Newell said her mistress struck her on the head with the blade of a carving-knife and in the eye with her fist. Fined 10s.

Bradford-on-Avon Police-court. Before Mr. E. Pinckney, Mr. A. Mackay, and the Hon. and Rev. Sidney Meade. Eli Bancroft, convicted of assaulting Harriet Kettley, aged 69. He hit her on the head, knocking her down, and when she got up knocked her down again. Fined £1.

Rhyl Police-court. Daniel Jones, charged with assaulting his wife. It was stated that defendant acted like a savage beast, and that his wife was unconscious for an hour, and had to be attended by a doctor. Fined £1 and costs. For assaulting a man who tried to rescue the wife, Jones was fined 13s. and costs.

West Riding Quarter Sessions, Bradford. Before the same Bench. Matthew Wainwright, convicted of stealing an overcoat. Three years.

Staffordshire Quarter Sessions. Before the same Bench. Charles Barber (19) pleaded guilty to breaking into a shop and stealing wearing apparel. Twelve months.

Durham County Quarter Sessions. Before the same Bench. Thomas Ramsey and John Swallow, charged with stealing sixty deals. Three years each.

Cardiff Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. B. Francis-Williams, Q.C., Recorder. Albina Villis, convicted of obtaining a leg of mutton by false pretences. Her first offence. Fourteen days.

Birmingham Police-court. Before Mr. Colmore (Stipendiary), Sir James Sawyer, Messrs. Brame, Leech, Wright, Warden, and Bloor. Alfred Gilbert and Thomas Hobday, charged with causing an obstruction in the street for the purpose of betting. Each fined £5 and costs or one month.

Wiltshire Quarter Sessions. Before the Marquis of Bath and other Magistrates. William Willis (74), convicted of stealing two fowls. Twelve months.

Newbury Borough Police-court. Before the same Bench. Albert Dines, convicted of being drunk. Fined £1, including costs, or seven days.

Saffron Waldron Borough Sessions. Before Messrs. E. B. Gibbon, J. J. Robson, J. Bell, and J. G. Emson. John Francis, charged with destroying his clothes whilst a casual pauper. Fourteen days.

Leicester County Police-office. Before Captain Pochin, Messrs. E. R. Norman and H. C. Woodcock. James Pearson (16), charged with stealing two hen's eggs from a farmyard. Six weeks' hard labour.

Chesterfield Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor, Alderman Clayton, and Mr. J. Naylor. Thomas White, collier, convicted of an aggravated assault upon Mary Ann Riggott by kicking her. Fined 20s. and costs.

Derby County Police-court. Before Messrs. H. Boden and J. Bailey. Henry Hill and John Middleton, convicted of poaching. Two months each in default of paying £5 and costs.

Brierley Hill Police-court. Before Messrs. H. Smith and J. S. Williams. George Troman, charged with sleeping out. Two months.

Macclesfield County Police-court. Before Mr. F. D. Brocklehurst and other Magistrates. William Hunt, charged with cruelty to a dog. He said he cut off its tail because it had a fit, and also tried to kick it to death, but it recovered. The Chairman said it was a very bad case. Fined 10s. and costs.

Greenock Police-court. James Cairns, convicted of a brutal assault on his mother, an aged woman. Thirty days.

Croydon Police-court. Before Mr. R. V. Barrow, M.P., Mr. H. Chasemore, and Dr. Adams. George Smith, charged with brutally assaulting William Shonfield. Complainant was first attacked by three women of bad character, and prisoner then threw him down and punched and kicked him all over the body. Fourteen days.

Douglas, Isle of Man, Criminal Court. Before Deemster Drinkwater. William Hawley pleaded guilty to stealing five empty beer-bottles from a public-house yard. His first offence. Five weeks' hard labour.

Greenock Sheriff Court. Patrick Hickie pleaded guilty to the theft of one shilling. Sixty days.

Blackpool Police-court. Before Messrs. H. Fisher, H. Buckley, and J. Bowker. William Reeves, charged with trespassing at the railway-station and touting for luggage to carry. Twenty-one days.

Montgomery Petty Sessions. Before the Rev. R. M. White and Mr. N. W. Humphreys. Arthur Grimshaw, charged with sleeping out. Fourteen days.

Two more girls have "escaped" from the Hull Industrial School, and were brought before the Stipendiary the other day without any very definite result. Both of the girls had run away before, and one of them was charged with the offence at the Police-court only a few weeks ago. As on the last occasion, the "escape" was the simplest matter. The girls found a door open, and, there being no one to interfere with them, they walked out. The representative of the School Board attempted to exonerate his clients by the argument that it is impossible to imprison the girls, and that, if this were attempted, those who at present criticise the management of the school would be the first to protest. This is rubbish. There is no necessity to place any of the children under lock and key. All that is required is to keep some watch on girls who have shown themselves determined to run away if they can. For a School Board to be incessantly prosecuting children in the police-courts is an ignominious and unprecedented thing, and shows the Board to be radically unfit for its duties.

Cantwell, compositor, has remarkable views of the duties of a Government. This estimable Anarchist amused himself with a friend by placarding posters announcing that his fellow-workers must prepare for revolution, and upon being taken before a magistrate based his defence upon his intention to use bombs to bring about the changes in the Constitution that he deems desirable. He seems to have regarded the police as guilty of an improper interference with the rights of citizens, because they stopped the further dissemination of his placards by arresting him; and I have no doubt that he will equally consider himself unfairly treated, if the police venture to hinder him from making bombs. A Government may be a good or a bad one, but I can conceive no Government—good, bad, or indifferent—allowing a town to be placarded with an appeal to its inhabitants to "prepare for revolution."

THE RUSSIAN CHINA TEA COMPANY, who are under the patronage of Royalty and a very large number of the nobility and medical authorities, supply their Choice Teas as imported into Russia direct from their Head London Offices, 21, Mincing-lane. Carriage paid to any address. Write for price lists and leading medical and press opinions.

MAJOR HOWE & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

The betting agency gang calling themselves "Slingsby & Co.," to whom reference was made in TRUTH two or three weeks ago, were last week dealt with in a very prompt and satisfactory manner, the two Slingsbys being each fined £50 as the result of a police raid on their premises in Mill-street. The evidence threw some interesting light on the modus operandi of the touting fraternity. Among the rest of the stock-in-trade seized by the police were lists of "Sandhurst cadets waiting for commissions," cavalry officers, doctors at Netley Hospital, and so on, with memoranda respecting the movements of individual officers; and a Staff-Officer from Woolwich stated that as many as thirty circulars from "Slingsby & Co." had reached cadets there in a single day. Had he been required to do so, the same officer could doubtless have given similar information respecting the circulars of many other "firms." If the police can put a stop to one, why not all?

One of my readers has at last endeavoured to put a stopper on the irrepressible Ernest Day. Having received from Day one of his beautiful prints on approval, he invited him to call for the money. He named an hour for the purpose, and had a policeman in waiting. Day, however, did not keep his appointment—possibly smelling a rat. After a few weeks, Day wrote requesting payment. His customer replied thus:—

> Sorry you should have been so "anxiously awaiting payment." Would you call next week on any day you may appoint, and I will have a detective from Scotland-yard and a representative of TRUTH to meet you, as I had on a previous occasion. I have sent your letters on to TRUTH. How is your poor mother? I hear she is still dying very often.

Day did not avail himself of this kind invitation, and I take it that the customer will now be left in undisturbed possession of the precious work of art. Failing criminal prosecution, this method of scoring off Day may be recommended as both cheap and effective.

I would warn my readers against another clerical begging-letter writer—the Rev. David Davies, Vicar of Llanganten. Appended is a recent specimen of this reverend mendicant's form of appeal. He appears to have been supplementing his official income by begging appeals ever since his presentation to the living in 1877, when he appealed for funds to pay his railway fare to his new parish. Those who wish to know more of him should apply to the Bishop of St. Davids:—

> Llanganten, Builth, R.S.O., South Wales,
> June 13, 1893.
>
> DEAR SIR,—May I ask you the favour to take into your very kind and immediate consideration my present circumstances?
>
> More than thirty-three years have I been in Holy Orders.
>
> Now my whole annual net income is £76. 5s. 11d. Out of this I have to pay house-rent, £6. 15s. per quarter, and also rates and taxes. I need not say that it is with extreme difficulty we have to manage to maintain ourselves (my wife, myself, and four daughters), and that I am cruelly oppressed and almost sinking under severe pressure on account of depressed circumstances. I cast myself on your very kind sympathy and tender mercy.—I am, yours very faithfully,
>
> DAVID DAVIES, Vicar of Llanganten.

I have been favoured with a lengthy document from Pretoria, impugning the qualifications and conduct of some of the Transvaal Judges. It seems that TRUTH is selected for this purpose because the local Press lacks the courage or the independence to take up the matter. Unfortunately, it is not a subject on which I have any means of obtaining independent information. I therefore extract the following queries, which occur in the communication, hoping that some one who knows South Africa better than I do may be able to answer them:—

> Is it desirable that many of the Judges should be in debt, and use their position to evade payment?
>
> Is it consistent with the independence of the Bench that a Judge should meddle in politics, and stand as a candidate for the Presidential chair, when it is notorious that he has not a ghost of a chance of election?
>
> Does it look well for a Judge to get an official removed on account of his ignorance of law, and then solicit the Government to appoint that official as a Judge?
>
> Is it quite the thing for a Judge to dress up in character and dance Ta-ra-ra-Boom-de-ay?

Whatever may be said to the rest, the last question must, I think, be answered in the negative. Can any of my readers picture to himself the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice, or even the Master of the Rolls thus disporting himself?

The Report on the Mombasa Railroad Survey is not a very encouraging one. The railroad is estimated to cost £2,240,000, and as railroads invariably cost a great deal more than the estimate, this may be put down at three millions, all the more as it is proposed to build stations and offices of mud. Stations, it is suggestively stated, will have to be surrounded by a strong live thorn "boma," to render arrows harmless, whilst the tank house is to be made capable of becoming a place of refuge by armouring it with corrugated iron sheeting. How the passengers in the trains are to be sheltered from arrows is not stated.

The surveyors go on to explain how this remarkable railroad is to be made to pay, or, rather, only to incur a loss of £70,000 per annum. One train, they estimate, will be sufficient per diem. This, they say, would bring in a gross return of £61,000 per annum, and working expenses are put down at £65,000, to which must be added interest on capital. The estimate of gross receipts is a very exaggerated one. Probably one full train per week instead of one per diem would be nearer the mark, whilst the working expenses (including repairs, relaying rails which are taken up for their own uses by the natives, pensions to employés who are hit by poisoned arrows penetrating through the "boma," or who have not got speedily enough into the tank to avoid having their throats cut) would tot up to about double £65,000 per annum. I should say that probably the receipts would be about £30,000, against working expenses £130,000; interest on capital, £90,000; thus leaving the British taxpayer to make up each year a deficit of £190,000, in order to carry out about the wildest and silliest railway scheme that was ever submitted to sane human beings. A railroad to the Mountains of the Moon is but one degree different from a railroad to the moon itself.

MAX GREGER'S CARLOWITZ. Pure, rich, generous. This, the perfection of red wine, is imported direct from the Carlowitz district in Hungary, almost the entire produce of which is supplied to MAX GREGER, Ld. Wine Merchants to the Queen, 2, Old Bond-st., Lond. W.

We understand that Pryce Jones, Limited, Newtown, North Wales, has had the honour of supplying some of its well-known specialties to Her Serene Highness Princess May.

This moon railroad is not to be up to the requirements of a heavy traffic. The surveyors explain that to make it comparable to an Indian railroad would cost an additional £1,445,100.

The following is an extract from a letter received by a friend of mine from a gentleman in Mashonaland, and gives an interesting account of how African railroads are built in "spheres of influence." The letter is dated May 9:—

Since writing to you last I have been down on the Beira Railway to see how that work was progressing. I found on my arrival that things were at a complete standstill. The work on the railway has been stopped for two months, with the exception of that carried on by a few men who are finishing up their contracts. The engine-drivers and carpenters have all left on account of the fever, and all the other white men as soon as their contracts are finished clear off as quickly as possible. The floods have swept away part of the line on the flats between the terminus on the Pungwé and the Siluva Hills, which are about thirty-five miles from the former place, and the bridge across the Menda River has also been swept away. Before the floods came the rails were laid as far as the Hills, but no progress has been made since, and, of course, the engines are not running now at all. The grading of the line is completed, with the exception of some few intervening bits, as far as the sixty-five mile peg, but the seventy-five mile peg, which is the end of Pauline's contract, is well within the "fly" belt, so the line will be of no use until it has been extended another thirty miles further, at least. I have seen "fly" myself thirty miles on the Umtali side of the seventy-five mile peg. Apart altogether from its length, I have a very poor opinion of the railway and its usefulness, even when completed to beyond the "fly" belt. It is only 2ft. gauge, and a regular tin-pot affair at that; not half as stable as a Dublin tramway. Another peculiarity of the line when the engines were running was that they were always getting off the rails, though the speed never exceeded eight or ten miles an hour.

There is a serious rift in the Tory lute at Exmouth, owing to the presumption of the Secretary of the Conservative Association in writing a letter to a half-pay officer and commencing it "Dear Colonel." The exalted warrior thus outraged wrote an excited letter to the Chairman of the Association in language suggesting that he regarded the offence as tantamount to the crime of lèze majesté. There are no limits to the inflated self-importance of the half-pay unemployed in Little Peddlingtons of the Exmouth type, and I recommend the Tory Executive, if it wishes to preserve the harmony of the party, to pass at once a resolution that the formula "May it please your Royal Highness" shall be used in addressing all retired officers, whatever their rank.

The decision of the House of Commons last Saturday on the Indian opium traffic shows that, whilst the House is ready to grapple with the question, it is not prepared to do so without full evidence. That a man is probably the better for not having acquired the habit of taking opium, I can easily believe, and that in some cases the habit leads to deplorable results I can equally credit. I have read pamphlets innumerable for and against prohibition, but I confess that I have not been able to form a definite conclusion whether prohibition ought as a moral obligation to be enforced by us on India. There has been—so far as I can make it out—exaggeration on both sides of the controversy. I somewhat distrust controversialists who endeavour to convince me by means of engravings of human skeletons reduced to that condition by a drug, for this is rather sensationalism than argument. In the Punjaub it is admitted that opium is consumed by all without harm, and the portrait of a stalwart opium-eater might be contrasted with the skeleton pictures. How is it proposed to deal with the Native States? Would the Chinese consume less opium if we ceased to import it? What is the feeling of India on the subject? Are there so many where health is ruined by the use of opium that prohibition becomes a duty? These and other questions can only be settled by independent inquiry, and consequently the House of Commons was right to decline taking action before there has been this inquiry.

On the face of it, there is a certain air of Pharisaism in our kindly prohibiting the Indians from cultivating poppies in order to obtain opium, some to be consumed in India, some to be exported to China, on the ground that its use is injurious to health, when we derive a huge revenue from the sale at home and abroad of spirituous liquor, which most unquestionably is productive of far more ill consequences than opium. I should prefer our removing the alcoholic beam from our own eye before we undertake to remove the opium mote from the Indian eye.

I have received from Egypt a translation of sundry articles from the native journal, Ustaz, which have caused that paper to be officially warned for its "violent attacks on the Government." In comparison with the "violent attacks on the Government" with which anti-Gladstonian editors delight their readers, these articles seem to me mild as milk in comparison with vitriol; indeed, the temperate and rational tone of this native critic might serve as a model to Opposition editors in Western Europe. The inference seems to be that if England were ruled on the principles which we apply to Egypt, Mr. Buckle and the majority of his Unionist contemporaries would now be languishing in dungeons. But it has always been part of the "Imperial Mission" of this country to apply to the countries we rule the political methods which we most resent when applied to ourselves.

This is the kind of "violence" which Anglo-Egyptian officialdom finds so prejudicial to the public interests:—

In the execution of public works the tenders of the native contractors are put aside, and the contracts passed to some favourite of the Inspector of Irrigation, at a figure very satisfactory to both parties, for the results have proved that the contractors make their fortunes and the inspectors have become rich.

One need not go as far as Egypt to find officials who do not like such pointed remarks as these, but one has to go quite as far as that—or as far as St. Petersburg—to find officials who have the power to silence such remarks at their own sweet wills. Grateful, indeed, am I to Providence, which has mercifully ordained that TRUTH shall be published in London and not in Cairo.

There is no greater mistake than to put the foot down, when it is certain that it will have to be taken up. This mistake was made last Thursday, when an attempt was made to carry in a late sitting the resolutions in regard to the procedure on the Home Rule Bill. Mr. Speaker had allowed it to be known that, being of opinion that the debate might if wished by the Opposition, last for two sittings, he would not agree to a motion for closure. This being so, and the Unionists being determined to hold out, it became impossible for the debate to be brought to an end; or, indeed, to progress so long as the Opposition moved alternate motions to adjourn the debate, and to adjourn the House. Shortly after Mr. Gladstone's departure, the leaders of the Opposition, in reply to an inquiry, stated that they never had contemplated carrying on the debate beyond the morning sitting on Friday, and were quite ready to give this assurance. But it is never very easy to get out of a false position, and, consequently, the House sat on until near 5 a.m., and then it was decided to accept the proffered assurance. The only other alternative possible was to divide again and again against the motions for adjournment, and if this had been done until 2 p.m. on Friday, the position would have been precisely the same as it was by adjourning until that hour, except that Mr. Speaker, who had taken the chair at 3 p.m. on Thursday, would have been knocked up; indeed, after having been in the chair already twelve hours, it is very doubtful whether, had the adjournment not been agreed to, he would have been able to sit much longer.

SPA, BELGIUM (10 hours from London and Paris). Racing, tennis, golf, pigeon-shooting, &c. Splendid Casino, with theatre, &c. Waters unrivalled in cases of anæmia and dyspepsia.

BRUSSELS.—The GRAND HOTEL. Magnificent establishment. Central position. Latest English hygienic improvements. Post, telegraph, and ticket offices. Unrivalled cave and cuisine.—DUBONNET, Propr.

When a vessel has to battle with a storm in order to reach its destination, it is evident that the Captain must issue orders and the crew must obey them. If the vessel founders, or if it is run ashore, the Captain is responsible, and not the crew. In this way, the Victoria and the Camperdown came into collision, although all, with the exception of the Admiral in command, seem to have known that this would be the inevitable result of the manœuvre. So it is with a Bill before the House of Commons. It can only be carried by united action, and this united action would be impossible without leaving all tactical questions of procedure to the Leader. It does not, however, follow that the particular tactical line of procedure adopted by the Leader meets with the unqualified approbation of all his followers. Ave Cæsar!

This is my feeling in regard to the official plan with respect to Home Rule. As I said last week, I think that it would have been better tactics to have made the campaign one of two years rather than of one. Very possibly I am in error, and I sincerely trust that events will prove that I am. These, however, are the reasons why I have fallen into this error, if error it be.

A Home Rule Bill means a fundamental change in all the relations between Great Britain and Ireland. A Bill to give effect to these changes is, in reality, twenty Bills in one. Between it and an ordinary Bill there is the difference that there is between the procreation of an elephant and a mouse. The Parliamentary year has only a certain number of days, and a considerable portion of these days is necessarily occupied by the current business of the year. At the General Election we won upon a programme embracing Home Rule and other needed reforms. Unless we give legislative effect to some of these other reforms before the next appeal to the country, it is probable that we shall fare badly. The problem, therefore, before us is to carry Home Rule and some of our other reforms before a General Election.

Now, most unquestionably, the Unionists have adopted obstructive tactics with a view to hinder our carrying out our programme. Still, fully admitting this, the fact remains that the Home Rule Bill is necessarily of such magnitude that, if it had been split up into its component parts, and each part had formed a separate Bill, very good work would have been done had they been carried within the Parliamentary year to the exclusion of all other new legislation. I would, therefore, have preferred to have seen the year divided into three compartments, one for current business, one for British Reforms, and one for Home Rule. But as this would not have secured in one year time enough for Home Rule, I would have devoted two years to it.

This plan would not have retarded Home Rule by one single day. Indeed, the Bill, if it passes the Lords this year, is not to come in force before September next year. But we know with absolute certainty that the Lords will throw out the Bill. We know, also, that it is not contemplated to meet this by an immediate appeal to the electorate, for it seems to be understood that, having carried the Bill through the Commons this year, we shall send it up again to the Lords next year, and that we shall defer the appeal to the country until it has been thrown out twice by the Lords. I have never yet comprehended the wisdom of, when the Lords smite us on one cheek, turning to them the other cheek and requesting them to smite us again. I think that, when we do appeal to the country, we should have a better case were we able to show that we have proceeded in this great constitutional change with excessive deliberation, whilst by doing so we secure to ourselves with absolute certainty time for British reforms.

The Government plan, on the other hand, involves a number of the clauses in the Bill being put and carried without debate, to the exclusion of all amendments. This in itself is one of those desperate measures which, whilst it may be enthusiastically cheered by strong partisans, may possibly not meet with the same enthusiasm from that section of the community which, without belonging to either party, turns elections. On July 27 the Bill is to be reported. Then comes the report stage, and the third reading. This will bring us nearly to the end of August. Small Bills will take about a fortnight—say, that they are passed by August 31. We have then practically the whole of the Civil Service Estimates and the Indian Budget to get through, and besides this, it is proposed to carry the Parish Councils Bill before the end of the year. If this be done, so much the better. But it seems to me that we are counting too much upon the Opposition wanting to shoot grouse and partridges. If they really are prepared to sacrifice these amusements and to hang on to the Estimates, our calculations are upset; for with a strong Opposition determined to dwell on Estimates, it is practically impossible to greatly expedite matters by the use of the closure.

Long's Restaurant, newly attached to Long's Hotel, New Bond-street, is now open for high-class Luncheons and Dinners, at fixed prices and à la carte.—A. Hartmann, Manager.

The real fact is this: the House of Commons has so much work to get through that it can only do more than is usual in a Session, by scamping what is usually done. This an Opposition knows, and if it disapproves of the unusual, it declines to scamp the usual. The machine moves slowly on until about the end of July. Then it has been invariably the custom to make further business a matter of bargain between the Government and the Opposition. All this renders it very difficult to carry reforms, and it is because of this that I have always been in favour of Home Rule all round. If this be not speedily adopted, Parliament will sink under the weight imposed on it, and this means throwing power into the hands of those who have not been elected to rule by their fellow-citizens. The cause of democracy is absolutely involved in reducing the volume of the business now thrown on the Imperial Parliament by delegating much of it to local Assemblies.

What makes me somewhat lukewarm in the present Parliamentary struggle is, that we refuse to look in the face the fact that, so long as we have to obtain the assent of the Lords to all legislative changes, we are voluntarily grovelling at the feet of Toryism. It sickens me to think that day after day and week after week we are discussing a Bill which, when passed, will be contemptuously kicked out by the Lords in as many hours as it has cost us weeks to send it up to them; that this nonsense is to be repeated again next year; and that then we are to have the turmoil and trouble of a General Election in order to convince these Lords that the country is really with us. In Holland the country is protected by dikes against the inroads of the sea, and the danger comes from rats nibbling holes in the dikes. What would be thought of the Dutch if they cultivated a breed of rats with the particular object of enabling them to nibble holes in the dikes? What would be said of any nation employing itself to fill a tank with water, and treating rats who made holes in the bottom of the tank as sacred animals? Let Mr. Gladstone announce that, in the event of the Lords throwing out this or any other Bill submitted to Parliament by a Liberal Ministry, and sent up by the House of Commons to the Upper House, he will submit a list of 500 persons to the Queen to be created Lords, with the mission of voting the extinction of this pernicious nest of hereditary obstructives. Then, indeed, the country would be with him. It may be said that the Queen would not consent to this course. If so, then let Mr. Gladstone appeal to the country on the broad ground that the time has come, once and for all, to put an end to the House of Lords. The reply would be such that either the Lords as now constituted would have to vote their own extinction, or they would be crushed out of existence by new Peers being made in sufficient numbers to outvote all opposition.

Home Rule in Ireland means that in a country called free, people must rule, and not be ruled by others. This is the corner-stone of democracy, and democracy can only triumph by democrats throughout the United Kingdom standing shoulder to shoulder. We need reforms here, and Irishmen need reforms there. If we ignored Irish aspirations, we could hardly count on their aid, and if the Irish ignore British reforms they will hardly secure our aid. The majority at the next General Election can only be secured for the present Government by recognising the demands of all parts of the United Kingdom. This is why I have always believed that Home Rule is to be won for Ireland by giving legislative effect to the aspirations of Great Britain. Let the present Parliament send up to the Lords British Bills, and I am convinced that this will do more for the cause of Home Rule than sending up the Home Rule Bill to these hereditary obstructives a dozen times.

The Unionist newspapers are in wild elation at Mr. Dillon having made a mistake in a date, and seem to consider that this error conclusively proves that no Nationalist Irishman is to be credited. This is nonsense. Mr. Dillon was charged with making a speech in which he said that when Nationalists had the upper hand they would not retain the services of those who were acting with undue harshness towards his countrymen. He replied that he had been stung to madness by repeated instances of such cruelty, and instanced a widow and her child, and the Mitchelstown massacre. It appeared, however, that the massacre had taken place after, and not before, the speech. I can easily understand the error. I was with Mr. Dillon at Mitchelstown. I was listening to his observations in the House, I knew the date of the speech referred to, and yet I did not remember that the massacre had occurred after until this was pointed out by the triumphant Unionist. What Mr. Dillon meant was that he had been stung to madness by a long series of cruelties. The important fact was that these cruelties had occurred, and whether the particular one to which he referred produced this result on him, or whether it was produced by others, was a matter of the smallest detail.

SCRUTATOR.

BLIND EYES FOR NAVAL TELESCOPES.

ALTHOUGH I deprecated last week premature expressions of opinion respecting the responsibility for the Victoria disaster, neither I nor any one else can pretend ignorance of the effect of the official despatches. It is now practically beyond question that orders were given, the necessary result of which was to bring the Victoria and the Camperdown into collision. It is equally certain that upon the deceased Admiral rests the whole responsibility for the issue of these orders. So far as Sir George Tryon is concerned, little more can be said. He has perished by the result of his own error. It is useless as well as ungenerous to accentuate the plain facts by any word of reproach. There seems, indeed, to be reason for making excuse for the Admiral. He had been on the sick-list for some time before the fatal day, and it is a natural inference from the fact of a seaman of such exceptional ability making such an extraordinary blunder, that he was not fully himself at the time when he resumed command of the Fleet.

In preparation for the approaching sporting season, ladies and gentlemen should visit Ulster House, Conduit-street, W., where their orders for every kind of garment will have prompt and careful attention.

But all this raises most important questions. Observe the situation. A Commanding Officer, for some reason unexplained, loses his head or his judgment, and gives an order involving certain destruction to his own ship, or another, or both. His own officers, and those on the other ship which is equally imperilled, at once perceive the blunder and its inevitable consequences. What is their duty? One sees plainly enough from his own despatch how Rear-Admiral Markham answered this question. There was not, he says, in his opinion, room enough to perform the manœuvre ordered. He thought there must be a mistake, and was preparing to inquire whether he had the order correctly, when he was stopped by an inquiry from the Admiral as to why he did not obey. Thereupon he obeyed. He adds apologetically, "Having the fullest confidence in the ability of the Commander-in-Chief to manœuvre the squadron without even the risk of a collision, I ordered," &c., &c. There is something of the "qui s'excuse" about this. The Rear-Admiral first admits that he saw the risk of collision; and then, in order to justify himself for accepting the risk, he pleads that there was really no risk owing to Admiral Tryon's well-known ability. The attitude of the officers of the Victoria seems to have been very similar to that of the Rear-Admiral. They also saw the danger. They also knew something which the Rear-Admiral did not know, namely, that Admiral Tryon, in deference to the opinion of his Staff-Commander, had decided that the vessels should commence the manœuvre at eight cables' distance from one another; but had nevertheless given the order at the distance which he originally fixed, namely, six cables. The Staff-Commander called the Admiral's attention to this alteration, but the Admiral adhered to his signal. From this point the Admiral's orders were carried out without question or remonstrance, except that at the last moment, when the collision was imminent, Captain Bourke "reported to the Admiral that we should be too close, and asked permission to reverse the port screw," which was done. With these exceptions, though every responsible officer on both ships seems to have seen the danger, and though a minute or two after the ships began to turn it must have been seen that a collision was inevitable unless some one disobeyed orders, the instructions of the Commander-in-Chief were carried out as literally as if those charged with them had been machines moved by pressing a button, instead of beings endowed with independent wills and judgments. "Theirs not to reason why" seems to have been the rule which governed everybody concerned.

Now, is this all right? I am only a civilian, who is not supposed to have the right to form an opinion on such matters, much less to express it; but I decline to recognise that this is a proper state of things until the reason for it is more visible than it is at present. Discipline is one thing; purblind adherence to an order which is obviously an error of judgment, and must lead to inevitable disaster, is another, and a very different thing. The question is, whether, if an officer is ordered by the Commander of a Fleet to do something which he knows will lose his ship or another, he is bound to carry out the order to the bitter end. I say unhesitatingly No, and I say it all the more strongly in a case where there is no question of emergency, no enemy in sight, no object whatever to be gained by running the risk. A naval officer tells me that there is somewhere in existence a regulation, which does give an officer in command of a ship the right to exercise his own judgment in defiance of orders from a superior, which will in his judgment imperil the safety of the vessel. If there is, Admiral Markham will have to explain why he did not exercise his discretion to this extent. But if there is not, the first practical result of the loss of the Victoria ought to be the formulating of some instruction to commanding officers on this point. I have taken it that Admiral Tryon was not quite his usual self on this occasion. But suppose that he had been temporarily attacked with mental aberration, and had ordered the Camperdown to run aground, or to attack a Turkish fort, or to commit any other manifest absurdity. Does Naval discipline require implicit obedience in that case? What is the difference when the ship is ordered to take a course which must lead to her ramming or being rammed? Every one knows how Nelson put the blind eye to the telescope in the face of the enemy, and declined to see the signal of his chief when he was bent, not on avoiding, but on incurring a risk of the first magnitude. It strikes me that what Rear-Admiral Markham wanted on June 22 was Lord Nelson's blind eye.

HOAXING A USURER.

Not a week passes but what some military or other correspondent begs me to do something to stop the annoyance caused by moneylenders' circulars. These appeals are a compliment to my inventive powers, but an undeserved one, for up to the present date neither I nor anyone else has been able to suggest a remedy for this nuisance. It is possible, however, for those who are pestered in this way to revenge themselves on their tormenters, as the following narrative will show.

Some officers of the 5th Northumberland Fusiliers, in camp at Lydd, driven to desperation by the deluge of circulars poured upon them, opened correspondence with a few of the more persistent touts. Fry, Jackson, and Mason all rose to the bait. Mason, however, was the most eager to do business. In his anxiety for this end he posted off a promissory note of the usual description followed it up with a telegram to the effect that his clerk would be down the next morning with the cash, and followed up the telegram by appearing in person at Lydd in the character of his own clerk. Some of my readers may perhaps know Lydd. It is a desolate spot on the shingly waste stretching out to Dungeness. The only feature in the landscape is the lighthouse, five miles off. Mason arrived by the first train down, and inquired for his pigeon. He was informed that the guileless bird was on duty at the lighthouse. Away went Shylock over the shingly Sahara, the noon-day sun pouring down on his devoted head. He reached the lighthouse, only to find that he had got to march back again, and four hours after his departure he was observed tramping back into Lydd, in the last stage of exhaustion. The train service between Lydd and the metropolis leaves a good deal to be desired, and Mason got back to town at close upon midnight, after, probably, the most unremunerative day's work he ever did in his life. Like his Shakespearian prototype, this modern Shylock does not take disappointment kindly. When he found himself again in his office, he wrote demanding the return of his promissory note (with its precious 10s. stamp upon it), and further relieving his feelings in this strain :—

Birds of a feather flock together. The first grey hair will soon have companions, unless their coming is rendered impossible by the use of Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer.

"Truth" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 3 months, 7s. 7d. 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the Manager, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

> You have chosen to act in a very mysterious way in corresponding with us. Your letters induced us to send our man with a thousand pounds in his pocket. You could easily have stopped same, as he did not go till Monday morning, had you wished, but you did not do so, but chose to let us run the risk, and, when down with you, we have reason to believe sent him by false representations on a long and lonely journey for nothing, with all that money on him, for what reason we are at a loss to conjecture. But we have just given an account of the whole matter to our solicitors to get council's [sic] opinion, and if we hear that there are any steps which we can take in any way, you can be sure that you have not heard the last of the matter as yet. In haste.—Yours respectfully,
>
> H. Mason & Co.

"Council's opinion," apparently, failed to advance matters very much. Mason got back his valuable promissory note—though not till be had sent a registered envelope for it; but beyond that his wrongs remain to the present unavenged. No one need pity him. The mischief done by these sharks in the Army every year is beyond calculation, and if a few experiences like the above would do anything to check their pestilent touting, practical joking could hardly be applied to a better end.

ANOTHER DEPOT SCANDAL.

In an article on irregularities at Regimental Depots which appeared in Truth of March 30 reference was made to one recent case in the following terms :—

> The Sergeant-Major of an important Depot has been found guilty—after an investigation of the accounts by a Committee of the Mess—of gross irregularities extending over a considerable period, although to the great indignation of his comrades, and in the face of the report of the Committee, he has been allowed to retire (apparently) "without a stain on his character."

This case occurred in the Depot of the Devonshire Regiment at Exeter. Not only was the Sergeant-Major referred to allowed to retire in the manner above described, but since his retirement he has been constantly on view in the neighbourhood in his uniform, which he retained the right to wear, and has actually been allowed to come into barracks once a week to drill telegraph boys. Now, I have in my possession a report of the proceedings of the Mess Committee which investigated the case against this man. They leave no room for doubt as to the character of the transactions which were brought home to him, and they show that in certain instances he had to refund substantial sums which, but for this inquiry, were never likely to have been accounted for. That under such circumstances the man should be allowed to figure in the neighbourhood, and even in the barracks, without any apparent stigma upon him, is not only an insult to his comrades, but is obviously calculated to encourage evil doers and undermine the morale of the establishment.

By a curious coincidence I had written a paragraph to this effect a week or two ago, when particulars reached me of another scandal of a similar character in the same Depot, which lends much additional significance to the facts. From further inquiries which I have made, it appears that a Colour-Sergeant has been detected in converting to his own use the money entrusted to him for payment of his company. In some instances he also appears to have falsified his books. In this case, again, it seems to be the intention to smuggle the offender out of the Regiment, practically without punishment, and after a very perfunctory inquiry into his misdeeds by the Colonel. I hear further that a second Colour-Sergeant has been found unable to account satisfactorily for the cash that has passed through his hands, and that in his case an arrangement has been come to that he shall make the defalcation good by the end of the year. It may be assumed, therefore, that in this case also there is to be no punishment.

These occurrences point, first, to an utterly rotten state of things in the Depot in question; secondly, to the folly, or worse, of the course adopted in the case of the Sergeant-Major, and followed again in the other cases. Transgressions of this kind on the part of a Sergeant-Major are the natural result of the autocratic position which he is able to assume in the Mess, and which I have already dealt with. The demoralisation of the men under him is in its turn a natural sequence of the wrong-doing of the Sergeant-Major. A certain number of N.C.O.'s are certain to have a pretty accurate idea of what is going on, and they are tempted to make something for themselves too. It is probably the interest of the Sergeant-Major to connive at their doing so, if not actually to assist them on the downward road. Human nature being what it is, it would be too much to suppose that what has occurred at Exeter has not been going on in many other places. To prevent such irregularities, while the Sergeant-Major is allowed to assume the position he does, is impossible; but, at least, the evil might be kept in check by measuring out exemplary punishment when offences are detected. Instead of that, precisely the opposite policy is pursued. Why? In the case of defalcations by Pay-Sergeants one obvious answer suggests itself. It is the duty of certain officers to examine and check the cash-books, and in Exeter, at any rate, this cannot have been properly done. In such a case an exposure of the whole facts would involve unpleasant consequences to individuals in a higher position; and in every case, I take it, the Depot authorities are desirous of avoiding a full exposure, if they can.

What is required is a searching and independent inquiry from headquarters into every incident of this kind. Commanding officers should be imperatively forbidden to condone or hush up in any way offences such as those described above. As it is, even when inquiries are held, they usually take the form, as in the case of the Hythe scandal, of an inquiry by the local authorities, who are one and all interested in minimising unpleasant facts. The War Office should adopt the procedure of the Local Government Board, and send its own immediate representatives to investigate every incident reflecting upon the honest management of local military establishments. The Exeter Depot appears still to afford an excellent field at the present time for an investigation of this kind, for I have reason to believe that the full extent of the irregularities which have gone on has not yet been discovered. But Exeter is only one Depot in a dozen. The administration of all these establishments requires overhauling. I pressed that course strongly upon Mr. Campbell-Bannerman three months ago; and what I have stated above shows that it should be adopted without delay.

THE ADELPHI SESSIONS.

I have always wondered at the taste which makes of a trial for murder a fashionable function, and draws crowds of people to witness the anguish of a fellow-creature being tried for life. But whether one understands the taste or not, there can be no question that it is widely spread; so since business in the murder market is rather slack just now, the Messrs. Gatti are, no doubt, doing wisely in providing at the Adelphi an imitation cause célèbre, cleverly worked up in imitation of the real sensational article. The thing, such as it is, is really very well done in "A Woman's Revenge," which has evidently been constructed by its author, Mr. Henry Pettitt, simply with a view to the climax of its thrilling story at the Old Bailey. There is no nonsensical pretence of realism about Mr. Pettitt's dramatic methods, which are frankly conventional, and are content to achieve stage effects in the familiar stagey manner. If there is any difficulty in demonstrating the motive of a particular stroke of villainy, Mr Pettitt makes his villain think aloud for the benefit of his audience, whilst, in a similar manner, his hoodwinked victims explain as they go on the course of their unlikely misconceptions. The sternest of critics—if any one can be stern towards the innocent games of grown-up children—might find his heart softened by the ingenuous and defenceless simplicity of mechanical romance like that of "A Woman's Revenge." As for me, I am far too tender-hearted to watch without emotion the trial of Miss Elizabeth Robins, the typical exponent of Ibsen, for the murder of Mr. Herbert Flemming, and to listen to the husky pleading on her behalf of Mr. Charles Warner, surely the lustiest barrister who ever donned wig and gown at the Central Criminal Court. What makes the business doubly harassing is that Mr. Warner, who on Saturday night was struggling pluckily against the effect of a bad cold, has here a double rôle to fill, since he is not only the prisoner's counsel, but her long-estranged husband—a sensational arrangement much more novel than is the calling of the prisoner's child as the chief witness for the prosecution. The whole trial is, it will be seen, a strictly family affair, and I fully expected that before it was over the presiding judge would recognise in the real murderer his long-lost son. In this I was disappointed, but for the rest I found the legal proceedings at the Adelphi sessions altogether satisfactory, especially as the judicial summing-up was distinctly the shortest on record.

THE NEW THEATRE.

It is, on the whole, a desirable addition to our London playhouses which has been made by the joint enterprise of Mr. Augustin Daly and Mr. George Edwardes, though the handsomeness of the new theatre in Cranbourne-street has, I think, been somewhat overrated. To my own taste, the internal decoration of gold upon silver looks rather heavy, while the garishly-coloured curtain, on which Miss Ada Rehan, in airy attire, is seen disporting herself with Cupids, struck me as horribly vulgar alike in design and execution. On the other hand, the rich woodwork is decidedly pleasant to the eye, in spite of its suggestion of the inside of a Pulman car. The promenade-foyer, too, for ladies, is a good idea well carried out; but I do not see how it can be of much practical use until more space is allowed between the rows of stalls. Ladies would, no doubt, be glad enough to go there during the entr'actes, especially if these are long; but they will never do so unless they have room enough to move in and out of their places without crushing and being crushed in the process. If matters in this respect remain as they are at Daly's, I shall expect before long to see that promenade-foyer degraded to the use of the inferior creatures for whom a wait between the acts means the chance of a cigarette. For the rest, the theatre seems well constructed, both for seeing and hearing, and this, after all, is a good deal more important than the whole of its ornamental features put together. On the opening-night there was not very much upon the stage that was new to see, but there was something more or less new to hear in the singing of "The Star-spangled Banner" by the assembled company, and the delivery by Miss Rehan of an address from the ever-ready pen of Mr. Clement Scott. The former sounded, I thought, a very undignified jingle after our "God Save the Queen," but I did not show my national prejudice by sitting down in the middle of the ditty, as I was sorry to see that some of my neighbours did in their insular contempt for a patriotism not their own. As for Mr. Scott's verses, Miss Rehan spoke them with much feeling for their sentiment if not for their metre. To her subsequent rendering of the Shrew there is no praise to be given which has not been given already. To the present generation of playgoers, hers will be the Katherine by whom all other Katherines will be tested, just as other Shylocks and Beatrices will be measured by Mr. Irving's and Miss Ellen Terry's. I cannot say as much for Mr. George Clarke's Petruchio, which is far inferior to Mr. John Drew's, and is, indeed, like most of the subordinate impersonations here—a very commonplace affair. A Petruchio who fails to suggest that in his noisy braggadocio he is merely and deliberately playing a part seems to me to be missing at least half the character. By far the most artistic work, after Miss Rehan's, is that done as Tranio by Mr. Herbert Gresham, a young actor of whom I had never heard before, but of whom I quite expect to hear again. On the whole, the new theatre seems to want a new play, which it will certainly not get in "The Hunchback" on Tuesday next.

Fielalbo.—Cleans buff gloves, belts, liveries, girths, shoes, &c. Perfectly white. Guaranteed not to rub off. Supersedes pipeclay. —Fielalbo Co., 31, Francis-street, Woolwich. Sample free.

DUSE'S TARDY TRIUMPH.

At the Lyric Theatre, where Signora Duse's none-too-prosperous season ends this week, she has done at last what she ought to have done at first. Instead of wasting her time over efforts of tragedy, for which she is fitted neither by her individuality nor by her method, she came out the other night in comedy—the comedy, not of "La Locandiera," which had little significance for English playgoers, but of "Divorçons," which, in one way or another, was familiar to most of its London audience. The character of Cyprienne suits her to a nicety, and in it she took the half-filled house by storm. In her rendering of the wayward wife there was none of the wicked meaning given to the motive by Chaumont, but then, on the other hand, there was none of the vulgarity. What Duse did was to illustrate with charming freshness and utter plausibility the changing moods of a delightfully changeable creature, who always wants what she has not got, and never values what she has. She took the last scene rather too seriously, perhaps; but then the risky humours of a cabinet particulier are not much in her line. The whole of her second act, however, was a veritable triumph of the purest and most unaffected feminine art, and at its close it afforded the best illustration of petulant jealousy, merging into mischievous yet innocent audacity that I have ever seen upon the stage. For the first time, too, the Cavaliere Flavio Ando, who deigns to be the Duse's leading man, came out quite strong; and his quiet sense of fun as Des Prunelles caused one to forget his ineptitudes as Ipanoff and Antony. How Mr. Horace Sedger must wish that La Duse had given her enterprise a better chance by doing at the commencement of her season what she has post-poned to its close!

NOTES FROM PARIS.

PUSHING FOR FRONT SEATS.

A NEAT mot has just been repeated to me of the Prince de la Trémoille. Somebody said to him: "I am to have three Dukes to dine with me to-day." After mentioning who they were, he asked, "Which of them should take the pas of the other two?" "Le plus malhonnête," answered at once the Prince. Duchesses do not in general, it appears, understand the malhonnêteté of struggling for precedence. The unseemly struggles for the pas on others are now of frequent occurrence—the greatest confusion existing here on questions of precedence. The one clear rule is that a member of the Legion of Honour is entitled to precede any Frenchman who is undecorated, unless he be in a position to give away the red ribbon, or is the lion of the feast or gathering at which they both are. A short time ago three Duchesses were invited to a dinner-party here. As soon as they were asked, the difficult question arose of the order of their precedence. It was decided that the husband of one of them, being the personage in compliment of whom the dinner was to be given, was for that reason to be placed on the right of the host. Her step-daughter, whose Duchy only goes back to the time of Louis XIII., was placed on the left, and the third Duchesse two places below. Her Duchy is of older date, a fact with which the host was not acquainted. He may have thought that it was a creation of Louis XV., of whom one of their husband's great-great-grandmothers was a mistress en titre, an honour to which two of her sisters were also called. But she is old, and wears her white hair undyed. This should have secured, according to the French rule that age is most honourable, the second best place at least. She thinks herself aggrieved by having been placed third down. Before the daughters of the Frankfort Rothschild married—one the Duc de Gramont, and the other the Prince de Wagram—anti-Semitic grand ladies who wanted to have the wives of the Barons de Rothschild at their dinner parties, but shrank from giving them the best places, used to invite Duchesses to have an excuse for not marking the places of honour for the former. This course cannot be taken in the case of the Duchesse de Gramont, whose ducal coronet is an old one, but not so old as that of D'Uzès, whose wearer was certainly a generation ago the premiere pairesse de France. If the present Duchesse is not that, it is because she is the descendant on the maternal side of the Veuve Cliquot. The De Wagrams are altogether wrong in claiming a semi-royal status, the wife of Berthier, the first Prince de Wagram, not being so much as the morganatic daughter of a Prince of the House of Bavaria. The Princesse de Murat makes herself ridiculous by insisting on receiving the honours due to a royal status. If asked to a dinner party she must know before going to it who are to be at it and how they are to be placed. The children of Joachim Murat were Royal, they having existed when he was King of Naples. His kingship, it is true, was ephemeral. But, on the "once a King always a King" principle, that did not stand in the way of their pretensions to be treated as Altesses Royales. All his grand-children who were born before the fall of the Second Empire were Imperial Highnesses by a decree of the late Emperor. The Duchesse de Mouchy forfeited her Imperial standing, I remember, on her marriage with a subject. The great-grand-children of Joachim Murat are neither Royal, Imperial, nor noble in any degree. There is, however, nothing to prevent them calling themselves either or all three, the Department of the Grand Seal of France, which was founded by the Emperor to catch up persons usurping titles, having been recently abolished. A rather odd anomaly in Faubourg St. Germain Society has been called to my attention, and shows the power which current words and ideas have upon even those persons who hate them. It is everywhere agreed there to give the pas to the Duc de Larochefoucauld. Not that his ducal brevet is nearly so old as a good many others. But he is President of a lot of things and the Jockey Club among the number. Whenever there are Jockey Club gentlemen at the same table he, as "M. le Président," walks before them. The senior Duc of all the De Larochefoucaulds is the son of a camp-laundress. According to the old orthodox ideas this would be a bar for a number of generations to Court honours. The daughters of noblemen were carefully protected in the matrimonial market from the competition of young ladies of less blue blood, by the rules that the wife must be as well born as the husband, and the aspirant to military distinction, as an officer, owes an equal amount of aristocratic ancestry to his mother as to his father. All sorts of devices used to be resorted to by the Kings of France to be able to show a little politeness to half-bred folks. Marly and its gaming-tables were invented for these social pariahs. Etiquette was practically thrown aside there and at Compiègne, the King's whim being his "good pleasure" in both places. At Versailles, etiquette was rigid as a dogma. Necker, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, could not present his daughter at Court. She had to be married first to the Ambassador of Sweden to be presentable, and then only in the Queen's bedroom. Rastaquouère heiresses, who come here to pick up noblemen, have no idea that marriage with themselves must attaint the blood, and would incapacitate future children from being received as of noble blood at Court, were there such a thing in France.

SANITARY SURVEYS.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER. Restores the colour. Renews the growth. Arrests the fall. Cleanses the scalp.

In serving his country as a mariner George Hugo has got sense. Those sharkish dressmakers, Pasquier & Co. (the "Co." being a wife), are finding the poet's grandson less verdant than he was when a few years ago he signed to their order a bill at eighteen months' sight for nearly £3,000. He had, when he signed it, just come of age, and now pleads, as well he may, that he was taken by surprise, the Pasquiers suddenly coming down on him to secure a minority "debt," and using undue influence. He was introduced to them by a certain Madame Dubois, a mature and very experienced person, who persuaded him that her mission was to form him according to the best pattern, as a young man of style. This education was a most expensive one. It greatly lay in cultivating a habit of mind which led him to order the most extravagantly dear mantles and dresses for his preceptress. If the lady did not pocket heavy commissions as well as wear these clothes she would have been ill-used by Pasquier & Co. He was introduced to another lady, Madame Braga, on whom he spent in two months £24,000, she persuading him that nothing so became a nobleman (a status to which he would be entitled were there a Monarchy in France) as lavishing money on the fair sex. The blue water, in which young Hugo has navigated on his way to some French settlement, absence from Paris, and the experience as a mariner of the hard realities of life, have sobered him. He is a singularly handsome man, and might with study become a great painter. When he discharges his military debt to France, he intends to apply himself seriously to painting. The tribunal before which his case was tried is nearly sure to give judgment against Pasquier & Co. Georges Hugo must have been plucked bare if his stepfather, M. Lockroy, had not defended him against the sharks that combined to prey on him.

Mynheer van Bosse, Railway Minister of the Netherlands, has remodelled the passenger first and second class carriages. One can now travel luxuriously in the latter, which on the Netherlands-Belgian main line go as far as Brussels, and will go farther in virtue of an international convention. The French lag behind most of the Continental countries in their railway carriages, stations, and termini. There is not in all France a railway buffet to be compared to that of Berne, or a terminus that approaches the Frankfort one, at which one can enjoy a warm bath and a delightful dressing-room between trains. Swedish railways are nearly perfect, and the guards are perfect, they being orderly, respectful, obliging, and bound not to accept tips. The State in the Netherlands having taken over all the railway lines from private Companies, Van Bosse's Ministry is anything but a sinecure. Anent the Netherlands, I hear that the German Emperor watches the young Queen with a paternal eye, and that the Dutch do not like it. They are more than satisfied with the sage and straightforward course followed by Queen Emma, and the good sense she shows in the education of the young Queen, who has just come home with her from Switzerland, whither she was taken last May, when the show places were not overrun with tourists.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

THE true philosopher, Dear Lady Betty, says little; but he thinks very much. By imitating this week this severe reticence, I propose to prove to you that I too am a philosopher. You may assume, therefore, that I am deeply absorbed in thought.

* * * * *

The town is marriage-mad. The West-end has been delivered up to the carpenters, and these hammer and saw incessantly until this neighbourhood has come to resemble a shipbuilder's yard, and one might almost suppose that we were constructing another Noah's Ark. For several days the air of Piccadilly has been vitiated with saw-dust, the pavement has been strewn with tin-tacks and with crooked nails, and the general din has been bewildering. Our shopkeepers have all deserted their legitimate trades, and the only article which these now sell is seats. The chemist, for the moment, no longer dispenses drugs and draughts—he traffics in seats. The fruiterer ignores fruit for—seats. The tobacconist has no further use for cigars, he speculates in—seats; and he who should seek for bread from the baker now would have to be satisfied, not with stones, but with—seats. Never was there before such a disarrangement of the trades!

Deal planks, gas jets and pipes, tin tacks, red baize, and gimcrack decorations abound. Harassed by this combination of abominations all my philosophy has evaporated.

"Toilet Lanoline" softens, clears, and preserves the skin, and should be used in every household. "Toilet Lanoline" protects the skin from the effects of exposure, and adds to the natural beauty. In collapsible tubes, 6d.; in small boxes, 3d., from all chemists and druggists. Wholesale depôt, 67, Holborn-viaduct. The genuine bears the trade-mark, "Lanoline."

Borwick's Baking Powder. It is the best that money can buy.
Borwick's Baking Powder. Has been awarded Five Gold Medals.
Borwick's Baking Powder. Guaranteed to be free from alum.

If an ordinary marriage may be a failure a Royal marriage is a downright revolution!

* * * * *

Kings, Queens, and Princes, Crown Princes, Half-Crown Princes, and Royal personages are now as numerous here as are the grains of sand upon the seashore. They drive about the town attired in picturesque uniforms, some with feathers and some without, some in blue and some in scarlet, all "highly coloured" and none of them "plain," until the simple folk who frequent the Row have become convinced that the wax effigies at Madame Tussaud's Museum are out upon an annual airing. And then the Life Guards are perpetually upon the move. First comes the advance-guard, composed of two soldiers. Their duty it is to reconnoitre the line of march, and to see that no enemy lurks either along Constitution Hill or in Hyde Park waiting to attack the approaching squadron. Some sixty yards in the rear of these there rides a solitary horseman, to whom is deputed the task of acting as a connecting file between the advance guard and the main body. It appears that unless this individual is careful the main body might possibly lose its way between Buckingham Palace and the Knightsbridge Barracks—an incident which would almost amount to a national disaster. Protected in this manner, there presently appears the main body itself. Every man wears a cuirass, and is armed with a carbine — a combination which is the more admirable since it is practically impossible to fire effectively the carbine with the butt resting upon a cuirass! Then follows a bold pioneer, to whom is entrusted a hatchet. He looks like a military executioner, and his office is the more interesting when it is understood that the hatchet is of no earthly use to him, as he happens to have no duties to perform in which a hatchet might possibly be serviceable. However, it all looks well, and what with the green foliage of the trees, the brilliant-hued dresses of the women, the blue sky, and the cloth-of-gold trumpeters, Hyde Park is just now aglow with vivid colouring.

A new proverb is my personal offering to Princess May upon the occasion of her marriage to the Duke of York: "Give, and you shall be received." Anyhow, diamonds, rubies, pearls, rings, brooches, bracelets, and knick-knacks of every conceivable kind have been pouring in upon the bride-elect for the past week—a veritable shower of precious gems. Sir Augustus Harris should take the hint for his next Christmas pantomime, when he might provide us with the brilliant scene of "The White Lodge, Princess Peerless and the Diamond Deluge." The Duke and the Duchess of Teck have not always been inordinately rich. I wonder if it ever occurred to them before that they were surrounded by so many disinterested and devoted friends, prepared to seize the first excuse to shower costly gifts upon them?

So far as the illuminations are concerned, the most elaborate will be found in the City, where the Bank of England in particular will be ablaze with light. As to the scaffoldings and balconies erected along the routes which the processions are to pass, it is to be hoped that these will be carefully tested beforehand, for otherwise several serious accidents may very probably occur. The heat and rain—if there is any of the latter—may affect the new wood, and a very little miscalculation may lead to a very great misfortune.

I see that M.P.'s alone are to be allowed to drive through the streets reserved for pedestrians. Mr. Asquith, on being asked how the police were to know that an M.P. is a member of the august Assembly that he adorns, replied that the police would take their word for it. But will the police take other people's word for it? If these sort of privileges are to be granted to our Legislators on national holidays, it will be necessary to invent some distinguishing dress, in order that they may be recognised. The Roman Senators wore a band of purple round their togas. I would suggest that our M.P.'s should have purple hats.

Although the newspapers announce that M. Albert Decrais is to succeed M. Waddington as French Ambassador in London, no official appointment to the post has as yet been made, nor has any official notification of any such appointment been sent to the provisional authorities at Albert Gate. Nevertheless, it is more than probable that M. Decrais is designed to be the new Ambassador. At his last post—Vienna—M. Decrais was extremely popular. He is wealthy and hospitable, and, which is more, together with Madame Decrais, he has the gift of doing things exceptionally well.

Mr. Martin Le Marchant Gosselin, C.B., First Secretary of Embassy at Madrid, has been appointed to be First Secretary of Embassy at Berlin in place of Mr. Henry Le Poer Trench. Mr. Gosselin, who is at present in London, will very shortly leave for Germany. Sir George Bonham, Secretary of Legation at the Hague, will succeed Mr. Gosselin as Secretary of Embassy at Madrid.

Mr. William Goschen, Secretary of Legation at Lisbon, has been appointed to be Secretary of Embassy at Washington, and Mr. George Greville, at present Secretary of Legation at Rio de Janeiro, is to succeed Mr. Goschen at Lisbon. These new appointments will be gazetted shortly.

After a distressing illness of several months' duration, Mr. Thomas Tindall died last week in London. The late Mr. Tindall was part proprietor and originator of the Isthmian Club, in Piccadilly, and part proprietor of the Wellington Club, at the corner of Grosvenor-place. His death will occasion sincere regret to a large number of friends.

In proof of the eager desire which there is to witness the forthcoming Royal processions, I may record that so much as fifteen guineas has been paid for a seat, whilst the Directors of the Security Company, in St. James's-street, have already obtained close upon £1,000 for the seats upon their premises.—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

ISINGLASS, who is looking very well, is doing no work at Newmarket except easy canters, so it may be assumed that he will miss his engagement at Goodwood, and be reserved for the Leger. If anything happened to Isinglass, my own opinion is that Phocion would then win the Leger, as he is decidedly the most improved three-year-old in training. He is still coming on, and will not be seen at his best until the autumn. Phocion is a much better place investment (if people must be on the race) than Ravensbury. After Phocion, the best outsider is Medicis, who is rapidly improving, and he can both stay and go fast. Le Nicham can have no chance at Doncaster, as he lacks stamina for such a race, and 500 to 1 would be a short price to take about Raeburn.

The principal two-year-old races at Newmarket last week resulted in accordance with my predictions: Speed, Sempronius, and Sweet Duchess winning the July, Exeter, and Fulbourne Stakes respectively. Speed is a very nice colt, but I expect that we shall see the best of him during the present season. El Guacho, by Hermit, who finished second in the July Stakes, is capable of much improvement. He cost 1,400 gs. last season, and is sure to get back the money in the course of the next few weeks. Sempronius won the Exeter Stakes very cleverly, and behind him was La Nievre, own sister to Le Nord, who was heavily backed, having won a nice trial. The Duke of Devonshire won the Stud Stakes with Theseus, by Isonomy out of Hermia, a colt which was bred by Lord Dudley, who was by no means fancied, all the money being on Green Mint and Janetta. Sweet Duchess proved herself to be a really good thing for the Fulbourne Stakes, which the Duke of St. Albans expected to win with Grania. It will be remembered that Sweet Duchess was said at Ascot to be considerably in front of Wedding Bell.

MERRYWEATHER'S high-class Red, Grey, Non-kinkable Garden Hose. MERRYWEATHER'S high-class "Invicta" Grip Armoured Garden Hose.—Call at or write to 63, Long-acre, London, W.C.

Raeburn ought not to have been started for the Midsummer Plate, as it was only too evident at Ascot that he wants a long rest. How people could be so muddy-minded as to bet odds on a beast so palpably stale it is indeed difficult to understand. Medicis, who came out a fresh horse, beat him easily, although he is still backward. I fancy that Medicis will be a good animal to follow for some time to come. The favouritism of Orvieto for the Dullingham Plate was another exhibition of the most asinine fatuity on the part of the gullish herd. After the horse's race in the Ascot Cup nobody thought that he would be running again in a fortnight. Cabin Boy simply won in a canter. Prince Hampton is at last being kept in his proper course, and he won both the Bottisham Plate (beating Milford, who is now dreadfully stale) and the July Cup, for which Flodden Field ran so well that if he had been kept for Goodwood he would most assuredly have won the Stewards' Cup, but now he will have at least another stone on his back. It was a fantastical puerility to run the horse at Newmarket in such a race.

Even the Panglosses of the sporting papers must by this time have realised that the market for yearlings is now very far indeed from being in a satisfactory condition. While there is an apoplectic plethora in the catalogues there is a palpably increasing tendency to paralytic tenuity among the rings of purchasers. People will not even look at any yearlings which are not sired by "fashionable" horses, and, considering the exorbitant fees which have to be paid for such stallions, it is clear that breeding for sale cannot be profitable unless a very much higher average is regularly obtained than would have perfectly satisfied the vendors of twenty-five years ago. Mr. Rose, who is apparently intending to give up racing, obtained last week the excellent average of 748 gs. for five yearlings, the best price (2,000 gs.) being paid by Mr. J. A. Miller for a colt by Sheen out of Distant Shore, dam of Gulliver and St. Damien. The wretched average of 59 gs. could only be obtained for fifteen yearlings from the Yardley Stud, and 227 gs. was the average for twelve from the Heather Stud, four more being sent back. Lord Rosebery sent up nine from Mentmore, but could not find purchasers for four, while the other five made only 325 gs. altogether, which was a truly dismal collapse, considering that they were all sired by 100 gs. horses. Mr. Chaplin sold two out of eight for the paltry sum of 110 gs. On Wednesday only three yearlings ran into four figures. Lady Stamford's filly by Saraband out of Geheimniss, for which R. Peck paid 1,000 gs.; Mr. Brocklehurst's colt by Donovan out of Alone, by Hermit, which was bought for 1,150 gs. to go to Australia; and J. Porter's colt by Hampton out of Nettle, for which Mr. D. Cooper gave 1,150 gs. On Thursday four yearlings went into four figures—a filly by Hampton out of Merry Duchess, from Kineton, for which Mr. L. Brassey gave 1,100 gs.; a colt by Donovan out of Grandeur, in R. Peck's lot, which Captain E. Baird bought for 2,000 gs.; and Mr. J. S. Harrison's colt, by St. Simon out of Rosy Morn, for which M. Lebaudy gave 2,150 gs.; and a colt by Ayrshire out of St. Editha, which was sold to Sir James Miller for 1,350 gs. These were the only high prices during the week, and in many cases the yearlings failed to realise the amount of the stud fee.

The American breeder who paid 14,500 gs. for Meddler cannot be congratulated on having obtained a bargain, for the price was perfectly ridiculous, as the horse is not to be raced. Sir J. B. Maple paid only 15,000 gs. for Common after that horse had won the Two Thousand, Derby, and Leger, while St. Gatien (sire of Meddler) was sold to the German Government for 14,000 gs. after he had been for several years a successful sire. There was a great desire manifested to get Meddler for the Hungarian Government, but the American commissioner was not to be beaten. Quite as well sold was the yearling filly by Saraband out of Busybody, dam of Meddler, for which Mr. H. Bass gave 2,500 gs., which was five times her intrinsic value. Lady Rosebery was sold for 1,400 gs. to Morbey, the ex jockey, who also gave 1,000 gs. for Shelley. Of the two-year-olds the highest priced was a pretty racing-like filly by Galopin out of Lady Chelmsford (purchased at Doncaster last September for 1,250 gs.), for which Jewitt gave 1,000 gs.

The Bedford Lodge people seem to have been exceedingly exasperated by the loss of Meddler, and as 13,000 gs. was bid (on behalf of Mrs. Langtry), it may be assumed that the horse retains his form. If his new owner has a grain of common sense, he will run Meddler for the Goodwood Cup, a race which the horse cannot lose, and he would leave the country with some éclat, after having carried off a classic stake, even although he had really beaten nothing. Meddler having no valuable engagements, it was thought certain that he would be kept at Bedford Lodge, and the expectations of the stable would have been realised but for the foreign competition. Meddler is the highest-priced horse that has ever been sold in Europe at a public auction. It was said at Newmarket on Tuesday that Mr. Weatherby had been instructed to go as far as 20,000 gs. Meddler will go to the stud in America next season.

Windgall did not change hands, being reserved at 6,000 gs. The hard ground at Epsom gave this horse a shaking, but I expect he will win a good handicap in the autumn if he goes on all right.

One of the daily papers, in a notice of the late Lord Calthorpe, states that his "alliance" with Captain Machell lasted for forty years. As a matter of fact, this "alliance" began in 1866. Lord Calthorpe was on the turf for more than thirty years, and, having abundance of money, he was most lavish in his outlay when he fancied a horse, but during this long period he owned only three animals of really high class—Knight of the Garter, who was bought as a yearling from the late Sir Henry de Vœux, who bred him, and Seabreeze and Satiety, both of which were included in the lot of yearlings which Lord Calthorpe purchased en bloc in 1886 from the Duchess of Montrose. Knight of the Garter was 12 lb. behind Hermit in May, 1867, so he was considerably removed from the very first class. Satiety had so few engagements that he never had a fair chance of showing how smart he was. Seabreeze was a very good mare, but she was most lucky when she won the Leger of 1888, which would unquestionably have fallen to Lord Bradford's Chillington but for an accident. Satiety would probably have won both the Derby and Leger in 1888 if he had been entered for those races, as he was known to be better than Seabreeze. Lord Calthorpe had a very fine breeding-stud at Lanwades, near Newmarket, where the sires are Petrarch (purchased from the late Lord Lonsdale), Satiety, and Crafton. Lord Calthorpe was a staunch supporter of Newmarket, and he never missed a meeting there until his health failed. He is a great and irreparable loss to Captain Machell.

There will be plenty of racing next week at Newmarket and at Sandown Park, the two meetings extending over five days, and some very interesting sport may be expected.

The Prince of Wales is to be at Newmarket on Tuesday and on Wednesday, and he will be at Sandown Park on both days, so that a very large attendance at these meetings may be anticipated.

There is a large entry for the Soltykoff Stakes at Newmarket, including Wedding Bell, the winner of the New Stakes at Ascot, and she will have to give 13 lb. to maidens, but the New T.Y.C. is a very easy course. Stowmarket will very likely be backed again in spite of his failure last week. Vitez, who won the Maiden Plate on Thursday, is engaged, and he has escaped a penalty, but, although he was very heavily backed last week on the strength of his having been well tried, he is a long way from being a flyer. Prince Soltykoff's Vulpecula may turn out to be the most dangerous opponent of Wedding Bell. The Chesterfield Stakes has Theseus, Galloping Dick, and Speed, of which lot I have the most fancy for Prince Soltykoff's colt, but Galloping Dick will win if he likes to do his best. The Zetland Plate of £500 has Ravensbury among the entries, and he ought to win if he starts, as the others are dreadfully bad. The Summer Stakes will not be good enough for Childwick, and Wolf's Crag or Cornwall ought to win, as the Duke of Westminster's two maidens appear to be beneath contempt.

To Overcom: Weakness.—Pepper's Quinine and Iron Tonic gives New Life, Appetite, Health, Strength, Energy. Cures Neuralgia, Indigestion, Nerve Debility. Pepper's Tonic. Kept everywhere.

Chêne Royal has been scratched for the Eclipse Stakes, for which the probable starters are Silene, Marly, May Duke, La Flèche, Royal Harry or El Diablo, Raeburn, Orme, and one or two of General Owen Williams's. Orme will certainly run, and we saw at Ascot that he is in good form. As to La Flèche, she looks well and she goes well, but I do not believe that anything conclusive is known as to her present racing form. She has been very tenderly trained until within the last ten days, but she is now in strong work. The Eclipse Stakes distance is just a trifle beyond Orme's best course, and if La Flèche is now in her autumn form I expect she will beat him and win. Perhaps at the last moment the mare will be withdrawn, for if they were afraid to knock her about on the hard ground at Ascot, they may not care to run her at Sandown until a great deal more rain falls. If both animals are now in good form there should be a splendid race, and wise people will be content to look on at it.

On Saturday, the National Breeders' Produce Stakes of £5,000 will be run, and this is one of the most valuable two-year-old stakes of the season. The last forfeit for this race was declared on March 28, and forty-six two-year-olds have been left in, on each of which a subscription of £42 will have to be paid, and as it is a case of p.p., there will probably be a large field. The Prince of Wales has left in St. Valerie, by Hampton out of Welfare. M. E. Blanc has two still in the list, Gouvernant, half-brother, by The Bard, to Gouverneur; and Risque Tout, half-sister, by Retreat, to Révérend. Mr. D. Cooper has both Glare and Jack the Dandy, by Satiety out of Satire. Mr. Gardner has left in that disappointing beast, Coldwell; and Sir R. Waldie Griffith has Wedding Bell, who was entered by her breeder, Mr. J. S. Harrison, who will get £300 out of the stakes if she wins. Sir J. B. Maple has left in two out of four—Dancing Bells and Royal Victoria, by Royal Hampton out of Hackness. The Duchess of Montrose has three left, out of which Janetta can have no chance on her recent running. Jocasta, by St. Simon out of Thebais, and Veneration, by St. Simon out of Devotion, are about the highest bred animals in the race. The Duke of Portland has Schoolbook and Cessnock, by Ayrshire out of Wheel of Fortune. All Baron de Rothschild's three have been withdrawn. The Duke of Westminster will probably run Sanderling, by St. Simon out of Sandiway. I take it that Glare is decidedly the best of the public lot, and if she is beaten it will be by something really smart from the dark division. She has a penalty of 9 lb.

MAMMON.

CUMBERLAND GAP HOTEL AND PARK COMPANY.

WITH reference to the above Company, I have been favoured with the following communication in reply to the criticisms addressed to me by Mr. Allan McLane Hamilton, until lately the President of this Company:—

2, Tokenhouse-buildings, London, E.C.,
June 26, 1893.

Our attention having been called to your issue of June 22, we have referred to your issue of June 1, and in response to your invitation that we should take the trouble to enlighten your readers regarding the above Company, we desire to make the following observations:—

Mr. Allan McLane Hamilton was the President of the Cumberland Gap Park Company from the inception of the Company down to the month of March in this year. During that period two reports were issued by the Directors; both were signed by him as President, both contain an audited balance-sheet showing the capitalisation and expenditure incurred by the Company, both were circulated amongst all shareholders, both were duly received and adopted at the shareholders' meetings, and both are enclosed "for the information of your readers" if desired. In November in last year, Mr. Hamilton came to England at the expense of the Company to preside at a meeting of shareholders convened by his desire for November 7, 1892. He informed the agent of the Company here that his time would be very precious and limited; notwithstanding this he found it necessary to spend the greater portion of the period during which he was in Europe in a trip to the Continent, and finally returned to America without meeting the shareholders. As a consequence, Mr. H. F. Pollock was at the last moment called upon to preside at the meeting, which he did. The report and accounts containing the scheme of reconstruction proposed by Mr. Hamilton and his colleagues were then laid before the meeting. All questions arising upon the report and accounts were dealt with, and a resolution adopting the recommendation of the Directors was duly passed. This recommendation involved a reconstruction of the Company, which we are glad to state has been duly completed by Messrs. Cary & Whitridge, the Solicitors to the Company in New York. A print of the report of the proceedings at this meeting is also enclosed, and is also at the disposal of your readers.

The views taken by Mr. Hamilton as to his duties were unfortunately so much at variance with the expectations in that particular of a large group of the English shareholders that, in February last, Mr. Graham, an English gentleman, in whom they reposed confidence, was requested by a majority of the English shareholders to proceed to America to take a seat on the Board. As his policy, and that of Mr. Hamilton, were wholly at variance, Mr. Hamilton resigned, and Mr. Graham has taken his place as President of the Company. Since that event, the business of the Company has steadily increased, and although, for reasons with which we need not trouble you, it has been thought well that Mr. Graham should be appointed Receiver of the property, that step, according to his latest advices, will not interfere with the continuing progress of the business. We do not know what communication Mr. Hamilton has addressed to you, and to which you refer in your issue of the 1st. He did some time ago address a printed circular to the Agent and the Bankers of the Company, which they showed to us, and we then concurred in their opinion that it was best to take no notice of it.

We have no desire to say anything that may be disagreeable, but it is probably fair to add that we were no doubt foolish to entrust our money to the management of Mr. Hamilton, who, though a very cheery companion, is not a business man, whilst he was unwise to undertake work in this Company for which he had had no previous training. The following are important facts and speak for themselves:—

The capital of the reconstructed Company is (in English numerals)—

In bonds	£80,000
In Preferred shares	160,000	and
In Deferred shares	80,000

Of this amount we and our friends hold or are responsible for—

In bonds	£50,000
In Preference stock	100,000,	and
In Deferred stock	35,090

The bonds and Preferred stock represent a very serious cash investment by ourselves and our friends, and we are individually by far the largest shareholders in the Company. Per contra, Mr. Hamilton has never held any pecuniary interest in the Company, or any shares for which he has paid one farthing. Under all these circumstances it is not our intention to waste any further time or attention on any business communications from Mr. Hamilton.—We are, &c.,

COLEMAN & MAY.
H. F. POLLOCK.

I may inform Messrs. Coleman & May and Mr. Pollock that Mr. Hamilton had addressed to me, as enclosure to a letter giving further particulars, precisely the printed circular in question, which contained a number of allegations, from which I published a very temperate extract on June 7. It would, perhaps, have been preferable if a reply had at once been made to that circular, which Mr. Hamilton appears to have taken some trouble to distribute. As that gentleman made out a primâ facie case for himself in his first communication, and as he had been President of the Company, I had no hesitation in publishing the gist of this complaint, and I must leave him to dispose of the counter-statements now made.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—Two momentous decisions have marked the past week as one of the most eventful in the history of the Stock Exchange—the closing of the Indian Mints and the fixing of the rupee by the Indian Government, and—closely connected with this measure—the calling of Congress by President Cleveland for an August session with the avowed object of repealing the Sherman Silver Bill. The muddle which has been caused by the sudden action of the India Council was simply appalling, and gives rise to the reflection that if the report of Lord Herschell's Committee containing this startling recommendation had been first discussed in Parliament, the force of the shock, which occasioned a sudden panic and consequently heavy loss to many, would have been greatly lessened.

The Silver Panic.

What has been resented most, however, is that the secret leaked out in certain quarters as early as three or four weeks ago, when large purchases of Rupee Paper were made from 65 upwards. Whether a report that a fair member of the weaker sex was entrusted with the contents of the report be true or not, it is certain that a little bird whispered it to some of the big houses, and if the dealings in Rupees and certain silver securities on the Stock Exchange during the past month could be analysed, some very curious discoveries would be made. The result has not altogether fulfilled the hopes of the "Bulls" of Rupee Paper, who anticipated a much sharper advance than that to 71, and most of whom are still sitting on their purchases. This disappointment was caused by the fact that the Indian Council are making allotments below 1s. 4d., at which the rupee was supposed to be fixed. In fact, the Indian authorities themselves appear to be very much at sea about the whole matter. Silver was severely depressed, falling to 30½d., but a recovery has since set in. A week ago I foreshadowed this decline which, I also stated, would be followed by the closing of a number of mines, after which the metal would find its natural level. This is precisely what is now happening. A meeting of mine owners at Denver has resolved upon the closing of all the silver mines in Colorado, and from Australia comes the news of the closing of the British Broken Hill Mine, while Peruvian and Chilian mines are also reported as being closed. I do not pretend to predict the future course of silver—it is one of the greatest problems of the day. But I hope that the quotation will not rebound too sharply, as delay in the shutting down of silver mines would only prolong the unsettled state of things. With regard to the heavy fall in silver securities, such as Mexican Government and Railway stocks, Perus, &c., it was, no doubt, greatly overdone, quickened as it was by heavy "Bear" pressure. The extent to which it will be recovered in subsequent market movements must, of course, depend upon the level at which the white metal may settle down, but if it should remain above 30d. there will be every prospect of Mexico passing successfully through the financial stress caused by this spasm with the assistance of powerful Continental houses. In the meantime, holders will do well not to give way to panic and to keep their investments, as a further fall seems most improbable, and a recovery is far more likely.

President Cleveland to the Rescue.

What I have so frequently predicted has at last come about. Having given a protracted object lesson to the silver men, and being assailed with petitions from all parts of the country, President Cleveland has called an August Session of Congress for the repeal of the Sherman Silver Bill and such other legislation as may be necessary to re-establish the finances of the United States on a solid basis. That the Bill will be repealed at once cannot be doubted, and although the silver experiment has been an expensive one for the United States, that country is so wealthy that it can well afford to bear the loss. An official Treasury statement gives the total amount of silver bullion purchased as 156,664,590 fine ounces, costing 147,138,375 dols. At the lowest price as yet touched—62 cents.—the value of this stock of silver is put at 92,132,046 dols., and the actual loss at 55,000,000 dols. For a country as wealthy as the United States, with a very small national debt, a loss of £11,000,000 is insignificant, and a reversal of the silver policy with adequate financial measures will no doubt greatly improve the position in that country. Ex-President Harrison is reported as having said that "he favoured the repeal of the Sherman Law, because it would be the means of restoring confidence, although in reality its beneficent effects existed more in the imagination of the public than in actual fact." I am at issue with Mr. Harrison on this point, and he no doubt puts the matter in this way as he has been instrumental in enacting this mischievous measure, but for all that there is a great deal in sentiment, and greater confidence in the future of American securities will henceforth be felt both in the United States and in Europe. All the talk about a possible gold premium in New York is thus knocked on the head, and investors need no longer fear this bogey, which has been utilised even to discourage purchases of sound American Railroad bonds. It is true that the last New York Bank statement is not favourable, neither was it expected to be so. But the drain of currency to Chicago and San Francisco—in fact, to the West generally—has now come to an end, and a return movement is probable, especially now that the calling of Congress will increase confidence in the financial situation. The New York Banks have alleviated the stringency of the Money Market materially at the end of the half-year, and with the disbursements of dividends and interests at the commencement of July an easier Money Market may be looked for. All these are points which must tell more and more in favour of American Railroad stocks as the August session approaches, and it may be assumed that the probable result of the latter will, as always is the custom of the Stock Exchange, be discounted long before August is reached.

The Course of Yankee Rails.

In view of the new departure taken by President Cleveland, and of the more favourable turn of affairs which it foreshadows in the United States, it will be useful to glance at the course of prices of Yankee Rails. The following table gives the comparison of present quotations with those of six months and eighteen months ago, and the highest and lowest points touched during the year 1892:—

	Dec., 1891.	In 1892. Highest.	In 1892. Lowest.	Dec., 1892.	July 1, 1893.
Atchison	45¾	47⅞	33¼	34	23¼
Do. "A"	68	69⅞	54¼	55¼	45
Milwaukee	83¾	86⅜	77⅜	78¼	71
Denver	18	19⅛	15⅞	16⅛	12
Do. Pref.	47	56¾	46¼	53½	40
Louisville	84⅞	87⅜	66⅞	71¾	68
Erie	33¾	35⅞	25⅛	24⅜	17¾
Norfolk Pref.	55	57½	38⅜	38¾	24
Ohio	22¼	24⅛	19½	22	16
Pennsylvania	58¾	59¼	54¼	55⅝	52½
Reading	20	32½	20	27	7½
Union Pacific	44⅜	51⅝	37¼	38⅜	27
Wabash Pref.	31⅓	34¼	23¼	24⅝	17
Canadian Pacific	93¼	97½	87½	91½	79⅛
Grand Trunk 1st Pref.	72	73⅛	56⅜	61⅛	53¾

It will be seen that in almost all cases prices are lower—and many a great deal lower—than they have been during last year. The recent rallies have lifted the level a little above the lowest, but quotations are still exceedingly low, thus showing the havoc which has been wrought by the currency troubles. When it is considered that such lines as the Atchinson, the Milwaukee, and the Louisville are at present more prosperous than they were a year ago, the heavy fall must appear altogether unfounded. The Louisville line is about to declare a dividend of 2 dols. for the six months, with some 800,000 dols. carried over, and on that basis the shares at 66 yield 6 per cent. per annum on the investment. The Milwaukee Company has earned 5 per cent. in eleven months, and will, no doubt, maintain its dividend of 4 per cent. with the chief benefits from the World's Fair yet to come. The talk about financial troubles of the Atchison seems to be altogether mythical, to judge from the following utterance of President Reinhart of that Company:—

> The Atchison Company, strictly speaking, has no floating debt. Its current liabilities are more than equalled by its current cash assets and cash on hand, and advances to auxiliary Companies are not treated by us as assets. The Atchison Company took up the floating debts of the St. Louis and San Francisco and Colorado Midland Railway Companies shortly after these properties were acquired, and, as is well known, changed the same into its own notes to be financed under the credit of the parent

Minton's (Limited). Minton's China.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

Company at a proper time. The amount of these notes—all of which are secured by first-class bonds—at this time is 5,900,000 dols., against 6,525,000 dols. last year, a decrease of 625,000 dols. The Atchison Company owns all the capital stocks of the St. Louis and San Francisco and the Colorado Midland Companies, as well as those of all other Companies comprising the railroad system of 9,346 miles, and the operations and financing of the entire system are done through the parent Company, so that there is no floating debt apart of the amount the Atchison Company shows. The 5,900,000 dols. is, therefore, the total floating debt of 9,346 miles of railroad, which is amply and satisfactorily secured, and which, when the financial atmosphere brightens, will be entirely eliminated.

Under these circumstances, the recent decline seems inexplicable, and there remains only the talk about the further issue of 5,000,000 dols. more of "B" Second Mortgage bonds. That, of course, had been part of the reorganisation programme from the outset, and there is absolutely no reason in this to excite alarm. The sharp rally in the "B" bonds to 49, and in the "A" bonds to 45, should, therefore, be only the commencement of a more important recovery, especially when it is considered that the "B" bonds at this price yield more than 8 per cent. on the investment. The last fall in Denvers was due to the silver scare and the talk of the shutting up of the silver mines, which is probable enough. But the movement is greatly exaggerated, as the mineral business of the line is only 13 per cent. of its entire traffic, and silver, again, forms merely a portion of this. Extremely cheap are Erie and Ohio, and any one putting them away now will doubtless see a 10-dol. profit in a comparatively short time. A new Reading reorganisation scheme is evidently on the tapis, to judge from the exceptional strength of Reading stocks during the last week; whenever the secret gets out, there will probably be a smart rise. Investors thus have an excellent chance of not only buying sound dividend-paying stocks to yield good returns, but also to obtain these and the more speculative shares at a level at which they can practically make sure of a substantial profit in a month or two, now that the currency trouble in the United States will be finally disposed of. Canadian Pacifics and Grand Trunks have experienced a heavy fall since 1892, a movement which I foreshadowed at an early stage. I also predicted the rally which has since set in, and which will probably make further progress now that the outlook for grain traffic of both lines is greatly improved.

Home Rails.

The Home Railway market has also suffered by the silver scare, but it has stood the ordeal better than any other department. On the outbreak of the panic, operators all over the "House" rushed to sell Brighton "A," with the result that this stock was at one time depressed to below 155. But a sharp recovery to 157¼ since set in, and it is difficult to see how any lower quotation can be justified, although a fresh relapse to 156 has occurred. On June 22 I published an estimate by a very sagacious member of the Brighton market, in which, on the basis of £208,639 of net earnings, including balance brought forward, a dividend of 4¾ per cent., with £17,750 carried forward on July 1, 1893, was worked out, as against 3¾ per cent., with £13,000 forward at the end of the first half-year of 1892, this making 3½ per cent. to the credit of Brighton "A" against 1½ per cent. last year. In this forecast the net earnings for May were estimated at £25,000, while, according to the statement just issued, they reached £28,991. This makes the prediction of an 8 per cent. dividend on Brighton "A" for the current year all the safer, and when it is considered that this stock would yield on this basis over 5$\frac{1}{16}$ per cent. at present price, it is evident that investors will not do badly in buying "Berthas" even now. Dover "A" have also been affected by the general slump, and they have shown greater difficulty in recovering, but any revival of speculation would quickly bring them to the front again. This also applies to "Saras," which are slowly recovering. The silver scare has cost the leading stocks of the Heavy lines, North-Western, Great Western, and Midlands, about a point, and the North-Eastern a little more. I have nothing to add to my dividend estimates. Whoever buys these stocks at present must be satisfied with a moderate yield, but general trade reports point to an improvement in the industries of the country, and the repeal of the McKinley tariff will, no doubt, also be hurried on now that Congress has been called for an early Session. The Scotch stocks have also declined slightly, and are gradually hardening again.

Foreigners and Argentines.

The renewed fall in Spanish to 60¾ ex div. lends force to the view which I have repeatedly expressed that the financial trouble in Spain was only put off, but not disposed of. The attempt to raise an internal loan in the shape of Five per Cent. Treasury bonds has miscarried, and although the difficulty concerning the Pagares due, but not taken up, on July 1 will probably be arranged, breakers are, undoubtedly, ahead. These are not times in which improvident countries obtain help easily, as was fully illustrated in the case of Greece, and without further assistance from Paris Spain may be brought up very soon. Italians have declined to 88½ on the report of a substantial gold premium in Rome. The talk about the possible disruption of the Latin Union through the silver muddle is doubtless exaggerated, but Italian finances are in a precarious state. Russians have been fairly maintained, but all the world knows that this is only possible by constant Government rigging, while Egyptian Unified have shown some weakness. Greeks, after a further heavy decline, show a moderate recovery. These stocks have again been heavily sold in Berlin, where operators are much interested in Silver securities, and had to throw other stocks overboard when the slump came. Passing to Argentine Government stocks, a decline of some two to four points has come about in sympathy with other securities, and on a sharp advance in the gold premium in Buenos Ayres, which is attributed to internal politics. The very fact that President Saenz Peña has appealed to Generals Roca and Mitre and to Dr. Pellegrini for advice would seem to show that some important change is necessary, and the resignation of the President, who is apparently not equal to his task, in favour of the Vice-president, would not be surprising. Pending a solution of the political crisis, however, I should advise holders of Argentine Government and Railway stocks to sit tight on their securities, which are certain to recover as soon as the political deadlock has come to an end. Some sharp fluctuations have taken place in Argentine Railway stock, Buenos Ayres Great Southern Ordinary, for instance, being knocked down to 100, and recovering to 105 in one day on small purchases. During the silver scare the jobbers were at their usual game of marking prices down, as soon as any stock was offered, but it is now shown that these declines were altogether nominal, and that there is hardly any stock to be got the moment a buying order comes into the market. Central Argentine were treated in the same way, and also recovered substantially. As regards the Argentine Railway guarantees, to which I again referred specially last week, I learn that considerable impression has been made in Buenos Ayres by the agitation now in progress on this side, and that some favourable advices may come to hand at any moment. Investors who are able to lock up such stocks for a month or two cannot do better than buy Cordoba Central (Central Northern Section) Five per Cent. Debenture stock at, say, 37; or Cordoba and Rosario Five per Cent. Debenture stock at from 57 to 58. They would see a substantial profit on such a purchase very shortly.

The Fall in Silver Securities.

The fall in silver affected Mexican Government stocks, Mexican Rails, and Peruvian Corporation stocks most severely. Mexican Six per Cent. bonds fell from 71 to 60 cum dividend, recovering to 62 ex-div. These bonds are very largely held in Berlin, and weak holders threw considerable blocks overboard. The slump is undoubtedly exaggerated, and I am told that the Berlin firm of Bleichroeder and their associates will give Mexico every assistance as long as a fall of silver to a much lower level does not render this useless. The July interest has been duly paid, and it is understood that the interest is assured for the next six months, apart from negotiations which had been going on for securing it for the next eighteen months, but which were interrupted by the sudden action of the India Council. Severe fluctuations must still be looked for in silver, but if the metal does not dip below the present level Mexico will no doubt be enabled to meet all her engagements. Mexican Railway First Prefs. declined to 62 and recovered to 65, and will no doubt continue to fluctuate with silver. The spasm in the metal was a bad thing for Mr. Mackusick's little game in the Second Prefs., which dropped from 45 to 39, and this speculation of the Universal Stock Exchange does not at present look very hopeful. But I had expressed this view from the very first. Mexican Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds were knocked down from 60 to 52, recovering to 54 xd. This line is, of course, affected by the price of silver, but I am told that even if the Company earned no revenue at all the interest on the Four per Cent. Gold bonds would be assured for four years to come, for the reason that a large sum has been specially put aside from the bonds received from the Government in lieu of the subsidy. Peruvian Corporation Prefs. have declined from 25 to 20, the Debentures from 70 to 63½, and no doubt Peru will feel the blow struck at silver severely. Yet holders should hesitate before they throw away their stocks at anything like these prices. Costa Rica bonds, the interest on which has been punctually met, have also been put down, but the prosperity of Costa Rica is not bound up with silver to any extent, and there seems to be no reason to anticipate any trouble in this direction. Speaking generally, the first shock has brought about a sharp decline in a number of South and Central American securities not dependent upon the price of silver, and the inevitable rebound will come sooner or later. But the immediate future of the market so greatly depends upon the probable course of the white metal, that it is quite impossible to prophesy.

The Kaffir Circus.

As was to be expected, the collapse in silver has exercised a strong influence upon the mining market. In the first instance, of course, silver mining shares were affected, and my readers, whom I have so frequently advised to sell out their American Silver shares, such as Elkhorns, Yankee Girls, Montanas, &c., will now be able to realise the value of this advice. Gold mining shares have only been affected in sympathy with the general depression, and, as the change which has come over the scene is really in favour of gold, they should promptly recover from their temporary weakness and have, in fact, already commenced to do so. A good deal will depend upon the June crushings of the Witwatersrand Mines, which should be satisfactory, although the month has a day less than May. City and Suburban and other high-priced mines have naturally suffered most. New Primrose, with their excellent prospects, are steady at 4 7/16 cum dividend, Nigels at 3⅜, Salisbury at 3, New Crœsus at 1⅜, New Rietfontein, on which a 20 per cent. dividend has been declared, at 6¾. Moss Rose ought also to be picked up at their present price on amalgamation prospects, and so ought Buffelsdoorn and Kimberley Roodepoort. Land shares have also suffered, being thrown upon the market by holders who had made losses in other stocks, but they are now again recovering. A strong effort has been made to galvanise British Chartered of South Africa into life again, but the fact that the Beira Railway Company, which was promoted by the Chartered Company, has defaulted upon its Debenture interest on July 1 is not exactly encouraging. I hold to my view, that the most promising Transvaal Land shares are Oceana, and I have no doubt that they will advance as soon as the markets shake themselves together again. This is distinctly a good opportunity for buying Oceana shares at 3, Oceana Development shares at ⅝ premium, or the Oceana Coal shares at ⅛ premium. Since writing this the mail has come in with advices of a very favourable character. Not only is the news from the Silati Mine most satisfactory, but a discovery of gold and coal on one of the Pietersburg farms is reported, and another risk seam of coal has been traced on the property of the Oceana Coal Company. In Diamond shares De Beers have kept their price of 17⅝—¾ pretty well, and Jagersfontein, after reacting, have recovered again to 18½. In the latter case a dividend of 10s. has still to be deducted. The further dividend of 5 per cent. of the African Gold Recovery Company, which I foreshadowed last week, has now been declared as payable July 31. The result of the May returns of this undertaking of 24,000 oz. of gold was excellent, but a further increase is expected for June, though that month is one day shorter. The difference will probably be more than covered by results from the Langlaagte Block "B" Company's large plant, which was expected to start on June 1. Barrett's Gold Mining Company have also adopted the process, and are erecting plant, the directors, according to the chairman's speech at the meeting, relying upon the McArthur Forrest process to resuscitate their property. Low-priced Gold Mines have been in fair request, and in view of the great ascendency now obtained by gold over silver, a tendency is shown to buy such shares. Holcomb Valley shares should, under these circumstances, be a good purchase at about 1s. Cable advices to hand from the Manager of the Mine state that the new machinery is expected to be at work by about the 15th or 20th inst., and if the result is favourable, a very important rise may be expected. The Secretary of the Caratal Mining Company states that mail advices have been received to the effect that a new mining code on a very liberal scale came into force in Venezuela on March 29, under which, among other important advantages, the annual Government tax on the property is reduced to about one-twentieth of the amount hitherto paid. This is a very important point and likely to have a favourable influence upon this property, which it is expected, moreover, will derive great benefit from the McArthur Forrest Process in the treatment of tailings above referred to in connection with the Witwatersrand Mines. Mr. Bull, one of the Directors, accompanied by the engineers, is expected in Venezuela by the 5th inst., and he will no doubt set to work at once. These shares are quoted about 9d. Jackson Goldfield are another cheap share quoted at 1s. to 1s. 3d.

The Big Jagersfontein Find.

The curious freaks of Dame Fortune are proverbial, but rarely have they been illustrated so forcibly as in the case of the latest find on the Jagersfontein Mine. On Friday, June 30, the last day of the contract concluded with the Wernher Beit Syndicate, a splendid diamond weighing 987 carats, pure white, the largest and finest stone ever obtained, was found in this mine. Messrs. Wernher Beit are, of course, elated, and the new Syndicate, whose contract commences on July 1, are proportionately disappointed; but the Company, who have a right to half the value of such large stones, are all the same to be congratulated. When I say that the Imperial diamond, which was sold by a syndicate to an Indian Prince some time ago for a quarter of a million sterling, weighed only 200 carats, it will be evident that this new diamond, which beats the Koh-i-noor and all other ancient rivals hollow, is worth a princely fortune. It remains of course to be seen how much it may lose in the cutting, but the following weights of the best known historical stones will show that the latter cannot bear any comparison with it: Kohinoor 179 carats; Grand Mogul 270 carats; the Czar's diamond 193 carats. Then there was discovered in more recent times the Stewart diamond, a Cape stone of pure water of 288 carats. But the new find eclipses them all. I am told that its trade price is put at least at half a million sterling, but it is probable that it will realise a much larger sum. Assuming that it were to fetch only £500,000, the half-share coming to the Jagersfontein Company would on the capital of £1,000,000 work out to a bonus of 25 per cent., and this in addition to regular dividends now being paid at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum, while there is just a chance that more big finds may be made shortly. Assuredly the Jagersfontein shareholders are in luck's way, and the £10 shares appear under the circumstances likely to advance to a much higher level.

House Drainage.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

G. D. Nothing is settled yet with respect to the Santa Fé and Reconquista bonds, but negotiations are going on through the River Plate Trust Company, and it is hoped that some result may be come to. The matter is a difficult one, on account of the necessity of arranging with the French Company. Grotius.—I do not think that these bonds are a desirable investment, as they yield low interest, their chief attraction being the chances of the drawings. You will also find that they were bought at a high price. Old Soldier.—See under "The Fall in Silver Securities," and hold your Mexicans. B. W.—Same reply as to "Old Soldier." W. B. S.—I think you might hold the Australian Government bonds Nos. 1—3 for a further moderate recovery, and then sell. I do not like Nos. 5 and 6, but No. 4 is doing well. Homburg.—The fall in silver has depressed Costa Rica, Mexican Sixes, and Guatemala, and it might be as well to take advantage of it. Of course, you must make up your mind to the fact that these are speculative purchases. See under "The Fall in Silver Securities."

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Thankful.—I think that you should invest in some of the gilt-edged American Railroad bonds yielding about 4 per cent. on the investment, recommended to "R. B," under "American and Foreign Rails." A. W.—The three Australian Banks named are those which have successfully weathered the recent crisis, and should do well. But you should only put a small sum into such Bank shares with a large uncalled liability. No. 1 is the best of these Banks. Doubtful.—Matters have not improved since you wrote last, yet I should feel disinclined to throw these shares away at present prices. W. M.—Of the three Life offices I should prefer No. 3 as regards stability, but there are others which might suit as well or better, such as the Sun or the Provident Life Office. Homestead.—You ought to insist upon the return of your deposit. It is unworthy of any Bank to avail itself of such a quibble. The matter is dealt with under "Various Investments." E. C. B.—These kind of House Property Societies have seen their best days, and I should not recommend the investment.

Home Rails.

Dora.—Yes, you should hold your Brighton "A," this line is doing extremely well. See remarks in my letter. T. R.—Sheffield "A" will probably revive whenever the general market takes heart again. Cramps, Geneva.—No, I think this is too speculative a stock in your case.

American and Foreign Rails.

J. E. C.—Yes; you should hold Central Pacifics and Norfolk and Western for a recovery, which is assured, especially as Congress has been called together for next month for the repeal of the Sherman Silver Bill. Perplexed.—If there had been any danger to gilt-edged American Railway bonds from the silver question, the calling of Congress for August has removed it. But you must take your own decision. Far be it from me to persuade you. If you are too nervous, put the money into Consols. Anxious Inquirer.—The Grand Trunk Railway is doing better now, and you should hold the Debentures for a recovery, when you should exchange into sound American Railroad bonds. G. M. S.—You should hold the Mexican Railway, Grand Trunk, and Buenos Ayres and Rosario debentures. No reason to sell now. Cynicht.—You will see for yourself what the effect of the calling of Congress to repeal the Silver Bill has on American Rails and silver. The decline in Mexican securities has been greatly overdone, and an upward movement is only a question of time. F. C. A.—1. You should certainly hold your Atchison "B" bonds. The proposed issue of further 5,000,000 dols. had been arranged last year already. See remarks under "The Course of Yankee Rails." 2. Concerning Mexican Central, see under "The Fall of Silver Securities." I cannot reply by letter. Anxious.—Instead of May Consolidated I should buy Kimberley Roodepoorts or Buffelsdorn. Enquirer, Southsea.—You were too late with your application for Caratal shares, and have no claim. You will certainly do well to buy more, as prospects are promising. Spec, Eastbourne.—I greatly regret being unable, as a matter of principle, to recommend any individual stockbroker, but you should have no dealings with the outside broker in question. Hard Up.—Certainly hold Buenos Ayres Great Southern and Buenos Ayres and Rosario debentures. Magenta.—You had better hold the Brazilian Railway stock for a recovery. See under "The Fall in Silver Securities" concerning Mexican Central. Instead of a mortgage you had better buy first-class American Railroad bonds as recommended to "R. B." in the following par. R. B.—The following are sound American Railroad bonds, yielding from 3¾ to 5 per cent. over which you might spread the investment of the £3,000:—New York Central and Hudson River Four per Cent. Gold debentures at 104, Illinois Central Cairo Bridge Four per Cent. bonds at 101, Manhattan Consolidated Four per Cent. Mortgage bonds at 97, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Manitoba Four and a Half per Cent. Mortgage bonds at 103, Willmer and Sioux Falls First Mortgage Five per Cent. bonds, guaranteed by the St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Manitoba, and Great Northern Railroads, at 107, New York, Ontario, and Western Refunding Mortgage Four per Cent. bonds at 87, South and North Alabama Consolidated Gold Five per Cent. bonds (guaranteed by Louisville and Nashville) at 103, Atchison Topeka and Santa Fé Four per Cent. General Mortgage bonds at 80, Chesapeake and Ohio Four and a-Half per Cent. General Mortgage bonds at 85. Loanda.—Hold Denvers and Missouris at these prices, prospects of American Rails are improving. America Rails.—Certainly hold Illinois Central, it is a good investment. Desolata.—As your broker is no doubt most respectable, I see no reason why you should not comply with his request, but you might in future register the shares with the English Association of American Bond and Shareholders, of Great Winchester-street, London, who would collect your dividends very promptly. S. W.—Hold the American Railroad bonds, also Mexican Central. See under "The Fall in Silver Securities." Belfast.—The fall in Denver Prefs. is greatly exaggerated. Hold. Cambalu.—It is an excellent time to buy American Railroad bonds, but you had better spread the £2,000 over some of the bonds above recommended to "R. B.," and add some Atchison Second Mortgage Four per Cent. "B" bonds to them. Verdad.—See under "The Fall in Silver Securities," and hold. Old Sailor, Lymington.—Hold the Norfolk and Western bonds. A. B. D.—I should not sell Mexican Railway First Prefs. or any Mexican securities at all just now. See under "The Fall in Silver Securities." Uruguay bonds are cheap. A. B. C.—I should certainly advise you to at once carry out your intention of buying and locking up Erie, Union Pacifics, and Wabash Prefs. for a good rise. The Silver Bill is now certain to be repealed. Troubled.—I cannot see that you have been badly treated, as you obtained the bonds at the opening price in both cases. The contracts are returned. By holding you will see higher prices.

Mining Shares.

Teg.—1. I am afraid it would be throwing good money after bad to join this reconstruction. 2. This Company will, no doubt, do well in time, but no immediate great success can be looked for. Matters in Mexico are, moreover, greatly depressed through the fall in silver. An Irish Girl.—You will do right to sell the Chartered of South Africa shares and re-invest in the two Mines named (which are on the eve of paying dividends), but you might hold Goldfields for an improvement. Certainly sell the Trust shares and re-invest in Atchison "B" Second Mortgage Bonds as you propose. Phœbe.—The Arauco Company is doing well, but the low rate of the Chilian exchange greatly interferes. Whenever that exchange rises again to a normal level, these shares will improve, and I will not fail to advise you when it is time to average. Corinthian.—You should hold Day Dawn P.C. Prospects are very good. J. P. E., Reading.—Quite so, you can for the moment buy cheaper in the market. Gael, Glasgow.—No, I do not care much for Bothas and Alexandra Estates. New Primrose are a good investment. They have just declared a dividend of 20 per cent. for the six months, and will go much higher. Sell Shebas on an improvement. Scot.—No, I do not consider Kaboonga as worth picking up. If you want to buy cheap Mining shares, you might select Caratal at about 9d., Holcomb Valley at about 1s. to 1s. 3d., and Jackson Goldfields at 1s. to 1s. 3d. C. H., Fulham.—If you buy New Primrose at once you will get the dividend. I do not recommend you to buy Nos. 1, 2, or 3, and, least of all, No. 4; but under No. 5 you might select Louisville and Milwaukees. H. L., Grantham.—You are quite right in your views, but I should think it would be preferable to join the reconstruction, and sell out on a recovery. A. R. E.—1. (a) No reason to sell Ooregums. (b) African Gold Recovery shares are a good purchase. 2. Better join the reconstruction and sell out on a recovery. 3. Hold for a moderate improvement. 4. Hold for the present. F. O. B.—Yes, Mysore Gold shares are a fair purchase. T. S., Keighley.—As a general rally is probable you had better hold. G. M'C.—I agree with your views as regards Sutherland Reefs, but fancy it would be wise to join the reconstruction all the same. R. C.—It is the result of the general decline in the Mining Market. By holding you will not only make no loss, but a profit. There is no possibility to resist the reconstruction in question.

Industrial Companies.

Ballymena.—You should hold the Brewery shares. The Company has apparently turned the corner. I cannot obtain any special information concerning the Dublin Company in question. The Secretary ought to be able to tell you. Water.—A fair investment, but no catch as long as affairs in Chili are so depressed. Nemo.—I should say that the Premiums on the Tyre Company shares would gradually disappear again, and under the circumstances it is improbable that a special settlement will be granted, but if that is granted the shares sold must, of course, be delivered or the difference paid. Parchment.—I think the reconstruction scheme of the Electric Construction Corporation will eventually benefit the undertaking. The Director in question has retired. The new Managing Director is an able man, who is likely to pull the Company round. Hold. J. I., Newry.—I am sorry that you took so many shares. Try to cancel your application. It is a great risk to run. Optimist.—You must have seen my adverse view to the Maharajah Mining Company. I am afraid that you have no option but to pay up the calls in question. You had better sell the shares at once. I am afraid you have gone into very venturesome and doubtful investments. I make no charge and accept no fee. Ailcan.—The Company has not yet recovered its lost ground, but I cannot advise a sale now. R. D.—The hot weather is against the Company, but I should not sell at present prices.

First-Class Investment.—Advertiser, in urgent need of cash, will sell £337 10s. Securities, averaging for past four years over 8 per cent. Securities consist of first-class Mortgage Debenture Stock and first-class Industrials. An immediate purchaser would receive quarterly dividend due on 1st July.—Tradesman, care of C. Mitchell & Co., Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Mixed Investments.

Essex.—I should prefer to place the money into Natal Inscribed stock, or Caledonion Preferred Ordinary, which is a much safer stock than North British Preferred. W. Y.—A great deal of "Bear" talk is going on about these Breweries, which you should disregard and hold the shares Nos. 1-4 for a recovery. The silver trouble has affected Mexican Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds to an exaggerated extent, and they should be held. Argentine matters are at present under a political cloud. As soon as that is disposed of and the gold premium declines, the stocks Nos. 5-8 will, no doubt, improve again, and you should certainly not part with them at present. Regent-road.—You should hold all your investments Nos. 1-8. They will recover again, and the present time of exceptional depression is not suitable for selling. F. W. R.—A fair investment, but in these times of agitation for local option these Brewery shares are not tempting. Fair Capped.—1. (A) Yes, the dividend will no doubt be paid. (B) Yes. (C) The fall in silver. 2. (A) Certainly hold Cordoba Central (Central Northern section) Debenture stock. (B) Yes, as soon as the railway guarantees are settled. 3. Yes. 4. American Railroad bonds as recommended to "R. B." under American and Foreign Rails. Belfast.—Yes, these are fair investments of the kind.

More About the Mexican (Inguaran) Company.

I have received the following further communication from the "Two Impetuous Young Men" whose letter respecting the Mexican (Inguaran) Copper Company I published a fortnight ago:—

> Like yourself, we, the "Two Impetuous Young Men," think it strange that this Company, only registered in 1889, should in the space of four years have gone out of existence. We think that Messrs. Romano de Olano and John Merrylees should be asked to give an account of their proceedings and doings with respect to this Company. When we refer to our papers and record of the transactions in this little affair, the matter looks very black, and open to serious suspicions.
>
> One question we would like to ask these gentlemen is, "How it happens that a Company registered in 1889, should in March, 1890, see it shares (fully paid £1) on sale at 4s. 10d½. ?—that is at a discount of 75 per cent. after one year from registration, when copper was selling at £39 to £45 per ton." On looking in the Mining Manual (1888 edition), we find the "Mexican Mining Company," which we presume to be the Mexican (Inguaran) Copper Company, Limited, in course of formation, because Mr. Romano de Olano is a director, and it was there stated that this Company (the Mexican Copper Company) was promoted to take over some copper mines in Mexico in the Inguaran district, and that matters were then delayed owing to some legal points that required settling respecting some claims of property. It was further stated there that for some £60,000 or £70,000 (we are now quoting from memory as we have not the book before us) in cash the vendors would hand over their mines in Mexico, which it was stated had been worked with success since 1794 or thereabouts. The announcement then finished up with saying that it was estimated to turn out copper bullion at £8 per ton, and with carriage to Liverpool at £14 per ton net. Now, Mr. Editor, if you will just run over our figures, you will find that there should have been room for a large profit, seeing that copper at this time was nearly £40 per ton, which would give a profit of about 200 (two hundred) per cent., and, even allowing for a large discrepancy in their figures, profits might have been made. On the face of these few facts, we think these gentlemen should be called upon to explain their proceeding. As far as we know, there may not have been any mine or any selling at all. We should very much like to see the legal documents. If we are correct in our presumption, it appears to us as though the Directors had paid or received a large sum of money for some mines that have been worked out. A former Secretary informs us that "the Mexican Copper Company has, as far as he knows, gone out of existence except in name. It certainly has no offices, and it has not gone into liquidation."

My correspondents are quite correct in assuming a close connection between the Mexican Copper Company and the Mexican (Inguaran) Copper Company. It is stated in the "Mining Manual" that the Inguaran Copper Mines had been acquired on November 10, 1887, by the first-named Company, with a capital of £250,000 in £1 shares, but that the promoters of the Company failed to carry out the contract with the vendor, and the property was never transferred to them. The property was, however, transferred to the Inguaran Company in November, 1889. As a former Secretary of the Company states that the Company has, as far as he knows, no longer any existence, but that it has not gone into liquidation, I now call upon Messrs. John Merrylees, Romane de Olano, and E. Figgess to state what has become of the Company. How is it possible that it should have vanished into mere nothing? What has become of the capital subscribed, and what has been done with the property? The Directors ought for their own sake to furnish an explanation.

Various Investments.

There has been some sliding back in Australian Government bonds, but these have, on the whole, passed through the scare remarkably well. A decline has taken place in the shares of some of the Eastern Banks, which are expected to make some losses through the action of the India Council concerning the rupee, but it is supposed that they will be indemnified for their loss on any silver which they may have had in transit at the time. A depositor in the City of Melbourne Bank writes to complain of the manner in which he has been treated. He had a deposit for three years with that Bank, and on the expiration of that period on May 15th last, the deposit receipt, duly endorsed, was presented to the Bank by his bankers, the Clydesdale Banking Company's London branch. Payment, was, however, refused on the ground that the depositor's signature did not correspond with the signature given when placing the deposit three years previously, and on the following day the City of Melbourne Bank suspended payment. There was, it appears, some change in the signature, as the depositor had lost part of his right hand in the meanwhile, through blood-poisoning, and was therefore under the necessity of writing with his left hand. But on two occasions—viz., May and November, 1892, interest receipts with the fresh signature were accepted by the Bank without demur. Under the circumstances, I consider that my correspondent has been very badly treated. On the matter being explained, at all events, the deposit ought to have been repaid, and, in fact, it ought to be repaid now on the reconstruction of the Bank. To get out of the repayment of deposits through an unworthy quibble, is not exactly the conduct one would expect of the London branch of a large institution; and there was all the less reason for the refusal as the receipt was tendered by a Bank of high standing. My correspondent should certainly return to the charge, and insist upon repayment by the liquidator. I hear that the Coal Brick Syndicate, which was formed some time ago to develop an invention for converting coal-dust into solid fuel, is meeting with great success. The rights for Great Britain and Belgium have already been disposed of, and negotiations have been entered into with large Colliery and Steamship Companies in the States for the rights of this invention in the U.S.A. These bricks, which contain 96 per cent. of coal-dust, either bituminous or anthracite, are ready for use within a short period of leaving the press. The Johannesberg Waterworks dividend of 6 per cent. for the year has now been actually declared. The Electric Construction Corporation has issued a report containing an important proposal for reconstruction of the Company, under the title, "The Electric Construction Company," the capital to be cut down from £879,260, at which it stands at present, to £519,260. The chief feature is the exchange of £100,000 in Income bonds for £40,000 in Ordinary shares, the cutting down of the Ordinary capital from £499,000 in £10 shares to £199,600 in £2 shares, and the extinction of the Founders' shares. Having thus applied the pruning-knife, and created a position in which the capital of the Company is fairly represented by assets, the Directors will be enabled to apply future profits to the payment of dividends, instead of making good the deficiency on capital account, and the new Managing Director, Mr. E. Garcke, should now be able to lead back the Electric Construction to the path of prosperity, as he has done in the past with the Brush Company.—Your affectionate Uncle,

Family Washing only.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

TOO BAD!

"IT really does seem too bad," laughed Frank Harrowby, somewhat ruefully, "still, one must fight a man with his own weapons, and, if one has the chance of sharpening them up a bit beforehand, well, I don't see that any one can blame him."

And then, as he unlocked a drawer and took out a large registered envelope, and from it drew a plethoric purse and a letter, he hummed a verse of the last music-hall song that held the town:—

Primrose Hill with a girl to kiss!
Battersea lake in a boat is bliss!
Brighton sands with a girl and prawns!
Old Father Thames's riparian lawns!
Hampstead Heath or the Crystal Palace!
In fact, wherever you like with Alice!

[No, I mean, Daisy]

The moral of which is,
You needn't have riches,
Which often bring sorrow and sighs,
And the best of all scenery
'S that soupçon of greenery
You see in a pretty girl's eyes.

Now Frank Harrowby was, undoubtedly, no better than he should be. Indeed, he was probably a good deal worse, as we all are. Not that he had a particle of vice about him or ever really did anybody intentionally a wrong, but he was thoughtless and reckless and had a knack of always being discovered at the moment when any folly he was committing had the ugliest look about it. By profession a barrister and living solus in lodgings on an allowance of five hundred pounds a year, which he did not increase by any efforts of his own, he was not placed precisely in the best surroundings for a youth prone to self-indulgence. Nor, indeed, had he much to induce him to settle down to hard work, seeing that he was the adopted son of a rich and childless uncle, and was not possessed by ambition of any kind.

Now nothing is more likely than that an idle youth so environed will either take to vicious courses, or run the risk of spoiling his life by making a premature and ill-advised alliance, matrimonial or otherwise. Frank, as I have said, was not vicious. On the contrary, and I think the distinction should be very clearly drawn, he was a youth whose fancy lightly, very lightly, turned to thoughts of love. The result was that he had formed a clandestine acquaintanceship with a very charming little motherless girl, the daughter of a working watchmaker, who was allowed to do very much as she pleased, provided she was home betimes in the evenings. This Daisy Thomas, as she was called, was by nature good, pure, and wholesome; fond of a frolic, but as capable of taking care of herself, and as disposed to insist upon being treated with proper respect as any lady in the land who requires a chaperon and a formal introduction. She chose her friends in the way she preferred, and, probably, on the whole, had a circle of acquaintances as satisfactory as if they had been chosen for her. At any rate, she and Frank Harrowby had formed a friendship of the platonic kind, and it was not, we may be certain, the less attractive because it was not altogether regular and without risk.

A week before our story opens, the pair had tempted fate once too often, had been found out, and were threatened with the utmost disaster.

Frank had discovered a delightful little rendezvous in the shape of a quiet inn not a hundred miles from Richmond, where tête à tête dinners and al fresco flirtations were amongst the ordinary occurrences of the summer evenings. It was after one of several delightful expeditions to this enchanting spot that he and Daisy found themselves seated in a first-class carriage ready to start for town.

Frank was staring vacantly out of the window, and Daisy was unconsciously watching his face. Suddenly she became aware that his absent look had given place to alertness, and she knew, by a sudden gesture, that she must be on her guard. She promptly buried herself in Punch, which she luckily had at hand. A moment later she heard Frank accosted by name. The door opened, and, from the way in which her lover greeted the newcomer, she knew that a particularly strait-laced uncle of his, Mr. Felix Harrowby, Q.C., of whom he had often spoken, was to be their travelling companion.

"Hallo, Uncle Felix," said Frank, with mendacious cordiality, "I'm glad to get a comrade up to town."

"So am I, my boy," said Uncle Felix, glancing suspiciously for a moment at the other occupant of the carriage. He was soon convinced, however, by Frank's manner that his advent was not inopportune, and Victoria was reached without further misadventure. The next day Frank and Daisy laughed heartily over the affair, and arranged a similar trip for the following week. And it was on this occasion that they were found out.

Seated as before in the train ready to start for London, Frank had taken off his hat and put it for the moment on Daisy's lap, while he sat bareheaded to the air as it came in at the window, when who should present himself suddenly, as a bolt from the blue, but Uncle Felix again, just as before, with the exception that Frank had, as the Fates willed it, not noticed his approach.

Concealment this time was impossible, and Mr. Harrowby, seeing at a glance the state of the case, turned on his heel and sought another compartment.

The next evening Frank received the following letter:—

200, Elm-court, Temple, E.C.,
June 14, 1892.

DEAR FRANK,—I can hardly doubt, from what I witnessed yesterday, that you have reason to be ashamed of the companionship in which I discovered you, and that, when last week I travelled up from Richmond with you and the same young person, you not only deceived, but practically lied to me. You know very well the strong views which your Uncle Charles has upon morality of living, and how he has always begged you to be open and above-board, and I confess I think that you are making but poor return to him for the kindness he has hitherto shown you. I cannot disguise from myself the probable result of the facts coming to his knowledge, with which I feel bound to acquaint him. And you can have only yourself to thank if he considers, as I believe he will, that you are not worthy of being a further recipient of his bounty.

I shall not write to him until I have seen you, as I have no right to condemn you unheard; but let me beg of you to be quite candid with me in any communication you see fit to make.—I am, yours faithfully, FELIX HARROWBY.

Thus Frank found himself in a horrible predicament. Indeed, since the discovery he had contemplated seriously every possible way of escape, from suicide to emigration; but somehow none of them seemed a sufficiently attractive way out of his difficulty. For a couple of weeks there was, fortunately for him, a truce, his uncle having been appointed Commissioner to assist an Assize Judge in dealing with an inordinately long list the very day on which the letter was written. But that period had nearly elapsed before a spark of hope found its way into Frank's heart. Like the Clown in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," he had "never laboured in his mind till now," but, during this miserable week, he had set his wits to work with all the energy he possessed. He had hardly smiled—certainly he had never laughed—since the catastrophe, until the moment when he made the remark with which this narrative opens. Whilst, as to humming a music-hall song, the most doleful of dirges had been much more in keeping with his melancholy temper. This evening, however, the prospect appeared a bit brighter, although the interview with his uncle, which he had to go through with on the morrow, was bound to prove distasteful in the extreme.

But there was no help for it. The thing had to be faced, and he carefully drew forth from the registered envelope the plethoric purse, and letter, and from the former certain cheques and a card, over which he lingered with puckered brow, and regarded with a mixture of triumph and perplexity.

The following day he presented himself by appointment at the chambers of Mr. Felix Harrowby. It was a supreme and pregnant point in his existence, and his heart thumped audibly as he knocked at the time-stained door. In a few moments he found himself in his uncle's presence.

"Well, Frank," the Q.C. began, "you received my letter, and you understand from it what I consider to be clearly my duty towards your Uncle Charles. It may be, of course, that I have jumped too hastily to a conclusion about your conduct in this matter, and, if so, I am prepared to hear your explanations and make every apology. At the same time, I warn you that I shall require the most positive proofs of the accuracy of any exculpatory statements you may make. I may tell you, too, that I should have more readily hesitated to have put the construction upon the incident that I have done had I not had my suspicions aroused as to the life you have been leading from other sources. However, to at once deal with the matter on which I wrote to you. Were you or were you not already acquainted with the young person with whom I met you on the first occasion in the train, and was or was not your welcome to me on that occasion a piece of deceit from beginning to end?"

"I did know her, uncle," said Frank, with his head down.

"And, pray, who is she, and how did you make her acquaintance?"

"Who she is, uncle, I do not feel myself at liberty to say."

"Nor, I suppose, how you picked up her acquaintance?"

"No, uncle."

"And this is what you wish me to tell your Uncle Charles?"

"No, uncle, it isn't. Of course I don't want you to tell him anything. It would, as you know, be nothing less than ruin to me. Why should you go and tell tales about me? And, besides, it's nothing so very terrible, after all."

"If it's nothing so very terrible, Frank, I don't see why you should imagine that it will do you much harm for your Uncle Charles to learn it."

"Oh, you know, uncle, what strait-laced notions he has about things. Do you mean to say that you never carried on a little flirtation when you were young?"

"That's a very impertinent question, Frank, and, if that is the line you propose to take, I see no good in prolonging this interview. My course is now perfectly plain."

"You refuse, then, uncle, to keep your own counsel in this matter, and are determined to ruin me with Uncle Charles?" said Frank, with some heat.

"I certainly refuse to refrain from what I unquestionably see to be my duty, and as to ruining you, if that is incidental to it, you are alone to blame."

And, wheeling to his desk again, Mr. Harrowby began to turn over some papers, as much as to say there was no need for further discussion

But this was by no means Frank's view of the matter, and, pulling himself together, he prepared for the final struggle.

"Uncle," he said, "I am sorry you force me to take a course which is very repugnant to me, but I seem to have no alternative."

"You must do what you will," said his uncle. "I do not see how any action of yours can further concern me."

"Uncle Felix, I must ask you very seriously to attend to me. The course I propose to take does concern you most intimately."

"What do you mean, Frank?" said the lawyer, startled into attention by the tone of the young man's voice.

"What I mean is, uncle, that certain matters have come to my knowledge, which nothing should have induced me to mention, were it not that, by them, I am inclined to think, I may compel you to take a different course to that which you propose. It is very painful to me to have to do it, but you leave me no alternative."

"I am at a loss to understand you, Frank."

"Well, uncle, as you will have it, have you, or have you not, lost a purse lately?"

"Most certainly I have; but what of that? Have you found it?"

"I know in whose possession it is."

"And you think, I suppose," said Mr. Harrowby, now thoroughly angry, "that you can buy me off with my own property, do you? You, perhaps, do not know that you could be prosecuted for retaining chattels of which you know the ownership?"

"I should not be such a fool, even if I did not know that, to suppose that, with a few cheques and coins, I could induce you to forego denouncing me to Uncle Charles, when, by such a course, you expect to divert his money from me to your own children. Perhaps you thought that I was too much of an idiot to see that?"

"What do you mean by such insinuations, you young scoundrel?" shouted Mr. Harrowby. "Were it not for the scandal of the thing, I would kick you out of my chambers!"

"I don't think you'll do that when you've heard a little more," said Frank, growing cooler as his uncle got more enraged.

"Give me my purse and go!" shouted the other almost beside himself.

"You shall have your purse all in good time, uncle, if you will only keep calm. You had better listen to what I have to tell you first."

"Go on!" said Mr. Harrowby, fiercely.

"Well, uncle," said Frank, "I received, the other day, a note, which, if you will allow me, I will read to you. It runs as follows:—

11, FitzPeter's-avenue, St. John's Wood.

Sir,—I write to inform you that yesterday a purse was sent to me by some honest gentleman, who at the same time wrote a letter saying he had picked it up, and, finding in it my card and address, came to the inevitable conclusion that it was mine. He therefore sent it me, but did not give his name, desiring no reward as he was above want. Now, the purse is not mine, but, I presume, yours, and my card I suppose I must have given you on some occasion which I cannot recall. This, considering the large number of persons who obtain introductions to me behind the scenes, is not surprising, though I have no doubt I should recognise you again if I saw you. I shall be pleased to return the purse and its contents if you will send me £50, which I do not doubt you will prefer doing to having your name connected with mine, which must be the case if you take legal steps to recover it. To show you that I really have the purse, I give over-page a copy of one of the documents it contains, from which I got your name, and found your address in the Red-book.—I am, yours faithfully,

Dolly De Vere.

"The document runs thus:—

No. H. 20,733, London, June 12, 1892. Metropolitan and City Banking Company, Limited. Pay F. Harrowby, Esq., or order the sum of one hundred and fifty pounds (£150).—John Smith.

From this, uncle, you will see that, our initials being the same, Miss Dolly De Vere, who is a well-known dancer at the Jollity Theatre of Varieties, has jumped to the conclusion that the purse is mine instead of yours, has looked the name out in the Directory, and has written this letter to me instead of to you. I suppose she thought it improbable that an eminent Queen's Counsel was likely to have the honour of her acquaintance. But, of course, she was wrong."

"Wrong, sir!" shouted Mr. Harrowby. "Wrong! of course she was wrong. What do you mean? This is nothing more than some impudent attempt to blackmail me. This woman must have been imported into the matter by some one for the purpose, who knew of my respectability."

"Steady, uncle, steady," said Frank. "That, I think, can hardly be the case. If that were so, this letter would hardly have been sent to me. No, uncle, no! I have thought the thing over most carefully, and there seems to me only one conclusion possible."

"And that is?" asked Mr. Harrowby.

"That the woman is telling the truth, uncle," said Frank, looking him in the face.

"You mean to dare to say to me that you believe that

Brandauer's Circular-Pointed Pens. Neither scratch nor spurt. Glide over the roughest paper with the ease of a soft lead pencil. A 6d. assorted sample box of any stationer.

I am capable of such a thing as going behind the scenes of a music-hall and getting an introduction to a dancer?" shouted his uncle.

"I don't see any other explanation; and, besides, that's nothing very awful. I believe the lady is very respectable," said Frank.

"Frank, I declare to you it's a lie."

"I wish I could believe so, uncle."

"Who has the purse now?"

"Miss Dolly De Vere, I suppose."

"And what do you suppose she will do if no answer is returned?"

"I should think very likely she will come bothering me about it, and I should have to tell her she is mistaken in supposing that I was ever behind the scenes at the Jollity."

"You don't mean to say you would do this?"

"What else can you expect me to do?"

"How do I know that you haven't concocted the whole story?"

"Here's the letter. You are quite at liberty to put yourself in communication with the lady if you so please. The matter does not concern me in the least, except" and here Frank looked his uncle again straight in the face, "except that I know your secret, and have as much right to let Aunt Henrietta know of your little amusements as you have to let Uncle Charles know of mine."

"But I say, Frank, that the whole thing's a lie. It's an infamous attempt to blackmail."

"Unfortunately, that's a view I cannot take, uncle. That it is an attempt to blackmail I admit; but that you have nobody but yourself to thank for it seems to me only too evident."

In vain Mr. Harrowby protested, stormed, and raged. Frank had, luckily for himself, got the whip-hand, and he was determined not to forego the advantages it gave him. The long and short of it was that before the interview closed his uncle not only promised to hold his tongue about the Daisy episode, but offered Frank fifty pounds if he would square this terrible Miss Dolly De Vere, and recover the purse, without divulging the fact that he, not his nephew, was the owner. This Frank generously undertook to do, but only on condition that his uncle wrote him a letter, vaguely worded enough to be unintelligible to the uninitiated, but sufficiently inculpatory, in the event of its being read by the special light which Frank could bring to bear on it, to make it a terribly complete weapon in his hands.

Wholly at his nephew's mercy, Mr. Harrowby yielded, and Frank was enabled, before a week was over, to assure him that there was no further danger to be apprehended, and to hand him his purse with its contents intact.

* * * * * *

It was not until his Uncle Charles died, having made Frank his heir, and long after poor Daisy was forgotten, that Uncle Felix learned that Miss Dolly De Vere, who was respectability itself, had not written that terrible letter, and that his graceless nephew had actually purloined the purse and invented the whole story in self-defence.

ART NOTES.

I HAVE more than once been upbraided for the comprehensiveness of my taste, so let me say at once that it is not eclectic enough to include admiration for the works of Messrs. W. and A. W. Strutt. These gentlemen, both R.B.A.'s, are in the habit of exhibiting in Suffolk-street, but just now eleven of their pictures are to be seen at the Japanese Gallery in New Bond-street. Just as there are actors who play to the gallery, so, too, there are artists who paint for the print-shop window. It is, I suppose, only another phase of the eternal supply and demand question. So long as there is a public ready to enjoy pictures which tell a story in a direct, unimaginative, and prosaic fashion, so long will the Messrs. Strutt continue to produce paintings representing, in good old Adelphi style, mad bulls charging ladies in sedan chairs, little orange girls being rescued from the hoofs of hansom-cab horses, and costers' flower barrows being tumbled over by passing 'buses in Piccadilly. But, fortunately, these aggravating pictorial anecdotes, these chromo-lithographs in the making, only cover one wall at the Japanese Gallery; and what I may call an artistic amende honorable is made by the presence of two clever and characteristic landscape studies by Mr. J. L. Pickering, and some seascapes showing much promise from the brush of Mr. W. E. Norton, a young artist of whom more is likely to be heard.

Henley has an additional attraction for this year's Regatta Week. Messrs. Dickinson & Foster have moved to that riparian town four large oil-paintings which have been on exhibition at No. 114, New Bond-street; and as the pictures contain hundreds of portraits from life of leading rowing-men, past and present, they represent a kind of illustrated "Who's Who" of the celebrities of the boating world. Those of the likenesses which I was able to check by a personal knowledge of the originals seemed to me to be very good.

Old Masters are to the fore again at the Dowdeswell Galleries—a fact which may be taken as a significant sign that American picture-buyers are now developing what the Times calls "a dangerous admiration" for Sir Joshua, Gainsborough, Constable, and the Old English School generally. On the Continent, too, the art of Turner and Cox, of "Old" Crome and of Morland, is now slowly finding appreciation, and there is every probability that such pictures as are now to be seen at 160, New Bond-street will become more and more difficult to obtain. The present collection is especially rich in Morlands. At the Fine Art Society's, Mr. Linley Sambourne's drawings are still on view; and it is satisfactory to note that to considerably more than a half of the frames the eloquent monosyllable "Sold" is affixed. In the smaller room, at 148, New Bond-street, I was delighted to find another collection of drawings, principally of Egyptian scenes, by A. N. Roussoff, a brilliant colourist who is able to so successfully reproduce the polychromatic glow and ardour of the East. These drawings are supplemented by two excellent portraits of Signora Eleonora Duse, which could not be on view in London at a more appropriate time than this.

MUSIC.

THE STATE PERFORMANCE AND THE ROYAL MARRIAGE.

THE sudden appearance of the Prince of Wales at Covent Garden last Thursday evening not a little surprised many of those in the house, for it was pretty certain that he was not at all likely to be attracted by a makeshift performance of that hopelessly rococo opera, "Rigoletto," with Signor de Lucia as the Duke, and I really forget which soprano as Gilda. It soon was found that the Prince had come down to Bow-street on important business, and, indeed, expressly in order to alter the date of the State performance. It was freely stated in the house that his Royal Highness's attention had been directed to the matter by the note in last Thursday's TRUTH; but, at any rate, a man of such common sense could not fail to perceive the utter impossibility of getting a diamond-bedecked and Court-liveried audience to and from the opera-house on illumination night. Therefore the suggestion that an evening should be chosen before the wedding, when the Duke of York and his bride could be present, was promptly adopted, Tuesday last being selected. In this question the Prince of Wales, I believe, acted entirely on his own responsibility. The Queen, who has not seen a London night crowd for upwards of a quarter of a century, and probably never witnessed an illumination crowd in her life, was obviously not in a position to judge, but what the police authorities thought about the business may be gathered from the general order which has since been issued to close the entire city and the chief streets in the greater metropolis on Thursday to all wheeled traffic whatever after dusk. If the Royal wedding night had been persisted in for the gala representation, Covent Garden would certainly have been almost empty, while the attempt to keep open the Strand for the convenience of visitors to the opera would have led to a riot.

The resources of Ulster House, Conduit-street, enable Messrs. BENJAMIN, in cases of need to execute orders in 24 hours.

Three weeks ago I gave the musical programme of the wedding ceremony at St. James's Chapel to-day (Thursday). I need therefore only now add that while the guests are assembling, Dr. Creser will play on the organ a selection of music which I learn will include the march from Mendelssohn's "Athalie," Dr. Mackenzie's "Benedictus," Handel's popular "Largo," and a musicianly Marriage March from Dr. Creser's own pen. Besides the chanting of the Psalm and the responses the ceremonial music will likewise comprise the Wedding Chorals of Dr. Creser and Sir J. Barnby, and the German chorale (two and a half centuries old) "Nun Danket," while, of course, as the married couple pass down the chapel we shall hear Mendelssohn's Wedding March.

Although the galleries were full, there was otherwise a thin house at the opening of the German opera season at Covent Garden last week. The truth seems to be that ladies, who are the chief supporters of the opera, will not pay for the expensive seats while the ridiculous system of darkening the theatre is persevered in. Sad as it may be to relate, ladies go to the opera-house to see and be seen far more than to listen to the music of Richard Wagner, and women by no means acknowledge the utility of dressing themselves in their smartest frocks and their most valuable jewels if the lights are to be extinguished in the auditorium. Furthermore, the whole idea is a sham—a mere "playing at Bayreuth," for unless the orchestra be concealed and its lights darkened, the sole reason of what our German friends would call the "out-gas-putting" disappears.

As to the performance of "Tristan und Isolde," considering the difficulties under which the artists laboured, it was a fairly good one. Herr Emil Steinbach, a conductor who manifestly knows his business, did the best he could after a couple of rehearsals, although his friends will wish him next year a better orchestra. The dramatic soprano, whose name some of the audience during the entr'actes somewhat ungallantly pronounced Frau Moran-Old'un, is an artist of experience, but she was not at all likely to cause opera-goers to forget either Lilli Lehmann or Frau Klafsky. Herr Alvary was again a boyish Tristan, but the defects of the stage management seemed to indicate that Sir A. Harris's stage-hands were imperfectly acquainted with the libretto. The eccentricities of the sun in "Lohengrin" and the absolute refusal of the ship of the Flying Dutchman to break up were as nothing to the predicament of Tristan and Isolde, who were compelled to deliver the famous address to the "Endless Night" in broad daylight. This was the more inexcusable inasmuch as even a cursory study of the stage directions would show how very particular Wagner was in pointing out that the "Morgendämmerung" should not commence until after the arrival of the injured husband, and, indeed, the next words of Tristan make special reference to the fact.

"I Rantzau" will be given for the first time in England on Friday, and during next week the stage version of Berlioz's "Damnation de Faust" will be presented. Little more than a week will then be left before the opera season closes on the 24th, and it is a significant fact that the promises of the revival of "Siegfried" and "Die Meistersinger," and of the production of De Lara's "Amy Robsart" and of Stanford's "Veiled Prophet" have now been withdrawn from the opera programmes. The former we shall probably hear, but the chance of producing the two new operas is now slender. Neither will be the worse for keeping, but to bring out either at the fag end of a heavy season would certainly not increase its chance of being permanently added to the repertory.

Some time ago I suggested, as an antidote to "bogus" diplomas and degrees, that the Government should itself take up musical examinations, and not permit any one else, save perhaps the Chartered Colleges, to issue diplomas at all. That the affair would be self-paying may be judged by the fact that during the past year something like £18,000 has been taken in examination fees by only four of the most straightforwardly conducted of these institutions. Two of them took respectively:—Trinity College, London, £8,995, and the Incorporated Society of Musicians, £1,789. The Royal Academy of Music took over £1,700, and the Associated Board of the Royal Academy and the Royal College of Music, £4,889. This was altogether apart from many thousands of pounds which must have been paid in fees to various institutions and individuals, who boast high-sounding names and go about the country holding examinations, which are sometimes perfectly fair and often are quite the contrary. Some speculations are maintained entirely out of the fees thus received for the holding of examinations and the issue of more or less valuable diplomas and certificates, and in all it is estimated that something like £50,000 a year is paid by unfortunate schoolgirls and their parents in this way. An extension of the Education Department would bring a good deal more than half this income into the Government hands without interfering with the bonâ-fide academies, and—which is a great deal more important—a Government endorsement would enable parents and guardians, who do not pretend to know anything about the matter, to discriminate between the genuine diplomas and the worthless.

Madame Patti on Saturday at the Albert Hall made her last appearance in London until after her return from the United States next year. She was announced to sing three songs, but before she was allowed finally to quit the platform she was obliged to sing seven, so that she had certainly no reason to complain of want of enthusiasm. On Monday she left for Craig-y-Nos with Mr. Percy Harrison and other friends. By the way, a ridiculous statement which has appeared in print, that La Diva "will never sing (at a private party) for less than £500," would hardly require contradiction were it not that it is calculated to cause annoyance. It is a fact that Madame Patti has not for many years accepted a paid engagement at a private party. A few weeks ago she sang at the Rothschilds but without any sort of fee, and merely as an invited guest. As to public performances, there is no secret that Messrs. Harrison, who have the sole right to her services for a term of years, pay her £500 for each provincial and 800 gs. for each London engagement, plus the cost of a special train from Craig-y-Nos. Messrs. Harrison personally prefer to manage the Patti concerts on their own account, but if any speculator desired her services, I assume that, as business men, her entrepreneurs would expect a profit on the transaction. The idea of a £500 London engagement would cause Mr. Harrison to laugh.

Signor Mascagni accompanied on the piano Beppe's song and other works at Mdlle. Belinfante's benefit at St. James's Hall on Friday. Madame Marx gave her final concert (playing no fewer than three pianoforte concertos) on Saturday, and concerts have also been given by Mr. John Thomas, Miss Ganz (who was too ill to personally appear), Dr. Richter (who reintroduced the love duet from "Die Walküre"), Mr. John Thomas, and others. The concert season is, however, now practically dead, and at some performances recently the receipts would hardly have afforded change for a £10 note. As to pianoforte recitals, not even a free ticket and a preliminary luncheon at the Bristol will tempt a thorough-paced deadhead. A few benefit and Academy concerts may drop in between now and the end of the month, but otherwise, with the exception of the Promenade Concerts, which, under the conductorship of Messrs. Cowen and Betjemann, will start at Covent Garden on the 12th prox., Londoners are unlikely to hear any serious concert music till the end of September.

Kinahan's LL Whisky.—"The Cream of Old Irish Whiskies." Kinahan's LL Whisky. Gold Medal Paris Exhibition, 1878. Kinahan's Glenisle Whisky. The Finest Scotch Whisky sold.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM:—In one or other of his books, the author of "John Bull and his Island," recurring to his experiences as teacher in St. Paul's, says that whenever he hears of English Missionaries, he remembers the little marmalade-manufacturer's boy, who, when asked to help himself to that preserve, replied, "No, thankee; we makes it." I am not sure if to help at the making of Missionaries is half as disillusioning as to see of what stuff a revivalist is made. Take the most famous of them all, Madame de Krudener, who, as the Egeria of Alexander I., held in the hollow of her hand the mind that guided Europe at the greatest crisis of the century—in 1815—and watch in Mr. Clarence Ford's admirable biography (1) her development from the most despicable of Magdalenes, who falls through mere vanity, to the most apocalyptic of prophetesses. Are you edified? All that is changed by her miraculous conversion is the channel of her overflowing vanity. The devouring vanity of the author of "Valérie" is sublimated into vanity in excelsis in the prophetess of the millennium. "The greatest impostor," says an Arab proverb, "is the unconscious impostor," and in her unregenerate days you can see what an incredibly unconscious impostor the future revivalist was by nature. After the publication of a poor book, of which, under the name of "Sidonie," she was herself the heroine, she quits Paris for Lyons, and from thence prepares thus for the appearance of her master-piece "Valérie":—

I have another request to make (she writes to a Parisian friend). Pray have some verses written by a good poet to our friend Sidonie. In these verses, which I need not describe to you, and which must be in perfect taste, there must be no other envoi but "To Sidonie." The poet will ask her why she resides in the provinces? why we are deprived of her wit and grace? Her triumphs call her to Paris. Her talents and charms will there be appreciated at their full value. Her enchanting dance has been described; but who can describe all that distinguishes her? Mon ami, I confide in your friendship. I am ashamed on behalf of Sidonie, for I know her modesty, and you know that she is not vain.

Having procured this puff preliminary after much shameless dunning, she hurries to Paris upon the publication of the book to do the rest of the dirty work herself:—

During several days she made the round of the fashionable shops, incognito, asking sometimes for shawls, sometimes for hats, feathers, wreaths, or ribbons, all à la Va'érie. If the unfortunate shop-girls, taken aback by such unusual demands, looked puzzled, and denied all knowledge of the article, Madame de Krudener would smile graciously and pity them for their ignorance of the new novel, thus turning them all into eager readers of "Valérie."

But how does she write of a success so shamelessly and shamefully secured?

The success of "Valérie" is complete and unheard of, and some one remarked to me just the other day that there is something supernatural in such a success. Yes, my dear friend, it is the will of heaven that the ideas and the purer morality the book contains should be spread throughout France, where such thoughts are little known.

This, too, from the woman who deserted her husband to be the mistress in succession of a young officer and of a public singer. Yet all this is less nauseous than the cruel cant of the Prophetess's letters to the wife of the gallant Comte de Labedoyère and to himself after she had refused to utter the word that would have saved his life. In truth, most of the zeal of Madame de Krudener and her fellow-revivalists in "blowing the trumpet in Zion" is due to their appropriation of the instrument to the service of their own wretched vanity.

"No eye so cloudy as the wilful blind," says Nicholas Breton, in a dainty little volume I have just been reading, "A Bower of Delights" (2). I wish this quaint old poet, from whom Fuller, George Herbert, and even Shakespeare have borrowed, had had better fortune than an editor who thinks the interruption of the following inept note will be welcome to readers of the poems:—

I once saw on a lofty, indeed on the loftiest of the mysterious stones of Stonehenge, within a few inches (exacerbatingly printed "miles" in our edition of Breton's works in loco) of the summit, a common shell "snail."

Perhaps this momentous note is due to the editor's conscientious dread lest any reader of the larger volume of Breton might visit Stonehenge in the hope of seeing a common shell snail within a few miles of the summit of its loftiest stone. Do you admire Mr. George Gissing's bony realism? If you do I can commend to you "The Odd Women"(3) as the best thing he has yet done. The odd woman is about as cheering a subject as a drenched hen standing alone under an arch on a wet day, and Mr. Gissing is not exactly an exhilarating novelist; but he is as true, if as hard, as photography, and has here dealt in a masterly way with the subject of the surplusage of "the sex"—what the misogynist, St. Paul, might perhaps call "the superfluity of naughtiness."—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, very sincerely yours,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

(1) "The Life and Letters of Madame de Krudener." By Clarence Ford. (London: Adam & Charles Black.)
(2) "A Bower of Delights;" Being Interwoven Verse and Prose from the Works of Nicholas Breton: The Weaver, Alexander B. Grosart. (London: Elliot Stock.)
(3) "The Odd Women." By George Gissing. 3 Vols. (London; Lawrence & Bullen

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—We have done a number of interesting things since I wrote you last. On Tuesday morning, taking train to Richmond and our courage in both hands, we went to White Lodge, enjoying the delightful drive across the Park and the sight of the deer, which are so tame that they do not even raise their heads when vehicles pass quite closely by them. Arrived at White Lodge, we were welcomed by a most delightful dog, a wiry-haired animal, white and black, with the bonniest big brown eyes you can imagine. This friendly creature accompanied us to the door, picking up a large stone on the way, and distinctly asking us to join in a game of play with him. This, however, we firmly declined, explaining to him that it was from no lack of appreciation of his hospitable kindliness and courteous desire to minister to our amusement, but that we thought our action might be misunderstood if any of the inhabitants of the White Lodge were to see us indulging in outdoor sports upon their grounds. "What are we going to say?" asked Maud, and I replied that we must trust to the inspiration of the moment. Accordingly, when a tall footman opened the door, I scribbled on my card the name of your humble weekly correspondent, and sent it in with a request that we might be permitted to see the presents. Leave was given us, and we were shown into the long corridor where they were all arranged, and found some photographers busily producing pictures of the more important presents. There were also one or two artists at work sketching them. In these circumstances, we saw them to great advantage, without any crowd or hurry. I do not intend to inflict the list upon you, especially as you must have read all about them in the daily papers. I must, however, tell you about the exquisite clock that was the gift of Mrs. Montefiore. It is in the shape of a tall belfry tower, the workmanship of the gold filigree being of great beauty. There is a tiny golden bell hung in the tower, and a flag floats from the top, also four very small ones from the square platform on which the clock rests. The face is surrounded by aqua marines. A great sapphire is set in front of the balcony with its beautiful miniature rail, and a fine ruby occupies a similar position on the lower platform. Another most covetable possession is the small watch, given by Dr. Chittenden, which was once the property of the Empress Josephine. You would have greatly admired the fine workmanship of the slender gold chain to which it was attached. The parasol given by Lord Wolverton is in pale blue moiré silk with a handle of agate, on the top of which is a peculiarly fine turquoise set in diamonds. A spray of may blossom, carried out in diamonds, crosses the handle a little below. The sunshade given by M. and Madame Waddington is in white Irish poplin, with a gold handle, and monogram in diamonds. A beautiful piece of dark tortoiseshell forms the handle of the sunshade given by the Earl of Chesterfield. Princess May's monogram and the Royal coronet appear upon it in gold. Another parasol was given by Colonel Burn, the cover being white silk, and the handle Indian silver. Few women could help coveting the twenty yards of wide and beautifully fine black lace flouncing given by the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. Twenty yards are such a pleasantly liberal length, are they not? In addition, the Grand Duke and Duchess gave a cheque and old silver bottles. A most lovely piece of old English point was given by Lady Campbell. It was made in the sixteenth century. The Countess of Shannon gave a fichu of beautiful old Irish point.

Vanity Fair, 10th December last, says:—"Myself I wore the Cynthia of the Minute in the shape of one of Busvine's newest habits, that makes a woman look wonderfully slim."

I fell very deeply in love with Mr. Henry Colnaghi's present of dark blue china coffee cups, each with its small outer case in Egyptian gold filigree. Sir Frederic Leighton's small tortoiseshell casket was another antique. One of the numerous handsome blotters was given by Madame Bricka, Princess May's companion. Others were given by the Marchioness of Headfort, Lord Edward Pelham Clinton, and Colonel and Lady Adela Larking.

The cases of jewellery were kept locked, and a detective was stationed near them, a very necessary precaution in any case, but particularly needful when the house in which valuable presents are shown is in such an isolated position as the White Lodge. An imposing parure of big turquoises and diamonds was the gift of the Duke and Duchess of Teck. The Duke of York's five-row necklace was composed of pearls, beautifully matched and of fine quality. Another of his presents was a Tudor rose in brilliants, the correct heraldic White Rose of York, with five outer petals, five inner, and the centre in a large diamond.

You will see all about the other presents in the papers. We were so glad we had not waited till the afternoon when we read in the newspapers next morning that about 20,000 people had accepted the invitation to look at the presents. As we drove away about one o'clock we met crowds of people pouring up, on foot and in every kind of vehicle. It was then beginning to rain, and the discomfort and disappointment must have been very great, but it was no one's fault, as it was impossible to anticipate such an enormous crowd. We went to Goode's in South Audley-street, to see the beautiful dessert service that the people of Norwich are giving the Royal couple. It is a reproduction from the historical old Chelsea set that King George III. and Queen Charlotte gave to the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg, who was brother to one or other of them, I forget which. The present Grand Duchess had photographs taken of the different pieces of this fine old set, and across the base of each photograph she had a mètre measure depicted, so as to give the precise dimensions. Was it not clever of her? The plates and dishes are beautiful, the rim showing five medallions in Mazarin blue with a gold moth or butterfly on each. The centre, which in the original was occupied by a wonderful bird, at which peacocks and birds of paradise would gaze with astonished envy, shows the Duke's badge surrounded by a circle of roses and forget-me-nots. There are seventy-two plates in the set, four oval dishes, four round ones, four square, four raised, four still taller, and six jardinières. Beautiful as all these are, the cream bowls and stands are beyond and above them, both in form and colour. The people of Great Yarmouth are giving a tea service in the same design. On the cups, the Rose of York is on one side and the Duke's badge on the other.

We also saw some pieces of a dinner service that the Duke is having for every-day use, with his badge on every plate, and a breakfast service to match.

A new ornament for the dinner-table struck us as being very graceful and quite novel. It is a centrepiece with tall columns in cut glass and arches springing from them, connected by drooping chains, also in glass. Small vases for flowers are hung here and there upon the arches, which would look lovely with small, pointed ivy or smilax twined round them and the chains. The new amethyst glass, with design of maiden-hair in gold upon it, is charming, and lights up uncommonly well. A great deep dish was of the most superb violet tint, quite a treat to the eye to look at. We saw a breakfast-tray with china, all designed by the Duchess of Albany, and very neat and compact. The tray was almost a triangle, and was fitted with strong brass handles, as the weight of all the china was considerable. The two teapots, one smaller than the other for pouring the tea into when drawn, the dishes for hot food, and all the other things, fitted into small grooves in the wood, so that there might be no uncomfortable sliding or slipping about. The breakfast-cup was of lordly dimensions, and, like all the china, was in a very pretty design of blue harebells on a ground of delicate white.

One of the most interesting ceremonies we have ever attended was the unveiling of the Queen's statue on Wednesday afternoon. Princess Louise was the sculptor, and she has depicted her Royal mother as she was at the time of her accession to the Throne. The position chosen for the statue is exactly opposite the great cast window of Kensington Palace, and directly between it and the Round Pond. We arrived on the scene at least an hour too soon, and amused ourselves with listening to the conversation of those around us, for we did not like to take our seats alone and isolated when so many hundreds were standing so loyally waiting for the great event of the day. The people insisted on calling the Union Jack that draped the statue "tarpaulin," pronouncing it "tarpauling." The popular impression seemed to be that Princess Louise had executed the work in the open, on the spot where the statue now stands. One woman said: "She must 'a bin very quick about it, for I passed here a few days ago, and there was nothing to be seen." They had then a long talk about the Queen, one telling the other that her Majesty is the richest woman in the world, and the other replying that, even if she were, she is also the most worried. "Just to think of it," she remarked. "Think of what our worries is with our 'usbands, and 'ouse, and children; and the Queen has every one of us to worry over besides all her palaces and ships and army, and her foreign countries that she has to regulate." This seemed too vast and troublesome a thought for the younger woman to entertain, and she caused a lively diversion by asking: "Did you ever know that the Queen's 'orses has false tails? I know a lady," she added, "as knows the gentleman as fastens 'em on." She seemed anxious not to appear too proud of this acquaintance, adding, in a deprecating spirit of humility, "but I dessay you knowed it afore." To this the older woman civilly but decidedly intimated that she did not feel quite sure of it even now. "If ever a lady could be sure of 'avin' real tails to her 'osses, surely the Queen of England could," she said; and as she appeared to take it as a personal matter, and we did not know what might happen if the ladies became excited, we tore ourselves away from their vicinity, having immensely enjoyed their conversation.

We had excellent seats just opposite the statue, and were delighted with the tiny boys and girls whom Lord Kilmorey put so diligently through their paces. The boys were all lovely children, the girls, for once, being not nearly so unanimously beautiful. The latter were rather stiffly garbed in embroidered muslin frocks, and hats with ostrich feathers. One child in deep cream-tinted muslin and tan stockings served to prove how inartistically hard was the contrast of black stockings with dead white frock presented by the others. The boys had cream-coloured shirts with biscuit-coloured breeches and tightly-fitting gaiters of the same stuff, patent leather shoes with buckles, and white straw hats with cream-coloured ribbon, matching their ties. I noticed the Earl of Aberdeen's boys among them, and Lady Granby's beautiful little son.

Gowns for Goodwood and Cowes.—Messrs. Redfern beg to announce that they are now exhibiting, at their Salons, 27, New Bond-street, a number of exceedingly pretty designs especially suitable for wear at Goodwood and Cowes Regatta, to which an inspection is invited.

The Duchess of Teck arrived without her daughter, which seemed to disappoint everybody very much. She was looking remarkably well in a dark-blue dress and gold bonnet. The Hon. Mary Thesiger was with her, looking as charming as she always does. The Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz arrived soon after with the blind Duke. It was their golden wedding-day, and a bouquet of white and yellow roses was probably one of the wedding presents. Princess Christian, with her husband and daughter, were quietly received. The Princess wore a very trying gown of pale green and tan colour, with pink roses in a gold bonnet. Her daughter was charmingly dressed in deep cream colour and pale green. They warmly greeted the Duchess of Teck, and took places by her. The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh were the next arrivals, the Duchess wearing a drab-coloured gown with black lace trimmings, and a pretty little bonnet made of gold lace, with one deep red rose in front. Her daughters had very becoming pink hats, both alike, trimmed with black lace. Princess Victoria had a pink gown to match, and Princess Alexandra something different, but I cannot remember what. Thick clouds had been rolling up from the west meantime, and the sunshine went out, and soon down came the rain. In the midst of it a quiet figure crossed the gravelled space in front of the statue all alone, a lady in a simple black gown, with a little frill at the foot, and a black bonnet with tea roses in it. We at first thought it was the Princess of Wales, unlikely as it seemed that H.R.H. should arrive alone and on foot, but the animation of the lady's manner as she talked with the Royalties was so very unlike the repose of the Princess of Wales's demeanour that we soon abandoned that idea, and eventually discovered that it was Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, daughter and sculptrix to the Queen. She was looking remarkably young and handsome, and evidently realised that June 28, 1893, was a very great day in her life. She kept close throughout the proceedings to the patriarchal-looking Duke of Argyll, who appeared to be both proud and fond of his talented Royal daughter-in-law.

The Earl of Kilmorey now brought forward his detachment of children—the rain having stopped for a few minutes—and put them through their paces in rehearsal of their bow to the Queen. The idea was to bring them forward to the Royal carriage in a double file, boys on the left, girls on the right. The boys, after saluting the Queen, were to turn off to the left, and the girls to the right; but some of the tiny girls could not be brought to see this, and insisted on following the small boys. However, they had to retreat from the rain, which was pretty heavy when the Prince and Princess of Wales and their daughters arrived, the Princess looking young and lovely in a black silk gown trimmed down the front and across the bodice with cream-coloured guipure lace. Her bonnet was green, this being the first time we had seen her out of mourning. The Prince was very smart, with a blue scarf and a red rose in his buttonhole. Princesses Victoria and Maud were dressed alike in heliotrope, with flower bonnets to match, relieved by a creamy rose or two at the left side. We now found for whom the two Louis XV. tapestry-covered armchairs had been placed, with a tall heliotrope tree mounting guard on either side. The Princess of Wales occupied one, but the Prince gave his to the Duchess of Edinburgh, with whom the Princess of Wales talked, Princess Victoria of Wales and her namesake of Edinburgh sitting together and talking and laughing as girlish cousins love to do.

We were all now awaiting the arrival of the Queen, and the rain grew heavier and heavier until at last it became a perfect torrent. In the midst of it, but with signs of speedy clearing in a bright blue sky over Kensington Palace, a mounted policeman came on at a quick trot, then the escort, and then the Queen in a closed carriage, with her two Highlanders in grey tartan kilts and plaids at the back. We could just see, as the cavalcade drew up with its soaked postilions and drenched horses, that Princess Beatrice sat by the Queen, Prince Henry of Battenberg opposite his wife, and the Lady-in-Waiting, opposite the Queen. The gentlemen of the Committee all uncovered and remained hatless for at least half an hour, a good ten minutes of the time in a soaking downpour. I was very sorry for them. The Prince of Wales came up to the carriage, and he, too, uncovered, but held his hat so that it might in some measure protect his head. Princess Louise, having procured a long cloak and an umbrella, talked to the Queen at the carriage window, her beautiful brow and eyes being all that we could see. The rain abating a little, Prince Henry of Battenberg left the Queen's carriage, and his wife took his vacant place, leaving the Queen alone on the front seat. The order was then given to open the carriage, and great cheers were given when the Highland attendants proceeded to obey it. Princess Beatrice at once opened an umbrella and handed it to her mother, she herself with the Lady-in-Waiting remaining unprotected from the rain, which, though much lighter, was still falling briskly. The formal proceedings then began, but I sent you a paper with all these described in it. Princess Louise stood quite in the background during the ceremony, but when it was concluded the Queen looked round at her and she came to the carriage door again.

Do you know, Amy dear, it was a very touching moment when the statue was unveiled, showing the Queen as she was when she ascended the throne so long ago, radiant in youth and with the world at her feet. The white-haired lady who looked up at the counterfeit presentment of her own lost youth, close to the Palace in which she was born and passed much of her girlhood, must have felt that she had

> Wandered mony a weary foot
> Since Auld Lang Syne.

I forgot to tell you that immediately after "God Save the Queen" the band played "Home, Sweet Home" on her Majesty's arrival. Was it not a happy thought?

The children now came forward with their little bows and large garlands of flowers, and the Queen smiled indulgently as the tiny creatures looked up at her, some making the deepest reverence to their Sovereign, and others giving her a familiar little nod, as they might to their own grandmother had she been the occupant of the carriage. The little boys piled up the garlands at the foot of the statue, and the Queen then sent for the Princess of Wales and Princess Christian to come to her carriage. She talked to them for a long time, and to the Prince of Wales. The Duke of Cambridge, who had driven himself on the ground with a splendid pair of horses, also came to the carriage, and when the Queen held out her hand to him he kissed it. Princess Beatrice, when the rain stopped and the sun shone out, opened a lace parasol lined with grey silk, and handing it to the Queen, took away her dripping umbrella.

After the Queen had gone, the Princess of Wales and Princess Louise talked for some minutes with Sir Frederic Leighton, who, though wet through, must have felt a pleasant conviction that his costume was worthy of the occasion. He was garbed like a bridegroom, in grey trousers, white "spats," white waistcoat, white tie, with loose, fluttering ends, and light kid gloves. Lord Kilmorey wore one of the fashionable butter-coloured waistcoats and a big carnation in his buttonhole.

It was a tremendous business getting away after all the Royalties had departed, for there was a rush of the crowd to see the statue, and no carriages could come nearer than the gate in the Kensington road. We walked down the hill as best we could, and, having crossed over, stopped to watch the redcoats and greycoats march down the incline, accompanied and followed by a surging sea of heads—a really remarkable sight, and one which Charlie especially enjoyed. I really believe that a latent military instinct is born in the breast of every Englishman, and needs only favourable circumstances to be developed.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

LADIES' SHIRTS, made to measure only, in French cambric, zephyr, and silk. All materials warranted fast colour and unshrinkable. Cut and made on the premises.—SAMPSON & CO., 270, Oxford-st., W.

Do you not find it very difficult to eat in this hot weather? Make your cook try this little dish in order to vary the monotony into which weekly menus are apt to fall:—

Boil four very young chickens for ten minutes, drain them, and when they are cold, cut them into joints. Dip each piece into beaten egg, then into fine bread-crumbs, season them with salt, pepper, and grated nutmeg. When all are ready, fry them in good beef dripping over a moderate fire for fifteen minutes. Free the livers from gall, boil them in a little salted water for ten minutes, then mince them fine. Put a gill of gravy into a small saucepan, add two or three shreds of the peel of a lemon, and simmer until it becomes well flavoured with the lemon. Thicken them with an ounce of butter, rolled in a teaspoonful of flour, then add the minced livers, give the sauce another boil, squeeze in the juice of a lemon that has been doubed in cayenne. Pull the saucepan aside, let it stand for a couple of minutes, then stir in carefully two tablespoonfuls of cream. Place the joints on a dish, and pour the sauce over them. Garnish them with slices of lemon, with a sprig of parsley laid on each.

You will find the following mixture very nice for perfuming linen:—

Gather the rose-leaves that are about to fall, and dry them in the shade, or 3 ft from the fire or stove. To 1 lb. of rose-leaves add 1 oz. of each, cloves, caraway-seeds, and allspice; pound it in a mortar or grind in a mill. Mix all together with ¼ lb. of dried salt; put the compound into little Japanese silkbags, and place among the linen. This will not only take away the unpleasant smell of the laundry, but keep away the moths.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

OLD SILVER FOR PRESENTS.

The Choicest Stock of genuine Old Silver in London, at moderate cash prices, with 10 per cent. discount.

SPINK & SON,
Goldsmiths and Silversmiths.
17 & 18, PICCADILLY, W.
and at
2, GRACECHURCH ST.
CORNHILL,
LONDON, E.C.

ESTABLISHED 1772. Under the Patronage of H.M. the Queen.

JAY'S
Annual Sale
WILL CONTINUE
THROUGHOUT THE MONTH.
Great Reductions in Mantles, Costumes, Millinery, and Ladies' Underwear.
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

THE MANUFACTURING
GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY
Show Rooms—112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)
Supplv the Public Direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving Purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Fine Diamond Half-hoop Rings. from £15 to £200.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £8.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
THE
GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE LTD.
(A. B. Savory & Sons), late of 11 and 12, Cornhill, E.C., is sold to this Company, and the business is transferred to the above address.

Fine Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Ring, £18 10s.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

The Largest and Choicest Stock in the World of Novelties specially prepared for WEDDING & COMPLIMENTARY PRESENTS.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Border Ring, £23.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Bracelet, £35.

REGISTERED DESIGN
Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Diamond Cluster Ring, £25.

CARPET CLEANING.

CARPETS and TAPESTRIES Cleansed from dust by PURE AIR.
Impossible to damage the most delicate fabric.
Collection and Delivery free.
Send for Prices and Particulars to your Upholsterer, or
The Compressed Air Carpet & Tapestry Cleaning Co.
Brook Green, W. Office: 94 Victoria-st., Westminster.
N.B. The Trade and Public are invited to visit our Works, and convince themselves of the bona fides of our process.

THE ROYAL WEDDING PERFUME.
H.S.H. Princess May has graciously accepted a supply of "ATKINSON'S WHITE ROSE," describing it as a "Charming Scent."
It is the "sweetest of sweet odours." Atkinson's is the only genuine.
Of all Chemists, Perfumers, and Dealers, and of the Manufacturers, 24, Old Bond Street, London.

CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly.
NO. 1 EAST ROOM—CUISINE VERITABLEMENT FINE, SPECIALLY DEVOTED TO THE SERVICE OF
À LA CARTE DÉJEUNERS AND DINNERS in the most Recherché Style of French Cookery.
CUISINE UNRIVALLED IN ENGLAND. LARGE SELECTION OF CHOICE WINES.
NO. 2 EAST ROOM.
A Special Dinner at 10s. 6d. each Will be served in this Room at Separate Tables, between the hours of 6 and 9 p.m.
COMPOSED OF A SELECTION OF DISHES FROM THE CARTE DU JOUR OF THE EAST ROOMS.

THE SUMMER SUN AND DUST.

On the ride, the drive, playing lawn tennis, the promenade, or the aquatic excursion, LADIES will find

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR

Most cooling, healing, and refreshing to the face, hands, and arms, and a delightfully soothing and emolient preparation for the skin and complexion; it

REMOVES SUNBURN, FRECKLES,

tan, roughness and redness of the skin, heals and soothes insect stings, irritation and all other cutaneous affections, renders the skin soft, smooth, and delicate, and pro luces a beautifully fair and delicate complexion. Ladies cannot do without it who value their complexion. Bottles 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d.; half-sized bottles 2s. 3d.

The heat of summer also frequently communicates a dryness to the hair and a tendency to fall off, which may be completely obviated by the use of a delightfully fragrant and transparent preparation, and as an invigorator and beautifyer of the hair beyond all precedent. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d., and 21s. per bottle.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL,

Sold by Chemists and Perfumers.  Ask for 'Rowland's' Articles.

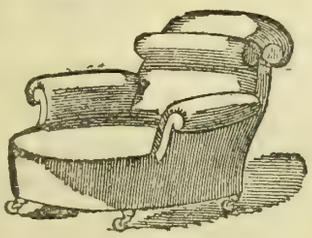
HOWARD & SONS.

PATENTEES OF

ENGLISH-MADE

PARQUET

FOR COVERING OLD FLOORS.
NEVER WEARS OUT.



DIVANS, SOFAS,

AND

EASY CHAIRS.

FURNITURE DESIGNERS & MAKERS. NEW CATALOGUES FREE.

25, 26, & 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN,

GREAT ORMOND STREET, BLOOMSBURY.

PATRON—The QUEEN. PRESIDENT—The DUKE of FIFE, K.T.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS urgently REQUIRED for SUPPORT of the NEW WING.

ADRIAN HOPE, Secretary.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.

300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.

ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.

Weavers of Dress Silks,

Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

THREE NEW NOVELS.

NOW READY.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "A SPLENDID COUSIN."

Mrs. FINCH-BRASSEY. By Mrs. ANDREW DEAN, Author of "Isaac Eller's Money." In 3 vols. crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

WHO WINS—LOSES. By Sophia MARY LOCKE. In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "MRS. SEVERN."

Mrs. ELPHINSTONE of DRUM. By Mrs. STEVENSON, Author of "Juliet," &c. In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

JULY.

A Visit to Prince Bismarck. By G. W. Smalley.
The Evolution of our Race. By Frederic Harrison.
Beautiful London. By Grant Allen.
The Recent Solar Eclipse. By Professor Thorpe, F.R.S.
The Dynasty of the Brohans. By Ange Galdemar.
The Mausoleum of Ibsen. By William Archer.
The Progress of Women's Trade-Unions. By Miss. E. March Phillipps.
The Russian Intrigues in South-Eastern Europe. By C. B. Roylance-Kent.
Advance of the United States during One Hundred Years. By Dr. Brock.
French Movements in Eastern Siam. By Sir Richard Temple, Bart., M.P.

CHAPMAN & HALL, Ld.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NOW READY AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

THE FATE OF SISTER JESSICA.

By F. W. ROBINSON, Author of "Grandmother's Money," "The Youngest Miss Green," &c. 3 vols.

THE WINNING OF MAY.

By the Author of "Dr. Edith Romney," "A Woman at the Helm," &c. 3 vols.

SECOND EDITION OF

IN THE BALANCE.

By G. M. ROBINS (Mrs. L. BAILLIE REYNOLDS), Author of "The Ides of March," "The Tree of Knowledge," &c. 3 vols.

THE SAFFRON ROBE.

By MARGARET B. CROSS Author of "Thyme and Rue," "Stolen Honey," &c. 3 vols.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED, 13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

Hatchards, Booksellers, 187, Piccadilly, London.

ALL THE NEW AND STANDARD BOOKS.

Post Orders Promptly Executed. Usual Cash Discounts.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

The Dictator. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P. 3 vols., at all Libraries.

"'The Dictator' is bright, sparkling, and entertaining. The book might almost be described as a picture of modern London. . . . It abounds in vivid and picturesque sidelights, drawn with a strong and simple touch."—Leeds Mercury.

Heather and Snow. By GEORGE MACDONALD. 2 vols., at all Libraries.

"Dr. MacDonald's book is full of genius. It should gather round him all his admirers, and add vastly to their number."—Bookman.

The Red Sultan. By J. MACLAREN COBBAN. 3 vols., at all Libraries.

"If any readers are on the look out for a thoroughly good romance, which will take them into a world far removed from the familiar trivialities of the modern novel of society, they cannot do better than betake themselves to the admirable story which Mr. Maclaren Cobban tells with such spirit in 'The Red Sultan.'"—Spectator.

The Simple Adventures of a Memsahib. By SARA JEANNETTE DUNCAN, Author of "A Social Departure" and "An American Girl in London." With 37 Illustrations by F. H. Townsend. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

"There will probably be no two opinions that it is the brightest and most accurate description of Anglo-Indian life which has seen the light for many a long day."—St James's Budget.

The Gun-Runner. A Romance of Zululand. By BERTRAM MITFORD. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

"Most of the Zulu chiefs and indunas who figure in Mr. Bertram Mitford's 'The Gun-Runner' are real characters, and, including the king, were personally known to the author."—Daily Chronicle.

Scotland Yard, Past and Present. By Ex-Chief Inspector CAVANAGH. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

Dr. Pascal. By E. ZOLA, Author of "The Downfall," "The Dream," &c. Translated by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY. With Etched Portrait of the Author. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.

NEW TWO-SHILLING BOOKS.

LINK BY LINK. By DICK DONOVAN.
PHRA THE PHŒNICIAN. By EDWIN LESTER ARNOLD.
*ARMOREL OF LYONESSE. By WALTER BESANT.
IN THE MIDST OF LIFE. By AMBROSE BIERCE.
ADVENTURES OF A FAIR REBEL. By MATT CRIM.
THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH. By ERASMUS DAWSON.
*TRACKED TO DOOM. By DICK DONOVAN.
THE NEW MISTRESS. By G. MANVILLE FENN.
THE FOSSICKER. By ERNEST GRANVILLE.
MR. STRANGER'S SEALED PACKET. By HUGH MACCOLL.
A YANKEE AT THE COURT OF KING ARTHUR. By MARK TWAIN.
THE MAN WHO WAS GOOD. By LEONARD MERRICK.
FROM THE BOSOM OF THE DEEP. By J. E. MUDDOCK.
DR. BERNARD ST. VINCENT. By HUME NISBET.
SUNNY STORIES. By JAMES PAYN.
THE ROMANCE OF A STATION. By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.
THE SOUL OF COUNTESS ADRIAN. By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.
MISS MAXWELL'S AFFECTIONS. By RICHARD PRYCE.
*ALONE ON A WIDE WIDE SEA. By W. CLARK RUSSELL.
THE JUNIOR DEAN. By ALAN ST. AUBYN.

Those marked * may also be had in cloth limp, at 2s. 6d. each.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

NOW READY.

VOL. 1 OF THE

ANGLO-AMERICAN LIBRARY OF FICTION.

Crown 8vo, Paper Covers, 1s.; Cloth, 1s. 6d.

THE SPANISH TREASURE.

A Story of Love and the Love of Gold.

By ISABELLA CASTELAR.

(Mrs. William Winter.)

London: JAMES HENDERSON, Red Lion House, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

New York: ROBERT BONNER'S SONS.

MR. GEORGE GISSING'S NEW NOVEL.

THE ODD WOMEN. A Novel, in 3 vols.

By GEORGE GISSING, Author of "New Grub Street."

"The book is better than merely readable—it is absorbing. . . . Mr. Gissing has not, perhaps, on the whole, written anything stronger or more striking."—Athenæum.

"'The Odd Women' is a great vindication of realism against the charge of dulness."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"'The Odd Women' is strong, it is thought compelling, it is remarkably clever."—Spectator.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, 16, Henrietta street, Covent Garden, London.

NEW NOVELS AT THE LIBRARIES.

AS A MAN IS ABLE.

BY DOROTHY LEIGHTON.

IN THREE VOLUMES.

BY MAXWELL GRAY.

THE LAST SENTENCE.

By the Author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland." 3 vols. Second Thousand.

"'The Last Sentence' is a remarkable story; it abounds with dramatic situations, the interest never for a moment flags, and the characters are well drawn and consistent."—Standard.

BY SARAH GRAND.

THE HEAVENLY TWINS.

By the Author of "Ideala." 3 vols. Third Thousand.

"It is so full of interest that one feels inclined to give oneself up to unreserved enjoyment of it. The twins are among the most delightful and amusing in fiction."—Athenæum.

BOOKS FOR HOLIDAY READING.

At all Booksellers' and Bookstalls, 3s. 6d. each. Illustrated.

FROM WISDOM COURT. By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN and STEPHEN GRAHAM TALLENTYRE. With 30 Illustrations by E. COURBOIN. [Just published.

THE OLD MAIDS' CLUB. By I. ZANGWILL, Author of "The Bachelors' Club." With Illustrations by F. H. TOWNSEND.

WOMAN—THROUGH A MAN'S EYE-GLASS. By MALCOLM C. SALAMAN. With Illustrations by DUDLEY HARDY.

MR. PUNCH'S POCKET IBSEN: A Collection of some of the Master's best-known Dramas, Condensed, Revised, and slightly Re-arranged for the benefit of the Earnest Student. By F. ANSTEY. With Illustrations by BERNARD PARTRIDGE.

NEW ONE-VOLUME NOVEL.

DONALD MARCY. By ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS, Author of "The Gates Ajar," &c. 3s. 6d. [Just published.

NEW EDITION OF MR. ZANGWILL'S NOVEL.

CHILDREN OF THE GHETTO. A Study of a Peculiar People. By I. ZANGWILL. A New Edition, with Glossary, 1 vol., crown 8vo, 6s. [Just published.

"A moving panorama of Jewish life, full of truth, full of sympathy, vivid in the setting forth, and occasionally most brilliant. . . . . A book to read, to keep, to ponder over, to remember."—Black and White.

LONDON: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, BEDFORD STREET, W.C.

NEW VOLUME OF SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S POPULAR 2s. and 2s. 6d. SERIES.

Now Ready, POPULAR EDITION, fcap. 8vo, boards, pictorial cover, 2s.; or, limp red cloth, 2s. 6d.

THE SLAVE OF THE LAMP. By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN, Author of "Young Mistley," &c.

LONDON: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, WATERLOO PLACE.

The NINETEENTH CENTURY.

JULY, 1893.

The "Arts and Crafts" Exhibition at Westminster. By EDWARD DICEY, C.B.
The Ninth Clause. (To my Fellow Gladstonians.) By Dr. WALLACE, M.P.
The New South Sea Bubble. By the Hon. JOHN FORTESCUE.
The Siamese Boundary Question. (With a Map.) By the Hon. GEORGE N. CURZON, M.P.
"Robbing God." By the Rev. Dr. JESSOPP.
Charles Baudelaire and Edgar Poe: a Literary Affinity. By ESMÉ STUART.
The Pan-Britannic Gathering. By J. ASTLEY COOPER.
Some Day Dreams and Realities. By the Rev. HARRY JONES.
How to Catalogue Books. By J. TAYLOR KAY.
Cookery as a Business. By MARY HARRISON.
Great Britain as a Sea-Power. By the Hon. T. A. BRASSEY.
The Situation at Washington. By Professor GOLDWIN SMITH.
Mediæval Medicine. By Mrs. KING.
The Apostles' Creed. By Professor HARNACK (with an Introduction by Mrs. HUMPHRY WARD).

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd.

THE UNITED SERVICE MAGAZINE.

SIXTY-FIFTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.—JULY, 1893.

Rulers of India. Sir MOUNTSTUART E. GRANT DUFF.
War Paint. A. G. BEST.
Maiwand. Capt. S. P. OLIVER.
The Campaign on the Loire in the Autumn of 1870. Count A. BOTHMER.
British Cruisers. Vice-Admiral COLOMB.
Concentration of Artillery Fire. Capt. E. J. GRANET, R.A.
A Reminiscence of the Santhal Rebellion. General Sir FREDERICK MIDDLETON.
Biserta. Capt. F. C. ORMSBY JOHNSON, R.M.L.I.
Achievements of Cavalry.—VI. Lieut.-General Sir EVELYN WOOD, V.C.

TWO SHILLINGS MONTHLY.

OFFICES—15, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

And at all Railway Stations and Booksellers.

NEW NOVEL AT ALL LIBRARIES.

BALMORAL:

A Romance of the Queen's Country.

By ALEXANDER ALLARDYCE, Author of "The City of Sunshine," "Life of Lord Keith," "Scotland and Scotsmen in the Eighteenth Century," "Charles Kirkpatrick Sharpe," &c.

3 vols., crown 8vo, 25s. 6d.

"No one who wishes to read a really first-rate novel should miss reading 'Balmoral.' . . . . . There is movement and vigour and life in every page, and in the procession of characters of every variety there are many which will abide in memory long after the book is read and put aside."—Observer.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

ROUND THE BLACK MAN'S GARDEN.

By ZÉLIE COLVILE, F.R.G.S.

With 2 Maps and 55 Illustrations from drawings by the Author and from Photographs.

Demy 8vo, 16s.

Summary of Contents:—The Sea of Islam—The Land of Rocks—The Land of Bondage—The Island of Mystery—The Land of Sleep—The Land of Gold—The Fortunate Isles—The Land of Death.—Index.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

THE NOVEL OF THE SEASON. THE SECOND EDITION IS NOW READY.

E. F. BENSON.—DODO: A Detail of the Day. By E. F. BENSON. 2 vols., crown 8vo, 21s.

"An unusually clever and interesting novel."—Guardian.

"'Dodo' is very good company. The author's matter is original and interesting."—National Observer.

"The pathos is as powerful as the humour."—Cambridge Review.

"Clever and well-written. 'Dodo's' lovers are much to be pitied, but her readers may be promised a very pleasant time."—Morning Post.

"A delightfully witty sketch of the smart people of society. The writer is a showman with keen insight and sympathy, and a true artist."—Spectator.

"The story is told with charming grace and considerable power, whilst the dialogue is a feast of epigram and paradox."—Speaker.

BARING-GOULD. — MRS. CURGENVEN OF CURGENVEN. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of "Mehalah," "In the Roar of the Sea," &c. 3 vols.

"Among his series of brilliant romances, 'Mrs. Curgenven of Curgenven' is one of the best."—Morning Post.

"Its characters are sketched for us with a firm hand and a bright imaginative power."—Speaker.

"A story of very great merit, skilfully constructed, with characters of strongly marked individuality."—Leeds Mercury.

"The swing of the narrative is splendid."—Sussex Daily News.

"A very fine and powerful story."—Bristol Mercury.

GILBERT PARKER. — MRS. FALCHION. By GILBERT PARKER, Author of "Pierre and his People." 2 vols., crown 8vo, 21s.

"There is strength and genius in Mr. Parker's style."—Daily Telegraph.

"The delicate truthfulness of the workmanship is not one whit less noteworthy than its vividness and power."—Daily Chronicle.

"A very striking and admirable novel."—St. James's Gazette.

"The story is sustained throughout, and enriched with a wealth of detail which only a very accomplished novelist could achieve."—Westminster Gazette.

"A work of original power. It has intellect and imagination in it, if not genius, finely imagined and well told."—Scotsman.

H. PEARCE.—JACO TRELOAR: a Cornish Story. By J. H. PEARCE, Author of "Esther Pentreath." 2 vols., crown 8vo, 21s.

"There is unmistakable power in 'Jaco Treloar,' a tragic story of humble life in Cornwall."—Manchester Guardian.

"Powerful and picturesque in a very high degree."—Daily Telegraph.

"There is freshness, originality, and power; nothing hackneyed or commonplace. Undoubtedly a novel of high quality."—Birmingham Post.

"Quite one of the best and most interesting novels that the present season has produced."—Daily Chronicle.

ANTHONY HOPE. — A CHANGE OF AIR. By ANTHONY HOPE, Author of "Mr. Witt's Widow," &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Humorous in conception, witty in execution, and amusing in effect. A book to read from beginning to end."—National Observer.

THE AUTHORITATIVE LIFE OF MR. RUSKIN.

COLLINGWOOD.—JOHN RUSKIN: His Life and Work. By W. G. COLLINGWOOD, M.A. Second Edition. With numerous Portraits and Sketches by Mr. Ruskin. 2 vols. 8vo, 32s.

"No more magnificent volumes have been published for a long time."—Times.

"This most lovingly written and most profoundly interesting book."—Daily News.

"A noble monument of a noble subject."—Glasgow Herald.

METHUEN & CO., 18, Bury-street, W.C.

Now Ready. Foolscap 4to, Illustrated, Cloth, Gilt edges. 10s. 6d. net.

THE

EARLY DAYS OF MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE;

Or, PUBLIC SCHOOL LIFE BETWEEN FORTY AND FIFTY YEARS AGO.

To which is added

A Glimpse of Old Haileybury; Patna during the Mutiny; A Sketch of the Natural History of the Riviera; and Life in an Oxfordshire Village.

By EDWARD LOCKWOOD, Indian Civil Service (Retired).

Author of "The Natural History of Monghyr."

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT, & CO., Limited.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free 3s. 8d. London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

MISS BRADDON'S NEW NOVEL.

NOW READY. In 3 Vols.; at all Libraries.

All Along The River.

A NOVEL.

By the Author of "Vixen," "Lady Audley's Secret," "Gerard," &c.

"'All Along the River' is one of the most pathetic stories that Miss Braddon has written. . . . The situation is natural, or at any rate quite conceivable, and there are not many, even of our latter-day weavers of romance, who could have traced it from beginning to end with so much grace and power as the author has brought to the elaboration of her idea."—The Athenæum.

London: SIMPKIN & CO., LIMITED.

Price Sixpence.

THE HARROGATE MINERAL WATERS and HOMŒOPATHY. A new Analysis. Reprinted from the Monthly "Homœopathic Review."

Published by E. GOULI & SON. London, and can be purchased at any Booksellers'.

SCOTT ADIE

115 & 115A REGENT STREET

LONDON W.

THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE

For

Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Mauds.
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns.

Telegraphic Address—Scott Adie, London.

SURPLICE SHIRT.

MADE TO MEASURE.

MADE ON THE PREMISES.

GENTLEMEN'S Complete OUTFITTERS.

PRICE LISTS ON APPLICATION

SAMPSON & CO.

268, 270, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

MILD INDIAN CIGARS. OBTAINABLE EVERYWHERE.

BAHADUR

PATRONISED BY H.I.M. THE EMPRESS OF GERMANY.

THE NOTED

"IPSWICH" POTTED MEATS.

Nothing can be better for the Yachting, Fishing, or Picnic Basket.

Sole Maker—R. SEAGER, IPSWICH.

Ask your Grocer.

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.—HENLEY REGATTA.—On July 5, 6, and 7, the ORDINARY TRAIN SERVICE between PADDINGTON STATION and HENLEY will be SUSPENDED, and the following will be the service:—

From PADDINGTON to HENLEY at 6.30 a.m., 7.50, 8.40, 9.5, 9.28, 9.39, 9.55, 10, 10.17, 10.25, 10.30, 10.50, 11.10, 11.27, 11.50 a.m., 12.35, 1.33, 2.35, 6.30, and 7.55 p.m.

From HENLEY to PADDINGTON at 6.55 a.m., 8, 8.45 a.m., 2.10 p.m., 3.45, 5.15, 5.35, 5.55, 6.3, 6.30, 6.40, 6.55, 7.5, 7.45, 8.15, 8.25, 9.5, 10, *10.15, 10.30, and *10.40 p.m. *On July 7 only.

Return Fares: 1st Class, 10s. 9d.; 2nd Class, 8s.; 3rd Class (by certain trains), 3s. 6d.

On July 8 and 10, Through Special Trains will leave Henley at 8.45 a.m. and 2.55 p.m. for Westbourne Park and Paddington, and at 10.30 a.m. and 12.15 p.m. for Maidenhead, Slough, Windsor, and London.

Tickets will be issued between Paddington and Henley on July 1 and following days, available by any train between July 1 and 10, inclusive. Fares: 1st Class, 42s., 2nd Class, 31s. 6d.

Tickets will also be issued available for the three Regatta days, July 5, 6, and 7. Fares: 1st Class, 30s., 2nd Class, 22s.

HY. LAMBERT, General Manager.

NEW DIRECT EXPRESS SERVICE to the CONTINENT, viâ the Great Eastern Railway Co., HARWICH and the HOOK OF HOLLAND, at cheap through fares, daily (Sundays included). Passengers leave London (Liverpool-street Station) at 8 p.m., and the principal Northern and Midland towns in the afternoon. Dining Car between York and Harwich, viâ March. Passengers are due at Amsterdam at 8.28 a.m., Cologne at 2.0 p.m., and Berlin the same evening. Through carriages to Germany run alongside the steamers at the Hook of Holland.

ANTWERP, viâ Harwich, every week-day. Hamburg by G.S.N. Co's. steamers. Wednesdays and Saturdays. Cheap tickets and tours to all parts of the Continent. Guides, time-books, and information at 61, Regent-street, W., or of the Continental Traffic Manager, Liverpool-street Station, E.C.

ABERYSTWYTH.—WEST COAST OF WALES.

Bracing Air, Grand Scenery, excellent Sea Bathing, good Fishing and Hunting (Foxhounds and Harriers), Perfect Sanitary Arrangements, with abundant Supply of Pure Water from Plynlimon Lake.

"A fortnight's Residence at Aberystwyth in some cases is equivalent to a month's residence at most other watering places."—Sir James Clark, Physician to the Queen.

"You cannot have a healthier watering place in England or Wales than Aberystwyth."—Sir W. Gull, Bart.

Express Trains with Through Carriages leave Euston Station, London, daily.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISES by the steamships "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, "CHIMBORAZO," 3,847 tons register, and "LUSITANIA," 3,877 tons register, leaving LONDON as under:—

For NORWAY,
15th July, for 27 days. | 2nd August, for 24 days.
16th August, for 15 days.
Calling at LEITH two days later.

The Steamers will be navigated through the "Inner Lead," i.e. inside the fringe of islands off the coast of Norway, thus securing smooth water, and will visit some of the finest fiords. On the first trip the North Cape will be reached while the sun is above the horizon at midnight.

For SICILY, GREECE, the LEVANT, and CRIMEA,
leaving 2nd September, for 46 days.
For the MEDITERRANEAN,
leaving 12th September, for 31 days.
For MADEIRA, TENERIFFE, WEST INDIES, AZORES, &c.,
leaving 22nd November, for 65 days.

The Steamers are fitted with Electric Light, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Baths, &c.

Managers { F. Green & Co. / Anderson, Anderson, & Co. } Head Offices, Fenchurch-avenue, London.

For passage apply to the latter firm, at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, E.C.; or to the West-end Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, S.W.

NORWEGIAN YACHTING CRUISES (FORTNIGHTLY) FROM NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

Shortest route to Norway. Only one night at sea.

By the ALBION STEAMSHIP CO.'S (Ltd.) Fast and Splendidly-fitted Yachting Steamer

"MIDNIGHT SUN" (Captain NIVISON, R.N.R.), 3,020 tons, 2,360 horse-power.

Fares from 12 Guineas, including a sumptuous table.

NEXT SAILINGS—JUNE 17; JULY 1, 15, 29; AUGUST 12, 26; SEPTEMBER 9.

All applications for Berths to be made to the Yachting Steamer "MIDNIGHT SUN" Passenger Office, 4, Lombard-street (Tel. Add., Tourist), Newcastle-on-Tyne. Write for Itineraries.

OSTEND, BELGIUM.—SEA BATHS. Season from May to November. 150,000 visitors. This fashionable and much frequented seaside watering place, summer residence of the King and Queen of the Belgians, offers yearly greater attractions. Regattas, pigeon shooting, races, fishing, boating, children's races, &c. Magnificent kursaal, daily concerts, two orchestras of 70 performers, organ recitals, soirées dansantes, children's balls, grand balls, festivals, casino, theatre, Park Leopold, sea bathing. Regular sea communication with London. Royal Belgian Mail Boats between Ostend and Dover; three services daily; passage three hours. Distance by rail from Paris eight hours, from Brussels two hours. Hydrotherapic establishment.

SPECIAL UNITED STATES and CANADIAN TOURS.—CHICAGO EXHIBITION, New York, Washington, Boston, Philadelphia, Montreal, Quebec, Baltimore, FALLS OF NIAGARA. First-class Fares and all Hotel Bills from 45 Guineas. From Liverpool, August 10th and 24th, 1893.—Special Tourist Agency, 13, Walbrook, E.C.; or Mitchell's Library, Bond-st., W.

CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

CHEQUE BANK CHEQUES the safest form of Money for Travellers. Cashed by nearly 300 Banks in United States and Canada. Apply, Cheque Bank, Limited, 4, Waterloo-place, S.W., or George-yard, E.C.

AUSTRALIA and NEW ZEALAND.—NEW FAST PASSENGER ROUTE, viâ Vancouver, by fastest Atlantic steamers (any line) to Montreal or New York; thence viâ Canadian Pacific Railway, taking in the grand scenery of the Rockies, only actual trans-continental line running through trains under one management.

Atlantic to Pacific. Many optional routes, including Niagara and Chicago. Break of journey allowed.

New steamships, 5,000 tons each, of New Zealand and Australasian S.s. Co., largest, fastest, and finest running from American Continent to Australasia, leave Vancouver about as follows:

S.s. MIOWERA ..... August 14th,
S.s. WARRIMOO ..... September 14th,

monthly thereafter, calling Honolulu, Brisbane, and Sydney. Electric light good cuisine, exceptionally large cabins.

For pamphlets and berths apply to Passenger Department, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, King William-street, London, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000." Tobacconists Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

COUNTRY RESIDENCE, with 300 acres of first-rate shooting, in Sussex, delightfully situated in the midst of beautiful woodland scenery, and convenient of access from London and Brighton by fast main-line trains. The Residence, while of moderate size, affords ample accommodation for a family, containing four reception rooms, and 14 bed and dressing rooms, and is surrounded by charming ornamental grounds of moderate extent; kitchen garden, greenhouse, stabling, and ample farm buildings. The farm lands are almost all in pasture and can be worked at very small expense, and the fields being divided by numerous gills and shaws afford exceptional opportunities for preservation of game, the woodlands extending altogether to about 140 acres. The LEASE of about 12 years TO BE DISPOSED of in consequence of the death of the late occupier.—Apply to Messrs. FARE-BROTHER, ELLIS, CLARK, & CO, 29, Fleet-street, London.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES.—Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS, ST. JAMES' PARK, S.W.

(OPPOSITE ST. JAMES' PALACE).

A FEW SUITES TO LET AT REDUCED RENTALS.

TATTERSALL'S THURSDAYS' SALES.

MESSRS. TATTERSALL beg to give NOTICE that their THURSDAYS' SALES have commenced, and will be continued during the season.

SALES ON MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

---

80 Pointers, Setters, Spaniels, and Retrievers,

THE PROPERTY OF

R. J. LLOYD PRICE, Esq., of Rhiwlas, Bala, N. Wales; Col. STARKIE; J. P. WEATHERBY, Esq.; L. D. WIGAN, Esq.; Mr. ELIAS BISHOP; and F. TEMPLEMAN MEW, Esq.,

WILL BE SOLD BY PUBLIC AUCTION BY

Messrs. W. & S. FREEMAN,

At ALDRIDGE'S, St. Martin's-lane, London, on FRIDAY Next, JULY 7th, at 1.30 p.m.—On view day prior and morning of sale.—W. & S. FREEMAN.

Next Sales of Sporting Dogs at Aldridge's, 1893:—Thursday, 13th July; Friday, 21st July; Friday, 28th July.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c.—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Particulars as to the best University or Army TUTORS and SCHOOLS for Boys or Girls, at home or abroad, may be obtained (free of charge) by sending a statement of requirements to R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand.

LOWEST SUMMER PRICES.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES; Londonderry Wallsend, 22s.; Pittington Wallsend, 21s.; Primrose, 20s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 19s. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

THE MILDEST OF MILD INDIAN CIGARS are

OAKES & Co.'S SUPERS

NO. 3,

THE PAGODA BRAND. QUALITY & FLAVOUR UNEQUALLED.

The Cheapest and Best INDIAN CIGAR in the Market.

SAMPLE BOX of 100 SENT to ANY ADDRESS for FIFTEEN SHILLINGS.

OAKES BROS. & CO., 46, NEW BROAD-STREET, SOLE IMPORTERS.

"The Cup of the Prince, the Peer, and the Peasant."
"The most popular and healthful Beverage of the Century."

By Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.

"MERSANO"

The GREAT RESTORER & PRESERVER of HEALTH.

A SPARKLING NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE.

Recommended by all the leading medical faculty as the only perfect and health preserving table drink. The most welcome friend in every sick room, and indispensable on every table.

CERTIFICATE OF HONOUR and GOLD MEDAL have been awarded for the special excellence of "Mersano."

To be had Everywhere at 6d. per Bottle.

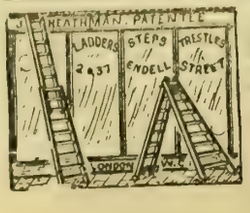
Wholesale from Local Agents in all parts of the Kingdom. Any difficulty with local supply, communicate with the Patentees:—

Forbes, Maxwell, & Co., Ltd., Aberdeen

SAMPLE BOTTLE POST FREE NINE STAMPS.



HEATHMAN'S LADDERS

Are a wonderful convenience. They separate or form steps, or extend to varying heights, just as one's needs vary.

Height (closed).	Extend to	Price.
6 ft. 0 in.	10 ft. 6 in.	16s. 6d.
7 ft. 0 in.	12 ft. 0 in.	19s. 6d.
8 ft. 0 in.	14 ft. 0 in.	22s. 6d.
9 ft. 9 in.	17 ft. 0 in.	26s. 6d

CARRIAGE PAID.

37, ENDELL STREET, LONDON, W.C.

AMUSEMENTS.

COVENT GARDEN THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—GRAND OPERA SEASON, under the sole direction of Sir Augustus Harris. For full particulars see daily papers. Box-office open all day.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
A WOMAN OF NO IMPORTANCE,
By Mr. Oscar Wilde.
Mr. and Mrs. Tree, Miss Julia Neilson, Miss Rose Leclercq, Miss Le Thière, Miss Horlock, and Mrs. Bernard Beere; Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. Kemble, Mr. Allan, Mr. Clark, Mr. Lawford, &c.
MATINÉE EVERY SATURDAY, at 2.30.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) open daily 10 to 5 and 8 to 10. Seats may be booked till the end of the Season, also by letter or telegram.

LYCEUM.—Mr. HENRY IRVING, Lessee and Manager.—BECKET To-night at 8.20. CHARLES I. To-morrow, Friday Night, at 8.20. MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING, Matinée Saturday Next, at 2. KING HENRY VIII. next Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday Nights, and Matinée Saturday, July 15. OLIVIA Friday, July 14. Benefit of Miss Ellen Terry. Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open 10 till 5. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.—LYCEUM.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—Every Evening at 7.45, A WOMAN'S REVENGE, by Henry Pettitt. Characters by Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Arthur Williams, Herbert Flemming, J. Carter, R. Harding, H. Russell; Mesdames Elizabeth Robins, Gertrude Kingston, F. L. Foster, and Fanny Brough. Box-office at theatre and all libraries. Doors open at 7.30.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATTI, Lessees and Managers.—Every Evening, at 9, the celebrated Farcical Comedy, by Dion Boucicault, entitled FORBIDDEN FRUIT. Mr. Charles Groves, Mr. W. L. Abingdon, Mr. Julian Cross, Mr. Harry Parker; Miss Norreys, Miss Maggie Duggan, Miss Daisy England, and Miss Lottie Venne. Preceded, at 8, by the Comic Drama, SMOKE. Box-office open 10 to 6.

GARRICK THEATRE.—Mr. JOHN HARE, Lessee and Manager.—To-night, at 8, DIPLOMACY (Last Nights). Mr. Bancroft, Mr. J. F. Robertson, Mr. A. Cecil, Mr. G. Hare, Mr. E. Mayeur, Mr. R. Power, and Mr. John Hare; Miss Kate Rorke, Miss Olga Nethersole, Lady Monckton, Miss Luck, and Mrs. Bancroft (Last Performances). Final Matinée Saturday next, July 8. No evening performance on this date.—Acting Manager, Mr. C. G. Compton.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.10 punctually, an Original Play, in Four Acts, by A. W. Pinero, entitled
THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY.
AFTERNOON PERFORMANCE of THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY on SATURDAY NEXT, July 8, at 2.30. Box-office open daily 10 to 5 and 8 to 10.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square, under the management of AUGUSTIN DALY. Every Evening at 8.15, Miss Ada Rehan and AUGUSTIN DALY'S COMPANY of COMEDIANS (Mr. Lewis, Mrs. Gilbert, &c.), in Shakspere's TAMING OF THE SHREW (for four evenings more and one Matinée, July 8th, at 2). Tuesday, July 11th, the HUNCHBACK, with Miss Rehan as Julia (for six nights and one Matinée). Tuesday, July 18, a new eccentric Comedy, entitled LOVE IN TANDEM. Present season positively limited to five weeks. Box-office daily, 9 to 5. Also all libraries.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.30, MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine and Charles Danby; Misses Florence Dysart and Letty Lind. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30. At 8, REBECCA RUN MAD.

ROYALTY THEATRE, Shaftesbury-avenue,
Under the Management of Mrs. HORACE NEVILL,
Will OPEN for the season MONDAY next, July 10, with the Romantic Drama entitled
ST. RONAN'S WELL.
Produced under the direction of Mr. Edmund Gurney.
Mr. Frank Worthing, Mr. Gaston Mervale, Mr. Edmund Gurney, Miss Alexes Leighton, and Mrs. HORACE NEVILL and Powerful Company.
Box Office open daily 10 to 10. Seats at all Libraries.
Business Manager, Mr. W. J. Lancaster.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.45.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music, and Varieties. At 8.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations; and at 10 o'clock, the New Grand Romantic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, entitled FIDELIA. Frequent Change of Programme. Prices, 6d. to 3 Guineas. (See Daily Papers.)

THE EMPIRE.—Leicester-square.—Grand Programme.—Two Grand Ballets, Second Edition of ROUND THE TOWN and KATRINA. Unqualified success. Unrivalled VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Magnificent Orchestra. Doors open at 7.45. No free list.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Special Engagement of Mons. Jacques Inaudi, the marvellous Mental Calculator; James Fawn, F. H. Celli, Millie Hylton, Herbert Campbell, Marie Loftus, Harry Randall, Ada Blanche, Marie Le Blanc, Brothers Griffiths, Ada Reeve, Dutch Daly, Howard Reynolds, Florrie Robina, G. W. Hunter, Alice Maydue, Three Delevines, Flo Bilton, Revene and Athas; Ara, Zebra, and Vora; Eugene Stratton, Fred Harvey, Arthur Rigby.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—FULL LICENCE.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Prices from 1s. EVERY EVENING at 8

RICHTER CONCERTS, ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Conductor, Dr. Hans Richter (under the direction of Mr. N. VERT). SIXTH and last CONCERT of the Season, MONDAY NEXT, at 8.30. Tickets: 1os., 10s. 6d., 5s., 2s. 6d., of usual Agents; and Trees's Office, St. James's Hall. N. VERT, 6 Cork-street, W.

THE GRAFTON GALLERIES.—Admission 1s., 10 to 6.
THIRD EXHIBITION of the SOCIETY of PORTRAIT PAINTERS.
Grafton-street, Bond-street, W.

NOW on VIEW, PICTURES of Tunis, Biskra, Venice, Constantine, by Félix Moscheles, at STACEY'S GALLERIES, 28, Old Bond-street, W.

LAWRIE & CO., 15, Old Bond-street.—EXHIBITION of Loan Collection of PICTURES of Barbizon and Early English Schools, Corot, Daubigny, Diaz, Dupré, Millet, Rosseau, Troyon, Constable, Romney, Reynolds, Gainsborough, Velasquez, Turner, &c., &c. Open from 10 to 6. Admission, 1s.

EARL'S COURT EXHIBITION
OF
GARDENING AND FORESTRY.
THE GARDEN OF LONDON.
OPEN DAILY, 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.
ALL ROADS LEAD TO EARL'S COURT.
BAND of H.M. GRENADIER GUARDS, the EXHIBITION BAND, GRAND ORGAN, STRING BAND.
Miss NELLIE GANTHONY'S ENTERTAINMENT.
ILLUMINATIONS.
Tens of Thousands of Electric, Gas, and Vauxhall Lights, arranged with regard to colour.
FERNERIES, FOUNTAINS, WATERFALLS.
WEDDING of H.R.H. the DUKE of YORK, K.G., &c., THURSDAY, JULY 6th. On this occasion the EXHIBITION and GARDENS will remain open and the BANDS of the GRENADIER GUARDS and SCOTS GUARDS will play till 1 a.m. SPECIAL ILLUMINATIONS. "PYROTECHNICAL DISPLAY," and FLORAL DECORATIONS.
ADMISSION ONE SHILLING. SEASON TICKETS (One Guinea), admitting to the Main Building, Exhibition of Gardening and Forestry, Central and Western Gardens.

CAPTAIN BOYTON'S WORLD'S WATER SHOW,
EARL'S COURT.
ENORMOUS SUCCESS.
TWO PERFORMANCES DAILY at 3.30 and 8.30.
RAIN OR SHINE.
ADMISSION (with seat) 6d. to 5s.

OLD PARIS and the BASTILLE.
EARL'S COURT. OPEN DAILY 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.
Thrilling Escape of the Prisoner at 6 and 10. The STORMING of the BASTILLE 10.10. Grand Café Concert in the Place de la Bastille at 3.45 and 8.30.
The HOTEL DE MAYENNE is NOW OPEN as a FIRST-CLASS FRENCH RESTAURANT.
Déjeuners à la Fourchette et Diners à la Carte.

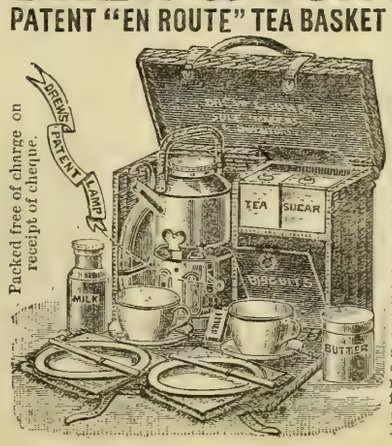
MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations. Lighted throughout by electricity. THE LIBERATOR FAILURE.—Portrait Model of Jabez Spencer Balfour. The PANAMA SCANDAL.—Portrait Model of M. Ferdinand de Lesseps. CABINET MINISTERS.—New Portrait Models of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Sir William V. Harcourt, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, and Lord Randolph Churchill, &c., &c. New and graphic Tableaux, A FOOTBALL SCRIMMAGE. Over 400 other Portrait Models in Wax. Historical Tableaux. Grand scenes representing British Sports, Nursery Rhymes, &c. Eminent People "At Home." Music all day. Chamber of Horrors—Lambeth Poisoning Case, Portrait Model of Thomas Neill Cream. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Extra rooms, 6d. Open from 9 to 10.

LAST DAYS.—Colossal CYCLORAMA, "Egypt in its Grandeur." Daily, 10 to 10, 1s.; children, 6d.; Sundays, 3 to 10 (free). NIAGARA HALL, St. James's Park Station. Through Tickets, including admission, at all District and Metropolitan Railway Stations.

ROYAL WEDDING FESTIVITIES.
MUSICIANS, CONJURORS, AND 1,000 NOVELTIES.
Call or Send for Illustrated Price List.
THE SOCIETY OF ENTERTAINERS, 44, UPPER BAKER ST. LONDON, N.W.
Mention this Paper. Telephone, 7,119.

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET



Packed free of charge on receipt of cheque.

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5/-, Polished Nickel, 7/6.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards, Tennis Lawn.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 50 yards from the Pavilion and Winter Garden, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table-d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 10s. 6d. per day.
According to the position of rooms selected.

BUXTON.—The PEAK THERMAL ESTABLISHMENT. A High-class Hydropathic Hotel. Mineral water and other baths. Resident physician. Electric light. Passenger lift. Magnificent public rooms. Excellent cuisine. Table d'hôte 7 p.m., separate tables. Terms moderate.—Telegrams, "Thermal, Buxton."

CALLANDER & TROSSACHS HYDROPATHIC.—
Splendid Drives. Good Fishing. Lawn Tennis. Golf.
Terms from £2 12s. 6d. per week.
Apply to the MANAGER.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

GAIRLOCH HOTEL, LOCH MAREE, ROSS-SHIRE.—This magnificent hotel is situated amidst the finest Highland scenery in the West coast of Scotland. Accommodation for over 200. Good Fishing. Large posting establishment. Swift steamer from Oban every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday.

GRAND CANARY.—THE MÉTROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 2783.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

MATLOCK BATH.—ROYAL HOTEL.—Hydropathic Baths of every description. Medical Man. Healthful situation; extensive grounds, greatly admired. Large swimming bath. Billiards. Dairy farm. Splendid fishing.—Also NEW BATH HOTEL, with extensive grounds, fishing, &c. &c. Terms very moderate. 'Bus meets all trains.—T. TYACK, Proprietor.

NEWQUAY, Cornwall, The Biarritz of England.—ATLANTIC HOTEL, "the finest Hotel in the county." Splendidly situated. Full view of the Atlantic from Trevose Head to St. Ives. Ocean view from every window. Beaches, caverns, and cliff scenery unrivalled. Bracing climate. Bathing, yachting, fishing. Delightful excursions. Magnificent rooms. Strictly moderate charges.

NORWOOD (UPPER).—The QUEEN'S HOTEL, near the Crystal Palace. Specially adapted Suites of Apartments for families and permanent residents. Winter boarding. Terms from Three Guineas. A limited number of single rooms at 2½ guineas.

PORTRUSH (Giant's Causeway), co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL. Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing; sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner, 7 p.m. French cuisine. Charges very moderate. The HOTEL is UNDER RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hote at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

SEA VIEW.—ISLE OF WIGHT, PIER HOTEL. The most modern and best appointed hotel in the island. All public rooms, private sitting-rooms, and greater number of bed-rooms face the sea and pier. Splendid bathing and boating. Royal I.W. Golf Links, ten minutes' walk.
G. ROWLAND ROBERTS, Proprietor.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—ROYAL KENTISH HOTEL.—Largest, best appointed, facing the Common, close to Chalybeate Springs and Parade. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Inclusive terms, 12s. per day Tariff of MANAGER..

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.

TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.

(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.

THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.

SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.

Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.
NO SUPPERS.
TELEPHONE No. 3,507.

THE BURLINGTON RESTAURANT,
169, Regent Street, W.

The most recherché 5s. Diner Parisien in London.
Luncheons and Dinners à la carte.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.
(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).

Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

LANGHAM HOTEL,
PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.

Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6 to 8.30.
Under the Management of WALTER GOSDEN.

BEST POSITION IN MARGATE.

NOW OPEN! # HOTEL METROPOLE NOW OPEN!

MARGATE.

Immediately facing the Jetty. Sumptuously Furnished and Fitted throughout. Perfect Sanitation, Electric Light, and all Modern Improvements. Billiard Room. Magnificent Sea Views.
MOST CONVENIENT FOR FAMILIES AND GENTLEMEN.

HIGH-CLASS CUISINE. MODERATE CHARGES. MANAGER—J. M. KLEMPNER

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

THE PALACE HOTEL.

This large and elegantly-appointed high class Hotel contains upwards of 200 rooms. The hotel occupies the finest position in Buxton, and is surrounded by its own grounds of six acres. Ground floor sitting rooms and bed rooms. Magnificent public rooms. American elevator. Table d'hôte at separate tables.

A. CROSS, Manager.

ALBANY HOTEL (ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.

Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Only H. & C. with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

GRAND HOTEL, LOWESTOFT,

WILL BE OPENED

FOR THE RECEPTION OF VISITORS,

TUESDAY, 11th JULY.

Tariff on application to Manager.

ESTABLISHED IN 1875.

MACDONALD'S

IS THE ORIGINAL AND VERY MUCH THE LARGEST

HYDROPATHIC IN PITLOCHRY, PERTHSHIRE,

Standing in its own Ornamental Grounds of over 35 Acres, and 500 feet above sea level. Every window commands a view of the Most Magnificent Scenery in Scotland. To prevent disappointment Communications should in all cases be addressed to W. MACDONALD, The Athole, Pitlochry. Telegraphic Address—"Athole, Pitlochry."

VISITORS to NEW YORK

Seeking COMFORT, QUIET, and an ELEGANT HOME,

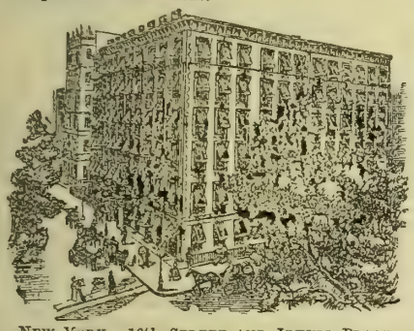
WILL FIND THE

Westminster Hotel

SIXTEENTH STREET and IRVING PLACE,

Replete with every Modern Convenience and Comfort. Moderate Tariff.

LOCATION.—One block east of Union-square. Convenience of Broadway, without its noise. Accessible to all Railways, Ferries, the Shopping Centre, and places of Amusement.



NEW YORK.—16th STREET AND IRVING PLACE.
(Cable Address: "Westminster, New York.")

RECOMMENDATION.
A permanent or transient home of quiet elegance, with generous management, and a cuisine of noted excellence.

REPUTATION.
An enviable one among people of taste and discrimination, desiring comfort and luxury, without the confusion and publicity of the larger hotels.

INCLUSIVE TERMS.
$3.50 (about 15s.) per day and upwards, according to location of rooms.

The water used in THE WESTMINSTER is purified by the "Buhring" patent process.

E. N. ANABLE, Proprietor.
W. W. SCHENCK, Manager.

GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.

ON the Esplanade, overlooking St. Aubin's Bay. Finest sea views in Jersey. The Largest and best appointed Hotel in the Channel Islands. Every modern improvement. Magnificent public rooms Private suites. Swimming bath, tennis courts, &c. Terms en pension or à la carte, on application to— SYDNEY ROGERS, Manager and Secretary.
Telegrams: "Grand, Jersey."

EASTBOURNE. THE CAVENDISH HOTEL stands alone in the centre of the Grand Parade. Pleasant sea and land views. Patronised by many of the Royal families of Europe. Appreciated for its first-class appointments and homely comforts. Elegant public rooms, convenient family suites, &c. Passenger lift. Table d'hôte. Moderate charges.—G. LOWMAN, Manager.

OATLANDS PARK HOTEL, Walton-on-Thames (17 miles from London, Waterloo Station), formerly the favourite residence of H.R.H. the late Duke of York, charmingly situated in its own extensive picturesque grounds; family suites, large airy bedrooms, home comforts, table d'hôte, lawn-tennis. Board terms, from 12s. per day. Stabling.—Postal address, Weybridge.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.—SACKVILLE HOTEL.—Situated between Eastbourne and St. Leonard's. Facing sea. South aspect. moderate tariff. Golf-links, tennis courts, attached to the Hotel. Terms on application. Telegrams, "Sackville, Bexhill."

ILFRACOMBE.—The RUNNACLEAVE Private HOTEL. 120 beautifully-appointed rooms. Recreation-hall, to seat 500, with fitted stage; carriage, yacht, tennis, photographic dark room, billiards, and in-door skating rink, free of charge until August. Chef de cuisine. Moderate tariff.

SOUTHPORT.—PALACE HOTEL.—Summer Season. Charming Seaside Family Resort. Extensive grounds. Electric light. Tennis. Golf links. Splendid baths.

ILFRACOMBE.—ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.—Unrivalled sea frontage and open surroundings. Eight lawn-tennis courts. Large swimming bath. New lounge hall. 250 rooms.—Tariff of MANAGER.

Treloar's Carpet Circular

POST FREE.

TRELOAR'S CARPET CIRCULAR, entitled "With What Shall We Cover the Floor?" giving prices, particulars, and coloured drawings of all the best and cheapest floor coverings, such as Persian, Indian, Turkish, Axminster, Wilton, and other costly Carpets, Cheviot, Shetland, Paisley, and other Seamless Carpets, Linoleum Floorcloth, Cork Carpet, Coconut-fibre Mats and Matting, Felts, Druggets, &c., sent post free on application.

CARPETS.—Brussels Carpets are being advertised as best at 3s. and 3s. 6d. per yard. We desire to inform the public that the term best Brussels, as generally used, conveys no meaning or guarantee as to quality. A manufacturer has already called the attention of the public to this fact, and all the well-known manufacturers agree with him, that Brussels carpets made exclusively of home-grown wools, specially selected for durability, and warranted to be entirely free from mixture of cotton or jute, and full five frames, are very much better than those made of inferior foreign wools. We shall be glad to show our stock of Brussels carpets, at prices from 2s. 11d. to 5s. per yard. A good tapestry carpet at 2s. 6d. is better than a bad Brussels carpet.

BRUSSELS CARPETS, 2s. 11d. per yard.

INDIAN CARPETS, 9 ft. by 6 ft., 27s. 6d. each.

KURD (PERSIAN) CARPETS, 9 ft. by 4 ft. 6, 21s. each.

KURD RUGS, 5s. 9d. each.

JAPANESE RUGS and CARPETS in all sizes.

TRELOAR & SONS are Contractors to Her Majesty's Office of Works, the War Office, the Admiralty, the South Kensington Museum, the Royal Albert Hall, the South-Western Railway, and many other public companies. They import or manufacture every description of FLOOR COVERING, from the old-fashioned made of rushes to the finest Axminster and Turkey carpets, and have obtained prize medals at every international exhibition since 1851. Treloar & Sons supplied the floor covering at the Exhibitions of 1851, 1862, in London, of 1855, 1867, 1878, and 1889 in Paris, and 1865 in Dublin. They keep in stock a well-assorted selection of all foreign floor coverings, Turkey carpets and rugs of native design and dye, Persian and Indian rugs, &c. All the Floorcloth, Linoleum, &c., offered by them is thoroughly well seasoned, and will therefore wear well. A catalogue, with full particulars, will be forwarded free upon application.

CHEVIOT CARPETS.

Ft.	in.		Ft.	in.		£	s.	d.	Ft.	in.		Ft.	in.		£	s.	d.
8	0	by	7	0	...	0	18	6	12	0	by	10	6	...	2	2	0
9	0	by	7	0	...	1	1	0	12	9	by	9	9	...	2	2	0
9	0	by	7	6	...	1	2	6	12	9	by	11	3	...	2	8	0
9	3	by	8	3	...	1	5	6	12	0	by	12	0	...	2	8	0
10	0	by	7	6	...	1	5	0	13	3	by	11	3	...	2	10	0
10	3	by	8	3	...	1	8	0	13	6	by	10	6	...	2	7	0
10	0	by	9	0	...	1	10	0	13	6	by	12	0	...	2	14	0
10	9	by	9	9	...	1	16	0	14	3	by	11	3	...	2	14	0
11	0	by	9	0	...	1	13	0	15	0	by	10	6	...	2	12	6
11	3	by	8	3	...	1	14	6	15	6	by	10	6	...	2	14	0
11	9	by	9	9	...	1	18	0	15	0	by	12	0	...	3	0	0
12	0	by	9	0	...	1	16	0	16	0	by	12	0	...	3	10	0

THE QUEEN says, in speaking of these carpets:—"The writer of this note has had a year's experience of them, and finding them wear well and look well, has every reason to be satisfied."—Queen, March 3, 1884.

CHEVIOT CARPETS cannot be obtained from any other firm. They are protected by trade mark (the Cheviot).

SHETLAND CARPETS.

Ft.	in.		Ft.	in.		£	s.	d.	Ft.	in.		Ft.	in.		£	s.	d.
9	0	by	7	6	...	1	15	9	13	0	by	9	0	...	3	2	6
9	0	by	9	0	...	2	2	9	12	0	by	10	6	...	3	6	6
10	0	by	9	0	...	2	7	6	12	0	by	12	0	...	3	16	0
11	0	by	9	0	...	2	12	9	13	6	by	12	0	...	4	5	6
12	0	by	9	0	...	2	17	0	15	0	by	12	0	...	4	15	0

TRELOAR & SONS,

LUDGATE HILL.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.
Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

HILDITCH'S

GREAT REDUCTIONS. Summer
PATTERNS FORWARDED. Silk Sale.

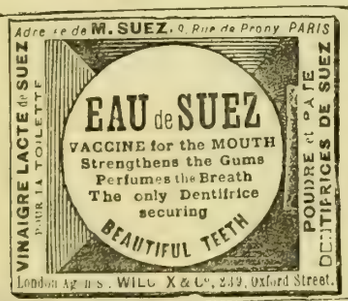
11 & 12, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.



TAYLOR'S CIMOLITE

Is the only thoroughly harmless SKIN POWDER. Prepared by an experienced Chemist, and constantly prescribed by the most eminent Skin Doctors. Post free. Sent for 14 or 36 penny stamps. MOST INVALUABLE.

J. TAYLOR, Chemist, 13, Baker-street, London, W.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN,

and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

Pearsall's Washing Linens,

(British Made).

For Dresses, Blouses and Costumes. In Butcher Blues, Pink, Pale Green, &c., all of which will Wash. Sold by leading West-End Drapers. 'Pearsall's' on every yard.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.

PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE

For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1.1s.

INVALID COMFORTS

Walking Machine for the lame
Adjustable Couches and Beds, £2.
Exercising Chairs £5. 5s.
Reclining Boards £1.1s. Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d. Easy Chairs £2. 10s. Commode Chairs £2. 10s.

Carrying Chairs, £1.
Bed Tables 7s. 6d.
Crutches 10s. 6d.
Folding Couch Chairs 10s. Bed Rests 10s.

BATH CHAIRS

From £1. 5s.

SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS

£2. 2s.

Invalid Carriages
Perambulators
Rubber Tyres
From £1. 10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.
Telgrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

MAPPIN & WEBB'S PATENT TABLE KNIVES.

SAMPLES & PRICES FREE.

"UNEQUALLED FOR HARD WEAR."

Only London Addresses,
2, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C.
(Facing the Mansion House)
158, OXFORD STREET, W.

MANUFACTORY—NORFOLK STREET. SHEFFIELD.

FARADAYS'
FITTINGS

Electric Light Works

3 BERNERS ST. W

Protection from Chill in every Climate!

JAEGER

TRADE MARK.

PURE WOOL CLOTHING

TESTED FOR PURITY,

NON-SHRINKING, AND STRENGTH.

(THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST.)

The "JAEGER" Goods are tested for purity in the Company's laboratory, and guaranteed by this Trade Mark, without which none are genuine.

"Dr. Jaeger's HEALTH CULTURE," 188 pp., and Illustrated Jaeger Catalogue free. LONDON DEPOTS.—3 and 4, Princes-street, Cavendish-square, W., with Tailoring; 30, Piccadilly (next to St. James's Hall); 30, Sloane-street (Knightsbridge end; 456, Strand (close to Trafalgar-square); 85 and 86, Cheapside (close to King-street); 158, Fenchurch-street (close to Lime-street); 42 and 43, Fore-street (close to Moorgate-street Station), with Tailoring.

PUREST IN ENGLAND.

BOURNE

SODA, SELTZER, LITHIA, POTASH, LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, ETC.

Supplied in 6 Dozen Cases Carriage Paid by

TABLE WATERS

Analysis, &c., on Application.

R. M. MILLS & CO., BOURNE, LINCOLNSHIRE.

West-End Agent, D. WHEATLEY, 16A, North Audley-st., W. City Agents, ALEX. D. RAE & CO. (late Hardy & Co.), Chemists, 23, Fenchurch-street, and 6, Railway-place, E.C.;
And of all CHEMISTS, WINE MERCHANTS, &c.

Tea WITH FLAVOR

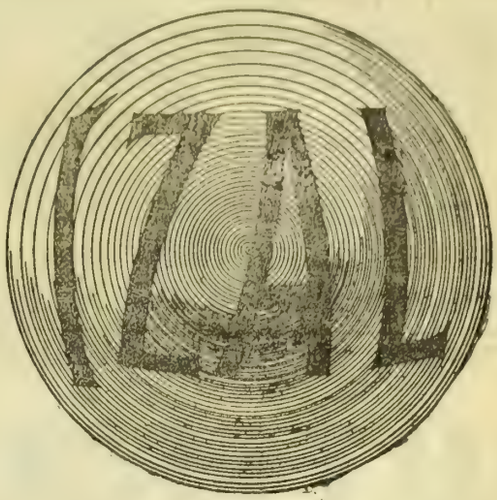
POST FREE
On Receipt of Remittance.

PURE & FRAGRANT

Blended Tea ... 1/4, 1/8, 2/- per lb.
Indian Tea ... 1/6, 1/10 per lb.
Ceylon Tea ... 1/6, 1/10 per lb.

DICKINS BROS. Tea Blending Warehouses, BEDFORD.

(Quantities of 3 or 6 lb. packed in Drums.)



THE

New Non-Poisonous Disinfectant

AND

PREVENTIVE of INFECTION.

Hitherto the great difficulty with Disinfectant agents which have been strong enough to render practical service in coping with infection has been that they have almost always proved terrible sources of danger in themselves; the Disinfectant strong enough to kill the disease being apt to kill the patient as well, and the Disinfectant harmless to the patient has proved useless as a resistant to the spread of the disease.

In IZAL an ideal Disinfectant has at last been found, complying with the most exacting condition of Sanitary Scientists, a veritable boon at such a crisis as the present. Its Disinfecting properties are enormous, and as a destroyer of disease germs IZAL possesses antiseptic power greater than pure Carbolic Acid.

IZAL prevents infection in cases of CHOLERA, SMALL-POX, DIPHTHERIA, INFLUENZA, SCARLET, TYPHUS, and TYPHOID FEVERS, and practically covers the whole field of infectious diseases.

IZAL can be used for local as well as internal application. For wounds of all kinds. In the Surgical Ward. The Operating Theatre. The Lying-in Room. For every-day use in the household. For systematic employment on a large scale in times of epidemic. IZAL is at once the most effective and safest Disinfectant.

All that is claimed for IZAL—its extraordinary antiseptic potency, and its absolute harmlessness—has received the fullest confirmation from the highest scientific authorities of the day.

"IZAL diluted in the strength of only 1 in 200 completely" "destroyed, in five minutes, the vitality of the germs of" "Cholera, Diphtheria, Typhoid Fever, Pneumonia, An-" "thrax, and Glanders. In the same degree of dilution it" "also destroyed, in five minutes, the microbes which" "cause putrefaction and the formation of abscesses." "Similar experiments with Carbolic Acid showed that" "under the same conditions that agent had no disinfect-" "ing power whatsoever. In a still weaker dilution (1 in" "300) IZAL killed the germs of Scarlet Fever and Erysi-" "pelas. Its disinfecting properties were also tested with" "satisfactory results on morbid materials derived from" "various infectious disorders—diphtheritic membrane," "the discharge from the bowels of patients suffering" "from Typhoid Fever, matter from festering sores, the" "discharge of glanders, &c.—with entire success.
"Careful experiments were also made to determine" "whether IZAL had any hurtful effects on the economy" "at large, with the result that it is entirely free from" "detrimental effects of any kind whatsoever."

IZAL can be used for all Disinfecting purposes the same as with the old-fashioned Disinfectants, and can be obtained from Chemists and others, in bottles, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., or sample bottle sent, Carriage Free, in the United Kingdom, for Postal Order.

Sole Proprietors and Manufacturers:—

NEWTON, CHAMBERS, & CO., LIMITED,
THORNCLIFFE, SHEFFIELD.

London Offices—19, Great George-street, S.W., and Thorncliffe House, 331, Gray's Inn-road, W.C.

Reports on IZAL by the Highest Medical and Sanitary Experts, with papers giving Uses and Appliances sent Post Free.

BENGER'S Food.

For Infants, Children, and Invalids.

"Humanly speaking, 'Benger's Food' entirely saved baby's life. He could digest nothing until we began the 'Benger.' He is now rosy and fattening rapidly."—Extract from Private Letter.

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED
INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION.

TINS, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s., OF ALL CHEMISTS, &c.

The ONLY Antiseptic Saline.

SALT REGAL

FOR ALL

Bilious and Nervous Disorders,

SUCH AS

Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion,
Disordered Liver.

At all Chemists throughout the world, in bottles, 1/6 and 2/9.

Office: 49, ISLINGTON, LIVERPOOL.

ANNA RUPPERT'S

COMPLETE Establishment for Natural Beauty includes MOST ARTISTIC MANICURING, 4s. 6d. SKILFUL CHIROPODY. Full line of Toilet Articles and Manicure Cases complete. New American LONG WAISTED CORSET, 12s. 6d. None better sold. RUPPERT'S DYSPEPSIA CURE and LIVER REGULATOR. Best article ever sold, Vegetable, 4s. 6d.; and the only RELIABLE SKIN TONIC on the market. Does not bleach or whitewash, tones, cleanses, and invigorates. Don't forget, there is only one CELEBRATED LECTURESS, one ANNA RUPPERT, who has given her life to this branch. Send 4d. for her new and Illustrated Book of Beauty—valuable hints. SKIN TONIC, perfectly harmless. Price, 10s. 6d.; three bottles, 25s. Sent all over the world. All matters sacred. Correspondence cheerfully solicited. No charge for advice, either in person or by letter. Don't forget THE ONLY

MRS. ANNA RUPPERT,

Celebrated American Lecturess and Complexion Specialist, in person at

89, Regent Street, London, W.

Branches where all goods are sold and advice freely given :—124, Western-road, BRIGHTON; 3a, Shandwick-place, EDINBURGH; 74, Grafton-street, DUBLIN; 1, King-street, MANCHESTER; Clarence Chambers, Corporation-street, BIRMINGHAM; 66, Marland-pl., SOUTHAMPTON; 17, Rue de la Paix, PARIS; BERLIN, VIENNA, MADRID, BARCELONA, CALCUTTA, SYDNEY, &c.

SIX GOLD MEDALS

Non-Mercurial.

Goddard's Plate Powder

THE BEST and SAFEST article for CLEANING SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE. Sold in Boxes, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Oilmen, Chemists, &c., everywhere.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors,

70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES OVERCOME

and perfect hearing restored. Permanent, inexpensive and painless. Book of particulars, 2 stamps. The H. A. WALES Co., 62 & 63, NEW [illegible] STREET, LONDON, W.

TOO FAT. Dr. GORDON'S

Elegant Pills cure STOUTNESS rapidly and certainly. State height, weight, and send 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., or 11s. to DR. GORDON, 24, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week: acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.

Botanic Medicine Co., 3, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?

PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement and biliousness, it has been pronounced by medical men of high authority as most efficacious.

"I use the Aërated Pitkeathly largely, and value it."—Dr. MATTHEWS DUNCAN.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE

"CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE is entirely "free from any poison "or metallic impregnation, does not contain any injurious "ingredient, and is a "good, safe, and useful "medicine."

ALFRED SWAINE TAYLOR M.D., F.R.S., Lecturer on Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology.

Warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities from WHATEVER cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the blood and bones. Thousands of testimonials. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent for 33 or 132 Stamps, by the Proprietors—THE LINCOLN AND MIDLAND COUNTIES DRUG CO., LINCOLN

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

ANÆMIA

Or Bloodlessness.

DEEKS' ANÆMIA PILLS.

Blood Producing. Tonic. Non Constipating.

IN BOTTLES OF ALL CHEMISTS. Half course, 4s. 6d.; whole course, 9s.; or send postal order to W. THOS. DEEKS, Chemist, Shanklin, Isle of Wight.

The List will close on or before Wednesday, 5th July, at 4 p.m.

ISSUE of £500,000 FOUR per CENT. DEBENTURE BONDS.

Principal and interest unconditionally guaranteed by the Government of Western Australia.

THE MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY of WESTERN AUSTRALIA, Limited, offer the above Debentures for SUBSCRIPTION at £95 per cent., payable at the banking house of Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., Lombard-street, E.C., as follows:—

£5 per cent. on application.
20 per cent. on allotment.
30 per cent. on 1st August.
40 per cent. on 1st September.

£95

Subscribers may pay up in full on or after allotment under discount at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum.

The first coupon of £2 will be payable on the 1st January, 1894.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company was formed for the purpose of constructing, under a concession from the Government of Western Australia, a railway commencing at the southern terminus of the Geraldton and Greenough Railway and connecting at Guildford with the Government line to Perth and the port of Fremantle. The line will also form a connection with the Eastern and Great Southern Railways to Albany.

It is about 280 miles in length, of which 85 at the northern end and 69 miles at the southern end (making 154 miles in all) are completed and equipped. These completed portions are being worked by the contractor, and according to his statement, dated October last, show a profit. Of the remaining 126 miles, the earthworks of 40 to 50 miles are in a forward state, and the object of this issue is to complete and equip the whole line within 15 months.

The principal and interest of the Bonds have the unconditional guarantee of the Government of Western Australia. The Government, with the sanction of the holders of the existing Debentures of the Company, receives as a security for the guarantee a first and paramount charge upon the railway and its equipment, and upon 2,400,000 acres of land to be selected by the Government out of a total of about 3,360,000 acres, to which, under the concession, the Company will become entitled on the completion of the works.

Apart from the security of the completed railway and its revenue, powers have been taken under the agreement of guarantee for the gradual sale of the subsidy land to cover any liability which the Government may incur. The land includes some of the best agricultural property in the Colony (see statement and map enclosed with the prospectus).

The proceeds of the issue will be received by the Government, and by them applied, so far as may be necessary, in payment to the contractor for the completion of the line at an approved schedule of rates. The arrangements which the Company, by means of this issue, are enabled to conclude will not only provide the amount which, in the opinion of the Government Engineer, is sufficient for this purpose, but will also be applicable for the discharge of certain liabilities of the Company, the payment of which has been required by the Government.

The balance of the land receivable by the Company will, after satisfying their obligations to the vendor, contractor, and others, be available for the purpose of providing a fund to meet the fixed charges of the Company until the railway is opened and is in a position to earn a sufficient sum to meet them.

The issue of these Bonds at the present time has been rendered necessary in order that the works, which have been suspended, may be completed in accordance with the terms of the concession and the guarantee agreement mentioned below. The revenue of the Colony has been steadily progressive, and the low price at which these Bonds are offered has only been assented to by the Government of the Colony in order to assist the Company.

The guarantee agreement provides that in the event of default by the Company in payment of a certain portion of the moneys guaranteed, the Government is entitled to enter upon and appropriate the railway and mortgaged lands. The Government are thus amply covered for their obligation, and are in a position to specially protect the present issue.

The Bonds are redeemable at par in, or previous to, 1928, by means of annual drawings at the rate of £20,000 per annum, commencing in 1904. The Company is also entitled to redeem the whole issue at any time, at par, on three calendar months' notice, and to accelerate the drawings.

The Bonds of £100 each, countersigned by the Agent-General of the Colony, will be to bearer with option of registration, and will be issued with interest coupons attached, payable in London, at the banking house of Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., Lombard-street, E.C., on 1st January and 1st July in each year. Scrip certificates will in the first instance be issued, exchangeable for Definitive Bonds, after payment of the last instalment.

Copies (1) of an Agreement dated 29th June, 1893, between Sir Malcolm Fraser, K.C.M.G., Agent-General (acting on behalf of the Government of Western Australia and of the Colonial Treasurer of the Colony), and the Right Honble. Lord Sudeley and Major-General Sir William Crossman, K.C.M.G., of the other part, constituting the guarantee in favour of the holders of the Bonds of this issue; (2) of an Agreement dated 29th June, 1893, made between Sir Malcolm Fraser, K.C.M.G., acting in the same capacity, and other necessary parties, relating to the security to be given to the Government; (3) of the Midland Railway Loan Act, 1893, sanctioning the guarantee; and (4) of the Bond, may be seen at the offices of the Company's Solicitors.

Prospectuses, with forms of application, may be obtained at the Company's Offices, or at the Bankers, or of the Brokers, Messrs. E. Nivison & Co., Warnford-court, E.C.

London, 30th June, 1893.

The following shows the Share Capital created, the existing Debentures, and the Officers of the Company:—

Capital £1,240,000
In 200,000 Ordinary Shares of £6 each, and 40,000 Founders' Shares of £1 each.
Debentures.—£1,000,000 Six per Cent. Debentures.

DIRECTORS.

JOSIAH TIMMIS SMITH, Chairman.

Maj.-Gen. Sir William Crossman, R.E., K.C.M.G.
Bonamy Dobree (Messrs. S. Dobree & Sons, E.C.).
Alexander Hubbard, Deputy Chairman, Great Western Railway Co.
Abraham Scott, 149, Leadenhall-street, E.C.
W. Mendel (Messrs. André, Mendel, & Co., E.C.).
Arthur B. Smith, Rhine Hill, Stratford-on-Avon.

MANAGING DIRECTOR.—Herbert W. Bond, Perth, Western Australia.

DIRECTORS APPOINTED ON BEHALF OF THE EXISTING DEBENTURE HOLDERS.

W. J. Alt, Chairman, Brazil Great Southern Railway Company, Limited.
A. L. Noel, Director, Securities Insurance Company, Limited.

BANKERS.—Glyn, Mills, Currie, & Co., Lombard-street, E.C.
SOLICITORS.—Paine, Son, & Pollock, 14, St. Helen's-place, E.C.
AUDITORS.—Deloitte, Dever, Griffiths, & Co., 4, Lothbury, E.C.
CONSULTING ENGINEERS.—Hawkshaw & Hayter, 33, Great George-street, Westminster.
SECRETARY.—A. J. Barber.
OFFICES.—27, Winchester-house, E.C.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, £1,000,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited,
No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.
General Accidents. | Personal Injuries.
Railway Accidents. | Death by Accident.
C. HARDING, Manager.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £16,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES.

LONDON OFFICE: 81, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

ASSETS OVER .. .. £21,800,000.
SURPLUS EXCEEDS .. .. £6,400,000.

This Society originated the Tontine System of Life Assurance, under which the premiums paid form a lucrative investment, and not an expense, affording provision for old age as well as immediate family provision in the event of death.

ABSOLUTE SECURITY. LOW PREMIUMS. LARGE PROFITS.

Before assuring elsewhere, send for Prospectus and Illustrative Pamphlets.

A. MUNKITTRICK, Manager for Great Britain and Ireland.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.
(FIRE).

LONDON, EDINBURGH, and GLASGOW ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited.

AUTHORISED CAPITAL..... £500,000.

CHIEF OFFICE:—Insurance Buildings, Farringdon-street, E.C.

PROGRESS.	Premium Income.	Increase in Three Years.
1882	£7,929
1885	47,971	£40,042
1888	121,502	73,531
1891	248,970	127,468

Claims Paid exceed Half a Million Sterling.
APPLICATIONS FOR AGENCIES ARE INVITED.

CONSOLIDATION OF THE OHIO AND MISSISSIPPI RAILWAY COMPANY AND THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO SOUTH WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

To the Holders of the First Mortgage Consolidated Seven per cent. Currency Bonds, the six per cent. Sterling Consolidated Bonds, the Second Mortgage Consolidated Seven per cent. Currency Bonds, and the First Mortgage Seven per cent. Springfield Division Currency Bonds of the Ohio and Mississippi Railway Company.

The London Joint Committee of the Ohio and Mississippi Railway Company have to request the holders of the above Bonds to deposit their Bonds with Messrs. Brown, Shipley, & Co., Founders'-court, Lothbury, London, who will grant their certificates in exchange. On completion of the Consolidation, these certificates will be exchangeable for the new Four-and-a-half per cent. hundred year first Consolidated Mortgage Gold Bonds, the interest and principal of which will be guaranteed unconditionally by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

Holders of the First Mortgage Consolidated Seven per cent. Currency Bonds, and Six per cent. Sterling Consolidated Bonds, due in 1898, will receive for each $100 of principal of their Bonds $110 of the new Four-and-a-half per cent. Bonds.

Holders of the Second Mortgage Consolidated Seven per cent. Currency Bonds, maturing in 1911, will receive for each $100 of principal of their Bonds $120 in the new Four-and-a-half per cent. Bonds.

Holders of the First Mortgage Seven per cent. Springfield Division Currency Bonds, maturing in 1905, will receive for each $100 of principal of their Bonds $115 in the new Four-and-a-half per cent. Bonds.

The right to deposit will expire on the 21st July, 1893. Circulars to the Bondholders can be obtained of Messrs. Brown, Shipley, & Co., or of the Secretary.

By order of the Joint Committee,
T. LINDLEY, Secretary.

Offices of the English Association of American Bond and Share Holders, Limited, 5, Great Winchester-street, London, E.C.
June 29th, 1893.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.
No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
[ESTABLISHED 1867.]

ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,
From £30 to £5,000,
To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their
NOTE OF HAND ALONE.

ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.

Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.

NO SURETIES REQUIRED.

Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
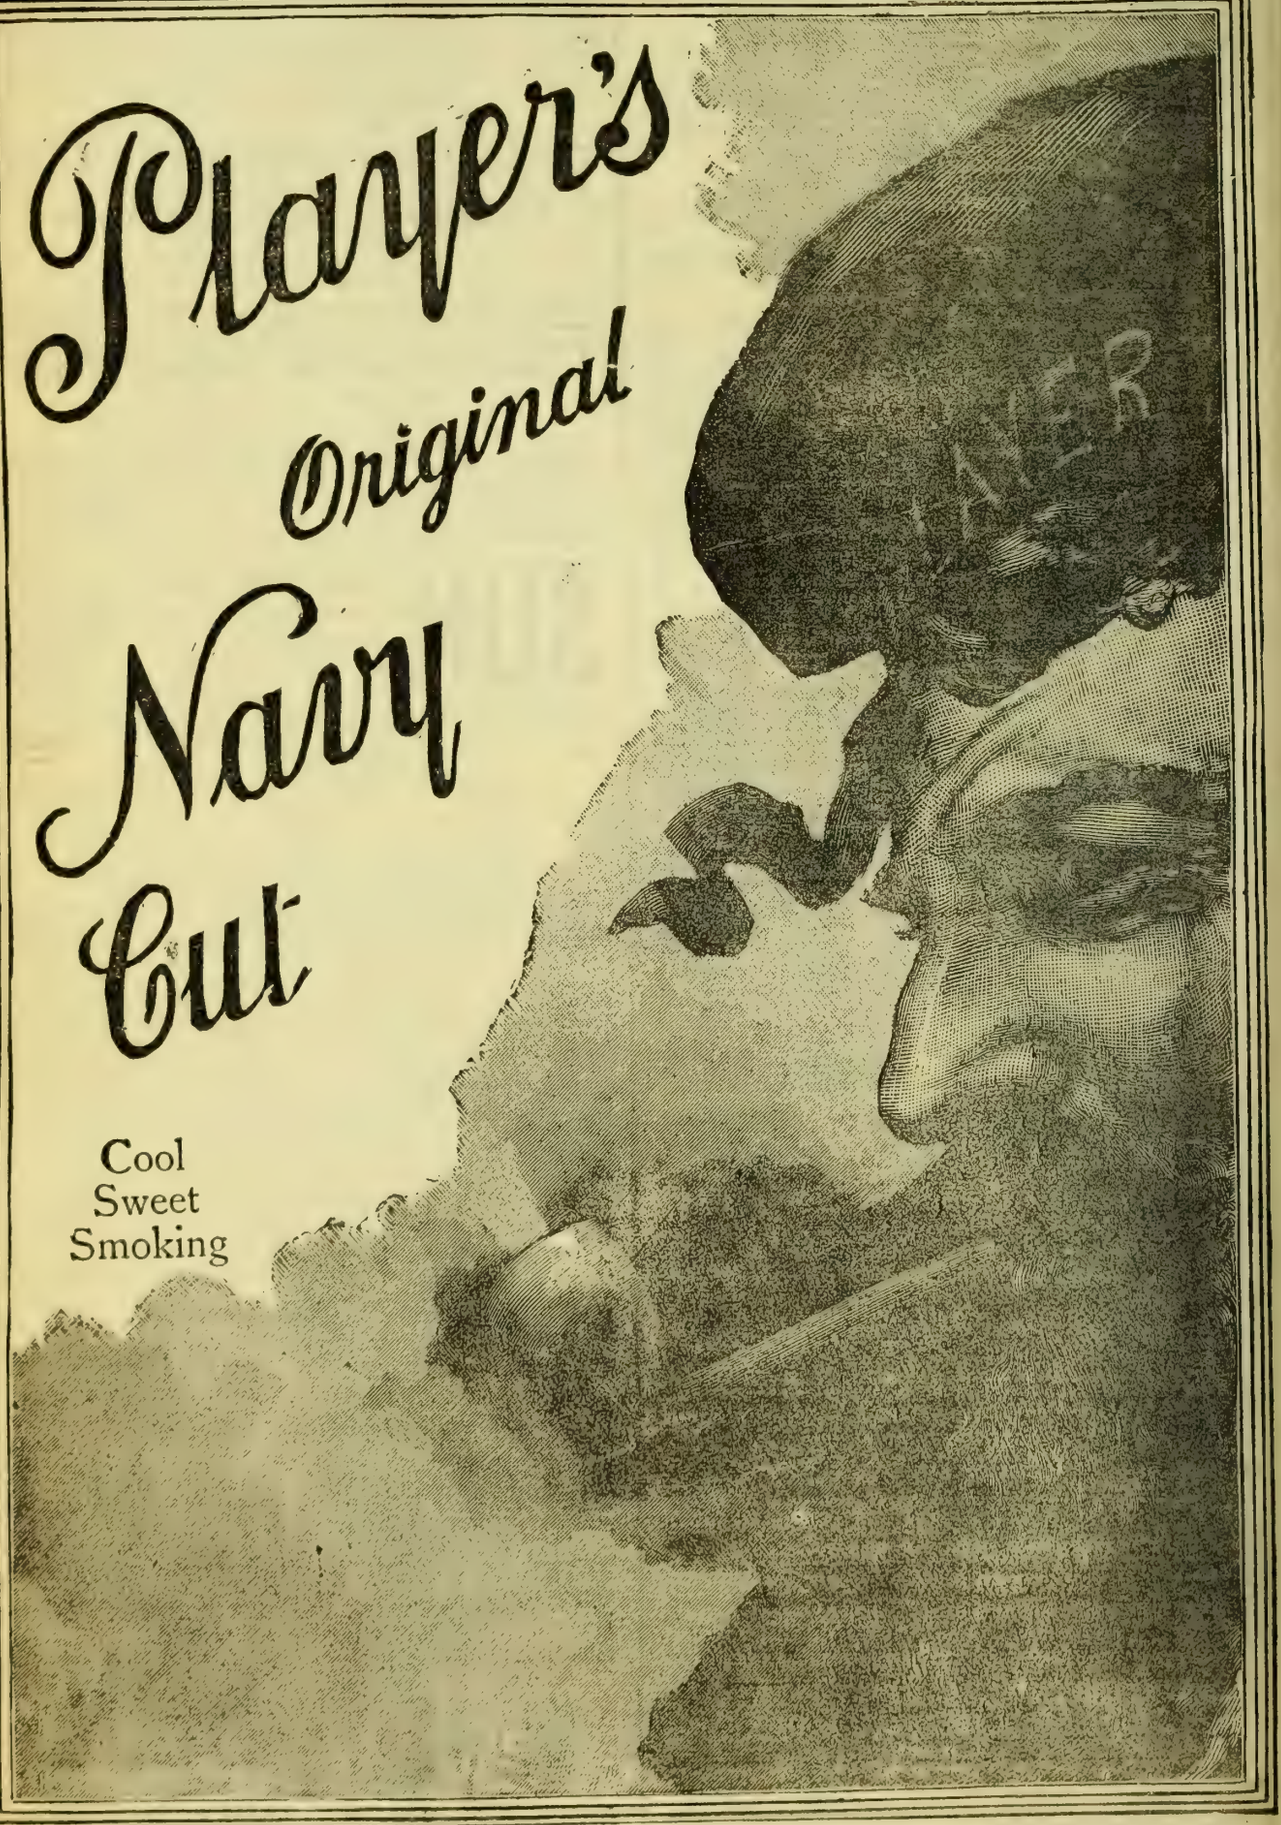
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

MESSRS. H. HALFORD & CO., Stock and Share Brokers, 2, Royal Exchange Avenue, London, E.C. Daily CLOSING Price List and marked report on application. Speculative accounts opened on terms to be ascertained. Special business in "Options" at CLOSE MARKET PRICES No "DISTANCES."

Player's Original Navy Cut



Cool
Sweet
Smoking

Sold only in 1-ounce Packets, and 2, 4, 8-ounce and 1-lb. Tins, which keep the Tobacco in fine Smoking condition.

Ask at all Tobacco Sellers, Stores, &c., and Take no other.

SMOKERS ARE CAUTIONED AGAINST IMITATIONS.

The GENUINE bears the Trade Mark, "NOTTINGHAM CASTLE," on every Packet and Tin.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT CIGARETTES, in Packets containing 12, and Tins of 24. 50, and 100.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 749.—ANAGRAM ON THE NAMES "PRINCE GEORGE OF WALES" AND "PRINCESS MAY OF TECK."

YOKO (real name and address will be given next week) £2 2 0

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 751.

It has been suggested that the well-known line in one of Milton's Sonnets, "They also 'serve' who only stand and wait" may be taken to imply that the author of "Paradise Lost" must have had a prophetic knowledge of the four-handed game of Lawn Tennis, as it is at present played. Be this as it may, it is thought it will be interesting to see whether an even greater poet than Milton possessed an anticipatory knowledge of the game in question. The usual Prize of Two Guineas is therefore offered for

THE QUOTATION FROM SHAKESPEARE'S WORKS WHICH SEEMS TO SUGGEST MOST CLEARLY THAT THE BARD OF AVON MUST HAVE HAD AN ANTICIPATORY ACQUAINTANCE WITH THE GAME OF LAWN TENNIS.

The quotations must be brief ones, in no case exceeding four lines in length; and a reference to the play or poem from which they are taken must be appended. All answers must reach me by the morning of Monday, July 17, at the latest.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 750.

The Prize for the best Rhymed Alphabet on Life on a House-boat will be divided between GOGGLES and STARLING. I have also selected for commendation the Alphabets sent by Stanchion, Feloos, Lancastrian, M. Webb, Ellart, Albericus, Bee, and Almaviva.

THE PRIZE ALPHABETS.

A is our Awning, so ample and high,
B is the Blue of the midsummer sky;
C is our Chef—Cecil's man, he's a jem,
D is the Dive at 6.30 a.m.;
E's the Euterpe, our smart little craft,
F's for the Flowers that bloom fore and aft;
G's for the Girls, old Thames's fair daughters,
H stands for Henley, our home on the waters;
I is for Idleness, ease sans alloy,
J is for June and its riverside Joy;
K is sweet Kate, she can scull when she tries,
L is the Laughter that lurks in her eyes;
M must be Maud, our trim little cox,
N's for the Noodles who foul at the locks;
O is the Oars, with their rythmical swish,
P for the Punts, where the patient ones fish;
Q is the Quiet of backwater nooks,
R is the Rest with the latest of books;
S is the Stream with flotillas alive,
T is our Tea, always welcome at five;
U's the Umbrella, Japanese, stuck abaft,
V's Vixen, our doggie, who barks at all craft.
W's the Waterside, busy and glad,
X is the Xylophone, Hal's latest fad;
Y is for Youth, with its fleeting delight,
Z is the Zenith, star-sprinkled—Good-night!

GOGGLES.

A was the Awning, cool screen from the heat,
B was the Boat, and a bad one to beat;
C was the Cook, a most masterly hand,
D stands for Drinks which were much in demand;
E the Expletives that forcibly crowned
F the hard Fate which had run us aground;
G the Guitar that we thrummed in the twilight,
H for the Hornets which swarmed down the skylight;
I was the Ice which was left on the bank,
J was the Joke—a low, practical prank;
K was the Kitchen, a "fit" described "tight,"
L was the Lock which we went through by night;
M was the Moon, that suggested romance,
N was the Numbskull who wasted the chance;
O stands for Oxford, the goal of our dream,
P for the Punt, which would swing in mid-stream;
Q was the Query—"But, what if it rains?"
R the Regattas from Henley to Staines;
S was the Swim 'ere the ladies turned out;
T was the Time, which was open to doubt;
U the Upset, unaccountably strange;
V was the Victim, who hadn't "a change;"
W was the Weather, "Set Fair," we record,
X the Xenodochy practised on board;
Y for the Yarns of our holiday past,
Z for the Zest we enjoyed to the last.

STARLING.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand: whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name and the address of "ALMAVIVA" are Joseph Harry Fry, Esq., Harvey Villa, Church-road, Willesden, N.W.

IVY LEAVES AND COMTESSE OLGA.—Your explanations clear up quite satisfactorily what on the face of it seemed a somewhat mysterious coincidence.

BOLO.—The fact is that the number entering for the competitions in question was not sufficiently large to justify their continuance. A plan is under consideration, however, by which readers of TRUTH in the Colonies and abroad will, it is hoped, be able to take part again in the Puzzle Competition in this paper.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 751.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

AMUSING INCIDENTS CONNECTED WITH THE GAME OF CRICKET.

1. During a match played between Bluebell Hill Rovers and Chatham United, the umpire of the former team, on being appealed to for "l.b.w.," said, "I don't know—I wasn't looking. Play on." 2. On another occasion, while looking on at a match, one of the umpires, on being appealed to for a catch at the wicket, asked, "How many runs has the bat-man made?" on learning he had not scored, the umpire, much to the surprise and amusement of everybody, shouted, "Not out." 3. The following fact happened during a match played between the Lower Bell Rangers and Luton. The umpire of the former team was appealed to for a catch at the wicket by the wicket-keeper of the Lutonites (who, of course, were "fielding"). Gaining no reply, the wicket-keeper asked the umpire why he hesitated in giving his decision. "Well," replied the umpire, "it's like this, I'd forgotten which side was batting, so I had to consider my verdict." He, then, much to the disgust of the Lutonites, shouted, "Not out." —Dorothea.

On a piece of waste ground in one of the populous suburbs of London, some u chins had rigged up an old tea-tray for a wicket, and were doing their best to play cricket with a splintered bat and an india-rubber ball. "You're out, Bill," called out the bowler, "I hit yer wicket." "No, I'm not," replied the batsman, "yer bowled a wide, and if it hadn't a hit a stone it wouldn't a gone nigh the wicket." "But that s out all the same." "No 'tisn't, a man can't be expected to look out for balls that come from Australey."—Stanchion.

Overheard in Grand Stand at Lord's during M.C.C. and Ground v. Australians. Small boy: "Oh, I say papa, I suppose if the captain of the side gets out the match is all over!'—C. F. Reid.

A good tale is going the round with reference to the well-known cricketer and secretary of the Gloucestershire County Cricket Club—Dr. E. M. Grace. It is a matter of common knowledge that Dr. E. M. is Coroner for one part of the county, and recently, after playing in a first-class match in Bristol, he left to perform some duties appertaining to that office. As he was crossing an open space he saw a number of boys playing cricket, and, with his usual good nature, the Doctor told the youths that their wickets were not pitched properly. The Coroner's dismay can well be imagined when a pert youngster rejoined, "Look here, guv'nor, thee go on away. What dost thee know about cricket?"—Idler.

It was at a professional match in Yorkshire that an old North-countryman and his wife had "jest coom t'see t'geem." At a critical period, when play was being watched with breathless interest, the old man was heard to say: "Wal, Mariar, sich a sight o' leezy cheps in white breeks spreed aboot t' kitch t' baall, and ne'er a mon as ken dew it! That 'ere chep wi' t' timber, whoy doan't 'un chook 'is stick an' gie' t' others a chence. I guess as 'ow oor Jarge 'ud mak' em set oop a bit at gittin roond" Old woman: "Ould yer tongue, dew, d'ye think ye're coom t' see roonders? This be a creekit match." Old man (after a moment's thought): "Wal, I reck'n 's 'ow that 'ere creekit's more 'n a match for 'em, anyhow, it's a wonnerful strong 'un, Mariar!" —Georgina.

Some years ago I was bowling in a local (afternoon) cricket match, a left-handed batsman being at my end, and appealed to the umpire for a catch at the wicket. The umpire, being a practical man, gave his decision. "Out! Over! Left!" and it was with some little difficulty that the batsman was prevailed upon to retire, he evidently considering that the umpire had said he was "out," over the left.—Estrella

The scene was a village green in a remote part of Devonshire, and a match was being played, Village versus Farmers. "Don't 'ee go yet-a-while, Jim," said one of the bystanders. "Wait and see Farmer Windeat have his innings." "What for?" asked Jim, "he can't play a bit." "Us knows it," said the first speaker, "but Bill White's a-bowling, and he swears he'll pay out Farmer Windeat for pounding they two strayed pigs of his." "How can he pay 'un out?" "He says he don't care how many runs the farmers may make, but he means to bowl for Farmer Windeat's legs, and he'll cripple 'un if it takes 'un all day to do it."—Almaviva.

A short time ago, during a match at a well-known cricket ground, an artist connected with one of the illustrated papers made his appearance, with a view of sketching a celebrated fast bowler. Having completed his sketch, one of the team remarked, by way of a joke, "Why, you haven't got his pipe in his mouth." "Oh," said the arsist, with the utmost simplicity, "does he always bowl with a pipe in his mouth?" And on being answered in the affirmative, the pipe was at once added, and out came the sketch the following week with the crack player in the attitude of bowling with a pipe in his mouth.—Claremont.

The practice of giving colours at the University is sometimes rather overdone, and is apt to lead to misapprehensions. They were playing a cricket match, and the scene was not Town Malling. One of the visiting eleven was wearing the far-famed cap of light cerulean hue, and on his admitting that he had recently left Cambridge University there was no small trepidation when he went in to bat. The first ball he played into short slip's hands, who obligingly dropped it. Then there was a short interval, during which the other ten explained to the defaulter exactly how they would have caught it themselves. They made other remarks, too. They were fine, free, manly, outspoken Englishmen, and they didn't mince matters. The second ball was placed gently into point's hands, with the same result, and more recrimination followed. The third ball disturbed the stumps, and the former abuse was nothing to the lavish praise that was bestowed on the bowler. That village eleven are now a little ashamed of their excitement over the incident, and evade questions on the subject. They were not to blame, for it was only by the merest accident that they afterwards discovered that the gentleman they had dismissed for a duck had got his blue for chess. —Veracity.

Two country bumpkins were watching a cricket match, and were much puzzled by the umpires in their white coats, whose connection with the game they were unable to understand. Presently one said, "Oi sai, Bill! d'ye see them there coves in the white coats? Oi'm durned if they've stopped a bloomin' ball the 'ole bloomin' innen's!"—T. O. R.

I was bowling one day (August 11, 1879) for Somerset v. Gloucestershire, at Clifton, and with a straight ball struck Dr. E. M. Grace, who was batting, on the pads. The appeal for l.b.w. was given in my favour. "What!" exclaimed the doctor, with real or feigned surprise, "did you say I was out, umpire?" "Hout, sir," replied that official, one of the best umpires in England. Then turning to me, he added, sotto voce, with grave impressiveness, "and I never seen a houter."—Arundo.

A clergyman of the name of Bishop was batting one day in a local cricket match. On the bowler sending him a very wide ball, he called out, "Keep the ball in the parish, sir." The very next ball took his middle stump, whereon the bowler remarked, "I think that's about the diocese, my Lord!"—Malignant.

Ten years ago I was paying a visit at a country house in which were staying a lively party of young people of both sexes. After luncheon a game of cricket was extemporised, and took place in a field in which a favourite donkey was feeding. One of the players, a prim parson, carefully divested himself of his long coat and stiff clerical collar and reverentially placed them on the grass, a short distance off. During the course of the game my attention was called by a young lady, who was convulsed with laughter, to the movements of the donkey, which was quietly sniffing at the garments, and then proceeded leisurely to chump up the parson's collar before all the company. The mingled look of horror and amusement of the ecclesiastic, combined with the universal merriment of the young people, made the tableau as truly comic as it was unique.—W. E. K.

At a country match against a school which I witnessed many years ago in this country, one of the umpires was found missing when the second innings commenced. After a few minutes' delay a young gentleman, a scion of a well-known county family in the neighbourhood, was put on to fill the vacant place, and promptly "no-balled" the first delivery of the school bowler. As the bowler in question was of the medium underhand class, this occasioned some surprise, but the feeling was intensified a moment later when, with his eye warily fixed upon the position of the bowler's toe, another loud "no-ball" was shouted by the watchful umpire. The puzzled bowler looked at the crease and the umpire for a moment in bewilderment, and then, resolving to be safe next time, he delivered the third ball some two or three yards behind the crease. In vain. He was ruthlessly "no-balled" once more. Then loud cries for explanation burst from players and spectators. Thus appealed to, the umpire promptly pointed out with the most splendid air of confidence that the bowler "does not toe the line, at all at all." Mr. Umpire was thereupon relieved, amid shouts of laughter.—Mona.

The subjoined sequel to a very droll incident at cricket is both amusing and true. At a village in the Eastern Counties a ladies' cricket match, "Married v. Single," was arranged, and among the latter team an attractive young widow lady was included. However, before the game came off, a young spinster—said to be a rival of the widow in a love affair—objected to her playing with the "Singles" on the ground that she was a "Mrs.," not a "Miss!" After the Committee had duly considered this novel objection, the widow lady's name was struck off the list, and she did not play in either eleven. The sequel now comes. Last winter the young widow was led to the altar a second time by a certain gentleman referred to above, and, upon hearing the news, the lady "captain" of the married team is said to have remarked: "Well, although Mrs. —— did not play in our game, she has now bowled a maiden over, at all events."—Clarissima.

An old friend of mine, a late clergyman in Devonshire, and one of the best amateur cricketers of his day, related to me the two following stories connected with the game:—"When I was at Oxford," he said, "I was having a conversation with the professional coach, who used to bowl to me for practice, in the course of which something was said about heaven. I asked him what sort of a place he would like heaven to be. After thinking for a minute, he replied, 'Well, Mr. B., I think I should like to be bowling all day long to undergrads, with a half-crown on each stump for bails'—his meaning, of course, being obvious even to those who are unacquainted with the custom." In the second anecdote he says, "I was bowling in an amateur 'scratch' eleven at Tiverton, when a funny idea occurred to me, as a joke, which I carried out as follows:—I started to bowl at a considerable distance from the wicket, running at a very rapid pace; instead of delivering the ball at the bowling-crease, I ran swiftly down the whole length of the pitch, and knocked off the bails within a yard of the wicket. The umpire was so thunderstruck and taken off his guard at such a remarkable procedure, that he quite forgot to call the customary 'No ball' before the bails were off."—Hippo.

1. Mr. John Smith, an inhabitant of a certain country village which shall be nameless, is an enthusiastic cricketer, and often officiates as umpire at the local matches. One Sunday evening last summer an amusing incident occurred at the parish church. The Vicar was preaching, and, not being an eloquent man, and the weather being rather warm, two-thirds of the congregation, including Mr. John Smith, were fast asleep. This annoyed the Vicar, who made several attempts to rouse the guilty ones. "How is it," said he in a loud voice, and gazing sternly at the unconscious John, "that you cannot give me your attention even for one short hour—how is it, I ask?" "Not out, sir!" roared our friend, and sank back once more into a mental contemplation of the previous day's match. He has never slept in church since. 2. Scotch umpire at a village match to batsmen, who are disputing as to which was run out: "I'll no have any airgument about it. I'll ge ye both out, and then I canna make any mistake."—Mars.

At a cricket match in a country village a footman in the service of the Squire was one of the umpires. The Squire, a man well on in life, was, out of courtesy, chosen to play. On the fall of the eighth wicket he pompously walked in, and took "guard" from his footman. The first ball hit his leg, and an appeal was made for "leg before." "Out," shouted the footman. "William," said the Squire reproachfully, "I don't give awny half-sovereigns for nothing!"—Jic.

During a local match in Suffolk the umpire was appealed to as to stumping; he replied, "I dunno, I warn't a looking that time, but if he do it again I shall gie him out." (True.)—Suo Marte.

Some years ago, when I could bowl a bit, I was playing in a rustic match at North Currey, in "vamous Zummersetshire." After the fall of a wicket, the new-comer asked, as is usual, for guard. "Middle!" exclaimed the umpire, a jovial farmer, who knew more about cattle and crops than cricket. As the so-called "middle" was at least half a foot outside the leg stump, I ventured to suggest mildly that a little to the off would perhaps be an improvement. The umpire's odd reply was, "'Tis near 'nuff for he, zur; he won't bide more'n one ball."—Arundo.

A certain cricketer lately, just before his innings, being conscious of his inability to conduct his performance creditably to his club, owing to his temporary infirmity causing him to see things in a treble light, was, however, persuaded by a comrade to go in and take his luck, and be sure to strike at the middle ball, and all would be well. The first ball unfortunately got him out. When his friend upbraided him for not following his instructions, he explained, "It would have been all right only I hit the middle ball with the outside bat."—Rho.

 Hope also sends the above anecdote.

At the local matches on the Forest at Nottingham, a policeman or two is usually "told off" to prevent the spectators from encroaching too far over the boundaries while a game is in progress. At a match a few Saturday afternoons ago, a young and bumptious member of "the force," who evidently could not have long lived in Nottingham, was very energetic in carrying out these instructions. Having persuaded, at the start of the innings, the onlookers to keep far enough from the field of play, he shouted peremptorily to the umpire—who happened to be a man who usually affects the garb of a rustic—to "Cum furrer back, mester, won't 'ou?" As the umpire disregarded, of course, the lusty appeal of "the man in blue," the latter made no more words, but hastened up to square leg, and seizing the man—who was none other than the père of a member of the Notts County Eleven—unexpectedly from behind, lifted him "neck and crop," and deposited him boldly on the fringe of the crowd, accompanied with the remark, "I've told you, hoffen enuf, to shift." The laughter at the unfortunate umpire, and the jeers and taunts hurled at "Bobby," rendered that spot a "tormenting groond,' and his office by no means a sinecure for the remainder of the afternoon, and would, it is to be hoped, teach him at least the most elementary rudiment of cricket.—Leumas.

Village cricket match. Best batter run out. Shouts of "Ows that Emperor?" (umpire). Umpire: "Not out," adding, in an undertone, "If it wain't been 'im would have been different, but I wasen't agoing to give 'em the match."—Moey.

Anecdotes have also been received from Kingstead, E. C. L., Jael, Eblana, Victor, Newnham, C. R., East Anglia

TO CONNOISSEURS.

ST. EMILION - - - - CLARET - - - - 18/- per dozen.
MEDOC - - - - - - CLARET - - - - 15/6 per dozen.
ST. GEORGE'S - - - CLARET - - - - 13/- per dozen.
Price List of other CHATEAU CLARETS, from 21/- to 74/- per dozen, posted on application. LE MONNIER & CO., JERSEY.
CARRIAGE AND DUTY PAID.

Piccadilly SMOKING MIXTURE

Is the CHOICEST SMOKING TOBACCO that experience can produce or money can buy. It is a combination of Perique, Havana and North Carolina Tobaccos most carefully selected and blended.

Manufactured by the American Tobacco Company.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL

CONTRIBUTIONS are EARNESTLY SOLICITED towards meeting the EXPENSES of this unendowed Hospital, and will be gratefully received by the Bankers, Messrs. Drummond, or by the Secretary.

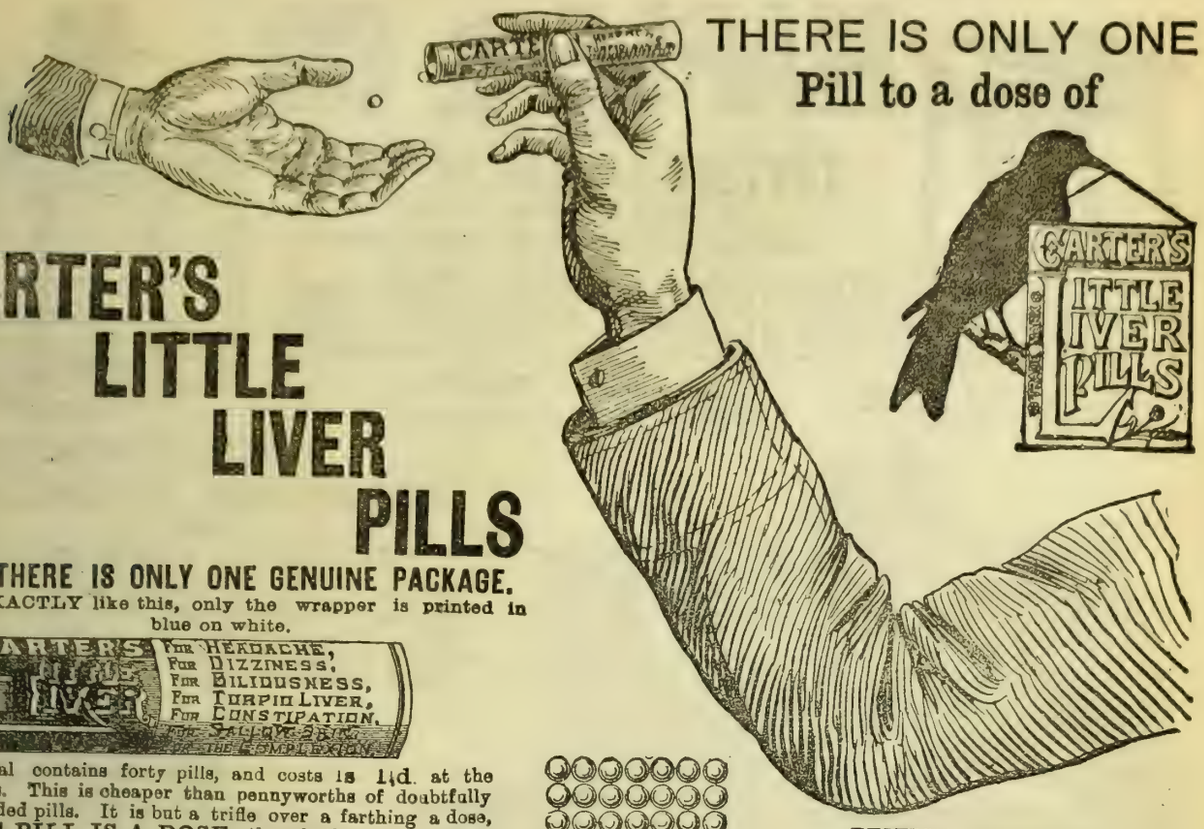
G. TANSLEY & CO.,
BALL AND CONCERT FURNISHERS,
16, WIGMORE STREET, CAVENDISH SQ., W.
AND
91, GLOUCESTER ROAD, QUEEN'S GATE, S.W
SUPPLY ON HIRE
For BALL CONCERTS, GARDEN PARTIES, &c.
TABLES, SEATS, CHINA, PLATE, GLASS, &c.
BALL ROOMS LIGHTED BY ELECTRICITY OR CANDLES.
TEMPORARY ROOMS ERECTED WITH PATENT CEILING AND SPECIAL POLISHED FLOOR.
DOORWAY AWNINGS. STALLS FOR BAZAARS.
ENTERTAINMENTS AND MUSICIANS PROVIDED.
PRICE LISTS SENT FREE ON APPLICATION.

AN AROMATIC FRAGRANCE

is imparted to the mouth by the use of Sozodont. It is beyond doubt the cleanest, purest, and best tooth wash ever offered to the public. No lady ever used Sozodont without approving of its cleansing and purifying properties, and the flattering testimonials that have been bestowed upon it by eminent Dentists speak volumes of praise for its merits.

SOZODONT

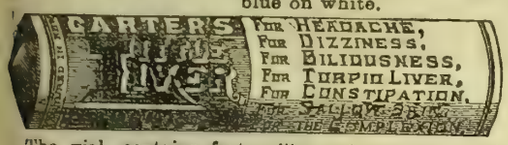
though efficient and powerful is absolutely harmless, for it contains neither mineral nor acid; it is wholly vegetable in its origin.



THERE IS ONLY ONE
Pill to a dose of

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

AND THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE PACKAGE.
It is EXACTLY like this, only the wrapper is printed in blue on white.



The vial contains forty pills, and costs 1s 1½d. at the Chemist's. This is cheaper than pennyworths of doubtfully compounded pills. It is but a trifle over a farthing a dose, for ONE PILL IS A DOSE, though they are so small that FORTY-NINE of them only measure one inch square.

Cure TORPID LIVER WITHOUT FAIL. SICK HEADACHE, MALAISE, DISTRESS FROM EATING, and SALLOW COMPLEXION promptly done away with.

BRITISH DEPOT FOR
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS,
46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C.

HOT MINERAL BATHS OF BATH.

Daily yield 507,600 gallons F. at 120.
FOUNDED BY THE ROMANS IN THE 1ST CENTURY.
ΑΡΙΣΤΟΝ ΜΕΝ ΥΔΩΡ.

BATHERS DURING 1890—97,299.

These Baths are unrivalled in Europe for luxury and extent, and contain all that modern improvements can provide for the comfort and relief of the invalid or the enjoyment of those in health.

Reclining, Deep, and Swimming Baths. Thermal Vapour Baths, for Painful conditions of Joints, &c. Douche, Inhalation, Aspiration, Pulverisation, &c., and Ear, Eye, Throat, &c. The Aix les Bains Massage System and Doucheurs and Doucheuses.

The Medical profession sends patients who suffer from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Dyspepsia, Eczema, and other skin affections.

Letters to the General Manager will receive every attention

THE FINEST & CHEAPEST CYCLES | WRITE TO-DAY FOR OUR 200 PAGE ILLUSTRATED LIST

Post Free, containing 5,000 Testimonials and particulars of over 1,000 New and Second-hand Pneumatic, Cushion, and Solid Tyre Safeties and Tricycles.
Prices from £4 to £30. Easy terms from 10s. per Month.
MACHINES SENT CARRIAGE PAID. Cycles bought, sold, and exchanged.
BRITISH CYCLE MANUFACTURING COMPANY.
Liverpool: 45, Everton-road. London: 42, High-street, Camden Town, N.W.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON

Very agreeable to take.
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,
HÆMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.
Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.
E. GRILLON,
69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.

KODAK FILMS.

FREE DARK ROOMS
AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The World's Fair Authorities, after seeing the superior work done on our new film, decided to sell no roll film and no cut sheet film on the grounds other than ours.

We have purchased the exclusive concession for a dark room at the fair, and are erecting a building as headquarters for Kodakers. The use of the dark room will be free for changing films and plates.

Competent attendants will be in charge, to set right anybody that may have trouble in operating the Kodak, and will make slight repairs that may be necessary without charge.

If anybody comes to the fair with a Kodak that will not work properly, we will replace it with one that is in good order.

EASTMAN PHOTOGRAPHIC MATERIALS Co., Ltd., LONDON.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,
Rochester, NEW YORK.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

WORLD'S FAIR route to Chicago.
JAPAN and CHINA.—Fastest, finest, and only twin-screw Royal Mail Steamers on Pacific Ocean leave Vancouver every three weeks.
AROUND the WORLD Trips for £125.
SUMMER TOURS through Canadian Lakes and "Rockies."
FREE FARMS and Cash Bonus for Settlers.

For Tickets and Free Guide Books, apply Passenger Department, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, KING WILLIAM STREET, LONDON, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

U. OF ILL. LIB.

The CHANTRY TABLE, in antique carved oak, with under-tray; top measures 18 by 18 in., 27 in. high, £1 8 6

MAPLE & CO

LIMITED

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD

LONDON W

THE LARGEST AND MOST CONVENIENT

Furnishing Establishment

IN THE WORLD

ESTABLISHED FIFTY YEARS.

The WENLOCK TABLE, in antique carved oak; top 20 by 20 in., 24 in. high, £1 4 6

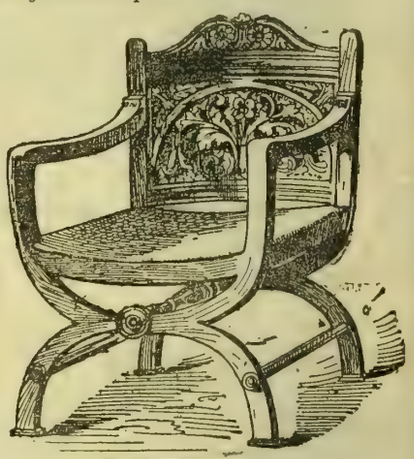
The MALMESBURY SIDEBOARD, in antique carved oak, fitted with cupboards and drawers and cupboard enclosed by glass panelled door above; 5 ft. long, £8 8 0

SEVEN NEW SHOWROOMS

FOR

ANTIQUE FURNITURE

MAPLE & CO. are now exhibiting in the New Show-rooms a remarkably fine Collection of Antique Carved Oak Furniture, including numerous reproductions of fine old specimens collected from ancient Baronial Halls, Castles, Mansions, Priories, &c., all of which are marked at purely commercial prices.



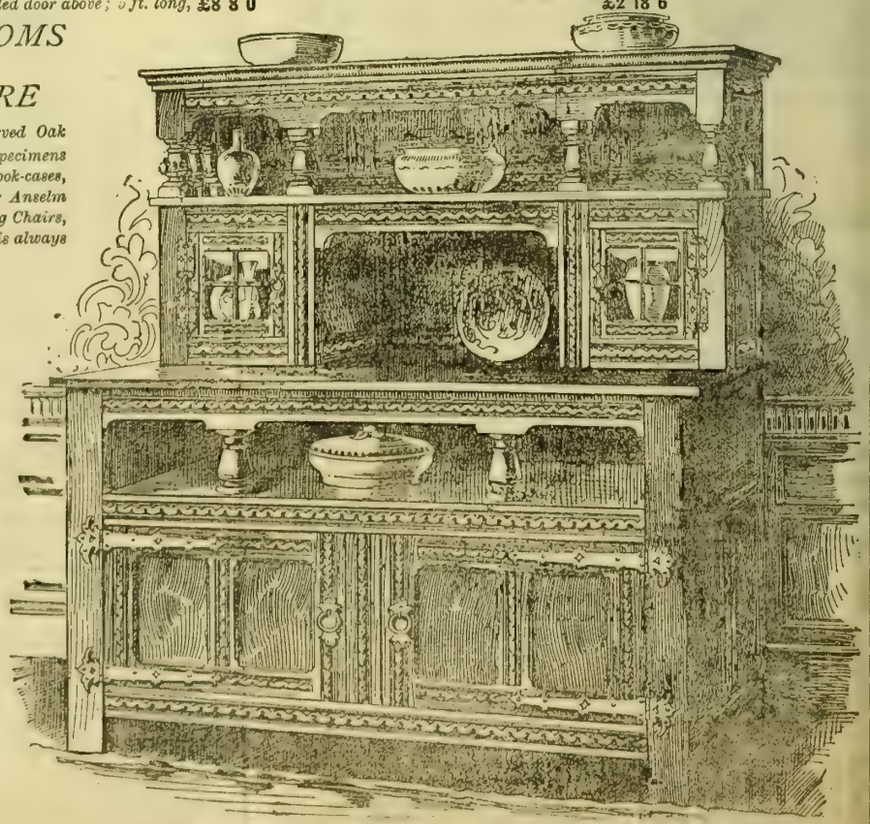
The QUATFORD ELBOW CHAIR, in finely carved antique oak; seat 17½ in. high, £2 18 6

SEVEN NEW SHOWROOMS

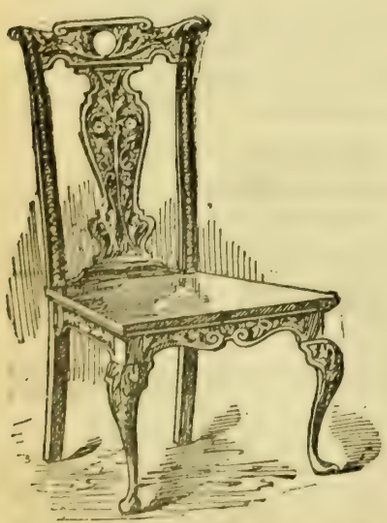
FOR

ANTIQUE FURNITURE

MAPLE & CO.'S selection of Antique Carved Oak Furniture comprises unique and interesting specimens of Buffets, Dinner Wagons, Chimney Pieces, Book-cases, Writing Tables, Flap Tables, Cists, Coffers, Friar Anselm Benches, Corner Cupboards, Flower Stands, Spinning Chairs, &c. A handsome piece of Carved Oak Furniture is always an acceptable present.



The CUMNOR SIDEBOARD, in antique carved oak with cupboards and recess below; upper part fitted with cupboards enclosed by glass panelled doors and recesses; 5 ft 3 in. long £15 15 0



The YATTON CHAIR, in antique carved oak; seat 17½ in. high, £1 13 6

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER "Truth" Buildings Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici.—Cicero."

No. 863. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, July 13, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

An Index to the Thirty-third Volume of Truth will be forwarded, post-free, to any address on application to the Publishing Office, 10, Bolt-court, Fleet-street, E.C. The half-yearly Volume can be obtained at the same address, price 25s.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE arrangements at St. James's Palace on Thursday were hardly satisfactory in many respects, but any failure was really not the fault of the Court officials, who had been required to achieve impossibilities. Lord Carrington had spared neither time nor trouble in preparing for the ceremony, and every one was singing his praises. The company all arrived at the same time, and, what with the people going to the Chapel, others to the State Apartments, and others to the stands which had been erected within the precincts of the Palace, there was a scene of chaotic din and hurlyburly.

The internal decorations of the Chapel were far from effective, and the seats for the guests were merely wooden boards, covered with cloth, and mostly without backs. The heat was quite overpowering. The effect of the processions, too, was entirely spoilt by their being too crowded. The Princess of Wales walked with her father, and the Queen of Denmark was with the Czarewitch. The Duchess of Edinburgh quite blazed with jewels. The most splendid and stately figure was the Duchess of Teck, and of the men Prince Louis of Battenberg and the Duke of Edinburgh looked the best. The bride and bridegroom both seemed to be overcome with nervousness. There had been a grand bother about the order of the procession of the Royal family.

There was one dreadful blunder at the wedding. When the Queen's procession arrived at Ambassador's Court there was nobody there to receive her Majesty, and she had to sit waiting in her carriage until the officials rushed out, headed by Lord Carrington, who was in no way to blame for the hitch, as the Queen arrived shortly before the appointed time.

The clergy had a cruel time to wait at the altar, and why they should have been sent in so early it was difficult to understand. The Archbishop's manner of conducting the service was somewhat theatrical, and in parts rather absurd. He does not compare well with Archbishop Tait on such occasions. The music was good enough, but there was too much of it, and it made the service too long, and the Archbishop's final address (a novelty at Royal weddings) might as well have been omitted. The papers have been thrown into paroxysms of hysterical enthusiasm about "the intensely moving scene" at the end, when the newly-married couple embraced their relatives; but the fact is that all this kissing is a part of the ceremonial prescribed by etiquette at all Royal weddings, both at home and abroad.

Directly after the service the Royalties went back to Buckingham Palace, and were followed as fast as possible by all the people who had been in the Chapel. The first business was to sign the registry of the marriage, which was to be done in the bow drawing-room at Buckingham Palace, where the Royalties awaited the arrival of the Cabinet Ministers and "the dignitaries of the Church." The imaginative accounts in the papers of this transaction are a farrago of nonsense. The Duchess of York is described as signing first, and then the Duke, whereas the first signature was that of the Primate, who in the report is stated to have signed seventeenth.

If the crowd in the streets were hot, they will be comforted by the knowledge that the distinguished guests at the wedding were even hotter. After the ceremony they were all introduced into a corridor, where they stewed for about an hour and a half, until luncheon was served. The Royalties had a sitting-down lunch in one room, the other guests had a stand-up lunch in another. I hear that the Ambassadors were indignant at not being invited to the "sit-down" lunch, but as both Mr. Gladstone and Lord Salisbury were only allowed to partake of the "stand-up," I hardly see how these eminent foreigners can complain.

The difficulties in the way of the Lord Chamberlain were enormous, owing to limitation in space, and the rules of etiquette. The manager of a theatre has usually much trouble to reconcile the rival jealousies of his actors and actresses. His task, however, is nothing in comparison with the rival jealousies of Royalties, of Ambassadors, and of "distinguished guests." These people ascribe an importance to questions of etiquette which, to less exalted beings, are of the most absolute indifference. The ribbons and the metal discs with which they decorate their persons have for them a real value; the embroidery on their coats, and the various uniforms that they don are serious matters; and whom they precede out of a room is a question of life and death.

With the exception of Lord Carrington (who did very well indeed) the official actors in the ceremonial appeared to be very imperfect in their parts, and it is a wonder that no accident took place. It was odd, indeed, to see a number of aristocratic personages walking backwards with the appearance of being saturated with the most slavish servility, but even more grotesque and remarkable were the constant and profound bowings and scrapings of all the courtiers. Lord Palmerston once remarked to Lord Dalling (who repeated the saying to Charles Lever) that, "What a happy arrangement it is that in an age when our flunkeys aspire to be gentlemen there are gentlemen who ask nothing better than to be flunkeys," and he never said a better thing.

The profuse floral decorations at Buckingham Palace, in the halls, ball-room, and dining-room, and on the staircases, were most beautiful, and excited very great admiration. The Royal luncheon was served on eight round tables, which were charmingly decorated with orange trees (with bloom and fruit) and exotics. The superb sideboard in the dining-room was covered with gold plate, including the Indian trophies, and the splendid flagons and shields which were taken from the Spanish Armada.

There were three separate sets of guests: (1) Those invited to the chapel and to the breakfast; (2) those invited "to view the processions in the State Rooms, St. James's Palace, and to breakfast at Buckingham Palace," of whom there were 125. There were then a third lot, who were merely invited "to the State Rooms, St. James's Palace," and who, after the processions had passed, returned to their respective homes. There were about 110 of this last contingent, and among them were Lord and Lady de Grey, Lord and Lady Brooke, Mr. Alfred Rothschild, Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Rothschild, Mr. Christopher Sykes, Sir Henry Calcraft, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vyner, and several members of the Sassoon family.

The Duke and Duchess of York are to return to town early next week from Sandringham, and they will proceed to Cowes about the 25th. About the middle of August they are going to Denmark for a few weeks, and they will be conveyed to Copenhagen in the Royal yacht Osborne.

Jeames last week had a thoroughly "good time" of it. He expanded, he gushed, he grovelled. When the Royal marriage procession passed through the streets there was very little cheering. This, probably, was owing to the spectators being wedged together, and being so hot that they had to keep their lungs for breathing purposes. This, however, was not as Jeames would have had it, so he described the cheering as "tremendous." Of all the wondrous gush which has occupied column on column in my contemporaries, this particular "crammer," however, specially struck my fancy. It would seem that the Royalties came out on the balcony of Buckingham Palace. The Palace is separated from the Esplanade before it by a wide space. Now comes the gem: "The moment had come for leave-taking. The Royal party retired into the room, but not far in. They were still visible. Amid the silent sympathy of the crowd, and the tears of not a few ladies, the bride could be seen kissing her father and mother, the Queen, the Princess of Wales, her brothers, and, indeed, almost all, if not quite all, the Royal circle. It was a most touching spectacle." Very probably the bride did kiss her relatives; brides on going away usually do. But I defy any human being—even the eye-piercing Jeames, who, of course, sees through walls—to perceive what is going on in a room of Buckingham Palace, with a balcony before it, from the Esplanade. The ladies who wept with one eye must have had a telescope applied to the other, and even then they could not have seen what was going on.

Whilst awaiting the arrival of the wedding party at St. James's Palace, it is reported that Mr. Joseph Chamberlain was engaged in an animated conversation with the Silver Stick. An imaginative correspondent sends me an account of what that "animated conversation" may have been:—

Said the Silver Stick to Joseph,
"Pray excuse my marked surprise,
But, indeed, one hardly knows if
It is safe to trust one's eyes.
This some wanton freak of Fame's is,
If, in truth, 'tis you I see;
You! a guest here at St. James's?
No, no, no! it cannot be,
'Tis my powers of observation
That are playing me a trick;
You're a mere hallucination—
Are you not now?" said the Stick.

Answered, Joseph, "Courtly minion,
You're not fitted for your post;
Wholly wrong is your opinion,
I am certainly no ghost.
Side by side with Kings and Princes,
And the highest in the land,
As my presence here evinces,
I've been asked to take my stand:
Yes, the Brummagen dictator,
'Midst the country's very pick,
Shows it pays to be a traitor—"
"I believe you!" said the Stick.

"But," the Stick went on demurely,
"As a Radical, you must
View this courtly function, surely,
With disdain, if not disgust.
And my movements retrogressive
To a democrat like you,
Must seem folly most excessive,
That you're tempted to pooh-pooh!"

"Not at all; for let me tell you
I myself have learned the trick,
For six years I have walked backwards!"
Answered Joseph to the Stick.

For the Truth Hotel List, see pages 96, 97 in the present issue.
For Amusements, see page 95.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see pages 90, 106.

The last complaint to hand from the misguided "Fellows" of the Imperial Institute relates to the exhibition of the Royal Wedding presents. It appears that when Fellows and their friends arrived, in response to an official notice, to inspect the collection last week, they were kept waiting, to the number of 300 or 400, for upwards of an hour, while the Duke of Connaught and a small party of exalted individuals enjoyed a private inspection. The inference would seem to be that the Fellows of the Imperial Institute and their friends are not considered fit and proper persons to be admitted to the same corridor as a Royal Prince. Who is responsible for this view? The Duke of Connaught, or Sir Somers Vine and his colleagues?

Apropos to a recent remark of my correspondent, Madge, on the smallness of Kew Palace for the accommodation of a Court, one of my readers writes as follows:—

"The explanation may not be found in Fanny Burney's Diary, unless you are aware that the Royal Precinct at Kew consists of several distinct buildings. Of these I can only now name three: the Old Palace itself (the house of a London merchant in the reign of James I.); Cambridge Cottage, now belonging to the Duke of Cambridge; and Kew Cottage, lately inhabited by Sir Arthur Helps. Others there may have been of which I am not aware, but these three would suffice to accommodate the entourage of George III., who appears to have lived very quietly while at Kew.

Queen Caroline, wife of George II., lived at Richmond Lodge, a house more in the direction of the Old Deer Park and Monastery of Sheen, razed to the ground by command of George III., and converted into pasture-land—the present Old Deer Park.

I am indebted for these particulars principally to a most interesting work entitled "Richmond and its Inhabitants," by Richard Crisp, to which I may refer you for further information. The book is full of interesting anecdotes both as to Richmond and Kew.

The Prince of Wales, who is to arrive at Sandringham this evening from Newmarket, will entertain a large party to-morrow for his biennial sale of Southdown sheep and Shorthorn cattle, which have been bred on his Appleton, Babingley, and Wolferton farms. The Duke and Duchess of York are to be present at the sale, and the King of Denmark and Prince Waldemar are expected at Sandringham.

Prince and Princess Christian are to leave Windsor about the middle of next month for Germany, and they will remain abroad until the end of October. Princess Christian is going to Homburg, thence to Darmstadt, and later to Dessau. Prince Christian is going to visit his nephew, the Duke of Augustenburg, at Prinkenau, in Silesia.

Lord Bridport and Sir Edmund Commerell are to be in attendance on the Emperor William during his visit to Cowes, where he is expected to arrive on Sunday, the 30th.

The provisional programme of the German Emperor's visit to Cowes includes two State banquets, to be given by the Queen, in the new Indian Room at Osborne, and a dinner to be given in honour of his Majesty by the Prince of Wales on board the Victoria and Albert. The Emperor is to attend the house dinner of the Members of the R.Y.S. on August 1, and on another evening his Majesty will give a dinner-party on board his own yacht. The Emperor is expected to arrive at Cowes on the evening of the 30th, and he proposes to remain in the Solent for six days. He will sail his yacht, the Meteor, in the race for the Queen's Cup.

The Duke of Cambridge, who is to be among the guests of the Duke of Richmond at Goodwood during the race week, will proceed to Germany about August 1, and H.R.H. intends to take a course of waters at Kissingen. The Duke has renewed his tenancy of the celebrated Six Mile Bottom shootings, between Newmarket and Cambridge, which belong to Mr. P. Hall, the heir of the late General Hall, who enjoyed the reputation of being the "hardest" game preserver in England.

Last week Lord Houghton's tour of inspection in Ireland was, for the first time, favoured with fine weather. The gales subsided, and the sun shone. The Enchantress ceased to afford the most disenchanting experiences to her luckless voyagers, who were given the opportunity of seeing the picturesque South of Ireland in peace—so far as regarded weather. The presentation of addresses, and speechmaking in reply thereto, continued with unabated virulence. Why the Lord-Lieutenant, who once acted wisely and well in refusing an address, should not have adhered to that line of conduct, it is hard to know. Had he established a precedent of refusing addresses, he would surely have earned the gratitude of his successors in years to come. To appeal to a Lord-Lieutenant on the subject of Irish needs is unnecessary, considering the number of Irish Members of Parliament who are quite capable of bringing the grievances and wants of their constituents under official notice.

The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire have been entertaining large Saturday-to-Monday parties at Compton Place, Eastbourne, during the last month, and they will continue their hospitalities at that place until they go to Bolton Abbey, Yorkshire, for the shooting season.

Lord and Lady Leconfield will entertain a large party at Petworth House during Goodwood race week.

I am asked to say that Mrs. Lynedoch Moncrieff will give a Concert, consisting of her compositions, on Thursday, July 13, at four o'clock, at 8, Prince's-gate, the residence of Mrs. Singleton, in which Mr. De Lara, M. Wolff, Mrs. Moncrieff, Mr. Oudin, and others will take part.

Pfungst Frères' Extra Quality Champagnes.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. Pfungst & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

C.O.M. Whisky.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—Andrews & Co. C.O.M. Whisky. Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand

Mr. John Fielden, who died last week, was a son of the Mr. Fielden who was a very well-known Member of the House of Commons during the first fifteen years after the Reform Bill, when he sat for Oldham. He was the last surviving member of the great firm of Fielden Brothers, which was converted some years ago into a limited liability company. Most of the Fieldens were Liberals, but Mr. John Fielden was a Tory, and, though brought up as a Unitarian, he subsequently joined the Church of England, after a Unitarian Chapel had been built by himself and his brothers at Todmorden at a cost of £40,000. Mr. Fielden took an active part in county and local business, and his family were great benefactors to the town of Todmorden. He owned large estates in Lancashire and Yorkshire. In 1872 he bought Grimstone Park, near Tadcaster, from Lord Londesborough for £250,000, but Dobroyd Castle, his beautiful place near Todmorden, was his favourite residence.

Mr. F. O. Pascoe, who died a few days ago, had been known to a limited circle for nearly half a century as one of the most eminent zoologists of the age. He was an intimate friend of Owen and Darwin, and their enthusiastic and valued fellow worker. Mr. Pascoe possessed one of the finest private zoological museums in the world, and he was always ready to display and explain his treasures. He was a very careful and thorough worker, and his writings are admirably lucid and exact. Mr. Pascoe was a Cornishman, and he passed the early part of his life in Cornwall, and owned a considerable property in that county.

Great indignation has been excited at Chepstow by the enclosing of the summit of the Wyndcliff, in order that a toll of sixpence may be levied on all who desire to enjoy the magnificent view from this spot. An attempt of this kind was, I fancy, made some years ago, but was abandoned in deference to strong local protests, and the Duke of Beaufort is ill-advised in allowing the attempt to be repeated. It can hardly have originated with the Duke himself, for he is not a man who would voluntarily indulge in the baser and more selfish manifestations of landlordism.

A still more impudent landlord encroachment is an attempt of Mr. C. J. Leyland to close that part of the Cheviot under his jurisdiction. The following notice has been inserted in the local papers:—

NOTICE.

ANY ONE FOUND TRESPASSING on the Farms of LANGLEFORD, GOLDSCLEUGH, or DUNSDALE, after this Notice will be prosecuted. The Fishing on this Estate is strictly preserved. Parties wishing to go to Cheviot must apply for permission to the Tenants of the Farms, or to the Game-watcher at Langleford.

WM. FORSTER,
Agent to C. J. Leyland, Esq.

Burradon, June 1, 1893.

The "farms" here referred to are merely mountain-side sheep runs, and there is hardly an acre of cultivated land in the whole district. The Cheviot has been open common-land from time immemorial, and I would recommend the inhabitants of the district to keep it so by systematically disregarding all such notices as the above. No one can be "prosecuted" for "trespass," and it is surprising that landlords should persist in setting up this flimsy bogey to guard the sanctity of their property. A trespasser only becomes subject to the criminal law if he does wilful damage. To pretend that a man had damaged a heather-clad mountain by walking over it would be too thin, I imagine, even for a Bench of landlord justices.

I am asked to mention, for the information of the many friends of Mr. Vincent Calmady, of Tetcott, Holsworthy, Devon, that a presentation to him is being promoted, in recognition of his generosity and sportsmanship in hunting the Tetcott country at his sole expense for many years. The presentation is to take the form of a group in silver, the central figure of which will represent the Squire on his favourite horse.

The official announcement that the epidemic at Worthing was at an end appears to have been decidedly premature. I understand that one day last week there were fifteen fresh cases, and that among them was a relative of the Mayor. A resident in the place also makes statements respecting the present condition of the water, which can hardly be explained by the curious theory recently put forward to account for the contamination of the supply. I am reluctant to say a word which may tend to injure Worthing or any other holiday resort. But, apart from the public interest in the matter, which is the supreme one, it is a fatuous and fatal policy to attempt to hush up ugly facts of this character. Nothing could injure the place more than to let it fill with visitors while there is any danger of an epidemic on a large scale. The truth ought to be made known, and I would suggest to the Mayor that he should further enlighten the public.

Perhaps I should mention that I have received another letter which begins by stating that the correspondent whose allegations I gave a fortnight back was guilty of "absolute untruth," and ends by characterising his statements as "wicked and false." Whatever may or may not be the truth about Worthing sanitation, I have no doubt that this vicious abuse of parties who find fault with the drainage is uncalled for, and for this reason I do not publish the letter. Either of my correspondents may be right in his opinion, but when it is a question whether there is or is not a smell, the evidence of A, who says he smells it, is worth more than that of B, who says he does not.

I want to know why some person does not seek to make a living for himself and to benefit his fellow-creatures by providing householders with servants, and—to use an Americanism—running the entire establishment? There is a fortune in the idea, and I make a present of it to any person in want of one. He would engage all servants, be responsible for them, and change them if they did not suit. He would pay all bills, and order all provisions. His first step to carry out the plan would be to find cooks of various capacities, but all good in their way. Without the provisions costing more to the householder, he would make by his catering, for he would be doing it on a large scale. He might provide a plain cook for ordinary requirements, and send a first-rate cook for parade dinners. A householder would go to him, and, having exactly stated the number of servants that he required, would be told what the wages would be, and about what it would cost to feed them. He might explain how large his family is, and an approximative estimate would be given of the cost of catering for them. As it is, the difficulty in getting good servants is enormous. The cook almost invariably robs, is seldom even a tolerable artist, and is usually more or less drunk. The servants' agencies are mainly worthless, and it is a mere chance whether a servant obtained from one of them is good, bad, or indifferent. Middlemen are being squeezed out of most callings, but here is a profession in which such a person would be of advantage. We have gentlemen ready to arrange balls, and provide even guests. Why, then, does no one adopt my plan for a living? He would, of course, have to be respectable and intelligent, but it is difficult to suppose that all such persons have ceased to exist.

The water regatta at Richmond last Saturday evening was really a remarkably pretty sight; it outdid anything that I have ever seen of this description even at Venice. The river was alive with illuminated boats, whilst the banks and the bridge were one mass of light. The best view was from the garden of Buccleuch House, which was a few years ago purchased by Sir Whittaker Ellis, who gave a garden-party on the occasion. The reporter of the Richmond and Twickenham Times gives some observations of Sir Frederic Leighton, who was one of Sir Whittaker's guests:—

> Chatting about the scene before him, Sir Frederic described it as "a most beautiful and fairy-like spectacle." After again expressing the delight it gave him, he said he would hazard a criticism. "There is not a sufficient massing of the fireworks. Everybody has his own little bit of firework—a catherine wheel here and a rocket there. Then we have five or six fire-fountains in the water, as you saw just now—very pretty and effective, but if there had been fifty or sixty it would have been simply magical. I want to see it spring out in one mass. There might be a wall of fire along the water. The most beautiful fireworks I ever saw were at Cairo. What struck me most was half-a-mile of street made into a mass of fire and flame, a result produced simply with oil lamps. You have some very pretty things here, but they are somewhat isolated. You have an illumination all along there"—indicating the string of lanterns along the grounds of Cambridge House—"in festoons, and that is extremely pretty. If it were cut up into little bits it would not be nearly so pretty. If the whole bank for four or five hundred yards were throwing up those golden fountains that you saw just now, it would be a magnificent effect." Sir Frederic Leighton then went on to say how lovely the Terrace Gardens were looking just now, and then the announcement of supper put an end to the interview.

The most satisfactory feature in modern railway enterprise is the steady attempt to improve the accommodation provided for the third-class passenger. The Midland Railway have just set an excellent example in this direction by introducing third-class dining-cars on their express service to Scotland—a great boon to the "masses" of both kingdoms. In the same spirit the Great Eastern Company are putting a line of splendid steamers on their new Continental line between Harwich and the Hook of Holland. The Harwich route is, of course, patronised by all classes travelling to Holland and Northern Europe, but over and above this it is par excellence the democratic line to Germany and all the central parts of the Continent. As soon as the new steamers of the Great Eastern line are running, the Company will, doubtless, be rewarded by a further development of this traffic.

An esteemed correspondent has extracted for my benefit a number of literary eccentricities from the columns of the Spectator. These cause me no surprise, for I have always found that the journals which set up as literary purists and censors of the errors of others are themselves the most prone to solecism and affectation. As, however, I do not myself pose as a literary Pontiff, it would be out of place for me to teach my grandmother—the Spectator—her A B C.

The pretty rules and the finicking ideals of the literary stylist always seem to me precisely on a par with those of the tailor-made dandy. Language is only the clothes of thought, and the fashionable style of literary expression changes as incessantly as the cut of fashionable garments. One part of a University education is to teach a man the art of turning sentences in the mode for the moment fashionable. Another part is to teach him the particular cut of clothes which are for the moment "correct form." The young fop who has acquired the first of these fine arts looks down upon the uninitiated penman as contemptuously as does his brother, the tailor made fop, upon the "bounder," or whatever is the fashionable name for him, whose waistcoat is of last year's cut or whose hat brim takes an unorthodox curve. In process of time these young fops from the Universities are taken on to the staffs of journals like the Spectator and the Saturday Review. There they occupy themselves, like dandies at Club windows, in laughing at the literary clothes of the men in the street. Well, what does it matter? The man in the street has much more to laugh at.

An American favours me with a characteristic argument on the subject of sensational head-lines. He complains not of the head-lines, but of the matter under them. For instance, a Glasgow paper proclaims in capitals, "Narrow Escape of the German Emperor," but when you go on to read the paragraph you find that what had the narrow escape was, not the German Emperor, but the pole of his carriage, which would have come into collision with another vehicle, if the coachman had not pulled up in time. An American journalist, says my informant, when he finds it advisable to lie, does not lie in the heading and then give himself away in the paragraph. I commend this practical view to the notice of my contemporaries.

THE RUSSIAN CHINA TEA COMPANY, who are under the patronage of Royalty and a very large number of the nobility and medical authorities, supply their Choice Teas as imported into Russia direct from their Head London Offices, 21, Mincing-lane. Carriage paid to any address. Write for price lists and leading medical and press opinions.

I am disposed to agree with Dr. Abbott that no one can take the Mathematical Professorship at Auckland, New Zealand, "without some forfeiture of self-respect." Mr. Aldis, the distinguished mathematician, who was Senior Wrangler in 1861, accepted this Auckland Professorship ten or eleven years ago. He has worked hard there and with eminent success. Now, he writes:—

> Last Monday X. succeeded in getting a majority of the University Council to give me six months' notice of the termination of my engagement, on the ground that the amount of work I did could be perfectly well performed by plenty of men who could be got for a much lower salary.

This University Council can allege only the huckstering and squalidly despicable reason that they can perhaps get the work done cheaper, utterly regardless of the fact that a Professorship is invariably accepted on the understanding that the holder is to retain it so long as he can perform his duties. Otherwise, how could any distinguished man take such a post? Mr. Aldis writes:—"No charge of incompetence or neglect of duty has been made against me, nor have I ever been asked to meet the Council, whose debates were held with closed doors." This is all very discreditable to the Council, who may advertise in vain for any competent successor to Mr. Aldis; for, apart from their "cheap" policy, who would accept such a place, if it is to be held merely at the pleasure of a Council of jolter-headed Colonials? It will be remembered that after Mr. Aldis became Senior Wrangler he was the object of much sympathy because he could not hold a Fellowship on account of his being a Nonconformist, all such posts being then limited to members of the Church of England.

A country School Board recently advertised for a head-teacher, with a salary of £100 a year, rising to £115. No fewer than one hundred and fifty applications were received. This shows that the outcry about the dearth of elementary teachers is all nonsense. There are plenty of excellent candidates for posts which are suitably remunerated, but it is preposterous to offer head teachers such salaries as from £40 to £70 a year, and it is discreditable that such places should be advertised.

Here, for instance, are two advertisements from a paper of Saturday which completely bear out all that I have said respecting the hopeless position of the assistant-master in a small grammar-school. The services of educated men are expected for a remuneration which would be contemptuously rejected by many domestic servants:—

> Country Grammar School; of 40 boys and two A.M.'s. Vacancy for ASSISTANT-MASTER, to teach English Subjects, good Arithmetic, French, and Elem. Latin. D Certificate, and ability to teach Algebra, Euclid, and Music a recommendation. Applicants must be good disciplinarians, have some experience, and take an active interest in Games. Teaching: 9-10.45, 11-12.45, 2-3.30. Supervision, 6.15-8.30 on alternate days. Salary £15 res. July 31.
>
> Town Grammar School of 42 boys. Vacancy for ASSISTANT MASTER in September to teach Mathematics for Cambridge Junior. Graduate, and must take active interest in Games. Help in general form work, Chemistry, or Drawing a recommendation. Teaching hours, 5 per day, with two half-holidays. Half the Supervision. £35 res. (June 29).

The Bishop of Bangor, having closed the Episcopal Palace, has let the extensive gardens to a market-gardener, and the spacious stables to a coach proprietor. Bishop Lloyd finds himself unable to maintain such a large establishment, as his official stipend of £4,200 a year is reduced to £2,200 during the life of his predecessor, Bishop Campbell, who takes £2,000 a year as a retiring pension, on which he enjoys "learned leisure" at Bournemouth. The fact is, that whereas a Bishop can practically retire on his own terms (which are usually, as in this case, exorbitant), the Primate's scandalous Church Patronage Bill would enable any Diocesan to evict a parish clergyman with a pension of not more than one-third of the net value of his living.

The Master of Balliol is to be the special preacher at Westminster Abbey next Sunday at the evening service in the nave.

Much satisfaction has been given in the East Riding by the Archbishop of York presenting the Rev. M. C. F. Morris to the Vicarage of Nunburnholme, which was held for thirty-nine years by his father, the Rev. F. O. Morris, the eminent naturalist, and which is worth about £350 a year, with house. The Rev. M. C. F. Morris has been Vicar of Newton-on-Ouse during the last fourteen years, and he will be succeeded there by the Rev. E. Bryans, Vicar of Abbot Bramley, Staffordshire, who has been presented by Colonel Dawnay. Mr. Bryans was for eight years Chaplain to the Archbishop when he was Bishop of Lichfield. Newton-on-Ouse is a more valuable living than Nunburnholme (£400 a year, with house), but it is a much larger parish.

The important living of St. Margaret's, Anfield, which became vacant by the promotion of Dr. Sheepshanks to the See of Norwich, has been given by Mr. Gladstone to the Rev. John Wakeford, who has been for some years missioner in the Diocese of Chichester. This is a most excellent appointment, and it will give much satisfaction wherever Mr. Wakeford is known, for he is a very eloquent and a most impressive preacher, and a hard-working and highly successful clergyman.

The lamentations of the Free Church of Scotland over the death of Sir William Mackinnon, and the preparations of that sect to canonise him, have been abruptly terminated by the dreadful revelation that only two months before his death he wrote a codicil, "withdrawing and cancelling" all the bequests he had made in his will to the Free Church, which gifts amounted to nearly £50,000. Sir William explained in the codicil that he has revoked his bequest because the Free Church has departed in many ways "from the constitution and principles of the Disruption of 1843," and he very strongly objected to the Declaratory Act, about which there has been such a ferment in the North.

A lady correspondent draws a lamentable picture of the condition of a parish in the West of England, in the absence of the Vicar, who is away for a month's holiday. The absent Vicar has got a neighbour to come over and conduct one service for him on Sunday morning, and beyond that there is no spiritual ministration of any kind available, whether for the living, the dying, or the dead. This state of things will prevail in a good many parishes during the next three months. Parsons have a right to holidays, like the rest of us; but, like the rest of us, they ought to make provision for the proper discharge of their duties in their absence. How this is to be done I have not the slightest idea; but if I were a Bishop, of which I fear there is now little prospect, I should make a beginning by organising a staff of clergy who would undertake holiday duty, and arranging the holidays of the parochial clergy at such times as arrangements could be made for filling their places.

Another correspondent sends me the following sample of a lottery ticket apropos to Church lotteries in Ireland:—

TO BE RAFFLED,
ON SUNDAY, THE 10th SEPTEMBER, 1893,
AT NEWTOWN CHURCH,
£8.

Highest throw gets £5, and Lowest £3.

Receipts are to meet the Large Debt incurred by Recent Improvements in the above Church.

TICKETS . . . . THREEPENCE EACH.

This seems to be the simplest and most undiluted gambling. Money prizes are offered and are to be allowed by throws of the dice. Even the Anglican Divine who endeavoured the other day to prove to me that a charity lottery is not a lottery would find it hard to show that this is not what is known to the law as "gaming." Why clergy of any denomination are left free to carry on this business, while little boys are sent to prison for playing pitch-and-toss in the street, I am entirely unable to perceive.

I am placed in a rather difficult position by the Editor of Pearson's Weekly, who asks me to recommend his "Fresh Air Fund" to the kind attention of my charitable readers. I am pledged to recommend Lady Jeune's Fund, by means of which poor and sickly children are sent into the country for three weeks at a time, and I should not like to divert any money from that excellent object. In reality, however, there is little antagonism between the two movements, for Mr. Pearson only aims at giving day "treats," and he is able, with the assistance of the Ragged School Union, to send a child to Epping Forest for the day and give it plenty to eat for the nimble sum of ninepence. For £8. 2s. he undertakes to treat a party of two hundred. There is no reason, therefore, why those who have already sent children into the country by means of Lady Jeune, should not send a few ninepences to Mr. Pearson for the delectation of the youngsters inevitably left behind.

The following amounts have reached me towards Lady Jeune's Holiday Fund:—A. C., £2; A. E., £1; F. M. B., £3; Lady Albert M. Gower, £3; F. Wayne, £1; Iris, £2. 2s.

This letter will interest those who remember the controversy in TRUTH respecting the Chaplain-General a year or two ago. The writer has certainly good cause to complain, but he can hardly expect me to sympathise with him very keenly. It is only fair to him to state, however, that whatever else he may have contributed towards the whitewashing of the Chaplain-General, he is not one of those who went so far as to write to TRUTH in praise of their chief:—

SIR,—I was against you when you impeached the Chaplain-General's treatment of the men under him, and I joined at the time in repudiating any sympathy with the attack on Dr. Edghill, but I think that I and others who took up the same attitude have good cause to protest against the way we have been treated. You will remember that at the time to which I refer, Dr. Edghill—somewhat injudiciously, as it seemed to myself and many who sympathised with him—gave an intimation that unless the Chaplains backed him up, it would be impossible for him to recommend those improvements in pay and prospects to which he considered we were entitled. We were accordingly invited to express our "detestation" of the attacks made on the Chaplain-General, and at the same time a draft Warrant was circulated providing that the C.-G.'s salary should be raised to £1,000 a year; that three Deputy-Chaplains-General should be appointed at salaries rising from £1. 2s. 6d. to £1. 7s. 6d. per diem, with £1s. 5s. per diem retired pay; and that retired pay of all Chaplains of twenty years' service should be 17s. 6d. per diem.

A new Royal Warrant has recently been issued, but what does it provide? That the Chaplain-General shall have his £1,000 a year. But as far as the rest of the staff are concerned, they remain precisely where they were. I can guess your comment on this. You will say, perhaps, that we have been bought—and "sold." It may look like it, but it was not so. Speaking for myself, I said nothing but what I believed, and many of us would have been prepared to stand by the Chaplain-General without any thought of a quid pro quo. But it is, I think, undeniable that the Chaplain-General represented to his Juniors that it would be to their interest to support him, and that in the result no one has benefited but himself. Personally, therefore, I am not sorry to see that you are calling attention again to the administration of the Department. I do not think Dr. Edghill will find it easy to get another expression of sympathy and satisfaction from his Juniors.—Yours obediently,

AN EDGHILLITE CHAPLAIN.

The last remark is, doubtless, true. But I take it that Dr. Edghill has no further need of expressions of sympathy and satisfaction from his Juniors. He has got all he wants.

However I should like to know what is the present position of affairs in regard to the Tower Chaplaincy. The Chaplain-General still, I believe, holds that office—at any rate, he did so a few weeks back, and subsequently to the Royal Warrant raising his pay. The excuse originally offered for the absorption of the Tower Chaplaincy by the Chaplain-General was that there had been an understanding at the time of his appointment that his pay should be raised to £1,000 a year, and that the extra £200 for the purpose was found in this way, instead of by the taxpayer. Now, however, that Dr. Edghill is to have the extra £200 from the taxpayer, there is no reason why the Tower Chaplaincy should not be restored to its former footing.

I am told by one of their number that the Naval Chaplains have also their reasons for dissatisfaction with the administration of their Department, and I have before me some specific instances of "unfair treatment" which seem to justify this assertion. Before referring to the matter in detail, however, I should like to know something of the experience of other Chaplains, and if any of them care to communicate with me on the subject I shall be glad to hear what they have to say.

ADELPHI HOTEL, LIVERPOOL, the Hôtel de Luxe of the North. Electric Light and Telephones in every room. Free Library for guests. Louis XV. Restaurant for highest class French Cooking. No charge for attendance.—WM. TOWLE, Manager. Note!—Midland Railway Company's Hotels at Bradford, Leeds, Derby, and London (St. Pancras). Excellent Cooking. Choice Wines.

Lord Roberts has the refusal of the vacant Government of Gibraltar. There is no truth in the widely-circulated report that Lord Roberts is to succeed Sir Evelyn Wood at Aldershot, which would be a post far below his just pretensions. If Lord Roberts refuses Gibraltar, the place will probably be offered to Lord Wolseley.

A correspondent writes from the Rock :—

TRUTH has lately made some depreciatory remarks about Sir Lothian Nicholson, but I hope that, in view of the sudden and widely-lamented death of that gallant officer, you will give me space to put forward another version of the facts. I do not question the good faith of your informant, but I do dispute his accuracy, more especially in regard to the general feeling here towards the late Governor. He was looked up to by all classes as a man of a most kindly and genial disposition, as well as an able and energetic officer. From the copy of the Gibraltar Chronicle, which I enclose, you will see that on the announcement of his death all the shops were at once closed—a voluntary mark of respect which means a great deal. All entertainments and amusements have been suspended, and I can assure you that on all sides there are to be seen marks of genuine sorrow.

A tradesman at Gibraltar sends for my inspection sundry small accounts which he has been unable to collect from officers who have left there. I scarcely know what I can do to assist him; but as the accounts are small and have possibly been overlooked, I would suggest to the gallant officers in the King's Royal Rifles and the South Lancashire Regiment, whose names are on the bills, that they should attend to their Gibraltar liabilities. One officer has, I see, not yet paid for a set of bone counters which he purchased in March, 1892. Perhaps he has found them a bad investment.

Thursday last was officially proclaimed as a general holiday in the Army, and it might be supposed that in the Army, of all places, such an order would be loyally observed. That being so, I feel curious to know why two companies of a battalion at Shorncliffe should have been ordered to perform their usual quota of musketry practice on this day. The N.C.O.'s and men to whom this order applied were kept on the ranges from 8 a.m. till 6 p.m., which hardly comes up to the accepted idea of a holiday.

A Sergeant-Cook inquires of me whether anything is to be done to improve the position of the important body which he represents. So far as I know, nothing is in contemplation; but that something ought to be done I have already asserted. The cooks ought to share in the benefits recently extended to farriers. The Aldershot messing reforms have thrown on the Sergeant-Cook greatly increased work and responsibility—my present correspondent asserts that his work has actually doubled. At the same time "perquisites" have, no doubt, been very seriously reduced. Discontent under these circumstances is inevitable, and discontent and inefficiency go hand in hand.

The Regimental Cook now occupies, as he should, a position of great importance. He holds in his hands the happiness or the misery, the digestion and the morals, as well as the physique, of Tommy Atkins. He is, therefore, in a measure responsible for the soundness of the national defences. He may do, and he is doing now in a great many instances, a great deal to popularise the Service and stimulate recruiting. Such a functionary has supreme claims to consideration. No man who values his own peace and that of his household keeps a discontented cook. A fortiori, the Army cannot afford to.

Mr. Campbell-Bannerman will, I understand, be invited to look further into the proceedings of a remarkable Court-martial, which was held at the Verne Barracks last week on Sergeant-Master-Tailor Martin Henry. Henry's offence was that he had failed to attend instruction drill with the recruits, as ordered by his Commanding Officer, who had recently removed him from the position of Master-Tailor. There seems to have been no material question as to the facts, but the prisoner, besides raising a point of military law, put in the following statements in his defence :—

He alleged that, having been reported last October for not completing three tunics which he had been ordered to braid, contrary to regulations, and severely reprimanded by his commanding officer, he had sent a written complaint, setting out as one of his reasons why the tunics were not braided that the officers of his regiment owed him over £30 for work done for them, and that he was consequently unable to obtain the braid, for which he had to pay ready money. This complaint his commanding officer refused to forward to head-quarters, and "from that day," said the prisoner, "I was a marked man, being continually reported for trivial offences, many of which were in respect of orders given to me contrary to regulations, until in April of this year I determined to send my complaint direct to the general officer commanding this district. The result of this was that another master tailor was appointed by my commanding officer, and I was invited to go upon the reserve. This I declined to do, when my commanding officer reverted me from my appointment and asked me to attend recruits' parade."

Henry, although a man of seven years' good character, has, I believe, been found guilty and reduced to the ranks. Before this sentence is confirmed, his statements should be investigated by independent authority, for, if they can be substantiated, somebody else should be put on his trial.

Reference in TRUTH to Depot irregularities has again brought me some communications from Carlow. Two Sergeants are serving on the Staff there who are on their Militia engagements, never having been in the Army. During the training, these men, one of whom has been acting as Officers' Mess Sergeant, and the other as Canteen Sergeant, were exempted from all drills for three months. This seems to be directly contrary to the Militia Regulation, which lays down that all the

In preparation for the approaching sporting season, ladies and gentlemen should visit Ulster House, Conduit-street, W., where their orders for every kind of garment will have prompt and careful attention.

BRUSSELS.—The GRAND HOTEL. Magnificent establishment. Central position. Latest English hygienic improvements. Post, telegraph, and ticket offices. Unrivalled cave and cuisine.—DUBONNET, Prop.

Permanent Staff must attend drill during training. I understand that the Canteen Sergeant here referred to is in his sixtieth year—another striking example of the vitality of the "old stager" element at the Depots.

The Sergeant Major at Carlow is understood to be the accredited representative of a firm of brewers. How far this is regular I do not know, but there are obvious objections to such a state of things—more especially in view of what I have been enabled to show lately respecting Depot irregularities, and the relation of Sergeants-Major to them.

On the question of Cavalry Officers' expenses, an ex-Dragoon tells me that expenses have gone up enormously since the abolition of purchase. Thirty years ago this gallant warrior subsisted in a fairly expensive regiment on an allowance of £350. Now, in the same regiment, £500 to £600 would be required. Add to the first-mentioned sum the interest on the price of a commission, and the total is still below the Cavalry Officer's expenses in 1893. What is the explanation of this? It is true the general scale of expenditure in civil life has also risen, but not in this proportion.

The following query has been addressed to me :—

SIR,—How many years must elapse before a Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel of the Army Medical Reserve of Officers attains to the rank of Surgeon-Colonel?—MONRO.

This is one of those professional conundrums which are entirely beyond the layman. Perhaps the editor of the Broad Arrow knows. I do not doubt that he will pretend he does.

Since I referred to the khaki question last week, I have received from Poona the extract given below from the last Battalion Orders of the 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers. This, I hope, finally disposes of the matter, and the only further remark that need be made is, that what is thus done at the beginning of June might just as well have been done at the beginning of April. I may here remark, however, that in regard to his white clothing, "Tommy" appears to have very much the same grievance as in regard to the khaki. Thus at Poona, the white clothing, which can be obtained in the bazaars at Rs.2, or Rs.2. 4a., is at present being supplied through the Regimental Tailor at Rs.2. 8a. Here again, if there is any difference between the regimental and the bazaar price, it ought to be in favour of the former :—

With the exception of—(a) men proceeding home during the ensuing trooping season; (b) men who arrived from home since September 1, 1892, the Battalion will receive one suit of khaki per man, free of charge.

Companies will be paraded at the Tailor's Shop as under, to receive this clothing, &c.

The following reaches me from Halifax (N.S.). From certain remarks appended, I gather that it has reference to some attempt of one of the "Service papers" (of which I was blissfully unconscious) to correct a previous statement in TRUTH respecting the working hours of the Royal Engineers at that place. As literal accuracy is so closely insisted upon, here are the exact working hours for the whole year :—

From March 15 to September 30, 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.; October 1 to 14, 7 a.m. to 5.30 p.m.; October 15 to 31, 7 a.m. to 5 p.m.; November 1 to 30, 7.30 a.m. to 4.30 p.m.; December 1 to 14, 8 a.m. to 4.30 p.m.; December 15 to January 31, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.; February 1 to 28, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; March 1 to 14, 7.30 a.m. to 5.30 p.m.

The average of this is, it is true, not 9½ hours, but 9 hours and a little more than 5 minutes. In the case, however, of one of the divisions, which is rather more than a mile from barracks, three-quarters of an hour only is allowed for dinner, in consequence of the men being granted half an hour to walk back to barracks in the evening; thus raising the number of hours for the greatest part of seven months—from leaving barracks to returning to 10¼.

The order for the whole of the hours herein mentioned has been in existence and unaltered since June 9, 1874.

It is almost superfluous, however, to devote further space to this matter, for I understand that soon after the appearance of the previous paragraph in TRUTH the men were given a weekly half-holiday on Thursdays. That furnishes a much better comment on my remarks than anything which is likely to appear in a Service paper.

A gallant warrior in the Royal Fusiliers writes to complain that during the two years the regiment was recently quartered at Woolwich no notice was officially taken of them by the authorities of their territorial centre, the City of London. None of the officers have been asked to the Mansion House, and no Lord Mayor has even thought it fitting to give the band of the City Regiment a place in his Show. All this, however, hardly surprises me. The territorial system is everywhere more or less of a farce, and in London it is specially so. I take it that the only regiments which the average Cockney looks upon as having any special connection with the metropolis are the Guards.

It will doubtless be within the recollection of some of my readers that the tenant of a desirable sea-side residence near Weymouth was one day last year the favoured recipient of a live shell, dropped into his garden by a gun-boat engaged in gun-practice. Although his remonstrances produced an official assurance that such a thing should not happen again, I hear that within as many days no less than six shells have recently burst in close proximity to the same house. Not long back I recorded a similar incident in Cornwall. Surely it is high time that stringent restrictions were placed upon all artillery practice within reach of inhabited regions.

Here are a few items from the canteen price-list of a regiment quartered at Bradford :—Jam, 6d. per lb. (same quality obtainable in the town at 2½d.); butter (or margarine), 1s. per lb. (in the town, 8d.); tea, 1s. 8d. per lb. (a better tea obtainable in the town at 1s. 6d.); Pears' shaving sticks, 8d. (in the town, 6d.). A regimental canteen ought to be managed on the principle of a co-operative store, and the profits given to the men in the shape of reduced prices. From the particulars, however, which are from time to time communicated to me, these establishments seem to be conducted as monopolies which can make what profits they like.

Herefordshire Cider & Perry, six distinct varieties. Gold Medal, Paris, 1888. The Bishop of Ely writes, 1892, "Your Cider & Perry are excellent." List from H. P. BULMER & Co., Rylands, Hereford.

I take the following references to the Victoria disaster from a private letter from Malta:—

> All concerned in the disaster were well known here. As Malta is both small and sociable, every one gets to know every one else in a few weeks much more intimately than they would at home in England after years of acquaintance. Only five weeks before the disaster the fleet had sailed out of the harbour amidst great enthusiasm, all the inhabitants of Valletta assembling to bid farewell and wish God-speed to ships and men. Just before we arrived here, the Edgar and Phaeton had returned, bringing the surviving officers and men of the Victoria. Many of the men are ill, and suffering in many ways. Captain Bourke and Lord Gillford, the poor Admiral's Captain and Flag-Lieutenant, have both been greatly knocked up, but are now recovering. Captain Bourke, when thrown into the sea as the ship turned over, sank very deep—so deep he thought that he could never come up again. He did rise, and found himself in the sea with no one near him, nor could he see any one; he found, however, a life-buoy floating beside him. The stories of the hair-breadth escapes of most of the survivors are thrilling and fascinating. They end well, however, which makes all the difference in the world. It is awful in some cases to hear of those who were lost, yet one listens spellbound to these sad stories of human suffering. The fate of poor Lieutenant Munro was sad. He and another Lieutenant, Mr. Cayley (who was only temporarily doing duty on the Victoria, he belonging to the Trafalgar), were "forward," busy about the collision mat, when the Admiral called them "aft," out of the rising water. They left together to go to Sir George. Mr. Cayley crossed over the battery, whilst Mr. Munro went into it, to pass through. At the instant when Mr. Cayley was on top and Mr. Munro inside, the ship capsized. The former jumped clear of her into the sea, and poor Mr. Munro was carried away to destruction. Such are the curious chances of life and death! He was very popular here, and is deeply regretted. He died doing his duty to the last, poor fellow. Indeed, all the men seem to have acted splendidly, remaining calm and disciplined to the dreadful end. . . .
>
> Valletta is quite unlike itself at this season, except in being intensely hot. The approaching Court-martials excite every one. The Camperdown with Admiral Markham is expected every day; the next interesting arrival after that will be the new Commander-in-Chief, Sir Michael Seymour. If the weather does not—as it threatens to-day—get too tropical, we shall stay here for some time longer. How hot it will be for a court of inquiry! Perhaps it may be moved from here if the heat becomes excessive.

I have to thank a host of naval and military correspondents who, apropos to the loss of the Victoria, have sent me technical disquisitions on naval architecture, tactics, and kindred matters. If I have not published these communications, it is not because I do not appreciate the brilliancy and originality of the views set forth in them, but solely because TRUTH is not big enough to hold them all, and I do not wish to create ill-feeling by making an invidious selection. I am, however, very glad to find that a large array of experts seems to be of my opinion, that it is very doubtful policy to spend as much money as we do on naval monsters, which can be destroyed with all on board them as easily as was the Victoria.

Apropos to the disaster and the consequent relief fund, an N.C.O. asks me why the Government cannot make special arrangements to enable soldiers and sailors to insure their lives. This query is worth the notice of the Secretary for War and the Lords of the Admiralty. There are two sides to the matter. In the first place Government has a special duty towards soldiers and sailors who perish in the discharge of their duty, which up to a point it already recognises. Apart from this, the State has already embarked in the Life Assurance business, and as nearly all other large employers of labour acknowledge a duty to assist their men in insuring against accidents and sickness, there seems to be special reason why the State should interest itself in the same way on behalf of its employés. In the case of soldiers and sailors it would be a peculiarly advantageous class of business, as the insured would all be picked men. It would be an easy thing to arrange for insurance premiums to be deducted from pay, and regular payment would then be assured.

Launceston has been favoured with a visit from Mr. C. A. Swift, a representative of the British and Foreign Sailors' Society, and on Sunday week he preached a sermon at the Wesleyan Chapel. In the course of an edifying discourse on the "blessed work" of his Society, Mr. Swift referred to his experience in the Royal Navy, and said that "almost his worst" was four years ago, when he was transferred from one ship to the ill-fated Victoria:—

> He did not think (he said) there were ten Christian men in the whole of her crew of several hundred, and he therefore did not wonder at her destruction; for, he said, the change was like going from Heaven into Hell, and he often wondered God didn't allow the sea to swallow up that ship.

Mr. Swift boasted that the Society has 138 men "such as himself" in different parts of the world. For the credit of the Society it is to be hoped that this is not true.

Not long since I said a word on behalf of the Sub-Assistant-Apothecaries in the service of the Presidential Governments of India. I have since heard from an Indian correspondent, who has had a good deal of experience in hospitals, that the integrity of the rank and file of the Service—especially the native apothecaries—leaves much to be desired. Adding what my informant says to what I already know, I should imagine the truth to be that these men are very ill-paid, and that they supplement their scanty means of subsistence out of the rations intended for the patients under their charge. But if some of my Indian readers could favour me with the result of their observations of the native apothecary, I might be better enabled to form an opinion.

Numerous communications received since my remarks on the capricious system of promotion prevailing in the Indian Telegraph Department reached India, bear witness to the keen resentment with which the present state of things is viewed by the senior Telegraph Masters. One of these officials writes:—

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one-half West-end price.—PHILLIPS & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate-street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to latest fashion.

THE IMPERIAL, EAST CLIFF, BOURNEMOUTH.—Position, appointments, and cuisine unsurpassed. 100 rooms. Luxuriously furnished. Electric light. Private omnibuses meet trains. Telegraphic address, Imperial, Bournemouth.—CHAS. A. REINGPACH, Manager.

> The first and second grades of Telegraph Masters are at present expected to live on Rs. 275 and Rs. 255. In each case the maximum is reached after fifteen years' service, and there is nothing more to hope for till retirement at 55. It is dreadfully hard, and crushes all the life out of a man of any energy to feel that at 33 or 35 the miserable pittance which he has then reached is the most he can ever hope for; but these feelings amount to despair when they see mere lads, little more than schoolboys, rising over their heads to the rank of Sub-Assistant-Superintendent. This state of things is due entirely to the whim of the present Director-General, who holds that a man of 45 is only fit to be shelved, and confines his selections to those under 30.

The proper way of meeting this grievance is to assign a certain number of Sub-Assistant-Superintendentships to the Telegraph Masters, and I hope that something of this kind will be done.

Experience has taught that nothing is more difficult than for the humbler employés of a great Company to gain the ear of the Directors in reference to the action of those placed in authority over them. No doubt this is why I have been asked to ventilate the grievances of the workmen in the "loco. joiners' shops" of the Great Northern Railway at Doncaster. The nature of their complaints may be gathered from a statement, already published in a railway journal, that "the tyranny and despotism practised there have become quite unbearable.' The particulars which I have received from Doncaster give the matter such a serious aspect that I certainly think the Directors should institute an inquiry. If they will do so, I shall be happy to assist them with the information in my possession.

I am glad to notice that the Liverpool Sunday Society has scored another victory over Sabbatarian bigotry. The City Council last week considered an offer of the Society to provide a band to play in Sefton or Wavertree Park on Sundays, and the Sabbatarians, of course, trotted out the old familiar nonsense about "the thin end of the wedge," the "secularisation" of the Lord's Day, and so forth. By a considerable majority, however, the Council accepted the generous proposal of the Society.

Those who take an interest in the "boarding-out" system, lately discussed in these columns, should see an account of the Shoreditch Vestry's Cottage Homes, which has appeared in London. The Shoreditch Vestry, which is by far the most enlightened in the Metropolis, has made a compromise between the "boarding-out" principle and the opposition system of monster workhouse schools. At Hornchurch it has established a model village of its own, where the pauper children are reared in cottage homes, as far as possible under the conditions of home life, but under the supervision of trained officials instead of cottagers. Efficient schools are attached to the village, as well as swimming baths, gymnasium, and workshops for technical instruction, but out of school as much freedom as practicable is given to the children. The experiment has been in the highest degree successful. There is only one improvement which I can suggest in it, and that is that in the management of these cottage homes the old people from the workhouses should be as far as possible employed. We should then be within measurable distance of the ideal to which I pointed in my article on the boarding out system—namely, that it should be applied to the old as well as to the young.

At a recent meeting of the Rugby Guardians, a letter was read from the Local Government Board asking for the names of all able-bodied paupers who are allowed to smoke, and also for particulars as to the quantity of tobacco they consume. This highly-important communication afforded much amusement to the Guardians. But really it is most interesting as an evidence of the unflagging industry of one branch at least of the public service. Who dare talk about an idle tribe of Tite Barnacles, when all the time they are busily engaged in gleaning such precious information as this respecting the pauper's pipe?

The Local Government Board will do well to give immediate attention to the conduct of the Bridgend and Cowbridge Rural Sanitary Authority—unless, of course, the Department considers it part of the business of such a body to bring about a serious epidemic of disease. This is what the authority in question seems to be aiming at in the village of St. Bride's Major, Glamorganshire. For nearly five years the villagers have been agitating for a proper water-supply, which could be obtained from an unfailing source two miles away. Two years ago a scheme was proposed under which Lord Dunraven was willing to defray the cost of the main, leaving only the expense of the branch pipes and the annual working charges to fall upon the rates. By raising all sorts of frivolous objections, however, the authority caused the offer to be withdrawn, with the result that St. Bride's is still without a water-supply. For months past now the inhabitants, especially those of the labouring class, have been driven to using for domestic purposes water from a horse-pond, reeking with impurities. And to crown its performances the authority has just issued a mandate to house-owners commanding them to provide a proper water-supply, "either by storing rain-water, or in some other way." How rain-water is to be stored when there is no rain, and what "some other way" may mean, this egregious body does not condescend to explain.

The gentleman who brings this St. Bride's scandal under my notice expresses the opinion that it is a strong illustration of the need for the Parish Councils Bill.

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is, 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

He also urges that if the Liberal Party are to retain the support of the agricultural labourers, the Bill must be passed this session. I entirely agree with him.

A Conservative correspondent has drawn my attention to the action which the Pontefract Corporation—a Liberal body—has taken against a local Tory journal. It appears that this print, smarting under the Tory defeat at the late election, relieved its bitter feeling by writing about "crafty and contemptible tricks, a corrupt and dishonourable caucus," and generally abusing its opponents. The Liberal Councillors have been so thin-skinned as to take notice of this vituperation, and last week they carried a resolution excluding the reporter of the paper in question from all Corporation meetings. What I should say of a Tory Corporation under the like circumstances, I say even more strongly of the Pontefract Liberals. Such action is always foolish and ill-advised, and Liberals ought to show that they so regard it.

An indignation meeting has been held at Stratford St. Mary to discuss the steps which are to be taken to contest the claim which has been set up by Lord Ashburton and Mr. Norton, to the exclusive right of fishing in the Stour for a considerable distance. The meeting was attended by representatives of the Anglers' Association, and from many London angling clubs, as the questions which have been raised have a bearing upon the fishing rights on all rivers. Funds are being raised for the defence of an angler, against whom an injunction has been applied for, to prevent him from any future fishing in this particular water.

A traveller, just returned from America, confides to me his humiliation in the eyes of his fellow-passengers from the States by the advertisement hoardings which they beheld displayed in the fields on the journey from Liverpool to London. I am not an æsthete myself, but I admit that an advertisement hoarding hardly lends an additional charm to any rural landscape, more especially when it celebrates the virtues of pills. But who is to blame? Advertisers cannot be blamed for desiring to lay out their money to the best advantage wherever the opportunity offers. Farmers certainly cannot be blamed, in the present state of agriculture, for planting anything in their fields which they can get a profit from, and I doubt if any crop will prove as remunerative just at present as a crop of advertisement hoardings. My friend, who is shocked at what he saw between Liverpool and Euston, had better avoid the journey to Brighton. Should the agricultural outlook not improve, I foresee that the whole of the Brighton line will eventually be fenced in with advertisements. In some parts of London there are houses which are completely covered with advertisements, windows and all. They are unoccupied, and they actually yield a higher rent as advertising-stations than they would as habitations. Our fields and hedges seem to be going the same way.

Something will, I trust, be done with reference to Mr. Justice Hawkins's complaint in regard to the slipshod character of the depositions from the Metropolitan Police Courts. Her Majesty's Judges have complained so often on this subject that I feel sincerely sorry for them; but no previous language used on the subject equals in intensity that of Sir Henry Hawkins last week. His lordship described the depositions sent to him from Southwark Court as "scandalous in the extreme," "no use whatever," and "worse than useless"; and if, he added, "Magistrates' clerks scamp their work in this way, the sooner they cease to be Magistrates' clerks the better." That is precisely the way in which the matter presents itself to me.

A correspondent writes to me to complain that the newspaper reports of lawsuits are often given in such a form that nobody can tell who the parties are. The other day, for instance, he was perplexed by the report of a breach of promise action in the Times, where only the surnames of the plaintiff and defendant were mentioned. He happens to know several men bearing the same patronymic as the defendant, and there was nothing to indicate whether the base deceiver was one of these or somebody else. Distressing as this confusion may be, I fear it is practically unavoidable. Sometimes the full names do not transpire, and sometimes reporters are careless. But even if the initials were invariably supplied, as my correspondent suggests, they would not be of much service in the case of the extensive families of Smiths, Joneses, Browns, Robinsons, and so on.

Take anything which you can get by arrangement with your debtor in preference to trusting to the tender mercies of the Bankruptcy Court. That is the advice which my experience of the Bankruptcy Laws leads me to tender to all creditors. Eighteen months ago one of the creditors of a large Suffolk farmer endeavoured to get his brother creditors to accept 10s. in the pound. His efforts were in vain, and the Bankruptcy Law took its course. After a dreary interval of silence, the same creditor above-mentioned has just been informed by the trustee that the assets realised have barely sufficed to pay the Official Receiver, rent, and labour. The solicitors and the trustee himself are still unpaid. What creditors have to bear in mind in these cases is that they come last.

It is to be hoped that Magistrates throughout the country will make a note of Baron Pollock's excellent remarks at Oxford Assizes the other day respecting the traffic in unwholesome meat. His Lordship passed the exemplary sentence of eight months' hard labour upon a butcher who sold some diseased beef which caused several persons to be taken ill and one to die. As the Judge said, it is of immense public importance that the poorer classes should be protected against unhealthy food. But there cannot be such protection so long as Magistrates are weak enough, as they generally are, to let off offending salesmen with fines, which are easily paid out of the week's profits.

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. I observe that Mr. Addison, Q.C., Chairman of the Salford Hundred Sessions, is aggrieved at the appearance of two of his sentences in the Pillory last month. One man named Brierley was committed for six months' hard labour for stealing a spade, and another named M'Nab for three months for stealing a scythe, and these cases were contrasted with a third from a different Court, where a mere fine was considered sufficient punishment for a brutal assault which involved the dislocation of the prosecutor's arm. In his remarks to the Grand Jury last week Mr. Addison sought to justify his sentences on the ground that Brierley and M'Nab were old offenders. The fact that Brierley had undergone the outrageous punishment of seven years' penal servitude for the theft of a wheelbarrow is, to my mind, no reason whatever why he should get six months for stealing a spade. However, without again discussing a question which has been so often threshed out, I will frankly admit that in the two cases quoted, Mr. Addison, though too severe, was merciful in comparison with some Judges—the Recorder of the neighbouring city of Manchester, for example. But so much cannot be said in respect of the further cases from the same Sessions which head the second column of the appended list. Note the difference in the treatment of offences against property and offences against the person :—

Salford Hundred Sessions. Before Mr. Addison, Q.C., and other Magistrates. William Higson, charged with indecent assault. Fined £5.

Thomas Hughes, charged with indecent assault. Fined £2, and bound over.

Richard Cawley, charged with inflicting grievous bodily harm upon Adam Royles by stabbing him. Three months.

East Suffolk Quarter Sessions. Before Lord Rendelsham and other Magistrates. Charles Marsh pleaded guilty to indecently assaulting Agnes Runeckles, aged five. Three months.

Manchester City Police-court. Before Mr. Elliott and Mr. Estcourt. George Starkey and Patrick Gibbons, convicted of assaulting Ernest Burgess, aged 17. Gibbons held Burgess down whilst Starkey burnt him with a red-hot brass rule. Later on they repeated the assault. A doctor said the youth's injuries were very serious. Starkey, two months; Gibbons, one month.

Rugeley Petty Sessions. James Averon, charged with assaulting Martin Darmady, whom he struck on the head with a poker, inflicting a severe wound. Fined 10s. and 11s. 6d. costs.

Tendring Hundred Petty Sessions. Before the Rev. Canon Norman, Colonel Davis, Lieut.-Col. Morrell, Mr. A. Hempson, and Mr. J. Smith. Osmond Ormes, convicted of an aggravated assault on his wife. She was stunned by one of his blows. Fined 40s. and costs, and bound over.

Salford Hundred Sessions. Before the same Bench. Samuel Knott, charged with wandering abroad without visible means of subsistence. Twelve months.

Thomas Mullen, charged with stealing four trowels. Twelve months.

Robert Jeffcote, charged with stealing a suit of clothes and other articles. Three years.

East Suffolk Quarter Sessions. Before the same Bench. John Reeve pleaded guilty to stealing three fowls. Six months.

Worcester City Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. R. H. Amphlett, Recorder. William Wellington, charged with attempted burglary. He was seen tampering with the window of a house. Seven years.

Basingstoke County Bench. Before Messrs. F. M. E. Jervoise and A. Wallis. John Shaw, convicted of stealing gooseberries from a garden. One month.

Rugeley Petty Sessions. William Wyld, charged with trespassing on the railway. Fined 10s. and 14s. costs.

Needham Market Petty Sessions. Before Mr. W. Fraser, General W. G. Martin, and Mr. W. W. Wells. Elijah Woods, charged with taking two rabbits by night. One month.

Braintree Petty Sessions. Before Mr. H. G. R. Marriott, General Thompson, and Messrs. S. Courtauld and C. H. W. Marriott. Henry Steward, Hy. Turner, and Thomas Grubb pleaded guilty to cruelly ill-treating a gelding. They tied one of the animal's forelegs up to its shoulder, threw it down, and beat it with sticks. Fined 10s. each and costs.

Welshpool Petty Sessions. Before Mr. D. H. Mytton and Mr. S. Powell. William Edwards, farmer, charged with assaulting John Andrew, farm-servant. Complainant was struck with a bill-hook, knocked down, and kicked, and had to have surgical attention. Fined £2. 6s. 6d., including costs.

Irvine J.P. Court. Before Bailie Jack and Mr. A. C. M'Jannet. William Martin, charged with a disgraceful assault on a girl. Fined 10s.

Belfast Summons-court. Before Mr. R. J. Eaton, R.M., Sir J. H. Haslett, Dr. O'Malley, Mr. T. H. Browne, and other Magistrates. William Richard Alcock, convicted of cruelty to his children. He had been previously cautioned by the S.P.C.C. Fourteen days.

Brierley Hill Police-court. Before Mr. Neville, Stipendiary. Joseph Balham, charged with assaulting Esther Hunt. She had to keep her bed for three days, and was attended by a doctor. Fined 20s. and costs.

Ipswich Police-court. Harry Vinyard, charged with assaulting his wife, who said he knocked her off a couch and then hit her on the body, mouth, and legs. Fined 10s. 6d. and costs.

Work-op Police court. Before Mr. Henry Mellish, Mr. Machin, Mr. Mason, and Mr. Eddison. Sixteen men charged with trespassing for game on lands of the Duke of Newcastle and Mr. F. J. Savile Foljambe. Fourteen defendants fined £5 each and costs, or two months; two fined £3 each and costs, or one month.

Cranbrook Police-court. Before Major Atkin Roberts and Colonel Ready. George Wright, aged 17, and William Sharpless, aged 13, charged with stealing three hop-pockets and a guano bag. Wright, one month; Sharpless, fourteen days.

Irvine Burgh-court. Before Bailie Jack. Peter Javelin, charged with begging. Ten days.

Belfast Custody-court. Before Mr. F. J. M'Carthy, R.M., and Mr. J. Hollywood. Hugh M'Quillon, charged with stealing one shilling belonging to his father, and also with using obscene language. Three months.

John Gibson, charged with having failed to report his change of residence, he being under police supervision. Three months.

Armagh Petty Sessions. Before Mr. N. L. Townsend, R.M., and Messrs. J. Compton, R. G. M'Crum, J. Anderson, F. J. Best, and T. Brown. William Nolan, indentured apprentice of Thomas Dolan, charged with leaving his employment and refusing to return. Fourteen days' imprisonment.

William Goff, convicted of four charges of drunkenness. Four months.

Walsall Police-court. Charles Stockton and his wife, charged with cruelty to their adopted child, aged 13. It was stated that the cruelty had continued for two or three years. The man beat the child with a strap, which was studded with iron studs, and the woman used a stick or her fists. The woman was discharged. Charles Stockton fined £1 and costs.

Ayr Sheriff Court. John White, Alexander Henderson, John Henderson, and Robert Goudie, charged with indecently assaulting a servant girl. Goudie, fined £4; White, £5; John Henderson, £3; and Alexander Henderson, £2.

Worship-street Police court. Before Mr. Rose. Frederick Thomas Newman, convicted of a violent assault on his wife. Besides beating her with his fists, defendant, during one night, three times kicked her downstairs, threw a pail of water over her, flung her against a wall, and kicked her in the stomach. She was near her confinement, and at one time it was thought she was dying. One month, and separation order granted.

In reference to a "sleeping out case" reported from Montgomery Petty Sessions in last week's "Pillory," Mr. N. W. Humphreys, one of the Justices concerned, writes :—

Arthur Grimshaw was charged with sleeping in a building (not "sleeping out") attached to a farm-house, and containing hay, straw, &c. As men of his class—tramps—always carry matches and often smoke where they sleep, there is great danger of setting the place on fire. Recently a building in the same parish was set on fire by a tramp. As there is no fire-engine within four miles, and no water near, had the building in the present instance caught fire, it must have been, with the house, burned to the ground. . . .

All this is very familiar, but in principle it only comes to this, that in order to save landlords and farmers the trouble of locking up or otherwise protecting their out-buildings, anybody crawling into such premises for a night's rest is to be dealt with as a criminal—which meant, in the case to which I referred, that he is to receive punishment on the same scale as a bully who wantonly attacks a man in the streets, knocks him down, and kicks him brutally. On principle I object to the Vagrancy Act. But, apart from principle, what evidence does Mr. Humphreys adduce that this tramp, Grimshaw, was the dangerous character he asserts? It is all very well to say that tramps "always carry matches." But were matches found on Grimshaw, or is the basis of Mr. Humphreys' argument a pure matter of assumption? May I take it that if a tramp throws away his matches before he crawls into an outhouse he will be in no danger of getting fourteen days at Montgomery Sessions?

BIRDS of a feather flock together. The first grey hair will soon have companions, unless their coming is rendered impossible by the use of Mrs. S. A. ALLEN'S World's Hair Restorer.

Some singular proceedings were revealed at an inquest on the body of a child which was held at Crewe last week. The child died in a fit, and the doctor who had attended her for two or three weeks previously gave a certificate in the ordinary way, and the funeral took place on June 27. On Sunday, July 2, the body was exhumed at the instigation of the police, but when the Coroner and Jury assembled not a scrap of evidence was adduced to justify even a suspicion that death was not due to natural causes. When the Coroner commented upon this, Colonel Cope, the Deputy Chief Constable, could only say the Police "were under the impression" that the certificate was irregular. It seems to me that the police should be compelled to give some further explanation of their extraordinary action. That they would dare to disturb a grave merely because of a crazy "impression"—which could have been satisfied without such a step—is almost too outrageous for belief.

When a burial scandal occurs I find, nine times out of ten, that the "dear departed" was a pauper. No doubt Mr. Sowerberry's notions on the subject of such interments are still entertained. There was a case at Chislet, in Kent, the other day. According to the report made to the Blean Guardians on Friday, "an old man, incapable of performing his duty," was sent with a coffin for a deceased pauper. It was discovered that the coffin was too small, but, nevertheless, the body was forced into it, and then, it is alleged, "two men stood upon the lid while it was screwed down." As may be readily imagined, "the extreme pressure thus exerted had horrible results." The Guardians, it should be added, were so far shocked as to express their "extreme dissatisfaction" with the ghastly business.

Since my last reference to the matter, only a fortnight ago, I have received some further correspondence in connection with the "Spanish Prison Trick," which presents a new feature. The enterprising Spaniard who attempts the swindle in this case claims to be a Canon of the Catholic Church, and actually writes on paper bearing a stamp with the inscription "Iglesia Parroquial de San Pedro, Sagunto." The Canon signs himself "John Romero," and professes to have received his information concerning the buried treasure under the seal of the confessional. Whether there is such a church as the "Iglesia Parroquial de San Pedro" at Sagunto I have no means of ascertaining; but, if there be, the authorities of the church would do well to look into the disreputable use which is being made of their name and seal. Again I would ask, how much longer is this swindle to be suffered to go on unchecked?

A member of the Carlton Club writes to tell me that he and several members of his family have been "bothered by a man, Ernest Day by name, to buy an engraving of one of our ancestors." The portrait turns out to be of no value, and the frame is "suspiciously new," and so the Carlton Club gentleman writes to inquire if this is one of the rascals that I have shown up. The moral of this is obvious. Members of the Carlton Club evidently have not sufficient opportunities of studying TRUTH, or they would not be in the dark about a sharper who has been the subject of reference in these columns almost every week for the last year or two. The Committee should order a few more copies without delay. In a club where almost every member has ancestors it is specially desirable that all should be well informed about Ernest Day. In Liberal Clubs, where there are few ancestors to boast of, it may not be of so much consequence.

I have received from the Charity Organisation Society the latest edition of their "Cautionary Card." I would strongly recommend it to the notice of all subscribers to charities, and still more to those who are prone to part with their cash in response to casual circulars and appeals. The card contains a list of all the more prominent charity swindlers now before the public, and from my experience of the Charity Organisation Society, I have no hesitation in saying that absolute reliance may be placed upon all information in this direction issued from their office.

One of the minor annoyances which the postman brings upon us is the touting by clergymen on behalf of new churches which they are building. A number of such appeals have lately been forwarded to TRUTH office by the recipients, one of the most objectionable of them being from the Rector of Barthomley, Crewe, who has his appeal lithographed and surrounded by a border of deep mourning, and uses an envelope of the same character. Doubtless the mourning border has, and is designed to have, an emollient effect upon the hearts of those to whom the document is addressed, but it is also calculated to alarm nervous people in a way for which there is no excuse. Why a man, reverend or otherwise, should be allowed to beg in this way by post when he would not be allowed to beg by word of mouth in the street, I fail altogether to see.

The following letter has been forwarded to me by a gentleman at Carlisle to whom it was addressed. It is interesting for the light it throws upon the wonderful unanimity of Unionist meetings of which we sometimes hear. From the concluding words, it is evident that Mr. Ostell puts more faith in the strong arm of the "chucker out" than in the persuasive powers of Tory orators. I admire his sagacity :—

SPA, BELGIUM (10 hours from London and Paris.) Racing, tennis, golf, pigeon-shooting, &c. Splendid Casino, with theatre, &c. Waters unrivalled in cases of anæmia and dyspepsia.

Carlisle Conservative Association,
14, Bank street, Carlisle,
July 4, 1893.

SIR,—It having come to my knowledge that you have in your possession a ticket for to morrow night's meeting, I write to warn you that you will not be allowed to use it. The meeting is one of Unionists, and for Unionists, and if you attempt to intrude you must take the consequences, which may be unpleasant.—
Yours faithfully, JOHN OSTELL.
Mr. ——.

The following is the menu of the State banquet given by the Transvaal Government to Sir Henry Loch on the occasion of his visit to Pretoria. It is an unusually interesting specimen of menu-language. Whether it is to be regarded as Anglo-Dutch French, or Anglo-French Dutch, I must leave the reader to decide :—

MENU.

Gala—Diner
ter eere van
Zijne Excellentie Harer Britsche Majesteits
Hoogen Commisaris voor Zuid-Afrika
Sir Henry Brougham Loch, K.G.M.G. [sic], K.C.B.,
Pretoria, 6 Juni, 1893.

Bouillon Soep. Soep à la Chasseur.
Zeetong met witte-wijnsaus.
Gelardeerd Wildbraad en Jelly.
Ganzenlever Paté.
Kalfskotelleten en Asperges.
Punch à la Romaine.
Gebraden Kalkoen. Schapen-leude.
Bloemkool au gratin.
Pudding Chandeau.
Vruchten.
Dessert.

I have often referred to the unblushing manner in which some Parliamentary constituencies are nursed by Members and would-be Members. The business seems to be carried on in a particularly brazen style in the Accrington Division of Lancashire. When Mr. Hermon Hodge, the late Member and, I believe, present Tory candidate, puts his hand in his pocket, his trumpeter in the local Press sees that he gets the fullest credit for his liberality. Thus, in a recent issue of the Tory organ, I read that "Mr. Hermon Hodge has presented the Church Pigeon Flyers with a Five Guinea Challenge Cup." In the next column there is a repetition of the same important announcement, with the additional information that the Cup is "handsome." And, in order that there may be no mistake about it, a third paragraph tells us that "it is almost incredible the amount of money Mr. Hermon Hodge subscribes to charitable and other objects in this Division."

The Isle of Wight Liberals have been fortunate in obtaining a most excellent candidate for the next election in the person of Mr. G. Baring, of Cowes, son of the late General Baring, who was for many years one of the most popular residents in the island, and a very well known member of the R.Y.S.

Lord Salisbury's argument that the Parliamentary majority was not given for Home Rule because other reforms were before the electorate is hardly correct, for this might be said of any important measure advocated by one Party or the other at a General Election. Some, no doubt, voted for the Liberal candidates, because they were in favour of Disestablishment or Local Veto, as well as of Home Rule. But might it not with equal truth be said that some voted against Home Rule because they were opposed to one or other of these two measures, as well as to Home Rule? I no more suppose that all who voted for the Liberal candidates were wildly enthusiastic for Home Rule than that every publican and parson in the country was desperately opposed to it The election, however, showed that more electors were prepared to give Home Rule to Ireland than to refuse it. The verdict of the country was consequently for Home Rule. Lord Salisbury himself perceives this, and he further perceives that for the Lords to throw out a Home Rule Bill that a Home Rule House of Commons passes, is to fly in the face of the popular verdict. He, therefore, suggests the Swiss plan of a referendum. To this Radicals have no sort of objection, provided that the referendum takes the place of the House of Lords. If his Lordship will carry a Bill through the Lords to this effect, I think that I can assure him that it will receive the support of all Radicals in the House of Commons. But will he?

Mr. Conybeare, in the episode of last week, hardly seemed to me to realise the point at issue. A Member of Parliament has the opportunity to call attention in Parliament to any action of the Speaker that he deems wanting in impartiality; and by the unwritten law of Parliament this is deemed to preclude him from calling attention to it elsewhere. This rule is based upon the fact that the Speaker cannot well reply in a newspaper to an attack made on him in one by a Member, and it seems to me that the rule is reasonable. Mr. Conybeare might have refused to accept the rule, and stood to his guns, or he might have expressed his regret for having violated it, but he took a medium course, and without clearly expressing his regret, sought to justify his action.

I do not know any Assembly more ready to accept an apology, provided that it be ample, than the House of Commons. If I had poisoned a dozen of my relatives, and, on being challenged with this by a colleague, I were frankly to tender an apology for this domestic incident, although I might get into trouble with the Public Prosecutor, the House would cheer me, and the Speaker would say that, after the frank and honest way in which I had expressed regret, any further allusion would be improper, for the House likes anything better than a half-and-half course.

As a matter of fact, the judgment of the Speaker was sound in refusing the Closure when moved by Mr. Conybeare on a previous evening. That, however, is beyond the question. The rules of the House leave it to him to grant or to refuse to put the Closure when moved by a member, and he can only act as he himself deems proper. Often many wish that the Closure should be put, but it does not follow that they are right; sometimes, indeed, the majority want the Closure, and the Speaker becomes the guardian of the rights of the minority. In an Assembly where there are two parties differing on almost everything it is evident that it is an advantage that there should be some one who acts outside Party feeling.

Mr. Conybeare is one of the staunchest of Radicals, and when he has adopted an opinion he is apt to stand by it. Had he not tendered an apology no course was open but a penal one. But he did apologise, and for the House, after having declared that an apology would be accepted, to have refused it because there was something in his mien and manner that would not have elicited the approbation of Lord Chesterfield, would have been carrying matters too far. Mr. Conybeare, with many excellent and sterling qualities, is not Chesterfieldian. If this is a misfortune, it is not his fault, for he is as Providence fashioned him.

Events will prove whether I am right or wrong. I stand, however, to my opinion, that we shall suffer at the General Election by passing clauses in the Home Rule Bill without any discussion on them being allowed. If it had been determined to pass the Bill through the House of Commons in one Session, the time occupied in Committee ought to have been divided between the clauses, allowing a reasonable time for discussion on each. It is obvious that if the Bill is to be got through this year the guillotine will have to be applied to the discussions on Report, and, consequently, that there will be no opportunity for moving amendments on many of the clauses on Report. No doubt the Opposition has exhaustively discussed amendments of no real importance with a view to delay progress, but it is equally true that a good many of their amendments were legitimate and required full discussion.

But I look at the matter with an eye to the General Election, for in this matter of Home Rule the country will have the last word. We are practically submitting to it a Bill which alters all existing relations between Ireland and Great Britain. Our plea with the electors should be that this Bill is the outcome of the deliberate wisdom of the House of Commons, and that it has only failed in becoming law by the action of the House of Lords. The reply will be that a great portion of it was not even discussed in the House of Commons, and I cannot help thinking that this reply will strengthen the Unionists at the General Election.

I never gave a vote with more absolute belief in its propriety than I did against Clause 6. This clause creates an Upper House in Ireland. I have no objection to the Irish having two, or two dozen, Houses of Legislature, if it so pleases them. What I object to is that the Upper House is to be elected by persons having a £20 qualification. This practically deprives artisans and labourers of the franchise, and I should have considered that I was false to the principle of one man one vote, and to the vote belonging to the individual and not to the possession of property, had I not registered a protest against this outrageous negation of the most elementary principle of democracy. Had such a proposal been made by a Tory Government, every Radical would have been up in arms against it. What I should oppose were it proposed by a Tory Government, I shall always oppose when proposed by a Liberal Government. A high property electoral qualification does not become proper because it is introduced into a Bill by a Liberal Administration.

Hating as I do an hereditary Legislative Chamber, I prefer it to a Chamber brought into existence by excluding from the poll the majority of citizens. In the one case, we create privileged Legislators; in the other case, we not only do this, but we create privileged electors. If the two Irish Legislative Chambers disagree, they sit together. Why in this joint assembly should a man with a £20 qualification have two votes, and a man without this qualification only one? If we recognise this right in Ireland, how can we protest against plural voting in Great Britain?

I have seen it asserted that if Clause 6 had been lost the Bill would have been lost. What really would have occurred would have been that the Clause would have been re-inserted on Report, without the obnoxious property qualification. A Bill is lost when anything contrary to its principle is carried in Committee; and I hardly think that the most abject believer in the inspiration of the Bill would hold that the question of Home Rule is involved in Members of an Irish Upper House being elected by about one-fifth of the Irish electorate, in defiance of the very corner-stone of the democratic creed.

So, too, I disagree with many of the Liberal scribes, who weep over the shouts of the Unionists when the clauses were put at 10 p.m. without discussion. They made a good deal of noise, and repeated the words "gag" and "shame." This, I presume, relieved their feelings; but to guillotine a man, and to complain of his objecting loudly to his having his head cut off, is asking too much. Unless I am greatly mistaken, when, in the '80 and the '86 Parliaments, coercion was carried by the guillotine, the noise was even greater, and the outcries of the guillotined far louder. In all these cases the operation may have been necessary, but that action under similar circumstances should be deemed disgraceful when adopted by Tories, and legitimate when adopted by Liberals, is nonsense.

I greatly question, however, whether order is enhanced by members of either side of the House jumping up from their seats, waving their hats, and loudly cheering their respective leaders as they return from the division lobbies. That there should be a hearty cheer on the part of the victors after an important division is legitimate, and in accordance with usage; but the hat-waving reception of the respective leaders on the part of their followers is a new departure, and, to my thinking, one more honoured in the breach than in the observance.

SCRUTATOR.

MOB AND MONARCHY.

THREE ideas occurred to me in studying the scene in the streets last Thursday:—(1) That the show was confined to too small a space; (2) that the police acquitted themselves admirably of the unnecessarily heavy burden thus cast upon them; (3) that if I were a Constitutional Sovereign I should have a State Procession through the streets at least once a year. That the space available for the procession was too small must have been a self-evident proposition to any one who had a good view of the streets. At Hyde Park Corner and the top of St. James's-street the squeezing and struggling for a sight of the show was horrible and sickening. Throughout the route the congestion among the sightseers on the pavement was such that it must have deprived the sight of all real pleasure. On the occasion of the Jubilee procession, though the spectators must have been more than twice as numerous, the crowd was nothing like as dense. Why? Because it was spread over more than double the space. Not only was the line of route twice as long, but it traversed spaces like Charing Cross, Whitehall, and Parliament-square, capable of accommodating vast throngs while leaving them ample breathing space. This year, with the exception of Hyde Park Corner, there was no open "place" along the line of route. The whole course could not have measured much more than a mile and a half, and from end to end of this distance the loyal subjects who desired to gaze on their future rulers were packed like sardines between a line of police and soldiers on the one side and walls and railings on the other. This seems to me an inexcusable error on the part of those who fixed the route. The procession might have been a private or a public one. In the former case nothing could have been easier than to pass from Buckingham Palace to St. James's and back, and to admit only privileged spectators to the line of route. But by going a mile and a-half out of the way, the procession was made a public function, and it was recognised that the people should have an opportunity of seeing the bridal party. When conceding so much, it would have been just as easy to concede all. While you are about it, it is as easy to go three miles as a mile and a-half. By adopting this course, tens of thousands of people would have been admitted to a sight of the show who could not get near it on Thursday; and all would have seen it in some degree of comfort, which nobody could have done as it was. A large additional number of deserving householders and shopkeepers, who contribute substantially to the cost of the Monarchy, would also have been able to make a few pounds by letting seats. These points should be borne in mind when next a State pageant is held coram populo.

One consequence of this was to throw, as I have said, most unnecessary strain upon the police. That they acquitted themselves most admirably under this strain has already been officially acknowledged; but, as a disinterested spectator, I should like to add my testimony in the same direction. It was my privilege to enjoy a bird's-eye view of the proceedings from a window of the Hotel Albemarle, commanding the junctions of Albemarle-street, Bond-street, St. James's-street, and Piccadilly. By general confession this was, I believe, the warmest corner of the field. The pressure of the crowds converging eastwards and southwards upon St. James's-street was enormous, and by about 11.30 the whole width of Piccadilly was densely packed for a distance of a hundred yards eastward from St. James's-street. The whole weight of this mass of human beings—mobile as a stream of water—was kept back by a dozen or two of constables, backed up by a few mounted men. The mere bodily strain of this work is enormous. It means ceaseless pushing, struggling, and fighting—good-humoured fighting—under a broiling July sun for several hours. From time to time the constables in the thick of the fray had to retire to get breath and mop themselves down. I saw one gallant officer carried out in a fainting condition and revived with smelling salts. The trial to the temper is equally severe, for the crowd, when pushed, continually push back, and occasionally individuals resist forcibly, and have to be bodily removed. It is the fashion to criticise the policeman's temper, but I am bound to say that it is a mystery to me how any human being, put to such work on such a day, could refrain from hitting out right and left regardless of the consequences. The tenderness of the police for the crowd was indeed phenomenal, more especially in the care which they took of the fainting and injured—who were not a few. It struck me that under the circumstances a barrier of some kind should have been fixed across Piccadilly at the end of Bond-street as soon as it became evident that there was no room for more people along the line of route. This would have eased the strain on the police, and have saved the necessity for the rough handling of the people in the front rows. I also think that the police, when out on occasions like these, should be provided with military water-bottles. How they stuck to their work under the heat of last Thursday, without liquid refreshment of some kind, I am at a loss to imagine. Except, however, in these two points, I do not see any way in which the arrangements could have been improved.

But, when everything is said and done, what does it all mean? That is the question which must come uppermost in the mind of any level-headed observer looking at this extraordinary scene from an upper window. What went the masses out for to see? What impelled them to stand for hours under the mid-summer sun, with aching feet and craning necks, to be crushed by one another, to be mauled by policemen, to be trodden on and kicked by horses? One answer is ready at once. "A magnificent and unparalleled demonstration of loyalty," the classes and their organs call it. Unparalleled fiddlestick! You might as well say that love of horse-flesh takes the crowd to Epsom Downs on Derby Day, or that love of the higher education takes them to the river-side to see the Oxford and Cambridge Boat-race. There were all sorts of motives at work in Thursday's crowd, of course, and personal devotion to the reigning dynasty among the rest, though you would find a good deal more of the latter sentiment in the high-priced window-seats than on the pavement and in the gutter. But in the main what takes the crowd into the streets on an occasion like this is the chance of seeing a fine show for nothing; curiosity to catch a glimpse of the great personages who are so much talked about and so little seen; and, most of all, the pure gregariousness which prompts everybody to go and see what he or she thinks everybody else is going to see. Where the loyalty does come in, to my thinking, is as a sort of after-thought. No level-headed spectator can fail to see this, that when after the waiting, and the perspiring, and the squeezing, and the mauling, the grand personages eventually come along, the whole crowd cheers with one throat, and waves its hat or handkerchief like one man; and I don't doubt for a minute that the most lukewarm among them go away with genial feelings towards the "good old Queen," or "good old Wales," and the rest of their Royal Highnesses, and possibly even a feeling of indebtedness to those exalted personages for a real day's enjoyment. That is why I say that if I were a Constitutional Sovereign I would have a show of this kind at least once a year. The truth is, that such a function popularises every one of the exalted individuals who take part in it. What is it that has kept the effete and corrupt old Corporation of London in the land of the living so long after its last hour ought to have come? Why, the Lord Mayor's Show, and nothing else. The people don't go to see the Lord Mayor's Show because they love the Corporation of London; but they get a sort of liking for the Corporation of London through going to see the Lord Mayor's Show. And, after all, there is an element of reason in this. We have far too few open-air pageants and public spectacles, and the people feel a proportionate regard for any institution which ensures them an occasional gratification of this kind. Monarchy has become in England a purely ornamental institution. If it ceases to be ornamental, it will cease to exist; but if it continues to be ornamental, in a way that the people can understand, if its representatives will vouchsafe to exhibit themselves in State, and condescend to court the cheers of the crowd, it will last till the next political earthquake, and the next earthquake may be deferred for many years.

I sincerely trust that the marriage will prove a happy one, both to bride and bridegroom. The Duke of York had to marry some one, and it was far better that he should marry an English young lady than one of the German Princesses who are in the matrimonial market. It is true that Princess May is the daughter of a German Prince, but she has lived all her life in England, and this makes her more of an Englishwoman than if she had been the daughter of an Englishman and been brought up abroad, whilst there seems no reason to suppose that the marriage will not turn out a success in its domestic aspect. Marriages, it is said, are made in Heaven. This is poetic nonsense, for we know on the highest authority that in Heaven there is neither marriage nor giving in marriage. Royal marriages must be made with a due regard to the feelings of the two immediately concerned, and also to public exigencies, and both these conditions appear in this case to have been fulfilled.

THE CLOTH SCANDAL IN PARLIAMENT.

I concluded my last reference to the Army Cloth Scandal with a polite hint to the authorities concerned that a matter of such a nature could not be allowed to rest where it then stood. This intimation was justified last week, when Mr. A. C. Morton introduced the matter to the notice of the House of Commons. The reply given by the Secretary of State for War to Mr. Morton's question was a very singular one. He stated in the first place that Couper, the Canterbury Master-Tailor who is proved to have sold Government cloth to Messrs. Terry & Co., of Milk-street, has been suspended from his military duties; secondly, that a case with a view to a criminal prosecution has been laid before counsel, but that counsel's opinion was adverse to proceedings; thirdly, that arrangements have been, or are being made, in connection with regimental clothing which will render any repetition of the past irregularities impossible. The last assurance is so consoling, that I should like to accept it unreservedly and let bygones be bygones; but the other statements of the Secretary of State unavoidably provoke further comment.

The suspension of Couper had, I believe, been decided upon when I first called attention to the scandal. The remark which I made upon it then is equally to the point now. Couper either purloined cloth and made away with it, or he did not. If he did not, for what has he been punished? If he did, why has he not been prosecuted? Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, indeed, has cleared up one point. He informed Mr. Morton that Couper was merely a civilian attached to the Depot. That means, I presume, that he was not subject to military discipline, and it may explain why he was not Court-martialled and dealt with by the military power. But it explains nothing as to why, while being removed from his military appointment, he was not handed over to "the Civil arm." As regards the other tailor who is proved to have dealt with Terry & Co.—Stone, of Lucknow—Mr. Campbell-Bannerman takes refuge behind the Indian Government, who, it seems, are the authority to deal with that case. Concerning Stone, I happen to know, what I did not know in Couper's case, that he also is a civilian. The rank of "Sergeant-Major" which he assumes in his invoices is, I understand, merely an honorary rank. He, too, it must therefore be assumed, is amenable to the civil power or to none. The position of Messrs. Terry & Co. seems to be very similar to that of the Master-Tailors. As to the facts, there is no question. The cloth was sold by the tailors, and bought by Terry. The only question is, Was there guilty intent or knowledge on either side? The Secretary of War tells us that in the opinion of counsel there is not evidence on which a jury could be asked to decide that there was such knowledge. On the face of it, nothing could be more satisfactory to all parties. But, unfortunately, I know—as most of my readers will also know—that the value of counsel's opinion depends upon a variety of circumstances, and, among others, upon the materials which are laid before counsel. For this reason, I should like to know in this case who "counsel" was, and what facts were submitted to him. Would Mr. Campbell-

Sanitary Surveys.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

Bannerman kindly enlighten Parliament and the public on this important point? The whole business, not excluding the action of the authorities, is of such a suspicious nature that nothing less than this will dispose of the suggestion that a gross Service scandal has been deliberately hushed up. The facts as I originally stated them, and as they can be proved by unimpeachable evidence, raise a strong primâ facie case of wrongful dealing with Government goods. The punishment of Couper implies that the War Office accept that view. If any answer can be made, it has not yet been forthcoming; on the contrary, the attempts of certain of the implicated parties to exculpate themselves have only plunged them deeper into the mire. In this state of things, there being no room for any third alternative between "guilty" and "not guilty," it is inexplicable how counsel, if properly instructed, can have come to the conclusion that there was no primâ facie case to go to a jury, or even to a Magistrate.

On Monday Mr. Asquith replied to a further question of Mr. Morton in regard to Messrs. Terry and the allegation that the City Police had been acting in opposition to Scotland Yard. Mr. Asquith said that "he had been informed that Messrs. Terry's solicitor made an official complaint to the City Police respecting an alleged theft of documents connected with their clients' business. Inspector Mitchell was instructed in the usual course to make inquiries. It is not the fact, as I understand, that Inspector Mitchell has demanded from any one the return of any documents connected with Messrs. Terry's business." What I assert, and what I am prepared to prove, is, that the Scotland Yard authorities had, in the interests of justice, procured certain invoices from Terry's employés, which had been delivered by Army Tailors with the Government cloth, showing the amount of the purchases, and that Mitchell went to the same employés, and threatened them with the terrors of the law if the invoices were not given up. I also assert that when Mitchell did this, he had already been to Scotland Yard, and was in possession of all the facts respecting these invoices. Mr. Asquith has, of course, no jurisdiction over the City Police, beyond the general right to dismiss the Chief Commissioner. But it certainly seems to me that the City Corporation owes it to itself to have an independent investigation into the matter, in which case I shall be prepared to submit the most convincing evidence of my accuracy.

"TRUTH" AND THE DEVIL.

A new experience has been afforded me this week. I have been "described and denounced" from the pulpit. A reverend gentleman, called De Kewer Williams, paid me this compliment at the Old Gravel Pit Chapel, Hackney, on Sunday, after advertising his intention previously in the local papers — for all the world as though he were a play-actor, or a concert-giver, or any other son of Belial. It seems that De Kewer Williams has been commissioned, like Balaam of old, to curse the editor of TRUTH on behalf of John James Jones of the London Samaritan Society. He is evidently the right man for the purpose, for he has received a special revelation as to the mode in which the exposure of John James Jones in these columns came about. Those of my readers who have seen the Jones articles will be interested in the following particulars, as supplied to the Old Gravel Pit congregation: —

> The Devil in the course of his visits to our watering-places, which he visits each in their proper season, came to Sandgate, and was attracted by the red brick building there. He was the only one of all the visitors who was not pleased. It was altogether too good for him. . . . He came to London. He went down to Pope's Villa, Twickenham, where he is a frequent visitor. He called, and after due salutation, he said, "Look here, Labouchere, I have come from Sandgate, and they are just about to open one of those Convalescent Homes there. I find it is founded by a man of the name of Jones. I also find, so far as I can tell about the scheme, that there is a lot of Christians. Can you spoil and stop the growth of that?" Labouchere answered, "Yes, perhaps I can accept your brief, and I will do my best to make a good case. I know that Jones. He's head of a band of men down in a decayed district called Homerton, and I should say a man of rather considerable ability and prodigious energy." Labouchere does things well for the Devil. He thinks men are bound to make mistakes, and that men have enemies, especially if they have filled public positions, and have relations who are jealous of their success. So he says, "I can find counts enough for indictment, and then there's my man Voules. He is a non-commissioned officer in the Devil's Own Regiment. He is very clever at facts, and still more clever at inventing them. We will put our heads together, and I think the thing will be done."

In this way was I briefed as the "Devil's Advocate" in the matter of John James Jones. What surprises me is that the Reverend Williams refrains from giving any particulars about the fees. This is a matter on which I think I should have bestowed some thought in a case of this magnitude, more especially in dealing with a client who is not to be trusted any further than you can see him. Does Mr. Williams think that I took up the case "on spec.," like Messrs. Dodson & Fogg? I fear that the prospect of getting the costs out of the other side would not be a promising one.

From the above extract the character of this curious vindication of John James may be pretty accurately judged. In the course of the service his reverence informed his audience, apropos of nothing in particular, that he was in his seventy-seventh year. He appears to be enjoying a singularly green old age, and to this greenness is doubtless due the simplicity of his method of exculpating Jones. To represent TRUTH as directly inspired by the Devil for the purpose of destroying a blameless Christian philanthropist is a very convenient way of getting round awkward facts, but if the Old Gravel Pittites can be hoodwinked in this way into supposing that the charges against Jones have been answered, they must be as green as their pastor.

I am by no means, however, certain that an advocate of the Devil would not be a useful functionary when the plea of being a philanthropist is put forward by any one, and the public are asked on this plea to furnish him with money. When a departed worthy is to be elevated to the rank of a Saint at Rome, a lawyer is always engaged to urge all that can be said against the proposed Saintship, and he is called the Advocatus Diaboli. Now it is clear that a hundred men dubbed saints after their death do not—even supposing that they obtain the grade under false pretences—do as much harm as one spurious philanthropist living at the expense of the charitable.

FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

HERNANI PLAYING HAMLET.

The impersonations of M. Mounet-Sully have been the chief features of the closing week of the French plays at Drury Lane, and as a star on a London stage Mounet-Sully shines rather dimly after Sarah Bernhardt, the elder Coquelin, and Delaunay, or even by the side of Got and Jane Hading. His tragic style, with his rhythmical intonation of heroic verse, ending in his favourite roar of passion, is, I suppose, an acquired taste; and it is a taste which the average English playgoer has certainly not acquired yet. It is very sound, very artistic, and—to a French ear—very moving, no doubt. But it is not suited to Hamlet, nor to those most familiar with Hamlet upon the stage. It is, of course, only fair to admit that, play the part as admirably as he might from the standpoint afforded by the singular version of MM. Dumas and Meurice, the Parisian actor could not hope to satisfy those whose view of the drama is bounded by the limits of Shakespearean tradition. He was sure to be a good deal too French for that, just as we were certain to have been a good deal too insular in our prejudices to allow the possibility of such a result. But it did not seem to me that Mounet-Sully's execution gave his conception of the character a chance of making its mark. This conception, so far as I could gather, was of the commonplace melodramatic order, and suggested Hernani playing at being the Prince of Denmark. It reminded me most of the reading of Mr. Wilson Barrett, and it had absolutely nothing whereby to recall the princely gallantry of Fechter, the manly tenderness of Salvini, or the dignified philosophy of Irving. But it was Wilson Barrett suffering from an attack of hydrophobia, and uttering from time to time strange cries, half bark and half yell, in token of insanity. Stranger sounds than some of those emitted by Mounet-Sully after his play-scene I have never heard upon the stage, and it can only have been a stern sense of discipline which enabled the Horatio and Rosencrantz and Guildenstern of the occasion to keep their countenances while their Prince yelped out the triumph of his boisterous strategy. For some unexplained reason, M. Got handed over his rôle of Polonius to a feeble substitute—a poor compliment, I thought, to the audience, and the chief actor of the occasion. Mdlle. Reichenberg's Ophelia was prim and pretty in school-girlish fashion; but Miss Ellen Terry, to say nothing of Mrs. Beerbohm Tree, has spoilt us for Ophelias who do not rise above the graceful mannerism of the ingénue.

After "Hamlet," "Hernani" came as a welcome relief, since the players, who were all abroad in Shakespeare, naturally seemed quite at home in Victor Hugo. It would be useless to pretend that the voix d'or of the divine Sarah was not missed in Doña Sol's last act, or that M. Le Bargy, clever actor though he is proving himself, can equal M. Worms in the long-winded rôle of Don Carlos. But on Saturday night the fiery impetuosity of Mounet-Sully's desperate Hernani may fairly be said to have carried all before it, and to have justified the storm of applause aroused by outbursts such as are within the physical means of very few actors indeed. I was agreeably surprised, too, with the dignified force of the Ruy Gomez of M. Sylvain, whom I have seldom seen to such advantage.

A FORTUNATE UNDERSTUDY.

The leading lady's indisposition is the understudy's opportunity, and it is an opportunity which seldom lasts long if it is employed to good advantage. There is no such remedy for the invalid actress as the report of a hit made by her temporary substitute. Mrs. Patrick Campbell, however, was really seriously ill the other day, and now, I am glad to hear, is really well again; and it must have been a great satisfaction to Mr. Alexander and Mr. Pinero to find her place filled in her unavoidable absence so capably as it was by Miss Granville, a young actress hitherto unknown to fame. I went to see Miss Granville's performance the other night, prepared to give it the few words of kindly appreciation customary in the case of a difficult task pluckily but indifferently fulfilled at very short notice. I found myself studying with interest an impersonation which had evidently been thought out and rehearsed as carefully as Mrs. Campbell's own, and which brought out many of the characteristics of the second Mrs. Tanqueray with really admirable precision and delicacy of effect. There were, as might be expected, some rough places in the young actress's work—she did not always catch the true note of hysterical discontent, and she missed the hint of commonness and vulgarity underlying some of the unhappy woman's manifestations of petulance and jealousy. But, on the whole, this fortunate understudy conveyed the spirit of the subtle creation with remarkable success, not only of conception, but of execution, and I was not surprised to see her efforts heartily approved by a crowded house. If she continues working in a good school, Miss Granville, who has many personal advantages in her favour, should go far.

SOME MATINÉES.

There have, I think, been fewer trial matinées than usual this season, and those that have taken place have hardly succeeded in unearthing any piece worthy of more formal presentation before the public. Miss Annie Rose, it is true, felt so encouraged by the result of her afternoon's doings with "St. Ronan's Well" the other day that she has taken the Royalty for the express purpose of giving Messrs. Davey and Pollock's adaptation the chance of a run. But Miss Rose's experience is the exception, and I have a shrewd suspicion that she enters upon the management of the dingy little house in Soho, with a view to her projected appearance there as Pauline Deschappelles. It would hardly do nowadays to announce that one had taken a theatre in cold blood for the revival of the rococo sentiment of the "Lady of Lyons," so, perhaps, "St. Ronan's Well" is only a stalking-horse after all. Even so, however, it has better luck than the average matinée production, of which "The Medical Student" of Messrs. Frances and Lasland, as tried the other afternoon at the Strand, may be considered a fair specimen. For some reason, which I have never been able satisfactorily to determine, the playgoer who in the evening would ostentatiously resent being aimlessly puzzled seems, in the morning, to find the process not only endurable, but actually entertaining. So "The Medical Student" was played, and very smartly played, too, before people who laughed consumedly over the purposeless falsehoods told by most of its dramatis personæ, and who did not seem irritated or even bored by the mechanical game of mistaken identity kept up by such desperate shifts through three whole acts. Of these happily-disposed folk I regret to say I was not one, and I could not honestly wish for the piece anything more than an ephemeral existence. At the same time, I could not but recognise in Mr. James Welch's performance of a prominent part several of the attributes of a good comedian who promises to be better still. Although sometimes a little noisy and self-assertive, Mr. Welch was able to show that he has genuine humour, and that this humour has an unusually distinct character of its own.

---

"The Goldsmiths' & Silversmiths' Company, of 112, Regent-street, W., have absorbed the whole of the business of the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Limited, of Cornhill, which has been established for over 150 years, and of which Sir Joseph Savory, Bart, M.P., (N. Westmoreland), was the Managing Director. We certainly know of no firm that has made such rapid progress as the Goldsmiths' & Silversmiths' Company, to whose show-rooms the above business has been transferred."

Three other afternoon productions, quite typical in their amateurish imbecility, were those given at the Avenue Theatre on Saturday, for the benefit of an excellent charity connected with Wellington College. These were a musical farce, a costume comedy, and an operetta. They were all from the pen of a Mr. Bartholeyns, who left me unable to decide which kind of piece he is least able to write. He meant well, of course, by his triple bill, but I could not help wishing that he had hit upon some other means for obtaining his benevolent object.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE FRENCH BRET HARTE.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT'S death has revived an interest in his works. He was admittedly the son of Flaubert, from whom he inherited his sanguine temperament, ruddy complexion, the full starting veins in his temples, the bull-neck, and the flaw in the nervous system. Flaubert was subject to epileptic fits, and Guy de Maupassant died of general paralysis preceded by madness before he had reached middle-age. As a writer, he was with ease what Flaubert tried to be by great efforts, and something more, he having a deeper insight into what seem the ordinary circumstances of life. He had also a sense of fun and a joyousness of manner and of heart, until the cloud of madness began to gather over him. If his pace had been less fast, he might not have fallen lower than the hypochondriacal state. But he was agog for sensations, and fancied that women could only be understood where off their guard, and therefore could only be advantageously studied in the intimacy of demi monde relations. All his lady friends did not belong to that sphere, but most of them acted as if they did. He felt shy and ill at ease in the company of ladies who did not show, in the lamp-black circles round their eyes and the paint and powder on their cheeks, that they were fair game. His income when he was actively engaged as an author was nearer to £3,000 than to £2,000 a year, and the royalties of his works brought in a handsome income when he was a lunatic. Bret Harte's early Californian stories afford the nearest parallel that I can think of, so far as manner goes, to Guy de Maupassant's contributions to the Médan tales which he published soon after the war. He had had for years before he published anything Flaubert for a literary professor. Flaubert held bookmaking in horror, and often drudged as much to prune as he beat his brains to find the closest fitting words for the idea he wanted to express. He did not understand, however, that to be able to express with force, clearness, and brevity one should have something first in one's head that is worth expressing. Maupassant did. But he thought that anything—no matter what—might if well observed be an interesting subject. His own life is given in "Pierre et Jean"; but he wraps up Flaubert so well as to disguise him. He wrote best about low, farmhouse, and squirarchical life in Normandy, his native province. There is not one of his short stories that is not classical. Nobody understood better when to leave off, and that a firm, sketchy stroke, if truthful, is better than the finest elaboration. He lived greatly in the open air and on the sea, had a villa at Etretat, another at Cannes, and a small bijou yacht, Bel Ami, in which he used to make trips to Africa and the Levant. There was a touch, but not more, of the satyr in his drollery. Nobody had a keener sense of the tragical element in human life, and yet he was not alive to the deeply serious one. He jumped into fame, but less suddenly than the world thought, he having undergone a long period of preparation under Flaubert. The war stimulated powerfully his brain, as it did that of Daudet. From the day he published "Boule de Suif," in 1872, until he brought out his last work, "Le Horla," he had a continued run of public favour. Every tale, novel, or play was a success. He was for several years my near neighbour in Paris, with which the Eiffel tower disgusted him. His rage and fury were uncontrollable whenever he saw that skeleton edifice, and he rushed to Algiers in summer to avoid seeing it. This was the beginning of his madness, which he accelerated by trying to restore his shattered system with drugs. In the closing period of his authorship he went with a rush from reality to phantasy. A great gulf lies between "Boule de Suif" and "Le Horla," which is the child of hallucination wrought by cerebral anæmia. Maupassant's novels "Une Vie," "Mont Oriol," "Fort comme la Mort" were written to make money and show he had sustaining power. They are admirable, but want the perfection of the small tales, which fell as if with careless grace from his pen, and had not a word too many, nor would be the better for the smallest change. They may be called small epics of a world that has no longer heroes, or that, at any rate, does not believe in heroism.

The quadrille, there being no Court here, is now almost antiquated. When there were an Emperor and Empress, the best way for showing them to the assembled guests in a ball-room was to have a quadrille of honour. It was a way of putting them, and the other illustrious personages present, through their paces. Of course, the quadrille of honour was formal as it could be. Still, a good deal of the personality of each dancer oozed out. The polka, which came in during the reign of Louis Philippe, and was first danced in Paris at the Opera House by the Elssler sisters, is altogether out. Indeed, there is now no Society dance in vogue, unless the waltz, and it is danced as a cotillon. Taking this character, it is more varied, and room is given for showing preferences on the side of the danseuses, and of courteous gallantry on that of the danseurs. At "white" or rosebud balls, the cotillon waltz is kept insipid from a fear that otherwise it might lead to romantic states of feeling. At "rose" balls, the name given to those dances at which there are only young married ladies, and cavaliers not much older, animation is allowable. There is more liveliness shown by the ladies than the gentlemen, le pschutteux of this season being a dreary creature. Dreariness is thought pschutt. This word should be whistled through slightly parted lips. Le pschutteux takes the place of le gommeux, and is a kind of grandson of le petit crevé. He dresses in clothes of a skimp cut. The trousers, to make him I dare say resemble a groom, are almost a skin fit. Before he was known by his present nickname he was called a boudiné, his trousered legs resembling sausages. The pschutteux has a fine show of shirt cuffs and collars, the former appearing to force his head higher up than nature intended from his shoulders. He has to keep his spine in a permanent curve to be able to constantly survey his feet. The shoes are, it must be owned, perfect in their way, they being a neat fit of the finest leather, and of the best make. The pschutteux is proud of his feet, and loses no opportunity to thrust them into notice. Not being sure whether he should or should not wear gloves, he carries a pair in one hand, and a bamboo cane in the other. The chronic fear in which he lives is of his arms touching his body when he walks. A square eye-glass is stuck in one of his eyes. The genre of the hour is to cultivate a stare, which would be meaningless were it not slightly insolent. This caterpillar crawls round "roses," but does not condescend to notice any woman over thirty, unless, indeed, her means enable her to give sumptuous entertainments. If he has used up his fortune as a gambler, he does not object to pay court to dames of venerable ages and long purses who indulge in the illusion of being still youthful. The American young man has cut out the pschutteux in the favour of a good many of these antiquities. Young America is well posted up about most of the current topics, and knows how to make himself useful. The pschutteux is idiotic. But he knows how to waltz, and he is, therefore, sought after by most of those who give either "white" or "rose" balls. Invitations to these festive gatherings are seldom printed. The date and hour at which the ball is to come off are written on a visiting card, with the words, "un tour de valse."

It must seem, to all those who recollect the late Queen Christina, a droll idea for the Spaniards to set up a statue in her honour at Madrid. She was one of the most openly, impudently, and perseveringly unscrupulous persons that ever lived. Her great virtue was a good temper, which was allied with a strong will. For her Royal children she scarcely cared. But she was a most affectionate mother to a child who preceded her marriage with the King of Spain, and to her offspring by Muñoz, a Sergeant of her Guard when she fell in love with him. The beauty of her second recognisable family in a degree justified her passion for the Sergeant, who did not know how to sign his name when she took him up. The sons, however, had bad constitutions, and died of consumption just as they each verged on manhood. They were brought up at La Malmaison, a most unhealthy spot at the foot of a steep hill and on an alluvial soil. Their Royal mother was always, in the lifetime of her second husband, attending to babies, getting daughters married, or going to the funerals of her sons. The Muñoz, or, as they were called, Rianzares-y-Borbon girls, were as lovely as the dawn, and had the graces which make liveliness lovable. The Poles here have never got over the death of the one who married Prince Ladislas Czartoryski. She left a son, who has recently entered a monastic order as an infirmarian, he feeling it to be his mission to attend to the sick poor. Another Muñoz-y-Borbon married the Prince del Drogo, who was, through the Lucchesi Palli, connected with the Comte de Chambord. She lives in Rome. The third became a Princesse de Courtenay-Bauffremont. Her husband really was descended in the direct line from Saint Louis, and his forbears might, after the Turks had beaten them out of Constantinople, where they sat on the Imperial throne, have taken rank as equals of the Condés, if they had not been too indolent to claim it in time. Such as Christina was, she was an improvement on the monarchs who intervened between her regency and the reign of Isabella I. She was no persecutor, nor in any degree bigoted. Her terrible vice was greed for money. And still she was profuse, though her household was well ordered. She confiscated Church lands to buy them cheap, and, as the sleeping partner in English and French industrial Companies, launched into Stock Exchange speculations and plunged into slave-kidnapping ventures to replenish the slave market at Havana. On every slave imported into Cuba she had a royalty. One of her greatest friends was the Comtesse de Montijo, at whose house at Madrid, by the way, the Duc de Montpensier used to pass his evenings after the Comtesse was forbidden by her son-in-law, the late Emperor, to live in Paris. Christina was for some time the idol of the Madreline people. Her troops were called after her "Christinos" when the seven years' civil war between them and the Carlists was being fought. But they changed their tune, and sang to her, as they thought, dishonour:—

Del pellejo de Christina
Quiro hacer un arnero
Para cerna la cebada
Al caballo d'Espartero.

Or,

With Christina's skin
I would like to make a sieve
To sift the barley
Of Espartero's horse.

Christina was twice exiled, and when a proscript always came to live here. She connived with Louis Philippe, for the sake of the ante-nuptial son and the Muñoz family, at the marriage of her daughter, Isabella II., with the Infant Don Francisco, who had been brought up in Paris under the very special care of a doctor appointed by Louis Philippe to attend to him at the Lycée Henri Quatre. He became there an ill-conditioned mannikin, and when he was thought to be incurably so was put forward as a proper person to be King Consort. On selling her house in the Rue de Courcelles to the Emperor, I believe for the Princesse Mathilde, Christina built the palace in the Champs Elysées which the Duchesse d'Uzès bought of her executors. She also built a roomy and imposing-looking villa at Sainte Adresse for the benefit of sea air. Between the purchase-money of the ground, the architect's bills, the subsequent construction of groynes and sea-walls, to keep house, grounds, and all from slipping into the sea, the place cost her about £600,000, and was not sold for a seventh of that sum. Her last whim when she was there, at a time when I was her neighbour, was a dwarf. She was tired of nearly everything, except the mannikin favourite, whom every one thought she would marry when Rian Muñoz died. The dwarf had an elegant carriage for himself, in which he used to drive, attended by a pair of servants and accompanied by a gentleman, for there is hardly any service that courtiers will not perform. The then aged Queen often brought him on to a terrace on the sea-wall, and used to handle him exactly as though he were a favourite Skye terrier. I believe that she bought of the Papal Government a ducal title for him, to give him some sort of currency in her upper household.

The resources of Ulster House, Conduit-street, enable Messrs. Benjamin, in cases of need, to execute orders in 24 hours.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

A FIERY sun set in a grey-blue sky; a winding-way, dear Lady Betty, stretching for miles through the heart of modern Babylon, lined with soldiery and bristling with bayonets; dense throngs of patchwork people; myriads of restless faces rising from the pavements to the very house-tops; flags, bunting, crimson cloth, indescribable decorations, festoons, Venetian-masts, and triumphal-arches. The glitter and the clatter of cavalry; scarlet and white; burnished steel breast-plates, and silver-steel helmets; a cluster of dead-gold chariots; the flashing of diamonds and the sparkling of gems; Kings, Queens, and Princes; a bridegroom and a bride; an aged lady who rules over an Empire. A roar. A spectacle, an historical incident, a human emotion riveting a Sovereign People to a Sovereign House.

It was gorgeous; it was solid, and it was not theatrical. A Princess fresh from the peaceful Park of Richmond, a Prince from the silent sea, together about to launch their bark upon the unknown waters of Time! Yet another chapter opened in the history of the race! Rocks ahead, shoals, shallows, and storms. The populace that cheered to-day may rage to-morrow. To their hovels in the East the patient poor have borne back the picture of the pageant. Splendour and starvation! Our masters the majority, what will they think of it?

* * * * *

For the authorities at Scotland Yard Thursday was an exceptionally anxious day, an anxiety which was not lessened by the presence of the Czarewitch in the procession. Early that morning the police found it necessary to communicate to the military authorities that there might be some possibility of an attempted outrage, and strict orders were at once issued to the officers in command of the troops that no one was to be permitted to break through the lines under any pretence whatever. Further stringent orders were given as to the course that should be pursued in the event of any such attempt being made. A circumstance which to a certain degree made these precautions seem the more necessary was that a stranger was discovered to have been present at one of the recent Royal entertainments. He appears to have been for fully half an hour in the rooms before being observed.

But others besides the police authorities have had to undergo exceptional inconvenience in connection with the Royal Marriage festivities. All the foreign Ambassadors were, of course, invited to the wedding. Amongst the foreign Ministers, however, only such were bidden as represented those Sovereigns most nearly connected with our Royal family—that is, the Ministers for Greece, Denmark, Belgium, Roumania, and Portugal. The question arose amongst these foreign representatives as to whether they would be admitted to sit at the Royal table, and, this having been answered in the negative, they appealed to the terms of the Congress of Vienna, and even hinted that unless their demands were acceded to that they must absent themselves from the breakfast. They were, however, pacified, and eventually partook of the breakfast without insisting upon their formal rights. After the wedding ceremony, and after a short interval, it was announced that her Majesty would receive them in the Throne Room, to which they duly repaired.

A prominent official of the town of Henley appears to miscalculate the importance of events, for, it is said that he wrote to a high official of the Court, and after having represented that the date of the Henley Regatta had been fixed close upon a year ago, he requested that representations should be made to the Queen with a view to her postponing the Royal Wedding, so that it might not interfere with the local regatta! This ingenuous individual will by now have found consolation in the fact that Henley was even better attended this year than it ever has been before, and this notwithstanding that her Majesty decided to brave the competition of a Thames regatta.

It was noticed that the 1st Life Guards were not called upon to furnish any escort on the occasion of the Royal marriage. This may have been due to the regiment being somewhat in disgrace. When Major-General Keith-Fraser commanded this Regiment he abolished the white sheepskins and substituted the black in their place. It is more than likely that these were considered out of harmony upon the occasion of a wedding, and that it was for this reason mainly that the 1st Life Guards were omitted from the processions.

A disgraceful incident which occurred in Piccadilly on Thursday cannot be permitted to pass unnoticed. Several heterogeneous clubs have recently established themselves in this thoroughfare. Whilst the roadway was being kept clear for the procession to pass along, certain individuals employed themselves in throwing coins out of the windows of two or three of these so-called clubs for the urchins and those beneath to scramble after. At length some one threw a florin, when, the temptation proving too strong for one of the soldiers on duty, the latter dropped his rifle and, falling out of the ranks, commenced to scuffle with an old woman for the coin. The officer on duty rode up at once, and very rightly put the man under arrest, and ordered him to be marched off to barracks. Here he will be tried by court-martial, and severely punished, as he well deserves to be. Nevertheless, it is not the soldier who is so much at fault as the individual who imported the manners of Petticoat-lane into Piccadilly, and it may be hoped that the Committee of his Club—if it has a Committee—will deal vigorously in his regard. The duties of the military and of the police were sufficiently arduous and serious that day without their having to contend with such unnecessary incitement to disorder from the members of privileged institutions in a respectable thoroughfare. As it was, the officer who most properly put the soldier under arrest was hooted at by the crowd, and it is a matter for satisfaction that no worse than this occurred. Several similar instances were recorded at the time as having happened in the City on Jubilee Day. This may very probably be so; but then Piccadilly is not the City.

A Fair Beautiful Skin.—By washing with Sulpholine Soap the natural tint and peach-like bloom of a perfect complexion is ensured.

A slight contretemps at Apsley House was the cause of some inconvenience to several of the guests of the Duke and Duchess of Wellington. For the seats to view the processions from here three kinds of tickets were issued, and with the usual amiability of the Duke and Duchess, two of these were reserved for the admission of their various tradespeople and for the friends of the servants of the house. Through some unexplained oversight only one small door leading from Hyde Park was set aside for the admission of the several hundreds of guests, and this door was besides closed for a considerable time after they commenced to assemble. It very naturally followed that a great crush occurred, which was the more difficult to endure in consequence of the terrific heat. However, this annoyance was fully compensated for by the magnificent view which was obtained once admission had been secured.

The Imperial Institute is unfortunate. It was officially announced in the papers that the presents received by the Duke and Duchess of York would be exhibited on Friday in the galleries of this institution, and a reference was made to certain regulations which were supposed to appear elsewhere, but which were apparently omitted. Early in the morning in consequence a vast crowd assembled outside, only to find Sir Somers Vine in a state of deplorable distraction, with the entire personnel of the Institute disorganised. The day happened to be one reserved for the Fellows, but Sir Somers Vine ultimately found himself compelled to violate his own regulations and to admit the public en bloc. Sir Somers is not likely to forget in a hurry the discomfort of that morning; nor will those who had the misfortune to visit the Imperial Institute in answer to the official notification. The Belfast linen attracted special attention in consequence of an eccentric innovation in the embroidery of the initials. Many of the presents are most contemptible, and upon the face of them show for what purpose they were offered. Amongst these are amateur daubs framed gorgeously, and bearing large inscriptions recording the names of the generous and disinterested donors.

Of the Marlborough House Garden Party on Wednesday little need be said. The crowd was disgraceful, and the din of two different bands playing different airs at the same time in close proximity to each other was distracting. Many uncalled-for offerings were inexpensively paid for on this occasion.

* * * * *

The graphic and thrilling narrative of the foundering of the Victoria which appeared in the Times of Saturday, and which was part of a private letter addressed by a midshipman to his father, was written by the son of a well-known and popular official at the Court. It is unquestionably the best narrative of the disaster which has as yet been made public.

Chelsea Hospital, as most people know, was built at the instance of Nell Gwynne. The estate, which covers some eighty acres of ground, is not Government property, but belongs solely and entirely to the Army. Since the recent Naval Exhibition, the large acreage employed on that occasion has been allowed to run waste, and it is hoped that next year a popular exhibition may be organised to utilise it. The nondescript concern which calls itself the "Garden of London" at Earl's Court does not appeal to the West-End, for canvas gardens and scene-painted scenery can scarcely do duty for an exhibition of "Gardening and Forestry." It is in contemplation next year to organise a serious exhibition at Chelsea to provide the nucleus for a permanent fund for the benefit of the widows and orphans of those who may happen to lose their lives in the service of their country. By this means an excellent object may be attained, whilst Londoners will once more enjoy the convenience of having an attractive exhibition and pleasant grounds at their disposal during the summer and autumn months.—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

Borwick's Baking Powder. Pure & wholesome, assists digestion.
Borwick's Baking Powder. Guaranteed to be free from alum.
Borwick's Baking Powder. It has the largest sale in the world.

SPORTING NOTES.

THERE has been a small scare about Isinglass, and the disposition to field is so strong that it will not surprise me if he declines to even money. It is asserted that Isinglass looks light, and that, having done so much in the early part of the season, he will not be in form at Doncaster. This is a wonderful theory for the believers in Ravensbury to put forward. Isinglass ran for and won three races during the month of May, and he certainly was not punished on either occasion. Ravensbury has run in six races this year, and in all of them the finishes have been severe. If, therefore, Isinglass is not to be in form in September because he has already done so much work this year, how can people expect Ravensbury to distinguish himself at Doncaster? It is all muddy-minded nonsense to discard Isinglass for Ravensbury on such grounds. As a matter of fact, Isinglass is doing very well, and he has been most judiciously managed, simply with a view to his winning the Leger. There are always, however, the manifold chances and risks of training to be considered, and therefore, in my opinion, it is desperate fatuity to lay odds on Isinglass at present. The rational course is to wait until the day of the race, and, if long odds have then to be laid, at least the backer has the certainty of a good run for his money. There are always these trumpery scares at various times during the summer whenever there is a great favourite for the Leger. There seems to be a keen desire in some quarters to write up Ravensbury, who now stands at 9 to 1, and I will only repeat that if both animals are well at Doncaster, it is good odds on Phocion defeating Mr. Rose's disappointing beast. As to The Jew, who has been rushed up to 100 to 7, he may have won all his races very easily indeed, but, then, what has he ever beaten?

There were only small fields for most of the races at Stockbridge, but the meeting, nevertheless, proved a Moscow campaign for backers. Orme and Marvel having been withdrawn from the Cup, the way was cleared for the two-year-olds, as Bumptious seems to have lost his form. Why the Duke of Portland's Clatterfeet should have been made favourite I cannot understand, for there was nothing wonderful in her having finished a bad second to Sempronius at Newmarket. She had no chance with Arcano, who won at Lewes in the spring, but who had since run badly in the Coventry Stakes at Ascot. He won here very easily indeed, and would probably have been exalted into one of the flyers (such as they are) of the season, if he had not been started for the Hurstbourne Stakes, for which he was backed for a great deal of money, but Sempronius beat him cleverly, and Melancholy was behind the pair. The favourite for this race was the Duke of Westminster's Bullingdon, by Melton out of Shotover, who made such a favourable impression at Ascot, when, being very backward, he ran well for a long way in the Coventry Stakes, and finished second to the Illuminata colt, and Bullingdon was more fit last week than at Ascot, but he is still capable of much improvement, as well he may be, for his exhibition was most ignominious, as he was beaten after half a mile had been traversed. It is impossible to make out Bullingdon's form, for to reconcile his running at Ascot with his collapse at Stockbridge is beyond the wit of man. We shall see how he gets on at Goodwood, where he has several engagements, and, no doubt, he will be started for the Ham Stakes (for which Theseus is entered) and for the Prince of Wales's Post Sweepstakes of £2,400, in which he may meet Glare, Speed, Schoolbook, and Galloping Dick. It is certain that if the Hurstbourne Stakes running was correct then Speed (taking the line through Sempronius and Bullingdon) must be the best two-year-old that has been out this season. The form is a dreadful tangle, and the chances are that we shall presently discover that there are no real flyers among the lot. It only remains for Galloping Dick to beat Speed in the Chesterfield Stakes to-morrow, and then the confusion would become hopeless. It is a pity that the Duke of Westminster should have withdrawn Bullingdon, when the first forfeit was declared, from the £5,000 stake at Sandown Park on Saturday, as he would have had a great advantage in the weights with Glare and Wedding Bell, which are the best of the lot now remaining in the race.

The Golden Handicap of £2,000 at Gatwick has been regarded as a certainty for Worcester, since his easy victory at Sandown Park, and it was a piece of gross stupidity not to have made the conditions include a penalty for winning any race whatever. Worcester, however, will not spoil this handicap so entirely as has been anticipated. Watercress will not run, but the stable expect to have a formidable candidate in Gantlet, who has been going very well indeed lately in her gallops, and she is very nicely weighted with only 7 st. 9 lb. to carry. Cabin Boy is much fancied at Newmarket, but the importance of his victory over Orvieto must not be over-rated, as Mr. Houldsworth's horse had not recovered from his Ascot exertions when he ran at Newmarket the other day. Concrete will be near winning if he only does his best. Prince Hampton cannot stay the course.

Next Tuesday will be one of the most important nomination days of the year, as a great number of stakes at Newmarket, Ascot, Epsom, Goodwood, Manchester, Sandown Park, and Kempton Park close on that day.

A good many people have been curious to see what would come of the attempt of some members of the Jockey Club to get up a protest against the new conditions of the Derby and Oaks, and what, in fact, they would take by their motion, and, as was generally expected, this is just nothing. The conditions of these races for 1895 are precisely the same in every respect. The Epsom Grand Prize (1895) also closes on Tuesday.

At Ascot there are the Coronation Stakes (1895) and the St. James's Palace Stakes (1895), and at Goodwood the Richmond Stakes (1894) and the Sussex Stakes (1895).

At Sandown Park there is the Clarence and Avondale Biennial Race of £4,000 (1895-6), as well as the Eclipse Stakes of £10,000 (1896), and the National Breeders' Produce Stakes (1896) of £5,000.

The Kempton Park authorities intend to persevere with their Duke of York Handicap of £5,000, which will be run (as it was last year) on the Saturday before the Cesarewitch, but as the distance is only a mile, it will not really interfere with the Newmarket event.

The Leybourne stud yearlings, twelve in number, are to be sold at Newmarket to-morrow morning. Half of the lot are sired by Galliard, and there are three animals by Bendigo. The Whimple yearlings are also to be sold to-morrow, and there are twelve of them, ten being sired by Hawkstone.

St. Damien and Bonavista have been placed by Mr. Rose in the private sale list, and Mr. Lowther is desirous of disposing of Cleator, Houndsditch, and Swillington.

No fewer than twelve races at Newmarket close next Tuesday, and it will be interesting to see how the July and Chesterfield for next year get on with their old conditions, not a farthing being added to either event. It is wonderful that the Jockey Club authorities will persist, year after year, in advertising such hopelessly obsolete events as the Royal Stakes and the Bennington Stakes, and really races of the class of the Hastings Plate; the Burwell Stakes, Chippenham Stakes, and the Zetland Plate ought not to close two years before they are run. It is a most absurd and foolish arrangement. The Subscription Stakes is another event which might as well have disappeared from the programme.

The Duke of Westminster's colt Grey Leg, by Pepper and Salt out of Quetta, has won a trial at Newmarket, and is very likely soon to pick up a Maiden Plate or some such race, for I do not suppose that it will be thought worth while to keep this animal for the Findon Stakes at Goodwood, which is his only remaining engagement this year, excepting the Prendergast Stakes at the Newmarket Second October Meeting.

Medicis, Silene, and May Duke are to run for the Eclipse Stakes on Friday, and there may very likely be a few more starters to oppose Orme and La Flèche. Orme was marvellously lucky in winning this same race last year, and the distance is, perhaps, just a trifle too far for the Duke of Westminster's horse. Orme looked well at Ascot, and showed that he retains his form, but I do not fancy that anything conclusive is known concerning the present racing form of La Flèche. Raeburn will not run, for he has been only walking during the last ten days, and I believe that he is a doubtful starter for the Leger. It would have been well for backers if Raeburn had never been foaled, for he has proved a costly creature to them this season, but there certainly was no justification whatever for the craze which prevailed for this animal, so that one cannot feel any sympathy with the asinine herd who insisted that the Duke of Portland would win both the Two Thousand and Derby. I always maintained, when the Raeburn madness was at its height, that the horse stood at a preposterously false price. Whenever Raeburn does win the course will be an easy mile.

The Duke of Westminster has the best-looking lot of yearlings at Eaton just now that has ever been bred there, and they will be sent to Kingsclere in the autumn. There are eight yearlings, of which Orelio is own brother to Ormonde, and Blue Rose is own sister to Blue-Green, and therefore half-sister to Orme. There is a magnificent colt by Sheen out of Farewell, that is named Baddeley; and Adderley is a filly by Ayrshire out of Sandiway, while Tarporley is a colt by St. Simon out of Ruth, and Orphaline is a filly by Bend Or out of Camilla. There is no yearling out of Shotover.

I am informed that Orme is to run his last race on Friday, and that, whether he wins or loses the Eclipse Stakes, he will be forthwith turned out of training, and next season he goes to the stud, standing at Eaton at the fee of 200 gs. Judging from the run there has lately been on untried sires, I should not think that it will be necessary to advertise Orme. This horse's engagements after Sandown Park are only in the Gordon Stakes at Goodwood and the Limekiln Stakes at the Newmarket Houghton Meeting, so far as the present year is concerned. Next year Orme is only in the Rous Memorial Stakes at Ascot and the Champion Plate at Newmarket.

Forty-four two-year-olds have been left in for the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster, including Galloping Dick, Sempronius, Stowmarket, King Charibert, St. Germanus, Schoolbook, Clatterfeet, Illuminata colt, and Speed. There are here all the materials for one of the most interesting and important two-year-old races of the whole season. The dark lot includes Lord Alington's Throstle, half-sister to Common, by Petrarch; Lord Bradford's Hornbeam, by Chippendale out of Hemlock; Mr. D. Cooper's Jack the Dandy, by Satiety out of Satire; Lord Houghton's Miss Hoyden, by Galliard out of Miss Elina; Mr. Houldsworth's Rowallan, by Galopin out of Morgiana; Sir R. Jardine's Kirkhill, by Galliard out of Hawthorn; Mr. Lowther's Millom, half-brother to Workington, by Esterling; Sir J. B. Maple's 4,500 gs. Mintlaw, and his 1,000 gs. filly by Minting out of Gloriosa; Mr. Milner's Jocasta, by St. Simon out of Thebais; Duke of Portland's Cessnock, by Ayrshire out of Wheel of Fortune; Baron Rothschild's Brisk, by Galopin out of Brie; and his Ermenonville, by Tristan out of Ermengarde (La Nievre has been withdrawn); Mr. Vyner's Stone Chat, by Minting out of Stone Clink; Duke of Westminster's Sanderling, by St. Simon out of Sandiway; and Lord Zetland's filly by Minting out of Griselda.

The huge entry for the Sandown Park Stud Produce Stakes, to be run in 1896, has just been printed in the Calendar, and it affords some interesting breeding news. The Prince of Wales has engaged four of the mares at Sandringham — Fanchette and Welfare (St. Simon); Marguerite (Ayrshire); and Poetry (Donovan). Mr. Barclay has six mares, all of which have been sent to Bendigo. The Duke of Beaufort has four mares, including Travancore (Saraband), and Rêve d'Or and Simonetta (Petronel). Mr. Cooper has Lonely (Common); Mons Meg (Donovan); Dorcas (Amphion); Melody (Saraband); and Dingle (Sheen). The Duke of Devonshire has nine mares, not one of which, oddly enough, was sent to his own horse Morion. One of Lord Durham's three is Primrose Day (St. Simon). Lord Ellesmere has two, one of which is Belinda (St. Simon). Mr. Greenall has six mares, all of which were sent to Queen's Birthday. One of Mr. Arthur James's three is Charm, by St. Simon (Marden), and another is Lady Heron (Saraband). Messrs. Jennings have eight mares (all to Trapeze). Major Joicey four (Queen's Birthday). Mr. Lawrence's Bide-a-Wee (dam of Althorp) has been sent to St. Serf. Mr. McCalmont has six mares, all of which have been to Timothy. Sir J. B. Maple has the largest entry in the race, having engaged no fewer than sixteen of his mares. Inchcape, Biondina, and Primrose Dame have all been to Saraband; and Bonnie Rose, Mazurka, Priestess, Princess Arena, and Jennie Winkle to Common. Tarantella (own sister to Saraband) was sent to Ayrshire. The Duchess of Montrose has four of her best mares—St. Marguerite (dam of Seabreeze) (St. Simon), Janette (St Serf), Antibes (Donovan), and Wifey (dam of Satiety) (Ayrshire). Of Colonel North's lot of five, Philomel has been to Nunthorpe and Mirror to Saraband. R. Peck has eight, including Grandeur and Scandal (Common). Lord Penrhyn has engaged Queen of the Fairies (St. Simon). The Duke of Portland has seven mares, including Memoir (Sheen), Miss Middlewick (St. Simon), and Wheel of Fortune (Donovan). Mr. L. de Rothschild has ten mares, of which five have been sent to Brag, and the others to Morglay. Prince Soltykoff has seven, including Lucetta (dam of Speed), which has been sent to Sheen, and Argo Navis and Meg Merrilees both to Gold. General Owen Williams has fifteen mares, of which eight have been sent to Senanus, and six to Hambletonian. The other one is Effie Deans, and she went to St. Simon.

MERRYWEATHER'S high-class Red, Grey, Non-kinkable Garden Hose. MERRYWEATHER'S high-class "Invicta" Grip Armoured Garden Hose.—Call at or write to 63, Long-acre, London, W.C.

There will be racing next week at Leicester, Gatwick, and Liverpool, and some very interesting sport may be expected at each of these meetings. The principal race at Leicester will be the Zetland Plate of £1,000, the entry for which includes Venia, Faultless, Basildon, and some other winners. I shall, however, predict the success of Mr. Douglas Baird's dark filly, Rose Maiden, by Rosebery out of Flower Girl, as she has been well galloped at Newmarket, and has been reserved for this event.

The Crabbet Stakes at Gatwick is a two-year-old race, with £1,000 added, for which the entry includes Theseus, King Charibert, Wedding Bell, Arcano, and Basildon, of which lot Wedding Bell is decidedly the best, but something from the dark lot may beat her, as she has to give 10 lb. to maidens.

At Liverpool, the St. George's Stakes of £500 is a three-year-old race, for which eighteen animals remain in, and Marcion cannot lose. The Knowsley Dinner Stakes of £800 is another three-year-old race, for which only ten have accepted, out of an entry of thirty-nine, and in the probable absence of Ravensbury it will be won by Tanderagee, if he can beat Fealar, who may by this time have recovered his form. Eleven two-year-olds are left in for the Mersey Stakes of £500, and Sir J. B. Maple may perhaps win with The Love. Bushey Park has become a decided favourite for the Liverpool Cup since the withdrawal of Lady Rosebery, who has broken down, and it is unlikely that she will ever run again. It is impossible, however, to deal with this handicap so long before the day of running, as the market may be expected to expand very considerably. At Newmarket, Bushey Park is regarded as a really good thing, but the northern stables are dangerous at this meeting when they really "go for" a race.

Scarlet Fever Precautions.—Infection of the most dangerous and virulent character can be instantly destroyed with "Izal," the new Non-Poisonous Disinfectant. "Izal" stops Cholera, Small-pox, Diphtheria, Influenza, Scarlet, Typhus, and Typhoid Fevers, and is a sanitary necessity and protector for the sick room, nursery, household, hospital, and in public. No offensive smell can exist near it, it being both a germicide and deoderant. Its disinfecting properties are enormous, and as a destroyer of disease germs it possesses antiseptic power greater than pure carbolic acid. It can be used for all disinfecting purposes the same as with the old-fashioned disinfectants. Being non-poisonous it is safe under all conditions. Being non-caustic it will not numb the hands or irritate the skin, and is invaluable for washing wounds and in surgical dressings. Being non-corrosive it will neither stain nor injure linen, bedding, clothing, carpets, hangings, furniture, metals, or surgical instruments. Can be used with great economy, a shilling bottle making 12 gallons of reliable disinfectant. Sold by Chemists and others in large bottles 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., or sample bottle sent, carriage free, in the United Kingdom, for postal order, by Newton, Chambers, & [illegible]ed. 19, Great George-street, Westminster. The "Izal" imple rules for the protection of Life and

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—The wedding festivities, the tropical heat, and Royal visits to the City have seriously interfered with the stock markets, and, as far as real business is concerned, the past week has been a blank. Quotations have, however, under the circumstances, kept up fairly well, with the chief exception of Silver Securities and American Rails, which have experienced another spasm. It is principally the nervousness as to the heavy losses which are known to have been suffered during the present account in such and allied stocks which has weighed upon the market, and the "House" will breathe more freely when the fortnightly settlement is fairly over. Even then we shall not, probably, see much speculative activity, as holiday-making has already commenced, but it is obviously impossible to prophesy on this point, as the unexpected frequently happens on the Stock Exchange. The extreme cheapness of money and the low level of prices in many departments are certainly encouraging features, and, although I would not advise my readers to embark at the present juncture in large speculative transactions, there is no reason why investment purchases should be delayed.

Opportunities for Investors.

In fact, the present dull period, with the low prices which have been brought about by the silver scare, furnishes excellent opportunities to investors whose savings are available for taking up and paying for the securities which they may purchase. Sooner or later the silver trouble will be got over, and, with the advance of the season, business will revive again, when values may be expected to recover. In the meantime, those who form small trusts for themselves of suitable stocks are paving the way to future profits. It is manifestly preferable, especially where there is a wish to obtain a good return for the money invested, not to put your eggs into one basket, but to spread the amount over half a dozen or more different securities. In thus making a sort of "bouquet," it is even desirable to select stocks from different departments, such as Home Rails, American Rails, South American Government stocks, South or Central American Railway stocks, substantial dividend-paying Gold Mines, and promising Land Companies, &c. Care should also be taken to give the Trust a backbone by investing some of the money in absolutely safe securities, even if the rest be somewhat speculatively placed. Investors must in this follow their own ideas to some extent. Some may wish to commence with, say, British Corporation stocks, yielding only 3 per cent. per annum, and stop at American Railroad bonds up to a yield of, say, 5 per cent. per annum, while others may deem a backbone of such gilt-edged Railroad bonds commencing at a yield of 4 per cent. and high-class Argentine Railway bonds, such as Buenos Ayres Great Southern Four per Cent. Debenture stock yielding about 4¼ per cent., sufficient, and may wish to obtain up to, say, 6 per cent. in Louisville shares, 7½ per cent. in Argentine Funding bonds, &c. Some, again, may select Brighton "A," with their prospects of an 8 per cent. dividend and a yield of 5⅛ per cent., while those more speculatively inclined may take a hand in South or Central American Government bonds yielding up to 10 per cent. or more, or in Argentine Guaranteed Railway stocks, which are sure to obtain a settlement from the Argentine Government sooner or later, and will then yield a substantial return on the prices of the day. Excellent investments can also be made in the mining department, New Primrose, for instance, on the basis of their last dividend of 20 per cent. for six months yielding, reckoning the dividend off, almost 10 per cent. per annum on the investment. A bouquet of half a dozen sound Witwatersrand Mines, throwing in some of the "coming" mines which are to be bought cheaper, and some of the cheap speculative mining shares, such as Caratal, and a few progressive Land shares, such as Oceana and Oceana Developments, would also be very promising. Thus money may be invested in a comparatively safe manner to give a good return and to procure large prospective profits. It remains with the investors themselves to determine how much risk they will run, or with what yield they will be satisfied. There rarely was a time so favourable to investment as at present, and those who avail themselves of it will do a good deal better than those who wait until prices have been lifted again by more active dealings.

Home Rails.

There has been a further slight shrinkage in the stocks of the Heavy lines, but the tendency has become steadier since the publication of the Board of Trade Returns for June, which showed a distinct improvement. On the other hand, there are apprehensions of a strike of coal-miners in consequence of a reduction of wages of 25 per cent., of which notice has been given. Dividend considerations, however, for the present, chiefly affect the markets. The Sheffield Company has opened the ball with the announcement of no dividend on the Ordinary stock, against ¼ for the first half of 1892. No one expected anything else, and, the result having been discounted, Sheffield "A" did not move much. The next dividend announcements this week will be those of the Brighton, Metropolitan, and South-Eastern Companies, which were made last year on July 13 and 14. The Brighton dividend was estimated some time ago by my Brighton prophet at the rate of 4¾ per cent. with a large carry forward as against 3¾ per cent. with £13,000 forward last year. In that case "Berthas" will be credited with 3½ per cent. instead of 1½ per cent., which means that, as "Berthas" received for 1892 a dividend of 7 per cent., they will receive 8 per cent. for the year without any further traffic increase in the second half of 1893. The clerk of the weather will, of course, have much to say to the earnings for the current half-year, but, unless a startling change should take place, traffics will, I think, continue at the 1892 rate. We have, therefore, Brighton "A" at, say, 155, earning 8 per cent. and yielding over 5⅛ per cent. per annum, while in the best of cases the stocks of the Heavy lines will not yield more than 3¾ per cent per annum on present prices. Dover "A" will not shake themselves together, and are quoted below 80, some forced selling having taken place. As regards actual yield, this price is quite high enough, but the recovery which has taken place in net earnings, and which promises to continue, is a favourable feature, and it is quite on the cards that the increase in the dividend which is expected for the past half-year may be followed by a satisfactory dividend for the current half. The Great Eastern dividend will also be announced at the end of the week, and, so far, the market views indicate the passing of the dividend, against a dividend at the rate of ¾ per cent. for the first half of 1892. But I am not sure that the Board may not have a surprise for the market, notwithstanding the stress which is temporarily put upon them in view of the heavy expenditure for the enlargement of Liverpool-street Station, &c. At all events, the line should earn large traffics during the second half year in view of the splendid conditions for the holiday business. Amongst the "Heavies" the North-Western would probably suffer most from any strike of coalminers, but it is still hoped that this may be obviated. I really cannot see any inducement for buying the stocks of the heavy brigade just now, but as holders stick tight to them, any further marked fall is hardly likely. The Scotch stocks do not appear to recover to any extent from the depression, which may, no doubt, in part be attributed to the effect of the Australian Bank collapse, which has hit Scotland so severely.

The Yankee Market.

Narrow fluctuations have again, with a few exceptions, been the order of the day in Yankee Rails, but quotations are finally a good deal lower in most instances. This is disappointing, as the fact that Congress has been called together for an autumn session for the special purpose of repealing the fons et origo of the financial trouble in the United States—the Sherman Silver Bill—had been relied upon on both sides of the Atlantic to re-establish confidence and strengthen the market. There are several reasons for this disappointment of the "Bulls." In the first instance, the banking position in New York continues strained, a large amount of clearing-house certificates being outstanding, while money in Wall-street still commands high rates. The "Bull" contingent are, therefore, unable to undertake any sustained movement in the market in the face of the determined "Bear" raids of the Cammack party. On this side the silver scare and the heavy fall in silver securities have, on the other hand, created such distrust that there is absolutely no disposition to take up Yankee Rails to any extent. In England and on the Continent the silver trouble has wrought serious trouble by a heavy break in Mexican Government and Railway stocks, Peruvian Corporation stocks, and other South and Central American securities more or less affected by the value of silver. A large Frankfort firm heavily involved in such securities has got into trouble, and the closing of its account has aggravated the position. Under these circumstances the large financial houses here are not disposed, even if they were able, to come to the rescue, and are allowing matters to drift. A recovery will, however, come about eventually, and holders of American Railroad stocks should, under the circumstances, stick tightly to their holdings, just as investors, who are able to take up the stocks, may safely buy at the present low level. The heavy fall in Denvers has undoubtedly been overdone, but the communication by the London agents was not exactly calculated to improve matters. Holders will now have to exercise some patience until matters in Colorado, which is heavily hit by the silver trouble, have settled down again. The Louisville dividend announcement of 2 dols. for the half-year fully confirms my repeated statements on this point. A net increase of 587,493 dols. is shown. In the general Yankee market, whenever money gets easy and the Wall-street "Bulls" begin, with returning confidence, to feel their feet again, a complete transformation scene will be witnessed. When exactly this upward movement will begin it is impossible to say, but it is more than likely that the actual repeal of the Sherman Silver Bill and the resumption of gold imports into the United States will come about almost at the same time, and then, if not sooner, will the American market once again assume the active appearance which has been absent so long. Canadian Pacifics have suffered from reports of rate-cutting, and Grand Trunks have reacted in sympathy with Yankee Rails.

Argentine Finance.

The political deadlock in Buenos Ayres has for the present been removed by the formation of a new Ministry, in which Señor Lucio Lopez, a distinguished lawyer, is Minister of the Interior and Prime Minister, and Señor Del Valle Minister of War. The latter has made a name for himself by his opposition to the Celman régime, which he denounced at the time in the strongest terms in the Senate. Señor Marano Demaria, also a lawyer, who has accepted the portfolio of Finance, acted hitherto as standing counsel to one of the Argentine Guaranteed Railways, the Great Western. The other two new Ministers are untried men, and it is doubtful if this combination of Radicals and Modernistas will be enduring, especially as President Saenz Peña himself has little in common with them, and Generals Roca and Mitré will scarcely support it. This, however, remains to be seen. There is plenty of work before the new Ministers. They have to obtain the formal approval by Congress of the settlement of the National Debt concluded by the Government, and then one of their first steps will have to be an arrangement concerning the Railway guarantees. It is satisfactory to find, from the Times of Argentina, that the former Minister of Finance, Señor Romero, had occupied himself specially with this question before his resignation, and had actually elaborated a scheme of settlement with the Railway Companies, which appeared to be conceived on equitable lines. Under these circumstances, it may be hoped that the new Minister of Finance, Demaria, will follow up this scheme; the more so, as in his capacity of counsel for one of the Companies, he must obviously hold views favourable to the Railway interest. It is also satisfactory to learn that the Board of one of the guaranteed Railways have received private advices from Buenos Ayres, according to which the Solicitor to the Argentine Treasury has completely upset the absurd and iniquitous theories of the National Railway Bureau respecting the deposit of a certain percentage of the gross earnings, irrespective of the net receipts. Under these circumstances the question of the payments in default and of a commutation of the whole of the guarantees may be settled earlier than had recently been anticipated, a consummation devoutly to be wished in the interest of Argentine credit. Should the Ministry hold together, the gold premium would probably decline again, and that would benefit both Argentine Government and Railway stocks, which have suffered heavily of late from the apparent instability of the Argentine Government. How, for instance, Central Argentine Ordinary stock can stand at 58, and Buenos Ayres and Rosaria at 56, now that a small dividend is being earned on both, passes comprehension.

Foreigners and South Americans.

An influence which has undoubtedly been unfavourable to values in the South American market generally has been the collapse in Mexicans and Perus through the silver crisis. Mexican Six per Cent. bonds, which made up last settlement at 70½, are down to 59 xd; Peruvian Corporation Prefs., which were carried over at 22½, have dropped to 16½, the Debentures from 66½ to 58; Mexican Railway First Prefs. from 70 to 64. These declines were due chiefly to forced sales, under which Costa Rica and Uruguay bonds have also suffered. Should the impending settlement pass off without any serious trouble, a recovery may probably come about again. It is impossible to foresee what will be the course of prices of silver for the present. The white metal has fluctuated between 33d. and 34¾d., and it looks almost as if it would not fall to a very low level now that a number of Silver Mines all over the world are being shut down. Chilians have declined on a renewed fall of the Valparaiso exchange, and Brazilians are being kept down by the low level of the Rio exchange. After a sharp fall in Spanish, there has been a recovery to 62½, notwithstanding the unfavourable financial outlook in that country. It is now reported that the Paris financial group, which has helped Spain in the past, will again come to the rescue provided certain retrenchments are carried out. Italians, on the other hand, do not look flourishing. Yet prices of inter-bourse securities generally are comparatively well maintained, the Continental bourses having apparently pulled themselves together again. Greeks, too, have shown a firmer tone of late.

The Kaffir Circus.

Although the market for South African Gold Mining shares has been very narrow, prices are pretty well maintained. In fact, Rietfontein, Langlaagte, Meyer and Charlton, and a few other Rand Mines have improved in value. The June crushings are, in many instances, above expectation, and ought to give a fresh impulse to this market, especially as June had a working day less than May. The total output of 122,907 oz. of gold beats the record by over 5,000 oz., and is nearly 6,000 oz. above the May crushings. The Nigel announces a total yield of 5,155 oz. for June, against 4,302 oz. in May, a dividend of 15 per cent. also being declared. The Jubilee, another of my favourites, yielded 2,641 oz., against 2,455 oz. in May; the Geldenhuis, 3,410 oz., against 3,386 oz.; the Salisbury, 2,850 oz., against 2,400 oz.; City and Suburban, 3,363 oz., against 3,000 oz. The New Primrose crushing for June is reported at 6,961 oz. (100 stamps running twenty-eight days), and the net profit is stated at £9,456, against a yield of 7,285 oz., with £9,100 profit in May. With reference to the Glencairn, I understand that this mine will start crushing in the course of the present week. Under these circumstances, some revival in the Kaffir Circus would be fully justified. Not only are the large producing Mines showing progress in their output and dividends, but the position of the "coming" Mines, such as the Glencairn, the Kimberley Roodepoort, Bufflesdoorn, &c., is reported as equally satisfactory. With regard to the latter, it is stated that the battery will be completed in September, when crushing on a large scale will commence. Advices from the Klerksdorp district generally are very satisfactory, specimens obtained from the reef near the Afrikander property being reported as panning out remarkably well. The black sand was stated to be strongly in evidence, and the trace of fine gold phenomenal for Klerksdorp. There is reason for assuming that the recovery of gold by the McArthur Forrest process in June will beat the record, and it is estimated that during the current year gold to the value of nearly one milllion sterling will be produced by its means. The Johannesburg Star of June 17 has the following on the "Progress of Cyanide":—

> The increase in the Rand output for May, as compared with April, was nearly 5,000 oz. Of this increment, the Cyanide Process is responsible for 4,000 oz., which is a remarkable testimony to the steady growth of the Recovery industry. The inquiry for tailings has been naturally excessively keen, and it is hardly necessary to say that every Company has long since become alive to the actual commercial value of an asset which heretofore remained idle for years, and that the bargains picked up by the early birds who first perceived the possibilities of profit in the millions of tons of tailings accumulated through past working are no longer to be had. Some respectable fortunes have been realised by enterprises of this kind, and the African Gold Recovery Company is witnessing a most satisfactory growth in its royalty income. When the big Langlaagte Works are in full swing, and the Sheba plant is in operation, the Cyanide output will go forward with a sudden leap.

Diamond shares have moved down on forced sales, De Beers being quoted 17⅛, Jagersfontein, 17¼. There have been few dealings in miscellaneous mines. Silver mining shares have kept up better than might have been anticipated, but low-priced speculative gold mines appear to be most in favour, for the simple reason that with small outlay of money you stand to make big profits, while there is little or no risk of a loss. With reference to the Holcomb Valley Gold Mine in California, advices are expected in the course of the current week that the Bucyrus steam shovel is at work, and if the results are at all in keeping with the anticipations of the experts, a sharp advance may be expected in these shares. With respect to the Caratal Gold Mining Company, Mr. Alfred Bull, one of the Directors, has cabled that he has arrived at La Trinidad with a party of engineers and others, and that the settlement of the Venezuelan claims and other arrangements are proceeding satisfactorily. One of the engineers who accompanies Mr. Bull is a man of high standing, and the fact that he has accepted the position of consulting engineer is sufficient guarantee of his opinion of the property. I should say that any one picking up Caratal shares at anything like 9d. per share will probably make a big profit. Jackson Goldfields are being dealt in at 1s. to 1s. 3d., and, now that the Mine is relieved from its legal troubles, there seems to be a fair future before it. The first quarterly report of the Directors to the shareholders of the Nyassa Company states that the surveys for the railway from the coast viâ the coalfields to Lake Nyassa, a distance of 450 miles, are in progress, and considerable quantities of material are nearly ready for shipment. The Company has also arranged for a service of steamers along its coast and on the Rovuma River, which forms the northern boundary of its territories, also for a steamer line on the River Lurio. The report further states that application has been received for large areas of agricultural lands, on behalf of intending Colonists and for numerous gold mining claims and coal lands which are being dealt with as rapidly as possible, on the terms fixed by the Board. The Directors conclude with the statement that the Company's operations for the first quarter show a profit at the rate of over 10 per cent. per annum on its issued capital, and they express the hope that, as the value of the Company's property becomes more extensively known and its resources developed, even better results will be obtained.

TRANSVAAL LAND COMPANIES.

There are rumours in the air that the scheme for an amalgamation of the principal Land Companies in the Transvaal is likely to be taken up again. If so, the Oceana Company would probably have to take the lead, but I do not think that the Board of that Company are enthusiastic about the matter, as they are well satisfied with the progress now being made and in prospect in the near future. There is also some talk of the scheme for the settlement of the Transvaal, which was elaborated by Mr. J. C. Henderson five years ago, and was approved by the Attorney-General of the Republic, being taken up. This scheme dealt with the introduction, as Colonists, of working men from the various countries of the old world in order to introduce suitable industries and agricultural development in the Transvaal. Advices by Mail concerning the Oceana properties are very satisfactory. The farms of Tours and Sedan, which were declared payable goldfields last year, have now been thrown open and sales of township stands will shortly take place in Sedan. It is also expected that the terminus of the Silati Railway will be located on the farm Tours, as this is most suitably situated close to the hilly country. In this case another township would be created on this farm. From the Bloemhof district come reports of finds of diamonds on some Oceana Development farms. Finally, the prospects of the new Oceana Coal Company are reported as most favourable. A Director of the Company is leaving next week for the Cape in order to push on the opening-up of the property, and it is expected that coal will be placed on the market by the Company in a month or two. Another favourable development is the proclamation of nearly the whole of the farms round Heidelberg as payable goldfields, and as the spot where the Oceana Coal Company's gas coal has been discovered is only some five miles from these farms, a much larger consumptive demand is expected than had but recently been anticipated. An output of 200 tons per day is estimated to yield a net dividend of 20 per cent. per annum on the capital of the new Coal Company; but it seems now to be anticipated that 400 to 500 tons per day will be required, so that the profits would be largely increased. Considering that the Oceana and Oceana Development shareholders will receive a large portion of the fully paid-up shares in the Coal Company as a bonus, this is a very important matter, and should raise the value of Oceanas to a considerable extent.

MY LETTER BOX.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

GOVERNMENT, &c., BONDS.

J. C. I.—The Mexican position is much bound up with the future course of silver, but there is no present apprehension concerning the City bonds, and it would be advisable to hold. Culm.—Hold the bonds, but do not buy more to average yet. Await the further course of events. If you buy more, you may as well do so at bottom price. Bourne.—1. I referred to this point specially last week under "The Fall in Silver Securities," and I should hold for the present. 2. The River Plate Trust is trying to come to a settlement concerning these Argentine Provincial loans, but, so far, little progress has been made. A Regular Subscriber.—I do not think that there is the slightest possibility of obtaining any modification in favour of Argentine Northern Central Railway Government bonds in the Argentine Debt Settlement. It was a question of give and take. Snaefell.—I fancy it would be preferable to watch the course of events in silver a little before averaging.

BANKS, TRUSTS, AND FINANCIAL.

Small Investor, San Remo.—I regret exceedingly that, as a matter of principle, I cannot recommend any individual stockbroker. R. H.—You should hold your Denver Prefs. after the heavy fall, but do not buy more yet. Hold Ottoman Banks. A. S., Columbia.—1. With any high class Bank you do not, of course, run the slightest risk in entrusting your securities to it for safe keeping; with a second rate concern you might, in case of a suspension, be a loser through dishonesty. 2. It would be preferable to stipulate the remuneration of the lawyers as trustees. Mariner. 1. No. 2. I do not advise dealings with outside stockbrokers. 3. The commission is far too high. 4. I should not advise a purchase now. 5. I do not think there is any fear of a revolution, but the country is also affected by silver. Ferrum. The Temperance Office in question is very small, and I should not recommend insuring with it. The Equity and Law Life mentioned by you is a well-established old office, and you had better write to this and to the Sun Life Office for their terms. Banbury.—Your experience with Trust Companies has been very unsatisfactory, but I should not sell now. I cannot see any way to compel the disclosure of investments. Jack.—I really cannot advise you. You had better attend the meeting and see what the Directors have to say. The position is very unfortunate.

HOME RAILS.

Waylaid.—I should not advise any further investment in Hull and Barnsley as prospects are not promising. 2. I should not advise any dealings with the person in question.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN RAILS.

Clifton.—No reason to sell Nitrate Rails. More Nitrate will be carried this year than last, as the maximum output has been raised by the Nitrate Committee. Ernesto.—Neither the Louisville, Erie, nor the Reading are Silver lines, and you should hold the shares. A new Reading reconstruction is evidently on the cards, and the shares might be averaged. B. G.—Hold the Brewery shares. Mexican Railway First Prefs., City of Mexico bonds, and Perus are to some extent dependent upon the further course of silver, and you had better wait with averaging. Hold the Brazilian Rails. R. D.—The Ohio and Mississippi Ordinary stock will receive under the reorganisation securities part of which should at once earn dividends. Prospects are good, and you may anticipate a considerable recovery on the scheme being carried out and the currency position in the United States improving. Hold! Anxious.—Yes; you should keep both Atchison shares and Central Argentines. They will recover again. The latter Company is now earning a small dividend on the Ordinary stock. Espérance.—I think your reasoning is very sound, and of the two schemes propounded by you I fancy the second, that of buying the low-priced American Rails and locking them up, most. H. S. B.—1. I should certainly hold a, b, and c, but I do not advise putting too many eggs into one basket, and therefore think that you should by preference invest in other depreciated securities. 2. Yes, Atchison "B" bonds have full purchase power and are cheap. 3. Central Argentine Ordinary stock, Cordoba Central (Central Northern Section) Five per Cent. Debenture stock, Louisville shares, Argentine Funding bonds. You might buy during the next account. James, Glasgow.—You should hold your Reading bonds now. Some new reorganisation scheme seems to be projected, and there is a prospect of a rise whenever it is published. I agree with your remarks concerning the last scheme. Elyot.—It is impossible to foretell now how much Erie will improve, but they should be held. Louisville are a good investment, the line being well managed. You are entitled to the coming dividend; you should consult my letter concerning other securities. Lex.—There is no valid reason for the low price of Atchison "A" and "B" bonds, and all the Yankee stocks should be held. You will receive due notice as to when the Ohio certificates will be exchanged for the new securities. I am afraid that prospects of Middlesbrough Lands are very bad just now. The Silver shares had better be held for the present, as they will probably recover. R. P. B. J.—No reason to sell the bonds, as the floating debt of the Company has been rearranged. York.—Under the circumstances explained by you, I should advise you not to run any further risk just now, but to wait until matters become clearer, even if you should have to pay a little more; but you should hold what you have got. B. G.—The decrease in the Nitrate Railways' traffic is stated to be temporary only. No reason to sell. If you can lock up the Missouris, Kansas, and Texas shares, yes! G. H. H.—1. There is the danger of forced sales by holders who have other securities that have fallen. Therefore await the course of events until, say, the end of the month, and then average. 2. Hold for the present, but sell on a recovery. Jack, York.—I do not altogether approve of your little Trust. Italian Rentes (1), for instance, are not in the ascendant, Italian finances looking very blue. The Denver line (2) is at present under the silver cloud, and I should not choose No. 8 for the same reason. Nos. 3, 4, and 7 are suitable American Railroad bonds, and you might add to them New York, Ontario, and Western Four per Cent. Refunding Mortgage at 86½, South and North Alabama Consolidated Five per Cent. Gold bonds (guaranteed by the Louisville and Nashville) at 103, and Atchison Four per Cent. Second Mortgage "B" bonds at 47-48.

MINING SHARES.

Anxious.—Your first letter must have miscarried. No, I do not consider May Consolidated a good purchase: you can do better in Buffelsdoorn, Kimberley, Roodepoort, or Glencairns. J. F.—I do not think much of the new departure of this mine, and am afraid that it will be throwing good money after bad.

S. W.—Prospects of the Balkis Eersteling Mine appear satisfactory, and you should hold. A. B.—I should not advise a purchase of this mine. J. J., County Longford.—The only liability on Holcomb Valley shares is 2d. per share. Redcar.—1. The sudden action of the India Council has, of course, created a new position in Silver Mines, but I should not advise selling the particular shares now, as the mine still pays well. Hold and await developments. 2. Have nothing to do with this gamble in the shares of Tyre Companies. L. N.—The most promising low-priced shares are Caratal, at 9d.; Holcomb Valley, at 1s.-1s. 3d.; Jackson Goldfields, at 1s.-1s. 3d. Berry Head.—Hold the American Rails and the Silver Mining shares for the present. W. W.—I do not like either Jay Hawks or Golden Feathers, and should sell both on any recovery. L. B.—If you hold the two Mining shares in question you will see a good profit; but you must have some patience. Yes; a portion of the Oceana Coal shares will be distributed amongst the Oceana and Oceana Development shareholders as a bonus. N. M.—Yes; the Caratal Gold Mine is being energetically worked, and the market is likely to improve. See under "The Kaffir Circus."

Industrial Companies.

Quæsitor, Brighton.—No doubt the Preference dividend, being cumulative, will eventually be paid, and it is a good opportunity to average. W. E. L.—The Weardale Water Company is a fair investment, but no catch.

Mixed Investments.

Clerk, Edin.—1. Always remember that good profits are worth taking. 2. No, I do not think anything of this Exploration Company. 3. It is doubtful if this concern will ever be a success. Sextant.—I do not like the Trust stocks No. 2, and should sell these, while holding No. 1 for a recovery. No reason to sell Brazilians (3) at present low price. Also hold the Colonial stocks Nos. 4 and 5. Lex, Bridport.—Yes, Atchison Ordinary shares are cheap, and a good spec. I do not like the Ice Company. Do not deal with outside brokers. T. S. K., Castle Douglas.—The Mine in question still makes profits at the present price of silver, and it would, therefore, be advisable to hold, but not to buy more. The fall in silver affects the exchange for remittance, not the revenue, but I see no reason to sell unless matters in Mexico should get much worse. Buruaundi.—I do not think that the present is the time to sell Trust Company shares, and should advise Nos. 1—3 being held for a recovery. The Tarapacà Bank shares (4) are depressed by the fall in the Chilian exchange, but I should not sell now. Central Argentine (5) should be held. The decline is altogether unjustified, as the ordinary stock is earning a dividend. An Old Vicar.—1. The security of these bonds, on the whole revenues of the City is ample, and the fall has taken place entirely under the pressure of the silver trouble. 2. I should not buy just now; a new arrangement will have to be made. 3. These Debentures are very cheap, and the next interest will be paid chiefly in cash, and perhaps a part in Debentures. 4. I do not recommend purchase of any Brazilian Railways just now. 5. I do not like these.

Various Investments.

Rupee paper continues to disappoint the hopes of the "Bulls" who bought on special tips and refuses to be lifted above 70. For one thing, the fact that allotments of India Council bills are still being made below 1s. 4d. is against the rupee gamble. Australian Government bonds are steadier, and so are Australian Bank shares, the recent decline in Bank of New South Wales shares (to 41) being now ascribed to sales for a deceased account. Union Bank of Australia shares have kept up best at 44½. Johannesburg Waterworks shares have improved to 1⅛ on the declaration of the 6 per cent. dividend, and are undoubtedly an excellent progressive investment. The "Merveilleuse" electric arc lamp is a new arc lamp which promises to play an important part in the lighting of the future. Not only is it simple in construction, and can, therefore, be manufactured at a low cost, but it works with greater steadiness and regularity than any other lamp, the voltage varying less than 5 per cent. The lamp has been well received in Belgium and France, and the concessionaire for the lighting of Vincennes has adopted it after a short trial. Professor Silvanus P. Thompson, the eminent electrician, has reported most favourably upon the lamp. A good deal has been written of late concerning the possibility of the denunciation of the Latin Union (as to silver) by France, but this does not appear very likely. The Mexican Railway gamble, initiated by Mr. Mackusick, of the Universal Stock Exchange, has not been successful, and those have done best who acted on my advice given when the Second Prefs. stood at 45, viz., to clear out. The price is now only 39. Nitrate Rails have been fairly steady, but the shares in some of the Nitrate-producing Companies have eased off in the absence of dealings. Prices of nitrate of soda are, however, keeping up well, so that most of the Companies should continue to realise good profits.—Your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

POOR DICK.

THE Colonel was in a brown study. His hands were thrust deep in his pockets, his eyes were bent on the polished floor, a dark frown, born half of impatient anger and half of moody reflection, clouded his handsome face. He was deaf to the plaintive music of the violins, and to the soft frou-frou of silken trains; blind to the glow and glitter of the ball-room, and to the maze of revolving couples before him. The present had ceased to exist for him, it was blotted out; the past alone remained. The past, with its haunting memories, its passion, its pride, its despair—the past that he had believed dead, but that he found still had power to goad and torture him as of old.

Ah! it was a bitter, bitter past, and the story that it held was known only to himself—and one other.

"Come, Gascoigne, wake up. A nice fellow you are to come to a dance, standing propped up against the wall like a tombstone, when half the women in the room are dying to dance with you. You ought—why, hallo! What's the matter, old chap? You look as if you'd seen a ghost."

The Colonel looked up, and a curious smile, or rather the faint reflection of a smile, just curved his sternly-compressed lips.

"So I have," he answered slowly, "a ghost of the past, Herbert."

An unusually grave expression crossed Sir John Herbert's cheery face.

"Mrs. Le Mesurier," he said, and the words were half a question, half an assertion.

The Colonel nodded.

"Yes. Mrs. Le Mesurier."

"Ah!"

Sir John's tone was significant. He looked at the Colonel inquiringly, but said no more.

"I saw her a few minutes ago," the Colonel went on presently. "I hadn't seen her for five years, and five years is a long time, Herbert."

"A long time," the other assented. "A good slice out of a man's life."

"But it might have been yesterday," said the Colonel. "It might have been yesterday."

Sir John did not ask to what his friend referred, he only nodded gravely, and the Colonel relapsed once more into gloomy abstraction. Presently he roused himself again.

"I've got a regular fit of the blues on to-night. Fact is I heard something this afternoon that upset me considerably."

Sir John nodded again. He was wise in his generation, and when he wanted to know a thing he never asked questions; a diplomatic line of action that probably accounted for his immense reserve fund of knowledge concerning other people's affairs. His discreet silence had, as usual, the desired effect.

"It was about Dick," said the Colonel, "young Dick Warrington, you know."

"Ah! a fine young fellow that," Sir John rejoined meditatively, "you ought to be proud of your nephew, Gascoigne."

"Truth" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the Manager, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

"And so I am," the Colonel broke out, with unexpected force, "God knows I am as fond and proud of the lad as if he were my own son; that's just where it comes in."

Again he paused, and again Sir John maintained a discreet silence.

"That's just where it comes in," the Colonel repeated, "and it comes in hot and strong, too. I am told that people are talking, but I seem quite out of the world now, and I give you my word I never heard of it till to-day. His mother told me then. She was in terrible trouble."

Sir John nodded comprehensively.

"He's her only son, you know," the Colonel went on, abstractedly, "Poor Mary! Her only son."

"Her only son," echoed Sir John.

"And Mrs. Le Mesurier has got hold of him. The lad is desperately in love with her, his mother says. He thinks she is the best woman that ever lived—an angel married to a fiend. God help him, poor lad!"

Sir John looked up.

"This is the first I've heard of the affair, Gascoigne," he said, quickly, "If I had known of it I would have warned you."

"Of course you would," the Colonel returned; "but you did not know of it any more than I did, and so——. Ah! look there, look there."

Sir John followed the direction of his friend's eyes. A couple who had just come into the ball-room were standing together by the door, and upon them the Colonel's gaze was riveted. One of the two was a young man, little more than a boy, with a handsome boyish face, on which the hopefulness and eager enthusiasm of youth still lingered. His companion was a Society leader whose name was better known than respected.

Tall, very tall, with a superbly-moulded figure and erect, graceful carriage; even if her face had been plain, no one would have passed Leoline Le Mesurier without a second glance. But her face was beautiful. A small oval face, pale and finely cut, framed in hair whose colour was neither red, nor gold, nor brown, but a wonderful mingling of all three, and lighted by great dark eyes that glowed with restless fire. The face of a woman of curbless will and reckless, undisciplined passions, quick to love and quick to hate with a vivid intensity that is given to few natures. A woman who might be a devil or an angel, as men and circumstances should decide.

"Do you see?" asked the Colonel, and then he drew a long, deep breath.

Even now he could not look on that face unmoved. Even now, though his feelings towards the woman embodied scorn, contempt, and something that was nearly akin to hatred, he yet bowed to the spell of her beauty. It was years since they had parted, but this chance meeting shook him to the centre of his being, and awoke a strange wild tumult of passion within his heart.

"Yes, I see," said Sir John.

He saw something else, too. He saw that Mrs. Le Mesurier's eyes, wandering with languid indifference over the sea of faces around her, fell suddenly upon Colonel Gascoigne's striking figure, and on the instant lightened with a look that dazzled and bewildered him. A moment later she had laid her hand on Dick Warrington's arm, and they were crossing the room together, while Sir John watched their progress with attentive interest.

Mrs. Le Mesurier made her way through the crowd, with the slow supple grace of movement that distinguished her, followed by envious glances from the women whom she passed. In their eyes she seemed worthy of all envy. Her gown had been designed for her by a well-known artist, her diamonds were the finest in the room, and reported to be of fabulous value. Among the fashionable crowd of good-looking, well-dressed women, she stood out pre-eminent—and what could woman desire more? Yet of all those who broke the tenth commandment by coveting her possessions, from the indulgent millionaire whom she called husband down to the diamond buckles that flashed on her dainty shoes, there was not one who would not have shrunk back appalled if she could have looked into the heart of the woman who had, to outward appearance, attained to all that is required to make up the sum of feminine happiness in this life. Fate is full of a grim irony.

"Is it really you, Colonel Gascoigne? At first I thought it was your ghost, it is so long since we met. How do you do?"

The Colonel started as the low, musical tones fell on his ear, touching Heaven knows what chords of memory within his breast; then he pulled himself together, and bowed gravely.

"How do you do, Mrs. Le Mesurier? It is, as you say, a long time since we met."

She raised her eyes to his with a look that made him catch his breath and set his teeth like a vice.

"Five years," she said.

"Five years," he echoed.

She managed to maintain her outward composure, but her heart was throbbing passionately, and a hot wave of colour had surged into her pale cheeks. This man's presence, his voice and touch, had power to thrill her now as they had thrilled her long ago. She glanced quickly round. Their immediate neighbours were too deeply engrossed in their own affairs to notice them, and Sir John had drawn Dick into the background. They two were alone in the solitude of a crowd.

"Noel," she whispered, hurriedly, "Noel, we have not met for years, and—and we may never meet again. Will you hear me to-night? For the sake of all that is past and gone, for the sake of what we once were to one another, for pity's sake—for pity's sake——"

Her voice broke. She could say no more.

The anguish of longing, the desperate, passionate pain that shone in her uplifted eyes might have touched a heart of stone. The Colonel did not move a muscle of his face.

"No," he answered, and his cold, contemptuous tone cut like a knife, "I will not hear you. Five years ago I refused to hear your explanation—your justification I suppose you would call it—and I refuse to hear it now."

"You refuse!"

She had come a little nearer to him. Standing there, with the brilliant light of the ball-room falling on her chiselled face and on the crowning glory of her hair, she made an exquisite picture of warm lovely colour. Could even she have been fairer of whom the poet wrote:—

> A man had given all other bliss,
> And all his worldly worth for this,
> To waste his whole heart in one kiss
> Upon her perfect lips.

The Colonel looked down at her, but his stern, condemning eyes did not soften, and his mouth was like a bar of iron. He had judged her, and from his judgment there was no appeal.

She drew back, shivering a little, and the passionate light faded from her face, leaving it very white and cold.

"Then there is no more to be said. No more."

Her voice was dull and strange in her own ears. The words seemed to be borne to her from out the far-off distance. No more! What cruel words they were. They rang the dirge of all that had once made her life a dream of bliss, a foretaste of Heaven, and of a certain mad, wild hope that she had cherished through five long weary bitter years. That hope was dead now. Her own words had sounded its death-knell.

"No more," the Colonel echoed, gravely.

At that moment Dick came forward. He was tired of waiting, and Sir John could not keep him in the background any longer.

"This is our waltz," he said, with a reproachful tone in his clear, boyish voice, "and we are losing half of it. Do come."

Mrs. Le Mesurier did not answer at once. Indeed, she RATIONAL DOG FEEDING.—Give wholesome and nutritious food Spratt's Patent Meat Fibrine Dog Cakes). Do not give tit-bits and dainties because your dog, like a spoilt child, prefers what suits his palate. See that the Dog Cakes are stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "×," as cheap and innutritious imitations are often substituted for extra profit. Pamphlet on Canine Diseases post free, SPRATT'S PATENT, Limited, Bermondsey, London.

MINTON'S (Limited). MINTON'S CHINA.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

hardly took in the sense of his words. That terrible "no more!" still rang in her ears, everything was blurred and blotted before her eyes, her brain seemed on fire.

"Do come," Dick pleaded, bending down to her.

There was no mistaking the adoring admiration that shone in his eyes, the utter devotion that expressed itself in every look and gesture; they were plain for all the world to read.

The Colonel bit his lip and frowned darkly. Something must be done to get the boy away from this most perilous influence.

"Dick," he interposed, hurriedly, "if Mrs. Le Mesurier will be kind enough to let you off this dance, I shall be greatly indebted to her. I have something of serious importance to say to you."

The undercurrent of distress and anxiety in his voice was not lost upon Mrs. Le Mesurier, and she quickly grasped its meaning. Woman-like she could read between the lines.

She turned her eyes upon him, a strange light dawning slowly in their dark depths.

"Perhaps," she said, "Mr. Warrington is not willing to be let off. He must speak for himself."

She glanced up at the handsome boy by her side, with a look that the Colonel knew only too well. A look that had, in days of old, drawn him to her as with a magic spell.

Dick flushed up hotly through his clear, sensitive skin.

"No, I am not willing," he cried. "You can talk to me later on, sir. Now I am at Mrs. Le Mesurier's disposal."

Mrs. Le Mesurier laid her hand on his arm, and flashed the Colonel a swift defiant glance. Then, as she moved away, she turned to Dick and smiled.

* * * * *

"The end can't be far off now," said the Colonel, in accents of the deepest gloom.

Sir John Herbert flicked the ashes off his cigar with a thoughtful air.

A month had been added to the past. It was four weeks since Colonel Gascoigne had stood face to face with the woman who had once been the motive-power of his life, and a great deal may happen in four weeks. A great deal had happened.

All London was ringing with the story now. The fashionable beauty's latest caprice and Dick Warrington's mad boyish infatuation were fruitful themes of gossip in clubs and boudoirs. People were beginning to wonder when the end would come, and even to speculate as to the reigning favourite's possible successor. That is the way of the world.

Sir John puffed away at his cigar, and presently the Colonel spoke again.

"Well, I've done all I could, as far as I can see. I don't know what I could do more. I've tried the lad all ways. I've argued and reasoned with him, and tried to persuade him; I've begged him to think of his career and of his mother; I've offered him money to get out of the country—anything, everything I could think of—but all for no good. When a woman like Leoline Le Mesurier gets hold of a man body and soul, as she has got hold of Dick, there's no salvation for him in this world. A devil would be more merciful."

The Colonel spoke with unusual heat, and a dark look clouded his handsome face. The past was vividly present with him then, and memory was as iron entering into the soul.

"I would have given all I had to save the boy," he went on, "but he wouldn't listen to me for a moment. I offered to tell him the story of my own life—but he wouldn't hear it. He is mad where she is concerned. Poor lad! Poor lad!"

"Poor lad!" echoed Sir John.

He would have liked to hear the story of the Colonel's past, a subject on which he had often speculated, but in this case discretion availed him nothing.

"Let the dead past bury its dead," said the Colonel, with reflective bitterness. "No living person has heard mine, nor ever will now—nor ever will."

And Sir John resigned himself to the inevitable.

Just then a footstep sounded on the stairs, a slow, lagging, lifeless step, and a moment later Dick Warrington came into the room.

The Colonel looked up quickly, but the words of welcome that rose to his lips died away into horrified silence. The light fell full on Dick's face as he stood there, and what a face! White, and drawn, and rigid, with haggard eyes dulled by the blank of despair, and deep lines that seemed to be literally scored in. Who could have recognised handsome Dick Warrington, with his sunny smile, in this grey and broken man?

"Good God!" said the Colonel at last. "What has happened, Dick?"

"Nothing," Dick answered, and his voice sounded harsh and hoarse. "Nothing at all out of the way, I assure you. No thanks, I won't sit down; I can't stay. I only looked in to tell you not to expect me to dinner to-night. I find I shan't be able to come. I am going out of town."

"Going out of town," the Colonel repeated. "That's a sudden decision, isn't it?"

Dick nodded.

"It is rather."

"Where are you going?" asked the Colonel, with an uneasy sidelong glance at the worn young face; "to join your mother at the Warren?"

"No," answered Dick, "I am not going to join my mother. I am going somewhere by myself." He paused for a moment, then made a step forward, holding out his hand. "Good-bye, sir," he went on, "you've been very kind to me lately in trying to open my eyes to—to certain things, and I'm afraid I've been very ungrateful, but I am not ungrateful now. You were right and I was wrong. Good-bye."

He grasped the Colonel's hand hard, nodded to Sir John, and then disappeared from the room as quietly as he had entered.

The two men who were left looked blankly at one another.

"The end has come," said the Colonel, with a groan.

He sank into a chair and covered his face with his hands, deeply moved by the wreck of that young life that he loved. His heart was filled with bitterness and impotent rage. In that moment he could have cursed the woman who had wrought such destruction.

Sir John smoked in meditative silence for a few minutes, then he hazarded an opinion.

"I am not so sure that this is the end, Gascoigne. I—I didn't like the boy's face."

The Colonel sat bolt upright in a moment, vaguely alarmed by his friend's manner.

"What?" he cried, in a horrified tone, "What do you mean, Herbert? Surely, you don't think that ——"

"I mean," said Sir John, lighting a fresh cigar with great deliberation, "that if I were you I would go to him and stay with him. When a man looks like that, he isn't fit company for himself."

"Good God!" cried the Colonel. "What a fool I am!"

Ten minutes later he was hurrying as fast as a hansom could take him in the direction of Mrs. Warrington's house in Grosvenor-square. He was out of the hansom before it had properly pulled up, and his furious ring at the bell brought a footman to the door in double quick time.

"Has Mr. Warrington come in yet?"

"Yes, sir," the man answered, wondering what had happened to make the Colonel so flurried and breathless; "Mr. Warrington came in about twenty minutes ago, and went straight up to his room. He gave orders that he wasn't to be disturbed on no account."

"All right; I'll go up and speak to him," said the Colonel, brushing past the servant, regardless of the latter's faint protest.

The Royal Marriage.—Rimmel's Bridal Bouquet. A new and delightful Perfume, prepared by Eugene Rimmel, Ld., Perfumers by appointment to H.R.H. The Princess of Wales.

The Claret of the season, Chateau la Marnière, vintage 1888 (Blanquefort), 21s. per doz. cash delivered. Sample Bot., 2s. per post. A trial order will convince of its sterling quality & value.—Arnold, Perrett, & Co., Ld., 7a, Lower Belgrave-street, London, S.W.

He had reached the foot of the stairs when, suddenly, he stopped short. What sound was that that broke the silence, and echoed so terribly through the stillness of the house? Had he come too late? For a moment he staggered back, then dashed upstairs, three steps at a time.

Outside Dick's door he paused, then turned the handle and went into the room, treading softly, and with bated breath, as if he feared to disturb the occupant. But he need not have feared, for earthly sounds would never disturb Dick Warrington again. He had closed his eyes to the things of this life.

On the table lay a note addressed to his mother, at his feet a photograph of Leoline Le Mesurier torn in two, and the revolver, still hot, just as it had dropped from his nerveless fingers.

"Dick!" cried the Colonel; "Dick! Oh! his poor mother. How shall I tell his mother?"

And then he fell on his knees by that motionless figure in the chair, and sobbed like a child.

* * * * * *

Poor Dick! Truly the ways of fate are strange. Others had sown the storm, but he had reaped the whirlwind. Others had sinned, and he had paid the penalty. Others had built their passion and pride and despair into an altar, and he was the sacrifice offered thereon.

Poor Dick!

MUSIC.

THE HUMOURS OF A STATE PERFORMANCE.

THE State Performance at the Opera House last week was certainly a more brilliant show than any of the Royal Wedding festivities, for some of the greatest artists in the world played in Gounod's "Roméo et Juliette" on the stage, while the house, beautifully decorated by Sir A. Harris, was filled by the élite of English Society. Altogether apart from the chastened beauty of the Royal box, for which the Opera-House people were responsible, Messrs. Gerard had festooned ropes of roses from box to box, and had sent in upwards of 600 bouquets of roses, buying up, indeed, all the best in Covent Garden market, or in all something like a hundred thousand flowers. Nosegays and garlands of this sort cannot be made a week ahead, and, as a matter of fact, deft fingers — the Recording Angel, perhaps, for once blotted out certain clauses of the Factory Act—were at work all night weaving these festoons for the delectation of Royalty and the wealthy classes. Nevertheless, I doubt the wisdom of the almost universal adoption by the men of levée dress. Many of the males among the audience looked supremely uncomfortable in this absurd costume, for although Sir A. Harris wisely refrained from making the Court livery obligatory, many donned it who had no right to wear it, and had probably never seen so outlandish a garment before. One of the Yeomen of the Guard—he particularly directed my attention to the fact that "the reporters," of whom, I suppose, I was one, ignorantly referred to them as "Beef-eaters from the Tower," whereas he never ate beef, and had never been to the Tower in his life—pointed to an individual in rather baggy stockings and a sword uncomfortably seated on his hips, as a man who cut hair. The officers of the Guards were also in some difficulty. The question in such a case is what to do with your head-piece. Neither a busby nor a helmet will go under an opera chair, and one Life Guardsman, seated in the stalls placed along the wall, pluckily kept his helmet on his head, until a lady in a box, either in pity or because it interfered with her view, offered it the hospitality of a hat-peg. The naval men were better off, but at subsequent State performances there should be a hat-room for Dragoons, Lancers, and Horse Guards. A German officer was in a worse plight, for, putting his "pickelhaube" on his chair while talking to an acquaintance, he was startled by the sudden rise of the curtain on the Chamber scene, and thoughtlessly sat down on the spike. The police arrangements were, from a police point of view, so far effective that, despite the pouring rain (for some reason it always rains on "gala" nights), cabs were not allowed near the opera house until the early hours of the morning, nor was any passage made through the crush-room. Consequently, the people at the doors waiting for their carriages refused to give way, and in some cases it was upwards of an hour before box-holders could reach the streets. Fair ladies in delicate dresses and costly tiaras passed through the mud, to the sore damage of their costumes and their tempers, for no vehicle was allowed near the doors until the forty royalties had very leisurely departed, and carriages were even then not easily to be found.

Mascagni's "I Rantzau," which was delayed by the State performance, and was ultimately produced at Covent Garden on Friday night, may be a thing of beauty, though I doubt whether its joy will last for ever. Knots of seedy Italians in the gallery slips made themselves hoarse by shouts of "Bis" and "Mas-cag-nee," and the publisher exhibited in the saloon a jewelled baton which he intended to present to the composer. But phlegmatic islanders have their own views of such matters, and "I Rantzau" is not at all likely to prove another "Cavalleria Rusticana." Mascagni is being fêted to his heart's desire, and next Saturday he is "commanded" to Windsor to conduct his "Cavalleria," and the second act of his "L'Amico Fritz," before the Queen. He would then do well to retire for a period into private life, to perfect his style, choosing for his next effort a libretto of rugged dramatic power, in which direction his talents obviously lie. The Italian musician is a natural genius, but he needs a strong hand over him, and a wise head to direct him in the right path, which, by the way, does not lie in the musical delineation of idyllic village family life.

The "Opinions of the Press" after the performance of "I Rantzau" on Friday by no means squared with the glorified reports which the same papers printed from their correspondents after the first production of Mascagni's opera at Florence last November. Your Continental telegram man is apt to spread himself, and although a perusal of his messages, particularly before they have passed through the purifying hands of the Foreign sub-editor, may be a liberal education in adulatory adjectives, it is pretty obvious that his judgment is not implicitly to be trusted. Even London critics who are sent to foreign parts to notice a new work, appear to leave their judgment behind them. I am not, of course, now speaking of "I Rantzau" in particular, but of Continental premières in general. Abroad the enthusiasm is worked up to such a pitch, that, amidst the cheers, kisses, bouquets, and dozens of recalls, it needs a very level head indeed to form an opinion which can really be trusted.

The performance of "Les Huguenots" on Saturday was perhaps the finest operatic representation which has been given at Covent Garden this year. The cast was almost a phenomenal one, including Jean and Edouard de Reszke as Raoul and Marcel, Madame Albani and Mdlle. Ravogli as Valentina and the Page, and MM. Lassalle and Ancona as St. Bris and de Nevers. I doubt whether even in the brightest days of operatic competition a better list of artists has been secured, and the house was crammed even to the last seat. Wagner for the moment seems to be under a cloud, for there was a very moderate house for "Die Walküre" in German, and this week the German performance is to give way to "Die Meistersinger," which will be performed in Italian, with MM. Jean de Reszke and Lassalle and Madame Albani in the chief parts.

From the sublime to the practical. The latest thing at

FIELALBO.—Cleans buff gloves, belts, liveries, girths, shoes, &c. Perfectly white. Guaranteed not to rub off. Supersedes pipeclay.—FIELALBO CO., 31, Francis-street, Woolwich. Sample free.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

the hair-dresser's is, I am told, "The Paderewski Hair-Wash."

It is reported, and I believe with truth, that Mr. Percy Hutchinson is a leading member of the syndicate formed to run the Promenade Concerts under the management of Mr. Sinkins at Covent Garden next month. Mr. Hutchinson, who is the husband of Madame Valleria, has already had plenty of experience in musical business, for, besides managing some of his wife's concerts, he has directed performances at Manchester and Brussels, and has managed several successful light operatic tours on the Continent.

A pianoforte has been invented to impart an electric shock to the performer whenever he touches a note. The new instrument may be useful to some of our old and so-called "classical" pianists.

The following are the leading musicians of England:—Messrs. G. H. Robinson, Berger, Gardner, Cummings, Randegger, Thomas, and Taylor. So, at any rate, I gather from the fact that the Philharmonic Society have elected those gentlemen as directors for the present year. Sullivan, Parry, Mackenzie, Bridge, Cresor, Stanford, Cowen, Stainer, German, and McCunn, cum multis aliis, are not big enough for the Philharmonic, who prefer such shining lights as G. H. Robinson, Charles Gardner, and Francesco Berger. The Philharmonic possess the finest orchestra in the kingdom, but surely the time has arrived when the leading musicians of the kingdom should associate to institute a series of concerts fully and adequately representative alike of this country and its music.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—"Leigh Hunt scarcely attained to the first rank of writers," admits his biographer, an admission inconsistent with the editor's classification of the author of "Abou ben Adhem" with the "Great Writers." (1) Can a writer be justly ranked as "great" who has probably bequeathed posterity little more than this fine poem and perhaps the sonnet "To the Nile"? In any series, however, of "Genial Writers"—of authors we love more than admire, and love more, perhaps, for their weaknesses than for their strength—Leigh Hunt would hold a high place. Steele, Goldsmith, Lamb, Leigh Hunt are to the great writers as the "soothing charities" of Wordsworth's lines are to "the primal duties":—

> The primal duties shine aloft, like stars;
> The charities that soothe and heal and bless
> Are scattered at the feet of man like flowers.

There was much that was engagingly feminine in Leigh Hunt, and a little that was feminine without being engaging—the small spite, for instance, of his posthumous exposure of Byron—but he was far from being in the front rank even of his contemporaries, while to this generation he is almost better known as the original of Dickens' dastardly caricature, "Harold Skimpole," than as the author of the "Story of Rimini." Yet, politically, Leigh Hunt belongs rather to our generation than to his own, and there is nothing more interesting in this excellently written "Life" than the contrast between the shrinking sensitiveness of this Radical protagonist and the unshrinking heroism of his martyrdom. It is curious to contrast Leigh Hunt's "Mask" on the fall of Napoleon with the fallen Emperor's own claim to be "the Messiah of a popular Gospel." Mr. O'Connor Morris, who has done Napoleon adequate, and even ample, justice in the sketch (2) contributed by him to the excellent "Heroes of the Nations" series, has to demur at least to this claim of his idol. You might say it was quite time Napoleon should be judged by the "dry light" of history instead of by the coloured glare of politics; but the second Empire intervened, first by its establishment, and then by its fall, to reflect back its lights and shadows on the first. I think it is Chillingworth who says that if it was any one's interest to deny that two and two make four, it would be stoutly and persistently denied; and it is still the interest of many parties and of more than one nation to deny common justice to Napoleon. Certainly Mr. O'Connor Morris sins a little on the other side, but it is no less certainly the right side. As time goes on the genius of this extraordinary man orbs, to use an image of Tennyson's, more and more into a perfect star—his genius for politics, and even for political prophecy, no less than for administration, for legislation and for war. He predicted that the régime of the Bourbons would give way to the Monarchy of July, and that this in turn would be replaced by a revival of the Empire; he anticipated the break-up of the Holy Alliance, foretold the risings of 1848-9, and declared that nothing could arrest the democratic movement, which may yet, he said, make a Republic of Europe. Is there any doubt that it will? In my mind, none. Do you remember Curran's description of his sleepless suffering in the bed of a country inn? "If the fleas had been unanimous, they could have pushed me out of bed." The solidarity between the peoples grows with the growth of their impatience of their burdens; while, as every man is passed through the military mill, a mob needs only arms to be an army.

This was brought home to me with singular force upon reading the translation of a book already in its fourth German edition, Richard Graf von Pfeil's "Experiences of a Prussian Officer in the Russian Service during the Turkish War of 1877-78" (3). Your horror at the frightful sufferings of the patient soldiery on both sides is less than your horror of their chief cause—the callousness, incapacity, corruption, and even cowardice of their officers. These wretched sheep were led to the slaughter in a cause of which they knew nothing, and for which they cared nothing, by leaders who knew nothing, and cared nothing for them:—

> The men sat crowded together in the carriages—silent, unconcerned, and dejected, and no one took any notice of their departure. The want of interest on the part of the inhabitants was truly shocking, and this was called the war for the holy Slav cause, which, according to the instigators of the Panslavist movement, all Russia demanded! So far from this being the case, it may safely be maintained that there never was a war in any country so unpopular as that with Turkey. All the much vaunted enthusiasm for our oppressed Bulgarian and Servian brothers, which was got up by the Panslavists, was one of the grossest swindles that history has ever known.

Isn't it about time that the chickens should be consulted, not merely as to the sauce wherewith they should be cooked, but upon the point of their being killed or cooked at all? This glimpse behind the Russian and Turkish scenes given by an expert on-looker is most instructive in other ways also as to the state of the "sick man," and of his would-be heir, who, on one disinterested excuse or another, would put him out of pain. At times you are troubled by a misgiving that there is some Bobadilian exaggeration of the value of the writer's advice and services to the Russian Commanders; but the general tone of the book is anything but Bobadilian. Apropos of Bobadil, you will be

(1) "The Life of Leigh Hunt." ("Great Writers" Series). By Cosmo Monkhouse. (London: Walter Scott, Limited.)

(2) "Napoleon." Warrior and Ruler. And the Military Supremacy of Revolutionary France. ("Heroes of the Nations" Series.) By William O'Connor Morris. (London: G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

(3) "Experiences of a Prussian Officer in the Russian Service during the Turkish War of 1877-78." By Richard Graf von Pfeil. Translated from the German. Fourth Edition. By Colonel C. W. Bowdler. With a Map. (London: Edward Lanford.)

(4) "Ben Jonson." ("The Mermaid" Series). Edited by Brinsley Nicholson, M.D. With an Introduction by C. H. Herford. 2 Vols. (London: T. Fisher Unwin.)

(5) "Ivanhoe." By Sir Walter Scott, Bart. Border Edition, with Introductory Essay and Notes by Andrew Lang. Twelve Etchings. 2 Vols. (London: John C. Nimmo.)

(6) "The Lady of the Lake." By Sir Walter Scott, Bart. Vignette Edition, with One Hundred New Illustrations by Joseph M. Gleeson. (London: Griffith, Farran, & Co.)

(7) "The Law of Psychic Phenomena." By Thomson Jay Hudson. (London: G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

"TOILET LANOLINE" softens, clears, and preserves the skin, and should be used in every household. "Toilet Lanoline" protects the skin from the effects of exposure, and adds to the natural beauty. In collapsible tubes, 6d.; in small boxes, 3d., from all chemists and druggists. Wholesale depot, 67, Holborn-viaduct. The genuine bears the trade-mark, "Lanoline."

glad to hear that the best plays of Ben Jonson have just made a belated appearance in the excellent "Mermaid Series" (4), under the competent editorship of Dr. Brinsley Nicholson. "Ivanhoe" (5) —the very name is heart-stirring—has also appeared in the sumptuous uniform of the "Border Edition," adorned with twelve fine etchings; while Mr. Joseph Gleeson has set off a new edition of "The Lady of the Lake" (6) with one hundred illustrations. I do not know whether you will take the interest that I have been forced to take, by some inexplicable spiritualistic experiences, in a work which explains its mysteries and those of mesmerism, hypnotism, &c., by a single, general, and natural law of the mind. Admitting, as I have been forced to admit, that there is something in spiritualism more than mere jugglery can be held answerable for, and yet something less than to need a supernatural interpretation, I think it not only possible, and probable, but almost certain, that its phenomena are correlated with those of hypnotism, &c., and explicable by the same natural law of the human mind. Whether Mr. Hudson, in his extremely interesting "Law of Psychic Phenomena" (7), has discovered this law is another question which I shall leave, with a modesty like his own, to the decision of experts. Anyway, he has certainly supplied a working hypothesis for the systematic study of hypnotism, spiritualism, mental therapeutics, the feats of mathematical and of musical prodigies, &c., which promises to be as serviceable to psychic science as the atomic theory is to chemical science.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—It has been quite an exhausting week in town, with its succession of deeply interesting events. On Tuesday night the gala performance at the Opera was a magnificent spectacle. Knowing that you would like to hear all about the Royalties, I asked Sir Augustus Harris to let me, as a great favour, remain in the Vestibule until they had passed in, and he very kindly allowed me to do so, but, after all, I had only the merest glimpse of the great people owing to the number of persons who came and stood directly in front of us. I could see, however, that the Princess of Wales was looking as lovely as she ever did in her whole life, and quite the youngest of the whole party. She wore silver-grey satin and a beautiful tiara of diamonds. She walked with her father, the handsome King of Denmark. The Queen, her mother, has a charming expression, besides being very pretty. She walked first with the Prince of Wales. The two young Princesses were in white, with a small cluster of natural flowers pinned in their hair with diamond stars. They walked together, followed by the Duke of York, the Czarewitch, who closely resembles him, except that he looks much younger, and Prince Waldemar of Denmark.

Princess May had arrived before, with her family and Princess Victoria of Schleswig Holstein. The bride-elect wore a very pale blue brocade trimmed with frills of satin in pale blue, pink, and green. She had hardly any jewels on; but her mother was resplendent in diamonds. Princess Louise of Lorne was looking very nice in a white gown and a diamond tiara. She is always smiling, happy, and animated. The Duchess of Fife arrived early with her husband. Her face becomes more and more refined every year. It is now almost a pure oval, and she has such a gentle, quiet air of perfect repose as to render her very like her mother in manner and expression. She wore a beautifully made white brocade dress and a diamond tiara and necklace. The Duchess of Connaught was looking unusually well. How very popular the Duke is! He always has an enthusiastic reception. That dear old lady, the grand Duchess of Mecklenburg Strelitz, looked delightful in mauve and magnificent jewels. Her blind husband was led by Prince Christian, whose own sight was sadly injured by that unfortunate shooting accident a couple of years ago.

After they had all passed in I wended my way to my stall and entered the auditorium just in time to see the whole house stand up to receive the Royalties as they entered their box and seated themselves. The box was formed by throwing five or six into one. The sides of it, as well as the top, were draped with pure white silk fluted and caught into beautiful folds. Garlands of roses and of orange-blossoms made it into a bower illuminated by small floral-shaped electric lights. It was a most becoming arrangement, and the occupants all looked very nice.

The other private boxes were filled with ladies in white or pale-tinted dresses, and wearing magnificent jewels. As they all stood up, together with the rest of the audience, as the Royal party entered the theatre, the effect was really wonderfully pretty. About two-thirds of the dresses were white satin, and diamonds were as ninety-nine to one hundred in their proportion to other jewels. Georgiana Lady Dudley, in pale blue, wore her lovely turquoises, a high collar of these surmounting a diamond necklace with a rich pendant. Lady Ashburton had on a necklace of huge emeralds framed in diamonds. Lady de Trafford's red roses, white satin, and diamonds, made a most becoming setting for her beautiful face. The Marchioness of Londonderry, also in white, looked splendidly handsome in her tiara, necklace, and girdle of fine diamonds—if it was a girdle, Amy, for I only had a glimpse of a line of glittering gems somewhere transversely crossing the waist, like the equinoctial line. Lady Brooke, in pale pink, had a diamond belt, in addition to the tiara and necklace, which were almost a uniform on that occasion.

But there is so much else to tell you that I must leave the rest to your imagination. The Duchess of Teck, not wishing any detailed description of her daughter's trousseau to appear in print, forbade any of the gowns, hats, &c., to be shown, but allowed the wedding-gown, the bridesmaids' dresses, and the going-away costume to be seen by members of the Press on condition that no description should appear in any paper until after the ceremony. This condition was strictly imposed upon all to whom the dresses were shown. The wedding-gown was made in a fashion that combined simplicity and beauty of texture as only the highest skill can do. It was built by Linton & Curtis, whose beautiful Adams House in Albemarle-street I have already described to you. It was composed of white and silver brocade, designed specially for the occasion, and woven at Spitalfields. Clusters of roses, shamrocks, and thistles, with a little admixture of lily of the valley, Princess May's favourite flower, appear in rich silver thread upon a thick satin ground, the whole tone of the brocade being in a beautiful pearl white. The composition of the groups of flowers is excellent. A spray of thistles curves outwards and upwards on one side of the cluster, balanced by a spray of roses on the other, each dwindling off into buds. Within the space thus formed are a couple of rosebuds, with a delicate device in shamrocks forming almost a heart-shape about them. The stems of all the flowers are tied with true-lovers' knots, a frond or two of lily of the valley drooping over the bows. The front was in rich white satin, three-fourths of it covered with three flounces of very beautiful Honiton lace, which was made expressly for the wedding-dress of the bride's mother, Princess Mary of Teck. The design and bows, roses, shamrocks, and thistles, issuing from a cornu-

"It ought not to be enough that a riding habit should look and hang well, it must be so cut and contrived that, in case of a fall, there is nothing to catch on the pommels or fetter the rider in any way. The difficulty is to find something that is absolutely safe, and at the same time is not unsightly. Busvine's safety habit certainly fulfils both these conditions."—The Queen, Feb. 11th, 1893.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER. Restores the colour. Renews the growth. Arrests the fall. Cleanses the scalp.

copia. The top flounce was headed with a line of orange-blossom, which met in the middle and fell in two long ends over the lace. The train, which rested about a yard and a-half upon the ground, and the sides of the skirt, were in the brocade, bordered down the sides with orange-blossom. A full ruche of the satin finished the train underneath, the front of the dress ending in three satin frills, each edged with silver fringe. The bodice, made of the brocade, was cut low and trimmed with lace, lace also forming the short sleeves. Orange-blossom was carried round among the folds of lace, and formed small clusters on the sleeves. The wedding veil was of the same lace, and was fastened on with diamond stars over a wreath of orange-blossoms.

The bridesmaids' dresses, also made by Linton & Curtis, were composed of rich white satin trimmed with white chiffon and silver lace made in Buckinghamshire. The skirts were bordered with a frill of chiffon headed with the lace. The low bodices had folds of chiffon round the top and a wide trimming of the lace in front across the chest. At the back this trimming descended in a point, being met by another point rising from the waist, the effect being very rich and handsome. The lower part of the bodices was outlined with the silver lace, which fell in two long ends at the left side, ending in silver fringe. A cluster of pink roses was fastened on the left side of each bodice with a knot of pink velvet, which fell in long ends over the white satin, making the only spot of colour on the snowy dresses. The children bridesmaids' frocks were very pretty, the short skirts ending in frills of chiffon and two rows of the silver lace. The bodices were covered with folds of the chiffon finished off at the top with the lace. Each bridesmaid had a little cluster of pink roses on her bodice, fastened on with a knot of pink velvet, which fell in long ends to the hem of the dress.

The going-away dress was a poem, worthy of a Princess in a fairy-tale. It was made by Redfern, of Conduit-street, and consisted of white Irish poplin, with the loveliest rippling gleam and sheen upon it. Round the skirt were three rows of fine gold braiding in a pale, refined tone of the metal that harmonised most delicately with that of the sumptuously soft silk. The upper row rose in slender spirals which had a very graceful effect. A small cape to match was in the poplin, bordered round the edge with gold braiding. A fall of lace in a delicious tone of deep, warm, cream colour, was skilfully arranged about the shoulders. The little bonnet, one of the most becoming that Princess May ever had on, was in white and gold to match, and the sunshade was in poplin with gold braiding and a little lace.

Charlie saw the bride on her way to Liverpool-street, and said that he had never seen her look so well. She was not then wearing the pretty shoulder-cape, as the sun was pouring down upon the carriage, and the heat was excessive.

Redfern furnished several other dresses to the trousseau, including a tweed gown for country wear, smart tailor-made walking and yachting costumes, a driving coat, and several silk blouses, together with hats and bonnets to match the various dresses.

The Scottish firm of Scott Adie made for the Duchess some capes, some jackets, a long travelling cloak, and two rugs, all of which were specially designed for her Royal Highness.

The evening dresses were in rich, pale satins and brocades, of texture so rich and fine that they needed little trimming. Frills round the hem of rich satin ribbon formed a favourite finish to the skirts. One or two beautiful Irish poplins were ordered. A magnificent piece of lace was made at Exeter to the order of the Duchess of Teck, who herself selected the design.

Some of the table linen was supplied by Robinson & Cleaver, of Belfast, by command of the Duke, for the furnishing of York House. Among these were a quantity of hand-woven double-damask table-cloths of various sizes—one design being a series of exquisite ferns intertwined with ivy, lily of the valley, &c., having a bold centre-piece forming a complete bank of foliage, surrounded with lovely sprays of ivy, and a charming border so placed as to be always seen upon the table, and not hidden, as is the case with damasks ordinarily supplied by shops to the general public. In addition to this handsome woven border, there was an outer one consisting of festoons of ferns and bouquets of ivy, with a space of plain satin damask between, the whole effect of the weaver's skill being shown by the distinctness of the foliage, appearing as if raised from the fabric. Another set of table-cloths, unique in design, had a pretty floral and geometrical design. As well as napkins en suite, a quantity of others were chosen, including a very pretty design with a network scroll border, showing the white rose, the bramble, and sprays of rosebuds. On a plain satin damask ground were bunches of wild roses and blackberries. A large quantity of exquisite toilet-covers, specially made, and a number of rich lace antimacassars for toilets, chairs, and couches were also supplied. All the articles comprised in the Royal order with which Messrs. Robinson & Cleaver were honoured were marked with a design embodying the special badge of the White Rose of York.

You are probably expecting a description of the wedding from me, Cousin Amy. Well, dear, I have sent you all the papers I could think about it, and the very best account of all appears in the Daily News, so read it carefully. As for us, we went to Henley on the great day, and, consequently, saw nothing of the doings beyond the beautiful decorations of the streets we passed through on our way to Paddington Station. Here, however, is a bit of a letter I have received from Mrs. Fourstars, who seems to have been in a delightful place, close to Hyde Park Corner :—

The Bachelors' Club were lucky to have the band of the Blues stationed close to them across Hamilton-place, as it added very considerably to their guests' enjoyment. The guests, however, seemed to me to be packed rather too closely, and contrasted unfavourably with the visitors at the house opposite, where the hostess had very wisely only asked sufficient people to enable all to see with comfort. I saw some lovely gowns there, and a young bride Marchioness looked delightfully cool in a simple little white book-muslin frock, with innumerable lace-edged frills and three or four bands of muslin insertion above. The neck was cut a tiny bit low, and the sleeves came a little below the elbow. A wreath of many-coloured roses crowned a charming face, and trailed about the large picture hat. The hostess was charmingly dressed, and looked most picturesque in a beautiful gown of the new floral shot silk, the shades of which are indescribable, and a dear little bonnet of shaded roses suited the wearer's powdered hair and handsome face. I also admired a black gauze, embroidered in tiny bouquets of yellow and blue flowers. From the pointed yoke of the bodice plain black lisse (accordion-pleated) was tightly drawn down into a band of embroidery. The whole costume was made over deep amber satin. Although most of the ladies wore bonnets, this particular one had on a very large and pretty hat, which she must have found the greatest comfort on that sunniest of sunny days.

Ursula also writes to me from Edinburgh :—

"Confession is good for the soul," and so let me avow, my dear Madge, that during the past week I have envied you to the most unchristianlike extent for being able to witness all these festive doings in London in connection with the Royal Wedding. However, we did our little best to be "loyal men and true." Edinburgh certainly lends itself to decoration, and Prince's-street looked most festive, all the principal hotels and shops being gaily adorned, while in the other principal streets there was bunting, bunting everywhere; but in the deserted West-end only an occasional house had blossomed forth. The day began with a review of regulars and volunteers in the Queen's Park, where we had the pleasure of seeing the newly-arrived 12th Lancers. A cake-and-wine banquet to leading citizens was followed by a dinner to 5,000 poor people in the Waverley Market, and in the evening a ball and conversazione were given by the Lord Provost and Town Council, so that, altogether, Edinburgh was as much en fête as I suppose it is possible for a town in these grey northern latitudes to be, and the streets were thronged all day. A salute of twenty-one guns was fired from the Castle at one o'clock, though I make this statement on the testimony of eye rather than ear, the traffic being so noisy that I could not hear the guns from Prince's-street, and was only apprised that the salute was going on by seeing the puffs of smoke from the battery. Several churches also rang peals of joy on their bells, but in some instances this resolved itself into a monotonous tolling more suggestive of funereal than Hymeneal festivities.

HOUSE DRAINAGE.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

GOWNS FOR GOODWOOD AND COWES.—Messrs. REDFERN beg to announce that they are now exhibiting, at their Salons, 27, New Bond-street, a number of exceedingly pretty designs especially suitable for wear at Goodwood and Cowes Regatta, to which an inspection is invited.

Henley was perfectly glorious on the Thursday. There were such crowds present as I have never seen before, and when the boats scattered out over the river between the races, the effect was marvellously picturesque. Colour was everywhere. I love it. Do not you? I am a barbarian in my love for bright tints, if they are pure and good, not harsh and crude, and the houseboats, with their flowers and bunting, the little boats, with their gaily-tinted cushions, girls, and sunshades, together made Henley even more than ever a delightful panoramic patchwork, a moving mosaic, a brilliant blend of cheery sights and sounds. Under the shadow of a great umbrella-tent, on the lawn of the Isthmian Club, to which Mr. Jackson, the most courteous of secretaries, had kindly sent us invitations, we sat and revelled in the glorious day and the gladsome surroundings. The Isthmians give their guests such an excellent luncheon, and so daintily served, that it is no small boon to obtain a voucher for that large and well-ventilated tent, which extends Arab-like hospitality to so many. One always sees charming people there, too. On Thursday there were girls in white, girls in pale blue, girls in holland, and girls in linen; men in pale-tinted flannels, some in silk jackets, others in navy flannel with the club colours on their pockets, and others still in becoming suits of light tweed. Straw hats were the general wear, the heat being intense, and I heard a man tell a girl that he would go to his hatter the next day and order a white lace one like hers, for straw even was too heavy a burden to be borne.

Quite the prettiest girl on the Isthmian lawn—and by far the best dressed—on Friday wore an ideal boating dress of cream serge, beautifully embroidered in delicate tones of pale blue, red, green, and gold. The bodice was made quite loose, and opened over a waistcoat of the serge, also slightly braided in straight lines across the front. The braiding also appeared on the collar and cuffs of the blouse sleeves. A medium-sized Leghorn hat had very pale tinted roses tucked among its cleverly-twisted brim and crown. A very tall but elegant woman wore an uncommon gown in black and white striped silk graduating in width, which evidently hailed from Paris, as also did her black plumed hat.

Another stylish girl of very slight figure was gowned in a clinging soft silk crêpe dress in turquoise blue, most becoming with its ficelle lace cape and flounces, but it looked only fit to "sit in" and do the picturesque.

I liked immensely a pretty grey (are not grey dresses always popular?) silk shot with hydrangea colour. All the seams of this costume were outlined with narrow black velvet covered with cream guipure, and the wearer wore a tiny floral headdress at the extreme back part of her head.

We took boat after lunch and called on various friends on houseboats, and were surprised at the numbers of people who had had the same idea as ourselves and escaped from town and its simmering, seething crowds. One party had been very enterprising and energetic. They had got up at six in the morning and driven all over the route from St. James's-street, which they described as perfectly lovely, to Liverpool-street, seeing all the decorations quite comfortably, and getting back to breakfast at half-past eight. They started for Henley at ten, and were to sleep on board a houseboat that night, so I think you will concede that they had got the utmost possible out of that most exquisite of long summer days.

Taking them all round, I do not think the houseboats this year quite up to their usual form of smartness—some, in fact, being utterly devoid of any floral decorations whatever. The Dolce far Niente was a brilliant exception. The blue china flower-boxes, matching two huge jardinières which stood at the entrance, formed a most harmonious contrast to the dark wood and stained-glass windows of the boat. Another house-boat was effectively got up with hundreds of pink and white hydrangeas, which almost entirely enveloped the boat. Yet another was charmingly artistic—tiny trailing creepers, with masses of yellow flowers interspersed, making it perhaps one of the prettiest boats there. The large plain boats are, no doubt, convenient and roomy, but they are like a large plain woman, and require well dressing, and I noticed, too, that the plainer and larger the boats were, they were made more conspicuously so by the absence of guests.

The boats on the river were not so numerous as heretofore, and, I am glad to say, there were not so many canoes. Though these are possibly agreeable for canoists, they are a great nuisance to the occupants of ordinary rowing-boats; for they have an unpleasant way of considering that the whole river belongs to them, and that by merely sidling up to the ordinary rowing-boat in the most crowded part of the river, and calling "Sculls, sir!" way should be immediately made for them. The most picturesque craft was paddled by four ladies and four gentlemen, alike clad in white silk shirts, and white hat-bands. The ladies sat on the bow side, and the eight steered their boat in a most masterly fashion. Large pots of white marguerites were placed in the boat, dividing the couples at intervals. There were two troupes of mysterious minstrels, who sang for the benefit of the Victoria disaster, and I only hope that the destination of the proceeds may not prove to be as mysterious as was the individuality of the singers.

We had a delightful day up the river the week before Henley at Halliford—a part to which we have not been for many years. Charley stood us a sumptuous dinner at the historic hostelry which boating men used to know as Stone's. I fear that there are no longer any Stones there, and the Ship Hotel—for that is the official name of the house—has just changed hands, not for the first time. But from our experience, I am sure that Mrs. Cotsford, the new hostess, means to do everything in accordance with the best riverside traditions. And what more could you desire, Amy? Where can you take your ease with more zest than in the best class of Thames-side inn?

Have you had your pocket picked lately? I say "lately" advisedly, for I suppose every girl has at one time or another been relieved of her watch or purse in a crowd, though we are more subject to this trial in town than you are in the country. If you have had any recent experience of this kind you will bless me for telling you of a "Lady's Safety Companion," which has been invented by Lady Margesson, and will soon be on sale in Bond-street. It is on the principle of a châtelaine, attached to the waistband by a hook, a chain from which carries an ingeniously-planned bag, the inner recess of which, where the purse and watch repose, can only be opened after the upper compartment has been unfastened, so that there is no chance of a pickpocket getting at the valuables without being noticed. The only danger with articles of this kind is that the whole may be detached, but Lady Margesson asked me if I ever heard of a châtelaine being stolen from the person, and, really, I do not know that I have—have you? She is, however, improving the hook so as to make it practically impossible that this little reticule can be "snatched."

The prettiest and most tempting dish of fish that I

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

LADIES' SHIRTS, made to measure only, in French cambric, zephyr, and silk. All materials warranted fast colour and unshrinkable. Cut and made on the premises.—SAMPSON & CO., 270, Oxford-st., W.

have seen for a long time is Mrs. Marshall's "Saumon à la Riviera, sauce tartare." This is in the shape of a small salmon with a wonderful socle on which appear various vegetables embedded in aspic jelly and the delicious sauce. It is so decorative that it makes the whole table look nice.

The Table gives some excellent advice about keeping meat in this hot weather. It says:—

Get some stiff crinoline steels, and make a large circular bag of tarlatan or leno muslin, enclosing the steels (or canes do very well) at intervals up the sides, so as to keep them evenly distended. Get a carpenter to make you a piece of strong wood in the shape of the letter X, with an iron ring fastened to the centre above, and a galvanised meat-hook underneath the end of each arm of the cross. You will hang a joint or piece of meat to each of the four hooks, and tie your crinoline bag, which should have a running string at the top, round the base of the ring, and thus you can hang up your meat safe from flies anywhere. To prevent it getting bad buy some powdered charcoal, and fill a few bags with it, letting them hang closely round the meat, and you will thus be able to keep it sweet nearly a week. If meat gets tainted, always wash it over with a little salt and water, or vinegar, before cooking, basting it with the same whilst roasting.

Crawfish are now well in season. Let me recommend you to try this savoury:—

Well wash about three dozen, and boil them in half a pint of well-salted water, seasoned with pepper, cloves, one onion, and a lemon cut into slices. Let all simmer together. When the fish changes, take them out, remove the small claws and the large shell on the back, leaving the great claws intact upon the body. Put on a buttered dish some minced parsley, grated bacon, minced mushrooms, and a few picked leaves of tarragon; over these dust mixed spices such as pounded mace, grated nutmeg, pepper and salt. Place the crawfish round it, putting the tails towards the centre of the dish. Arrange other rows side by side in the same manner till the dish is covered. Pour a gill of salad oil over all, screening the fish with fine bread-crumbs, and season with pepper. Set the dish in a hot oven for about ten minutes; drain off the oil without disarranging the fish, and squeeze the juice of a lemon over the whole. Send to table very hot, with a plate of thinly-cut bread-and-butter rolled.

This is another good way:—

Cut thirty crawfish (alive) into halves, put them into a stew-pan with two glasses of champagne, two tablespoonfuls of salad oil, a clove of garlic, a sprig of sweet basil, half a lemon sliced, a cluster of parsley, and one minced shalot. Set the pan over the fire, and let all boil. Season with pepper, salt, and a dash of nutmeg. When the fish have changed colour take them up and arrange in a block on a dish. Add to the liquor in which they were boiled the juice of a lemon, and one tablespoonful of crawfish coulis; let the gravy simmer for a moment, then pour it boiling over the crawfish. The moment the point of a sharp knife penetrates the head the fish is dead; this is therefore a much more merciful way of killing them than that of putting them in cold water, allowing them to remain till it boils. Many cooks think that if thrown into boiling water they will cast their claws.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

MARIANI WINE

MARIANI WINE is an aid to intellectual exertion, and is indispensable to brain-workers and others who suffer from Weakness, Over-exertion, Mental Depression, Dyspepsia, Sleeplessness, Voice Fatigue, and for Convalescence. "A powerful rejuvenator and renovator of the vital forces." Written Testimonials from over 2,000 Physicians. From Chemists, Grocers, & Stores, or delivered free from Importers, WILCOX & CO. 239, Oxford-st., London, 4s. per bottle, or 45s. doz

JAY'S
Annual Sale
WILL CONTINUE
THROUGHOUT THE MONTH.
Great Reductions in Mantles, Costumes, Millinery, and Ladies' Underwear.
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

JOHN EXSHAW and CO.'S BRANDIES

The great reputation No. 1 Brandy has obtained in India has induced J. EXSHAW & CO. to now supply direct to the English Public.

No. 1	66/- per doz.	Very Old Liqueur	140/- per doz.
Liqueur	84/- ,,	Magnificent Old do.	175/- ,,
Fine Liqueur	96/- ,,	Grand Champagne	200/- ,,

SAMPLES FORWARDED.

CHAMPAGNES.

Jules Champion & Co.'s 1889 (in Bottles only)	68/- per doz.
Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1884 (in Bottles only)	105/- ,,
Ditto ditto ditto 1889 (in all sizes)	84/- ,,
Lebeau & Co. (in Magnums and Bottles only)	54/- ,,

CLARETS.

Ch. La Croute 1889	24/- per doz.
Ch. Brane Cantenac 1889	36/- ,,

(Bottled at the Chateau).

SOLE AGENTS for the United Kingdom—
POWELL, TURNER, & CO.
28, King-street, St. James's, S.W. & 23, Finch-lane, City.
TASTERS TO H.M.'s WAR OFFICE
And GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.
Telegraphic Address: "PEREIRE, London." Telephone No. 3,575.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN,
GREAT ORMOND STREET, BLOOMSBURY.
PATRON—The QUEEN. PRESIDENT—The DUKE of FIFE, K.T.
NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS urgently REQUIRED for SUPPORT of the NEW WING.
ADRIAN HOPE, Secretary.

CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly.

NO. 1 EAST ROOM—CUISINE VERITABLEMENT FINE,
SPECIALLY DEVOTED TO THE SERVICE OF
À LA CARTE DÉJEUNERS AND DINNERS in the most Recherché Style of French Cookery.
CUISINE UNRIVALLED IN ENGLAND. LARGE SELECTION OF CHOICE WINES.
NO. 2 EAST ROOM.
A Special Dinner at 10s. 6d. each Will be served in this Room at Separate Tables, between the hours of 6 and 9 p.m.
COMPOSED OF A SELECTION OF DISHES FROM THE CARTE DU JOUR OF THE EAST ROOMS.

JOHANNIS

KING OF NATURAL TABLE WATERS.

Promotes Digestion. Prolongs Life.
Prevents Gout and Rheumatism.

SPRINGS: Zollhaus, Germany.
LONDON OFFICES: 25, Regent Street, Waterloo Place.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.
300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.
ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.
Weavers of Dress Silks,
Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

PAINTERS. MORANT & CO. DECORATORS
91, NEW BOND STREET.

SPECIAL DESIGNS REGISTERED IN	Genoa Velvets, Brocades, Wall Papers, Furniture, Decoration. FOUR DOORS FROM OXFORD-ST.	NOT TO BE SEEN ELSEWHERE.

THREE NEW NOVELS.

NOW READY.
BY THE AUTHOR OF "A SPLENDID COUSIN."
Mrs. FINCH-BRASSEY. By Mrs. ANDREW DEAN, Author of "Isaac Eller's Money." In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.
WHO WINS—LOSES. By Sophia MARY LOCKE. In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "MRS. SEVERN."
Mrs. ELPHINSTONE of DRUM. By Mrs. STEVENSON, Author of "Juliet," &c. In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.
THE SOUL of LILITH. By Marie CORELLI, Author of "Thelma," &c. A New Edition in One Vol., crown 8vo, 6s.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

MELLIN'S FOOD

For Infants and Invalids.

"48, LOUISE-ROAD,
"WATER-LANE, STRATFORD, E.
"February 1.

"DEAR SIR,—I enclose you a photo of our baby girl, Dorothy Gentle, she having been fed on your Food for the last twelve months. Being obliged to resort to the feeding-bottle, I was recommended your food by a friend of mine. The photo was taken when she was six months old, and I think you will see by the condition of the child it will speak well for its excellency. I have always persuaded my friends to use it, as I am sure it cannot be too highly recommended for infants.—Yours faithfully,
"AUGUSTUS GENTLE."

MELLIN'S FOOD BISCUITS.

(Manufactured by Carr & Co., Carlisle, specially for G. Mellin.)
DIGESTIVE. NOURISHING. SUSTAINING.
For Children after Weaning, the Aged, Dyspeptic, and for all who require a Simple, Nutritious, and Sustaining Food.
Price 2s. and 3s. 6d. per Tin.

AN ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET ON THE FEEDING AND REARING OF INFANTS.
A Practical and Simple Treatise for Mothers, containing a large number of Portraits of Healthy and Beautiful Children, together with facsimiles of original testimonials which are of the greatest interest to all mothers, to be had, with samples, free by post on application to MELLIN'S FOOD WORKS, PECKHAM, S.E.

(The Original Firm Established 1810.)
Mappin Brothers

"Queen's" Plate.
For TABLE FURNISHING, &c.

By Her Majesty's Special Warrant.
Queen's Plate is the finest in the World. Has stood the test of over 80 years. Supplied direct to the public by the actual Manufacturers.

Mappin Corporate is on all in Queen's

Brothers' Trade Mark Manufactures Plate and Cutlery.

Only London Show Rooms: 220, REGENT ST., W.; & 66, CHEAPSIDE, E.C. (Next Sir John Bennett's.)

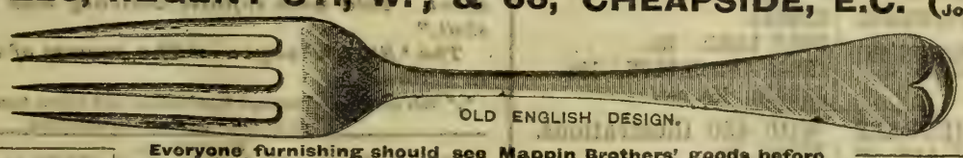
OUTFITS OF "QUEEN'S" PLATE.



OLD ENGLISH DESIGN.

"QUEEN'S" TABLE CUTLERY.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST-FREE to any part of the World.

Everyone furnishing should see Mappin Brothers' goods before deciding elsewhere.
Inspection invited at the London Show-Rooms.
Manufactory: QUEEN'S WORKS, SHEFFIELD.

SELECTIONS of Goods forwarded to the Country on APPROVAL.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

Just out. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

A HISTORY OF MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE, from its Foundation to the Present Time. By A. G. BRADLEY, A. C. CHAMPNEYS, and J. W. BAINES. Numerous Illustrations by Old Marlburians.

Just out. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

OUTLINES OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

By WILLIAM RENTON. Forming a New Volume of the University Extension Series, Edited by Professor KNIGHT.

With Portraits and Illustrations, crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

A SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF GEORGIANA, LADY DE ROS.

With some Reminiscences of her Family and Friends, including the Duke of Wellington.

By her Daughter, the Hon. Mrs. J. R. SWINTON.

"The book is interesting and readable, and will doubtless be welcomed in London society, which knew and loved Lady de Ros and respected her unassuming, patient, useful, and unostentatious life."—Daily Chronicle.

POPULAR NOVELS.

ESTHER VANHOMRIGH.
By Margaret L. Woods,
Author of "A Village Tragedy," &c.
New Edition. In 1 vol., crown 8vo, 6s.

MISS BLAKE OF MONKSHALTON.
By Isabella O. Ford.
Post 8vo, 5s.

PLAIN FRANCES MOWBRAY.
AND OTHER TALES.
By the Hon. E. Lawless,
Author of "Hurrish."
Crown 8vo, 6s.

MARCIA.
By W. E. Norris,
Author of "Thirlby Hall," &c., &c.
Popular Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

COMEDY OF A COUNTRY HOUSE
By Julian Sturgis,
Author of "John a Dreams," "John Maidment," &c.
Crown 8vo, 6s.

MAJOR LAWRENCE, F.L.S.
A NOVEL.
By the Hon. E. Lawless,
Author of "Hurrish."
Crown 8vo, 6s.

Mr. Murray's Handbooks.

WITH MAPS AND PLANS.

To meet the requirements of modern travel MR. MURRAY'S HANDBOOKS have been undergoing a complete revision and rearrangement, the main routes being made to coincide with the Railways as nearly as possible, and the information relating to Hotels, &c., being relegated to an Index and Directory at the end of the book, which will be found exceedingly handy of reference. In issuing these New Editions, Mr. Murray is virtually publishing a series of New Handbooks which, with a largely increased number of Maps and Plans, is calculated to meet all the present requirements of travellers.

CHAMBERS' POCKET DICTIONARY: English, French, and German. 6s.

HANDBOOK OF TRAVEL-TALK: English, French, German, and Italian. 3s. 6d.

ENGLISH.

LONDON: Past and Present. 3 vols., £3 3s.
ENVIRONS OF LONDON, including 20 miles round the Metropolis. Two Parts. 21s.
ENGLAND AND WALES. Arranged Alphabetically. 12s.
EASTERN COUNTIES: NORFOLK, SUFFOLK, CAMBRIDGESHIRE, AND ESSEX. 12s.
KENT. 7s. 6d. SUSSEX. 6s.
SURREY, HANTS, AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT. 10s.
BERKS, BUCKS, AND OXON. 9s.
WILTS, DORSET, AND SOMERSET. 12s.
DEVON. 7s. 6d. CORNWALL. 6s.
GLOUCESTER, HEREFORD, AND WORCESTER. 9s.
NORTH WALES. 6s. SOUTH WALES. 6s.
NORTHAMPTON AND RUTLAND. 7s. 6d.
DERBY, NOTTS, LEICESTER, AND STAFFORD.
SHROPSHIRE & CHESHIRE. 6s.
LANCASHIRE. 6s.
YORKSHIRE. 12s.
DURHAM & NORTHUMBERLAND. 10s.
LAKES OF CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORELAND. 6s.
IRELAND. 10s.

FOREIGN.

HOLLAND AND BELGIUM. 6s.
THE RHINE AND NORTH GERMANY. 10s.
SOUTH GERMANY AND TYROL. 12s.
SWITZERLAND. 10s.
FRANCE. Two Parts. 7s. 6d. each.
THE RIVIERA. 6s.
THE MEDITERRANEAN. Two Parts. 21s.
ALGERIA AND TUNIS. 12s.
SPAIN. 20s. PORTUGAL. 12s.
NORTH ITALY, VENICE, &c. 10s.
CENTRAL ITALY AND FLORENCE. 6s.
ROME AND ITS ENVIRONS. 10s.
SOUTH ITALY, NAPLES, SICILY. 12s.
EGYPT. 15s. GREECE. 24s.
CONSTANTINOPLE. 7s. 6d.
DENMARK AND ICELAND. 6s.
SWEDEN. 6s. NORWAY 7s. 6d.
RUSSIA.
HOLY LAND. 18s.
INDIA AND CEYLON. 15s.
JAPAN. 15s. net.

ENGLISH CATHEDRALS. With 420 Illustrations.
NORTHERN DIVISION. 2 vols. 21s.
SOUTHERN DIVISION. 2 vols. 36s.
EASTERN DIVISION. 21s.
WESTERN DIVISION. 10s.

WELSH. 15s.
ST. PAUL'S. 10s. 6d.
ST. ALBAN'S. 6s.

London: JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

THE NOVEL OF THE SEASON. THE SECOND EDITION IS NEARLY EXHAUSTED. A THIRD EDITION IS IN THE PRESS.

E. F. BENSON.—DODO: A Detail of the Day. By E. F. BENSON. 2 vols., crown 8vo, 21s.
"An unusually clever and interesting novel."—Guardian.
"'Dodo' is very good company. The author's matter is original and interesting."—National Observer.
"Clever and well-written. 'Dodo's' lovers are much to be pitied, but her readers may be promised a very pleasant time."—Morning Post.
"A delightfully witty sketch of the smart people of society. The writer is a showman with keen insight and sympathy, and a true artist."—Spectator.
"The story is told with charming grace and much power. The dialogue is a feast of epigram and paradox."—Speaker.

BARING-GOULD.—MRS. CURGENVEN OF CURGENVEN. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of "Mehalah," "In the Roar of the Sea," &c. 3 vols.
"Among his series of brilliant romances, 'Mrs. Curgenven of Curgenven' is one of the best."—Morning Post.
"The swing of the narrative is splendid."—Sussex Daily News.
"A very fine and powerful story."—Bristol Mercury.

GILBERT PARKER.—MRS. FALCHION. By GILBERT PARKER, Author of "Pierre and his People." 2 vols., crown 8vo, 21s.
"The delicate truthfulness of the workmanship is not one whit less noteworthy than its vividness and power."—Daily Chronicle.
"A very striking and admirable novel."—St. James's Gazette.
"A work of original power. It has intellect and imagination in it, finely imagined and well told."—Scotsman.
"A surprise, a revelation almost."—Lady's World.

ANTHONY HOPE.—A CHANGE OF AIR. By ANTHONY HOPE, Author of "Mr. Witt's Widow," &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.
"Humorous in conception, witty in execution. A book to read from beginning to end."—National Observer.
"Fresh in subject, and full of humour and energy."—Literary World.

METHUEN & CO., 18, Bury-street, W.C.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

AS A MAN IS ABLE.

BY DOROTHY LEIGHTON.

IN THREE VOLUMES.

"The novel is distinctly readable, and considerably above the average."—First Press Notice.

BY MAXWELL GRAY.

THE LAST SENTENCE.

By the Author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland." 3 vols. Second Thousand.

"'The Last Sentence' is a remarkable story; it abounds with dramatic situations, the interest never for a moment flags, and the characters are well drawn and consistent."—Standard.

BY SARAH GRAND.

THE HEAVENLY TWINS.

By the Author of "Ideala." 3 vols. Third Thousand.

"It is so full of interest that one feels inclined to give oneself up to unreserved enjoyment of it. The twins are among the most delightful and amusing in fiction."—Athenæum.

LONDON: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, BEDFORD STREET, W.C.

The 'Morning Post' says:—"The novel can hardly fail to become one of the most popular of the season."

A SECOND EDITION, AT ALL LIBRARIES.

Mrs. CONNEY'S NEW NOVEL,

A RUTHLESS AVENGER.

In 3 vols. By the Author of "A Lady Horsebreaker," &c.

The 'Daily Telegraph' says:—"One of the most ingenious and interesting novels of the season."

The 'Athenæum' says:—"A capital sensational romance. . . . quite above the average, and thoroughly entertaining."

THE SUCCESS OF THE SPRING IN FICTION.

I FORBID THE BANNS.

The Story of a Comedy which was played seriously. By FRANKFORT MOORE. FIFTH and CHEAPER EDITION. In cloth gilt, 6s.

The 'Athenæum' says:—"So racy and brilliant a novel."

The 'Daily Telegraph' says:—"A very remarkable novel. It is daring in conception, brilliant in execution, and altogether fascinating in treatment. Told with infinite delicacy and masterful skill."

The 'Sketch' says:—"The success of the spring in fiction."

 This novel passed through Four Editions in 3 volume form. [This Day.

HUTCHINSON & CO., Paternoster-row.

Price Sixpence.

THE HARROGATE MINERAL WATERS and HOMŒOPATHY. A new Analysis. Reprinted from the Monthly "Homœopathic Review."

Published by E. GOULD & SON, London, and can be purchased at any Booksellers'.

For Aches and Pains.

ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION

"An Excellent Good Thing." One Shilling and Three Halfpence.

"AND IT I WILL HAVE, OR I WILL HAVE NONE."

Taming of the Shrew, Act IV., Sc. 3.

LUMBAGO.

From a Justice of the Peace.

"About a fortnight ago a friend advised me to try your Embrocation, and its effect has been magical."

STRENGTHENS THE MUSCLES.

From "Victorina," "The Strongest Lady in the World."

"It not only relieves pain, but it strengthens the nerves and muscles."

SORE THROAT FROM COLD.

From a Clergyman.

"For many years I have used your Embrocation, and found it most efficacious in preventing and curing sore throat from cold."

CRAMP.

Chas. S. Agar, Esq., Forres Estate, Maskellya, Ceylon, writes:—

"The coolies suffer much from carrying heavy loads long distances, and they get cramp in the muscles, which, when well rubbed with your Embrocation, is relieved at once."

SPRAINS AND STIFFNESS.

H. J. Burden, Esq., Peckham Harriers' Hon. Sec., writes:—

"Used your Universal Embrocation for some time, and find it invaluable for sprains and stiffness."

ACCIDENT.

From the Jackley Wonders, Oxford Music Hall, London.

"I was recommended by my friend 'Victorina your Embrocation, and by using it for two days I was enabled to resume my duties."

CYCLING.

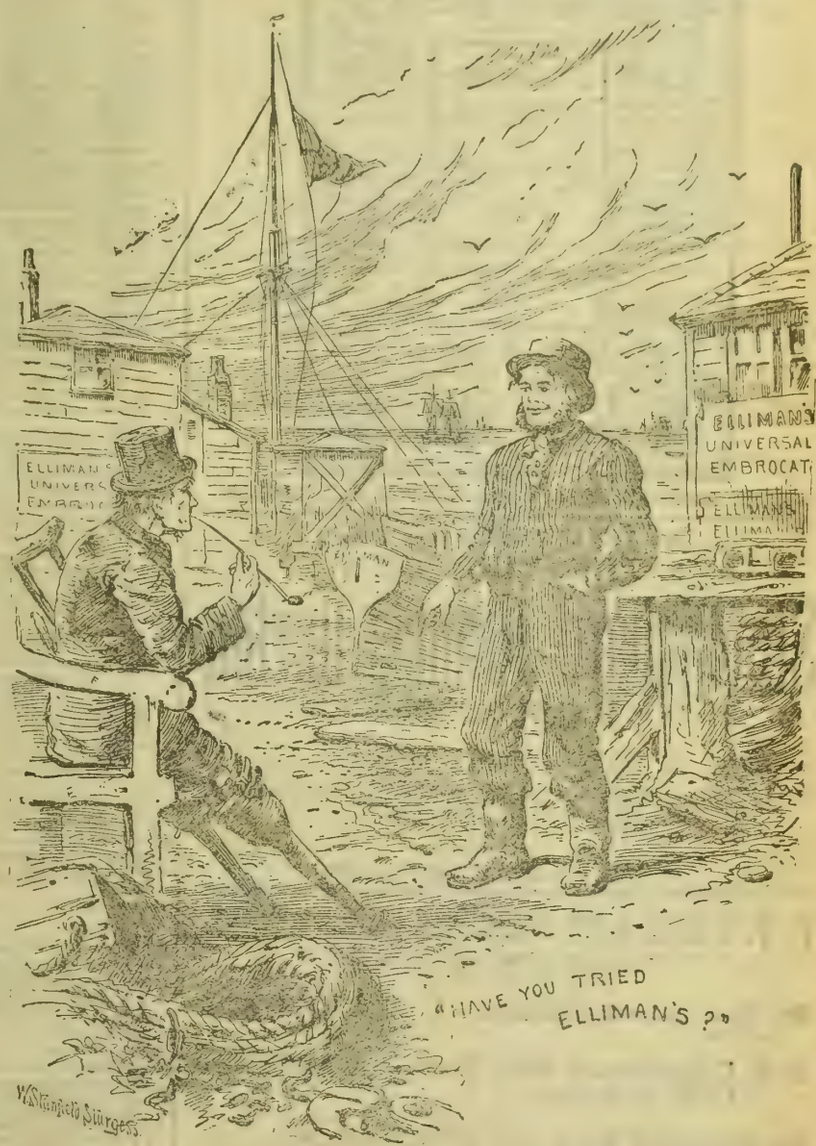
From L. Fabrellas, St. Sebastien, Spain.

"I am a member of a Cycling Club here, and can testify to the excellent results to be obtained by using your Universal Embrocation."

RHEUMATISM.

From A. Barton, Esq., The Ferns, Romford.

"I write to say that had it not been for Elliman's Embrocation I should have remained a cripple up to the present moment."



PREPARED ONLY BY

ELLIMAN, SONS, & CO.

SLOUGH, ENG.

1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. Of all Chemists.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED.

FOUNDED IN 1842.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE (either New or Second-hand) of the BEST ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from One Guinea per annum. LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for books exchangeable by the Library Messengers) from Two Guineas per annum. COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from Two Guineas per annum. N.B.—Two or three friends may unite in One Subscription, and thus lessen the cost of carriage. LIBRARY BOXES GRATIS.

TOWN AND VILLAGE CLUBS SUPPLIED ON LIBERAL TERMS.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books Gratis and post free.

SALE DEPARTMENT.

All the Leading Books of Past Seasons are on Sale, second-hand, at greatly Reduced Prices. LISTS GRATIS AND POST FREE.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

30 to 34, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON;

241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; and 48, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Mansion House End).

New Volume of Smith, Elder, & Co.'s POPULAR 2s. & 2s. 6d. Novels.
Now Ready, POPULAR EDITION, fcap. 8vo, boards, pictorial cover, 2s.; or, limp red cloth, 2s. 6d.

The SLAVE of the LAMP. By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN, Author of "Young Mistley," &c.

LONDON: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, WATERLOO PLACE.

NOW READY, Cloth, Price 12s. 6d.

AGENTS:—SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, & CO., STATIONERS' HALL COURT, E.C.

On July 12th will be published
THE LIFE OF
Sir Richard Francis Burton
K.C.M.G., &c.
By his Wife, ISABEL BURTON.
With numerous Portraits, Coloured and other Illustrations, and Maps, 2 vols., demy 8vo, 42s.

CHAPMAN & HALL, Ltd., London.

F. V. WHITE & CO.'S RECENT PUBLICATIONS.
AT ALL BOOKSELLERS AND BOOKSTALLS.

I.
By Mrs. Lovett Cameron.—A SISTER'S SIN. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

II.
By F. C. Philips and Percy Fendall.—MARGARET BYNG. In Picture Boards, 2s.

III.
The HOLIDAY NUMBER of "BELGRAVIA," 1s.
Containing contributions by
ANNIE THOMAS (Mrs. Pender Cudlip), The Author of "Miss Molly," A. PERRIS, EDITH STEWART DREWRY, Miss CRAIGIE HALKETT, R. M. BURNAND, CHARLOTTE A. PRICE, ETHEL MARRYAT, and Others.

IV.
The HOLIDAY NUMBER of "LONDON SOCIETY," 1s.
Containing contributions by
ALBANY DE FONBLANQUE, CURTIS YORKE, DAISY PENDER CUDLIP, W. W. FENN Mrs. THOMPSON, and Others.

F. V. WHITE & CO., 14, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

Now Ready. Foolscap 4to, Illustrated, Cloth, Gilt edges. 10s. 6d. net.
THE
EARLY DAYS OF MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE;
OR, PUBLIC SCHOOL LIFE BETWEEN FORTY AND FIFTY YEARS AGO.
To which is added
A Glimpse of Old Haileybury; Patna during the Mutiny; A Sketch of the Natural History of the Riviera; and Life in an Oxfordshire Village.
By EDWARD LOCKWOOD, Indian Civil Service (Retired).
Author of "The Natural History of Monghyr."
SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT, & CO., Limited.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free 3s. 8d. London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

STREATHAM COMMON.—The choice Freehold Residential Property, well known as Coventry Hall, a compact and finely-appointed mansion, with noble hall, billiard-room, conservatory, five reception-rooms, two bath-rooms, 14 bed and dressing-rooms, and a boudoir. Delightful and well-timbered grounds with grand cedars, vineries and other glasshouses, ornamental grass land, stabling, entrance lodge, cottages for coachman and gardener, and every appurtenance of a gentleman's establishment, the area being about five acres, and forming a singularly beautiful and secluded abode, with many rural charms perhaps unequalled, within about six miles' drive of the City and West-end and close to a station. Also the adjoining exceedingly attractive Residence, The Chimes, with secluded ground of an acre and a-half, entrance lodge, and capital stabling. In two lots; the first with possession; the other subject to present tenancy.

MESSRS. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, FARMER, & BRIDGEWATER will SELL at the MART, on TUESDAY, August 1st, at TWO, the above valuable PROPERTY, equally worthy the attention of gentlemen requiring to occupy a superior residence in admittedly one of the best and healthiest situations south of London, and of the investor, the two places forming a most compact estate of about 6½ acres, immediately facing this lovely common and the high road from London to Croydon, to which and to Polworth-road it possesses the extensive and important frontages of over 1,400 feet. May only be viewed by orders.—Particulars and plan of Messrs. FITZHUGH, WOOLLEY, & CO., Solicitors, 3, Pavilion-parade, Brighton; and (with orders to view) of Messrs. HERRING, SON, & DAW, Estate Agents, Brixton Hill, and 62, Coleman-street, E.C.; and of the Auctioneers, 80, Cheapside.

HAMPSHIRE, between Stockbridge and Romsey.—A valuable Freehold Manorial Estate, intersected and bounded by the river Test, affording excellent fishing, while the woodlands, which offer opportunities for game preserving, render the property extremely attractive for sporting purposes. It is known as Pittleworth, and is situate in the parish of Broughton, about a mile and a-half from Horsebridge Station on the Andover, Romsey, Redbridge, and Southampton Railway, and four miles from Dunbridge Station on the Bishopstoke and Salisbury Line. The capital residence, well placed in the centre of the estate, contains nine bed-rooms, drawing room, dining-room and breakfast-room, kitchen, and other offices; and the outbuildings are of substantial construction and conveniently arranged. The lands are chiefly excellent turnip and barley soil, with superior water meadows, and, together with the woods and plantations, comprise 460 acres. Let until Lady Day, 1897, at the reduced rent of £450 per annum. In addition there is a capital cottage, with about six acres of pasture land, producing £14 per annum. The estate is free of land-tax, and subject only to a tithe rent-charge of about £2 10s. per annum.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, ELLIS, CLARK, & Co. have received instructions to offer for SALE by AUCTION, at the MART, in London, on THURSDAY, August 3rd, 1893, the above-described valuable FREEHOLD SPORTING and AGRICULTURAL PROPERTY.—Particulars, with plan, may be obtained, when ready, of Messrs. NEWMAN, PAYNTER, GOULD, & WILLIAMS, Solicitors, 1, Clement's-inn, London, W.C.; at the Auction Mart, E.C.; and of Messrs. FAREBROTHER, ELLIS, CLARK, & Co., 29, Fleet-street, Temple Bar, and 18, Old Broad-street, E.C.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES.—Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

TATTERSALL'S THURSDAYS' SALES.

MESSRS. TATTERSALL beg to give NOTICE that their THURSDAYS' SALES have commenced, and will be continued during the season.

SALES ON MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

BERKELEY SQUARE.—TO BE SOLD, the long LEASE of a conveniently fitted HOUSE of medium size in this undeniably good position. Extensive stabling.—For further particulars write KAPPA, Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, London, W.

QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS, ST. JAMES' PARK, S.W.
(OPPOSITE ST. JAMES' PALACE).
A FEW SUITES TO LET AT REDUCED RENTALS.

HOMBURG. — VILLA QUELLENHOF, 91, Kaiser Friedrich Promenade, opposite Park, and close to Springs and new Bath House. With or without board. Terms moderate. Good English references. English spoken.—Address, A. SAUERBREI, Proprietor.

STEAM YACHT FOR SALE, about 120 tons; unequalled family accommodation, handsome and commodious; teak deck house, eight beds ex-saloon; very fast, small consumption. In commission Southampton.—Apply, CAPTAIN PEDERSEN, Post Office, Southampton.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c.—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Particulars as to the best University or Army TUTORS and SCHOOLS for Boys or Girls, at home or abroad, may be obtained (free of charge) by sending a statement of requirements to R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand.

LOWEST SUMMER PRICES.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES; Londonderry Wallsend, 22s.; Pittington Wallsend, 21s.; Primrose, 20s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 19s. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000." Tobacconists Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.
JULY.

A VISIT TO PRINCE BISMARCK. By G. W. Smalley.
THE EVOLUTION OF OUR RACE. By Frederic Harrison.
BEAUTIFUL LONDON. By Grant Allen.
THE RECENT SOLAR ECLIPSE. By Professor Thorpe, F.R.S.
THE DYNASTY OF THE BROHANS. By Ange Galdemar.
THE MAUSOLEUM OF IBSEN. By William Archer.
THE PROGRESS OF WOMEN'S TRADE-UNIONS. By Miss E. March Phillipps.
THE RUSSIAN INTRIGUES IN SOUTH-EASTERN EUROPE. By C. B. Roylance-Kent.
ADVANCE OF THE UNITED STATES DURING ONE HUNDRED YEARS. By Dr. Brock.
FRENCH MOVEMENTS IN EASTERN SIAM. By Sir Richard Temple, Bart., M.P.

CHAPMAN & HALL, Ld.

AMUSEMENTS.

COVENT GARDEN THEATRE ROYAL. Sole Lessee and Manager, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—GRAND OPERA SEASON, under the sole direction of Sir Augustus Harris. For full particulars see daily papers. Box-office open all day.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
A WOMAN OF NO IMPORTANCE,
By Mr. Oscar Wilde.
Mr. and Mrs. Tree, Miss Julia Neilson, Miss Rose Leclercq, Miss Le Thière, Miss Horlock, and Mrs. Bernard Beere; Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. Kemble, Mr. Allan, Mr. Clark, Mr. Lawford, &c.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) open daily 10 to 5 and 8 to 10. Seats may be booked till the end of the Season, also by letter or telegram.

LYCEUM.—Mr. HENRY IRVING, Lessee and Manager.—BECKET To-night (Thursday), at 8.20, and Matinée Saturday Next, at 2. OLIVIA To-morrow. Friday Night, Benefit of Miss Ellen Terry. THE MERCHANT OF VENICE next Monday Night. CHARLES I. next Tuesday Night. MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING next Wednesday Night. Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open 10 till 5. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.—LYCEUM.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Charles Warner, Mr. Charles Cartwright, Mr. Herbert Flemming, Mr. Rudge Harding, Mr. John Carter, and Mr. Arthur Williams; Miss Elizabeth Robins, Miss Gertrude Kingston, Miss Florence L. Forster, and Miss Fanny Brough. Box plan now open at theatre and all libraries. Telephone No. 2,645. Doors open at 7.30.

VAUDEVILLE.—A. & S. GATTI, Lessees and Managers.—Every Evening, at 9, the celebrated Farcical Comedy, by Dion Boucicault, entitled FORBIDDEN FRUIT. Mr. Charles Groves, Mr. W. L. Abingdon, Mr. Julian Cross, Mr. Harry Parker; Miss Norreys, Miss Maggie Duggan, Miss Daisy England, and Miss Lottie Venne. Preceded, at 8, by the Comic Drama, SMOKE. Box-office open 10 to 6.

GARRICK THEATRE.—Mr. JOHN HARE, Lessee and Manager.—To-night, at 8, DIPLOMACY (Last Three Nights). Mr. Bancroft, Mr. Scott Buist, Mr. A. Cecil, Mr. G. Hare, Mr. E. Mayeur, Mr. R. Power, and Mr. John Hare; Miss Kate Rorke, Miss Olga Nethersole, Lady Monckton, and Mrs. Bancroft (Last Three Performances).—Acting Manager, Mr. C. G. Compton.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER.
EVERY EVENING, at 8.10 punctually, an Original Play, in Four Acts, by A. W. Pinero, entitled
THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY.
Box-office open daily 10 to 5 and 8 to 10.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square, under the management of AUGUSTIN DALY.—Every Night, at 8.15, AUGUSTIN DALY'S COMPANY of COMEDIANS (from Daly's Theatre, New York).—Tuesday Evening, July 11 (and for six nights only), THE HUNCHBACK. Miss Ada Rehan as Julia, for the first time in London; also Mr. Clarke, Mr. Gilbert, Mr. Bourchier, and Miss Isabel Irving. Only Matinée of THE HUNCHBACK Saturday, July 15. Tuesday Night, July 18, a New Eccentric Comedy, called LOVE IN TANDEM. Present season positively limited to three weeks longer. Box-office daily, 9 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.30, MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine and Charles Danby; Misses Florence Dysart and Letty Lind. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30. At 8, REBECCA RUN MAD. Matinée To-day, Thursday, at 2.30.

ROYALTY THEATRE, Shaftesbury-avenue, under the Management of MISS ANNIE ROSE (Mrs. Horace Nevill), TO-NIGHT, at 8.30, the Romantic Drama, ST. RONAN'S WELL. Messrs. Frank Worthing, Gaston Mervale, Edmund Gurney; Mesdames Alexis Leighton, Laura Hansen, and Miss Annie Rose (Mrs. Horace Nevill), and Powerful Company. Doors open at 8. Special Matinée, THE LADY OF LYONS, Thursday next, July 13, at 2. Pauline, Miss Annie Rose. Box Office open daily 10 to 5. Seats at all Libraries.—Business Manager, Mr. W. J. Lancaster.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.45.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music, and Varieties. At 8.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations; and at 10 o'clock, the New Grand Romantic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, entitled FIDELIA. Frequent Change of Programme. Prices, 6d. to 3 Guineas. (See Daily Papers.)

THE EMPIRE.—Leicester-square.—Grand Programme.—Two Grand Ballets, Second Edition of ROUND THE TOWN and KATRINA. Unqualified success. Unrivalled VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Magnificent Orchestra. Doors open at 7.45. No free list.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—FULL LICENCE.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Prices from 1s. EVERY EVENING at 8.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Reappearance of Miss Lottie Collins, Mons. Jacques Inaudi, James Fawn, F. H. Celli, Millie Hylton, Herbert Campbell, Harry Randall, Marie Le Blanc, Ada Blanche, Brothers Griffiths, Ada Reeve, Dutch Daly, Howard Reynolds, Florrie Robina, G. W. Hunter, Alice Maydue, Three Delevines, Flo Bilton, Revene and Athas; Ara, Zebra, and Vora; Eugene Stratton, Fred Harvey, Arthur Rigby.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

ROYAL WEDDING FESTIVITIES.
MUSICIANS, CONJURORS, AND 1,000 NOVELTIES.
Call or Send for Illustrated Price List.
THE SOCIETY OF ENTERTAINERS, 44, UPPER BAKER ST. LONDON, N.W.
Mention this Paper. Telephone, 7,119.

THE GRAFTON GALLERIES.—Admission 1s., 10 to 6. THIRD EXHIBITION of the SOCIETY of PORTRAIT PAINTERS. Grafton-street, Bond-street, W.

LAWRIE & CO., 15, Old Bond-street.—EXHIBITION of Loan Collection of PICTURES of Barbizon and Early English Schools, Corot, Daubigny, Diaz, Dupré, Millet, Rousseau, Troyon, Constable, Romney, Reynolds, Gainsborough, Velasquez, Turner, &c., &c. Open from 10 to 6. Admission, 1s.

EARL'S COURT EXHIBITION
OF
GARDENING AND FORESTRY.
THE GARDEN OF LONDON.
OPEN DAILY, 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.
ALL ROADS LEAD TO EARL'S COURT.
BANDS of the ROYAL MARINES and HON. ARTILLERY COMPANY, The EXHIBITION BAND, GRAND ORGAN, STRING BAND. Miss NELLIE CANTHONY'S ENTERTAINMENT.
ILLUMINATIONS.
Tens of Thousands of Electric, Gas, and Vauxhall Lights, arranged with regard to colour.
FERNERIES, FOUNTAINS, WATERFALLS.
ADMISSION ONE SHILLING. SEASON TICKETS (One Guinea), admitting to the Main Building, Exhibition of Gardening and Forestry, Central and Western Gardens.

OLD PARIS and the BASTILLE.
EARL'S COURT. OPEN DAILY 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.
Thrilling Escape of the Prisoner at 6 and 10.
Grand Café Concert in the Place de la Bastille at 3.45 and 8.0.
SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT of Miss BILLIE BARLOW and other Popular Artistes.
Great Spectacle. STORMING of the BASTILLE 10.10.
The HOTEL DE MAYENNE NOW OPEN. Déjeuners à la Fourchette et Diners à la Carte.

CAPTAIN BOYTON'S WORLD'S WATER SHOW,
EARL'S COURT.
THE SUCCESS OF THE SEASON.
THE THRILLING SENSATION, SHOOTING THE "CHUTES," and A HOST OF STARTLING NOVELTIES.
TWO PERFORMANCES DAILY at 3.30 and 8.30.
RAIN OR SHINE.
ADMISSION (with seat) 6d. to 5s.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations. Lighted throughout by electricity. THE LIBERATOR FAILURE.—Portrait Model of Jabez Spencer Balfour. The PANAMA SCANDAL.—Portrait Model of M. Ferdinand de Lesseps. CABINET MINISTERS.—New Portrait Models of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Sir William V. Harcourt, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, and Lord Randolph Churchill, &c., &c. New and graphic Tableaux, A FOOTBALL SCRIMMAGE. Over 400 other Portrait Models in Wax. Historical Tableaux. Grand scenes representing British Sports, Nursery Rhymes, &c. Eminent People "At Home." Music all day. Chamber of Horrors—Lambeth Poisoning Case, Portrait Model of Thomas Neill Cream. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Extra rooms, 6d. Open from 9 to 10.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—MANSION HOUSE FUND for the RELIEF of the SUFFERERS from LOSS of H.M.S. VICTORIA.—Madame Albani, Miss Marian M'Kenzie, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. R. Grice, and Mr. Andrew Black have generously promised their services for a performance, at popular prices, of the GOLDEN LEGEND, on SATURDAY, July 22, at 8, in AID of the above FUND. Choir and orchestra, 3,600 performers. Organist, Mr. A. J. Eyre. Conductor, Mr. August Manns.—Tickets for numbered seats, 5s., and tickets for unnumbered seats, 2s. 6d. and 1s., may now be purchased from 10 to 6 at Crystal Palace, and at the usual City and West-end Ticket Agencies.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—NATIONAL SPORTS and PASTIMES EXHIBITION, with Novel Poaching Annexe. Now open Daily. No extra charge. Palace open 10 to 10. 1s. Children Half-price.

FARADAYS'
FITTINGS
Electric Light Works
3 BERNERS ST. W

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 150 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table-d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 10s. 6d. per day.
According to the position of rooms selected.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation: opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BUXTON.—The PEAK THERMAL ESTABLISHMENT. A High-class Hydropathic Hotel. Mineral water and other baths. Resident physician. Electric light. Passenger lift. Magnificent public rooms. Excellent cuisine. Table d'hote 7 p.m., separate tables. Terms moderate.—Telegrams, "Thermal, Buxton."

CALLANDER & TROSSACHS HYDROPATHIC.—
Splendid Drives. Good Fishing. Lawn Tennis. Golf.
Terms from £2 12s. 6d. per week.
Apply to the MANAGER.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange.
H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-rooms at Bates Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

GAIRLOCH HOTEL, LOCH MAREE, ROSS-SHIRE.—This magnificent hotel is situated amidst the finest Highland scenery in the West coast of Scotland. Accommodation for over 200. Good Fishing. Large posting establishment. Swift steamer from Oban every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL within five minutes' of Law Courts and Stations. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric Light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 2780.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

MATLOCK BATH.—ROYAL HOTEL.—Hydropathic Baths of every description. Medical Man. Healthful situation; extensive grounds, greatly admired. Large swimming bath. Billiards. Dairy farm. Splendid fishing.—Also NEW BATH HOTEL, with extensive grounds, fishing, &c. &c. Terms very moderate. 'Bus meets all trains.—T. TYACK, Proprietor.

NEWQUAY, Cornwall. The Biarritz of England.—ATLANTIC HOTEL, "the finest Hotel in the county." Splendidly situated. Full view of the Atlantic from Trevose Head to St. Ives. Ocean view from every window. Beaches, caverns, and cliff scenery unrivalled. Bracing climate. Bathing, yachting, fishing. Delightful excursions. Magnificent rooms. Strictly moderate charges.

NORWOOD (UPPER).—The QUEEN'S HOTEL, near the Crystal Palace. Specially adapted Suites of Apartments for families and permanent residents. Winter boarding. Terms from Three Guineas. A limited number of single rooms at 2½ guineas.

PARAMÉ, near St. Malo.
HÔTEL DE LA PLAGE.
Under English Management.

PORTRUSH (Giant's Causeway), co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL. Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing; sea-water baths. Table d'hote dinner, 7 p.m. French cuisine. Charges very moderate. The HOTEL is UNDER RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.

SALISBURY.—The WHITE HART FAMILY HOTEL, nearly opposite the Cathedral. The largest and principal Hotel in the City. Table d'hôte (two hours each meal) at separate tables daily. Carriages for Stonehenge and other places of interest in the neighbourhood at fixed inclusive charges. Tariff on application to H. T. BOWES, Manager.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hote at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

SEA VIEW.—ISLE OF WIGHT, PIER HOTEL. The most modern and best appointed hotel in the island. All public rooms, private sitting-rooms, and greater number of bed-rooms face the sea and pier. Splendid bathing and boating. Royal I.W. Golf Links, ten minutes' walk.
G. ROWLAND ROBERTS, Proprietor.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—ROYAL KENTISH HOTEL.—Largest, best appointed, facing the Common, close to Chalybeate Springs and Parade. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Inclusive terms, 12s. per day. Tariff of MANAGER.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the
ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.
TABLE D'HOTE OPEN TO NON RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Hotel in London of the Brighton Railway Company.
Electric Light throughout.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.
(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.
THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.
SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET,
OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Luncheons at Usual prices of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.
Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.
NO SUPPERS.
TELEPHONE No. 327.

THE BURLINGTON RESTAURANT,
169, Regent Street, W.
The most recherché 5s. Dîner Parisien in London.
Luncheons 2s. 6d. Dinners 3s. 6d.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS
(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).
Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping House. All servants' supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.
THE PALACE HOTEL.
This large and elegantly-appointed high-class Hotel contains upwards of 200 rooms. The hotel occupies the finest position in Buxton, and is surrounded by its own grounds of six acres. Ground-floor sitting rooms and bed-rooms. Magnificent public rooms. American elevator. Table d'hôte at separate tables.
A. CROSS, Manager.

ESTABLISHED IN 1875.
MACDONALD'S
IS THE ORIGINAL AND VERY MUCH THE LARGEST
HYDROPATHIC IN PITLOCHRY, PERTHSHIRE,
Standing in its own Grounds of 40 Acres, and 600 feet above sea level. Every window commands a View of the Most Magnificent Scenery in Scotland. The proved efficacy of the Baths, Douche, Electric, Pine, Sea, and Vapour Baths, is shewn in all cases by the success attending the treatment. Terms, Illustrated Pamphlet, and all information address—W. MACDONALD, The Athole, Pitlochry. Telegraphic Address—"Athole, Pitlochry."

ALBANY HOTEL
(ROBERTSON TERRACE),
HASTINGS.
Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Electric Light throughout. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance.
C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

HOTELS, &c.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn. An old-fashioned Family House, [illegible], happily situated, having all modern conveniences [illegible] Telegrams, "Innsofcourt, London." Telephone No. [illegible] Tariff on application. FRANK HAKER, Manager.

EASTBOURNE. THE CAVENDISH HOTEL stands alone in the centre of the finest Parade. Patronised by many of the Royal Family of Europe. Apartments for the first-class [illegible] Telegrams, "Cavendish, Eastbourne." Tariff on application. G. LOWMAN, Manager.

GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.

ON the Esplanade, overlooking St. Aubin's Bay. Finest sea views in Jersey. The Largest and most Important Hotel in the Channel Islands. Every modern improvement. Magnificent public rooms. Private suites. Swimming baths, lounge, &c. Tariff and particulars sent on application to SYDNEY ROGERS, Manager and Secretary. Telegrams, "Grand, Jersey."

OATLANDS PARK HOTEL, Weybridge, Surrey. 17 miles from London, Waterloo Station. Formerly the favourite residence of H.R.H. the late Duke of York, whose name is perpetuated in the [illegible] grounds, family suites, large [illegible] lounge, and [illegible] lawn-tennis. Tariff on application. Manager, Frank Lucas, Weybridge.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA.—SACKVILLE HOTEL.—Situated between East [illegible] and St. Leonards, facing sea, south aspect, moderate tariff. [illegible] attached to the Hotel. Terms on application [illegible]

ILFRACOMBE.—The RUNNACLEAVE Private HOTEL. 120 beautifully appointed rooms. Recreation-hall, to seat 500, with fitted stage; carriage yard, tennis, photographic dark room, billiards, and lined ice skating rink, free of charge until August. Chef de cuisine. Moderate tariff.

SOUTHPORT.—PALACE HOTEL.—Summer Season. Charming Seaside Family Resort. Extensive grounds. Electric light. Tennis. Golf links. Splendid baths.

ILFRACOMBE.—ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.—Unrivalled sea frontage and open surroundings. Eight lawn-tennis courts. Large [illegible] Tariff of MANAGER.

VISITORS to NEW YORK

Seeking COMFORT, QUIET, and an ELEGANT HOME, WILL FIND THE

Westminster Hotel

SIXTEENTH STREET and IRVING PLACE,

Replete with every Modern Convenience and Comfort. Moderate Tariff.

LOCATION.—One block east of Union-square. Convenience of Broadway, with all its noise. Accessible to all Railways, Ferries, the Shopping Centre, and places of Amusement.

NEW YORK.—16th STREET AND IRVING PLACE. (Cable Address: "Westminster, New York.")

RECOMMENDATION.
A permanent or transient home of quiet elegance, with generous management, and a cuisine of noted excellence.

REPUTATION.
An enviable one among people of taste and discrimination, desiring comfort and luxury, without the confusion and publicity of the larger hotels.

INCLUSIVE TERMS.
$3.50 (about 15s.) per day and upwards, according to location of rooms.

The water used in THE WESTMINSTER is purified by the "Buhring" patent process.

E. N. ANABLE, Proprietor.
W. W. SCHENCK, Manager.

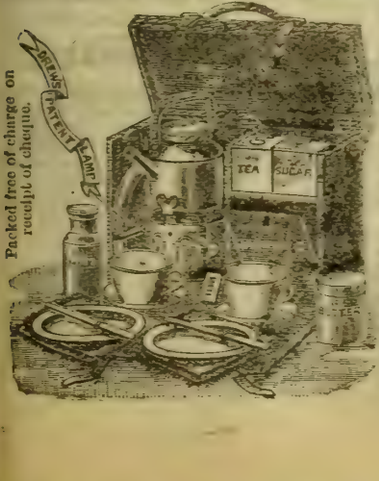
DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET



Packed free of charge on receipt of cheque.

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5 -, Polished Nickel, 7 6.

Treloar's Carpet Circular

POST FREE.

TRELOAR'S CARPET CIRCULAR, entitled "With What Shall We Cover the Floor?" giving prices, particulars, and coloured drawings of all the best and cheapest floor coverings, such as Persian, Indian, Turkish, Axminster, Wilton, and other costly Carpets, Chenille, Shetland, Paisley, and other Scotch Carpets, Linoleums, Floorcloth, Cork Carpet, Cocoanut-fibre Mats and Matting, Rugs, Druggets, &c., sent post free on application.

CARPETS.—Brussels Carpets are being advertised as best at 3s. and 3s. 6d. per yard. We desire to inform the public that the term best Brussels, as generally used, conveys no meaning or guarantee as to quality. A manufacturer has already called the attention of the public to this fact, and all the well-known manufacturers agree with him, that Brussels carpets made exclusively of home-grown wools, specially selected for durability, and warranted to be entirely free from admixture of cotton or jute, and full five frames, are very much better than those made of inferior foreign wools. We shall be glad to show our stock of Brussels carpets, at prices from 2s. 11d. to 3s. per yard. A good tapestry carpet at 2s. 6d. is better than a bad Brussels carpet.

BRUSSELS CARPETS, 2s. 11d. per yard.

INDIAN CARPETS, 9 ft. by 6 ft., 27s. 6d. each.

KURD (PERSIAN) CARPETS, 9 ft. by 4 ft. 6, 21s. each.

KURD RUGS, 5s. 9d. each.

JAPANESE RUGS and CARPETS in all sizes.

TRELOAR & SONS are Contractors to Her Majesty's Office of Works, the War Office, the Admiralty, the South Kensington Museum, the Royal Albert Hall, the South-Western Railway, and many other public companies. They import or manufacture every description of FLOOR COVERING, from the old-fashioned made of rushes to the finest Axminster and Turkey carpets, and have obtained prize medals at every international exhibition since 1851. Treloar & Sons supplied the floor covering at the Exhibitions of 1851, 1862, in London, of 1855, 1867, 1878, and 1889 in Paris, and 1865 in Dublin. They keep in stock a well-assorted selection of all foreign floor coverings, Turkey carpets and rugs of native design and dye, Persian and Indian rugs, &c. All the Floorcloth, Linoleum, &c., offered by them is thoroughly well seasoned, and will therefore wear well. A catalogue, with full particulars, will be forwarded free upon application.

CHEVIOT CARPETS.

Ft.	in.		Ft.	in.		£	s.	d.	Ft.	in.		Ft.	in.		£	s.	d.
8	0	by	7	0	...	0	18	6	12	0	by	10	6	...	2	2	0
9	0	by	7	0	...	1	1	0	12	9	by	11	9	...	2	2	0
9	0	by	7	6	...	1	2	6	12	9	by	11	3	...	2	8	0
9	3	by	8	3	...	1	5	6	12	0	by	12	0	...	2	8	0
10	0	by	7	6	...	1	5	9	13	3	by	11	3	...	2	10	0
10	3	by	8	3	...	1	8	0	13	6	by	10	6	...	2	7	0
10	0	by	9	0	...	1	10	0	13	6	by	12	0	...	2	14	0
10	9	by	9	9	...	1	16	0	14	3	by	11	3	...	2	14	0
11	0	by	9	0	...	1	13	0	15	0	by	10	6	...	2	12	6
11	3	by	8	3	...	1	14	6	15	6	by	10	6	...	2	14	0
11	9	by	9	9	...	1	18	0	15	0	by	12	0	...	3	0	0
12	0	by	9	0	...	1	16	0	16	0	by	12	0	...	3	10	0

THE QUEEN says, in speaking of these carpets:—"The writer of this note has had a year's experience of them, and finding them wear well and look well, has every reason to be satisfied."—Queen, March 3, 1884.

CHEVIOT CARPETS cannot be obtained from any other firm. They are protected by trade mark (the Cheviot).

SHETLAND CARPETS.

Ft.	in.		Ft.	in.		£	s.	d.	Ft.	in.		Ft.	in.		£	s.	d.
9	0	by	7	6	...	1	15	9	13	0	by	9	0	...	3	2	6
9	0	by	9	0	...	2	2	9	12	0	by	10	6	...	3	6	6
10	0	by	9	0	...	2	7	6	12	0	by	12	0	...	3	16	0
11	0	by	9	0	...	2	12	9	13	6	by	12	0	...	4	5	6
12	0	by	9	0	...	2	17	0	15	0	by	12	0	...	4	15	0

TRELOAR & SONS,

LUDGATE HILL.

SUMMER SERVICE OF TRAINS TO SCOTLAND BY THE WEST COAST (L. & N. W. & CAL. RYS.) ROYAL MAIL ROUTE.

ADDITIONAL AND ACCELERATED EXPRESS SERVICE FROM LONDON TO ABERDEEN AND THE DEESIDE, THE HIGHLAND RAILWAY, AND THE CALLANDER AND OBAN LINE.

NEW CORRIDOR TRAINS

WITH REFRESHMENT AND DINING CARS ATTACHED BOTH FOR 1st AND 3rd CLASS PASSENGERS BETWEEN LONDON AND GLASGOW.

LONDON AND NORTH WESTERN AND CALEDONIAN RAILWAYS.—The following ADDITIONAL AND ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE in operation from 1st July. 1st and 3rd class by all trains:—

WEEK DAYS.

Leave	a.m.	a.m.	a.m.	a.m.	p.m.	p.m.	p.m.	p.m.	p.m.	p.m.	A night
London (Euston)	5 15	7 15	10	10 30	2 0	7 30	8 0	8 50	9 0	10 0	12 0
Arrive
Edinburgh (Pr. St.)	8 55	5 50	6 30	7 40	10 55			6 30	..	8 55	12 22
Glasgow (Central)	8 46	6 0	6 45	8 15	10 45	See Note	See Note	..	6 40	9 15	12 27
Greenock	8 38	7 20	7 40	9 52	12 6			..	7 45	10*38	1 40
Gourock	4 50	7 31	7 50	10 2	12 15	..	..	..	7 55	10*47	1 50
Oban	8 48	..	..	..	..	..	9 25	12*15	..	1*50	6§25
Perth	5 45	..	..	8 17	12 20	5 30	5 40	7 55	..	11*10	3 20
Inverness—
viâ Dunkeld	..	..	..	..	..	6 10	10 40	11 5	2†40	..	6* 5
Dundee	7 15	..	..	9 10	1 5	7 30	7 30	8 55	..	12*10	4 32
Aberdeen	9 5	..	..	10 45	3 5	7 50	7 50	11 40	..	2* 0	6 20
Ballater	..	..	..	..	9 45	9 45	9 45	2*15	..	4*50	..
Inverness—
viâ Aberdeen	..	..	..	..	8 10	1 35	1 25	6* 5	..	10* 5	..

The 7.30 p.m. express from Euston to Perth will run from July 18th to August 11th inclusive (Saturday and Sunday nights excepted). The Highland Company will take this train forward specially from Perth in advance of the Mail, so as to reach Inverness at 10.40 a.m.

*On Saturday nights the 8.50, 9.0, and 10.0 p.m. trains from Euston do not convey passengers to stations marked * (Sunday mornings in Scotland).

†Arrives at Inverness at 1.30 p.m. on Sundays. § Saturdays only.

A—The 8.0 p.m. Highland Express and the 12.0 night train will run every night (except Saturdays).

The 8.0 p.m. Express will be run specially on Saturday, August 5th.

On Saturdays passengers by the 10.30 a.m. and 2.0 p.m. trains from London are not conveyed beyond Perth by the Highland Railway, and only as far as Aberdeen by the Caledonian Railway.

Carriages with lavatory accommodation are run on the principal express trains between London and Scotland, without extra charge.

Improved sleeping saloons, accompanied by an attendant, are run on the night trains between London, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Greenock, Stranraer, Perth, and Aberdeen. Extra charge, 5s. for each berth.

A special train will leave Euston (Saturdays and Sundays excepted) at 6.20 p.m. from 10th July to 11th August inclusive for the conveyance of horses and private carriages only to all parts of Scotland. A special carriage for the conveyance of dogs will be attached to this train.

Additional trains from Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester, and other towns will connect with the above trains.

For further particulars see the Companies' time bills.

FRED. HARRISON, General Manager, L. & N. W. Railway.
JAMES THOMPSON, General Manager, Caledonian Railway.

July, 1893.

QUICK CHEAP ROUTE to DENMARK, SWEDEN, and NORWAY, viâ HARWICH and ESBJERG.—The United Steamship Coy. of Copenhagen Steamers sail from Harwich (Parkeston Quay) for Esbjerg every Monday, Thursday, and Saturday, after arrival of the train leaving London, Liverpool-st. Station, at 9.3 a.m., returning from Esbjerg every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, after arrival of 9 a.m. train from Copenhagen. Return Fares:—Esbjerg, 53s.; Copenhagen, 80s. 3d. The service will be performed (weather and other circumstances permitting) by the Steamships Koldinghuus and Botnia. These fast Steamers have excellent accommodation for passengers and carry no cattle. — For further information address TEGNER, PRICE, & CO., 107, Fenchurch-st., London; or the Continental Manager, Liverpool-st. Station, E.C.

OSTEND, BELGIUM.—SEA BATHS. Season from May to November. 150,000 visitors. This fashionable and much frequented seaside watering place, summer residence of the King and Queen of the Belgians, offers yearly greater attractions. Regattas, pigeon shooting, races, fishing, boating, children's races, &c. Magnificent kursaal, daily concerts, two orchestras of 70 performers, organ recitals, soirées dansantes, children's balls, grand balls, festivals, casino, theatre, Park Leopold, sea bathing. Regular sea communication with London. Royal Belgian Mail Boats between Ostend and Dover; three services daily; passage three hours. Distance by rail from Paris eight hours, from Brussels two hours. Hydrotherapic establishment.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISES by the steamships "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, "CHIMBORAZO," 3,847 tons register, and "LUSITANIA," 3,877 tons register, leaving LONDON as under:—

For NORWAY,
15th July, for 27 days. | 2nd August, for 21 days.
16th August, for 15 days.
Calling at LEITH two days later.

The Steamers will be navigated through the "Inner Lead," i.e. inside the fringe of islands off the coast of Norway, thus securing smooth water, and will visit some of the finest fiords. On the first trip the North Cape will be reached while the sun is above the horizon at midnight.

For SICILY, GREECE, the LEVANT, and CRIMEA,
leaving 2nd September, for 46 days.
For the MEDITERRANEAN,
leaving 19th September, for 31 days.

For MADEIRA, TENERIFFE, WEST INDIES, AZORES, &c.,
leaving 22nd November, for 65 days.

The Steamers are fitted with Electric Light, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Baths, &c.

Managers { F. Green & Co. / Anderson, Anderson, & Co. } Head Offices, Fenchurch-avenue, London.

For passage apply to the Latter Firm, at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, E.C.; or to the West end Branch Office, 16, Cockspur Street, S.W.

AUSTRALIA and NEW ZEALAND.—NEW FAST PASSENGER ROUTE via Vancouver, by twin-screw Atlantic Steamers Cany Line, to Montreal or New York, thence via Canadian Pacific Railway, taking in the grand scenery of the Rockies, only actual trans-continental line running through trains under one management.

Weekly to Pacific. Many optional routes, including Niagara and Chicago. Book of journey unsolved.

New steamships 8,000 tons each, of New Zealand and Australia-Imp. S.s. Co., largest, fastest, and best accommodating from American Continent to Australasia, leave Vancouver about the following:—

S.S. MIOWERA . . . . . August 14th,
S.S. WARRIMOO . . . . . September 11th, monthly thereafter, calling Honolulu, Brisbane, and Sydney. Electric light throughout. Surgeon carried. Illustrated pamphlet, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67, King William-street, London, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 103, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

THE NOTED

"IPSWICH" POTTED MEATS.

Nothing can be better for the Yachting, Fishing, or Picnic Basket.

Sole Maker—R. SEAGER, IPSWICH.

Ask your Grocer.

ESTABLISHED 1818.
Ten Prize Medals.

PETER F. HEERING'S

COPENHAGEN

CHERRY BRANDY.

Sold by all Wine Merchants, and at all Bars and Hotels.

ADVERTISING MATCHES, printed on both sides for Advertising Purposes, supplied cheap.
Address, C. 825, care of Rudolf Mosse's Advertising Offices, 16 and 18, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C.

G. TANSLEY & CO.,

BALL AND CONCERT FURNISHERS,

16, WIGMORE STREET, CAVENDISH SQ., W.
AND
91, GLOUCESTER ROAD, QUEEN'S GATE, S.W.

SUPPLY ON HIRE

For BALL CONCERTS, GARDEN PARTIES, &c.
TABLES, SEATS, CHINA, PLATE, GLASS, &c.
BALL ROOMS LIGHTED BY ELECTRICITY OR CANDLES.
TEMPORARY ROOMS ERECTED WITH PATENT CEILING AND SPECIAL POLISHED FLOOR.
DOORWAY AWNINGS. STALLS FOR BAZAARS.
ENTERTAINMENTS AND MUSICIANS PROVIDED.

PRICE LISTS SENT FREE ON APPLICATION.

SPECIALITÉ:—THICK LEGS & THIN FEET.

A Want Long Felt, met at Last.

GOLF, SHOOTING, and CYCLING

STOCKINGS!

HOMEKNIT.
Free from all Seams.

Made of pure long staple Scotch Wool, full length, broad ribs, double heels and toes, most comfortable in wear, guaranteed to give satisfaction.

Colours: Navy Blue, Black, Light and Dark Grey, Heathers, and Fancy Mixtures.

ALL SIZES—1/9, 2/3, 3/6.

Specialité:
THICK LEGS and THIN FEET, 2/6, 3/6.

THE HIGHLAND CHECK,
(As Illustration.)
Hand-Knitted, for Cycling, Golf, or Shooting, 3/6 & 4/6
Thick legs and thin feet 5/6
Postage, 3d. per pair; 2 pairs, 4½d.

Terms: Strictly Cash with Order

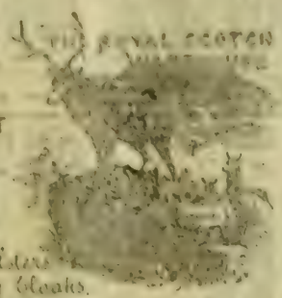
A. W. GAMAGE,
126, 127, 128, 129, HOLBORN, E.C.

SPECIAL UNITED STATES and CANADIAN TOURS.—CHICAGO EXHIBITION, New York, Washington, Boston, Philadelphia, Montreal, Quebec, Baltimore, FALLS OF NIAGARA. First-class Fares and all Hotel Bills from 45 Guineas. From Liverpool, August 10th and 24th, 1893.—Special Tourist Agency, 13, Wallbrook, E.C.; or Mitchell's Library, Bond-st., W.

NORWEGIAN YACHTING CRUISES
(FORTNIGHTLY) FROM NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.
Shortest route to Norway. Only one night at sea.
By the ALBION STEAMSHIP CO.'S (Ltd.) Fast and Splendidly-fitted Yachting Steamer
"MIDNIGHT SUN" (Captain NIVISON, R.N.R.), 3,020 tons, 2,860 horse-power.
Fares from 12 Guineas, including a sumptuous table.
NEXT SAILINGS—JUNE 17; JULY 1, 15, 29; AUGUST 12, 26; SEPTEMBER 9.
All applications for Berths to be made to the Yachting Steamer "MIDNIGHT SUN." Passenger Office, 4, Lombard-street (Tel. Add., Tourist), Newcastle-on-Tyne. Write for Itineraries.

SCOTTADIE

115 & 115a REGENT STREET
LONDON W



For
Coats & Ulsters
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps
Shawls Mauds
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns

Telegraphic Address—Scott Ordre, London

PURE IRISH LINEN SHIRTS
Tailor-Made
Direct from Ireland.

Save 30 per Cent.

Made of the most durable Long Cloth, and fitted with the finest Linen Ireland can produce.

MADE TO MEASURE.

FIT AND STYLE GUARANTEED IN THE LATEST FASHION.

Half-a-dozen Pure Irish bespoke Shirts, securely packed, delivered free to any address in the Kingdom for 33/-, 39/-, or 45/-. Foreign Postage Extra.

Sample Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 5/6, 6/6, or 7/6.

Dress Shirts with fine Irish Linen Fittings, Six for 39/-, delivered free. A Sample Dress Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 6/6.

Old Shirts re-fitted with New Irish Linen Fronts, Cuffs, and Neck-bands for 2/3 and 2/9 each. Returned Carriage Free. Coloured Shirts, best quality. French Cambric 30/-, Oxford Cloth 33/- per half-dozen. Patterns Free. Four-fold Irish Linen Collars, best quality, 7/6 per dozen. General Catalogue post free.

For Measure, send size of Collar, Chest, and Height, or an old shirt.

TAAFFE & COLDWELL,
Army Shirt Tailors, 81, Grafton St., Dublin.

THREE GOLD MEDALS.

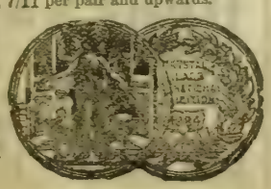
The Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam Corset

Exquisite Model. Perfect Comfort. Guaranteed Wear.

Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil; also in the New Sanitary Woollen Cloth. 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped "Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam No. 116," in oval on the lining.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.

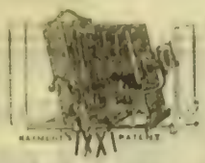


Trade "OPTIMUS" Mark.

Photographic PRIZES £105 Competition.

Details post free on application.

The Largest Selection of PHOTOGRAPHIC APPARATUS in the World. The Best Value. Before buying Opera or Field Glasses, Microscopes, or other Optical Instruments write for CATALOGUE which is sent POST FREE.



"OPTIMUS" PHOTOGRAPHIC OUTFITS.

Rayment's Wide Angle, Long Focus, Rack Camera, Three Double Dark Slides, "Optimus" Rapid Rectilinear Lens, Instantaneous Shutter, Tripod, and best Waterproof Case.

For Plates 4¼ by 3¼	£10
For Plates 6½ by 4¼	£12
For Plates 8½ by 6½	£15

CATALOGUE POST FREE.

PERKEN, SON, & RAYMENT, 99, HATTON GARDEN, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON.

Piccadilly
SMOKING MIXTURE

Is the CHOICEST SMOKING TOBACCO that experience can produce or money can buy.
It is a combination of Perique, Havana and North Carolina Tobaccos most carefully selected and blended.

Manufactured by the American Tobacco Company.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.
ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE.
PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE
For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1.1s.

INVALID COMFORTS
Walking Machine for the lame
Adjustable Couches and Beds, £2. Exercising Chairs £5. 5s. Reclining Boards £1.1s. Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d. Easy Chairs £2. 10s. Commode Chairs £2. 10s.
Carrying Chairs, £1. Bed Tables 7s. 6d. Crutches 10s. 6d. Folding Couch Chairs 10s. Bed Rests 10s.

BATH CHAIRS
From £1. 5s.

SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS
£2. 2s.

Invalid Carriages
Perambulators
Rubber Tyres
From £1. 10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.
Telgrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

HILDITCH'S

GREAT REDUCTIONS. PATTERNS FORWARDED.

SUMMER SILK SALE.

11 & 12, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.

No More DANGER FROM DROWNING,

Either from Accident, Inability to Swim, or from Cramp.

"MINNOW" LIFE BELT,

For GENTLEMEN, LADIES, and CHILDREN.

Should the wearers become unconscious in the water, it turns them on their back, with head well out of water. The Belt only weighs a few ounces, can be carried in the pocket, and inflated in fifteen seconds. No one going to sea, boating, bathing, &c., should be without one. For those learning to swim it is most valuable as they cannot sink. Worn as an ordinary belt. State size of waist. Price, post free, 21 to 28 in. waist, 7s. 6d.; 29 to 34, 8s. 6d.; 35 to 38, 10s. 6d.

W. R. HARGREAVES, WATERLOO, LIVERPOOL.

CANCIA'S PURE ITALIAN WINES.

Vino da Tavola ... ... 14s. per dozen.
Chianti Melini ... ... 18s. and 24s. ,,
Capri White Scala ... ... 24s. ,,

CANCIA'S PURE ITALIAN WINES.

Castel Ricaldone (Italian Burgundy) ... 18s. per dozen.
Sparkling Asti ... ... 36s. ,,

CANCIA'S PURE ITALIAN WINES.

Vermouth Cinzano (Tonic). In litre bottles 30s. per dozen.
Samples free on application.

R. CANCIA & CO., LIMITED.

GENERAL DEPÔT:—
55, CASTLE STREET EAST, OXFORD STREET, W.

CARPET CLEANING.

CARPETS and TAPESTRIES Cleansed from dust by PURE AIR.

Impossible to damage the most delicate fabric.

Collection and Delivery free.

Send for Prices and Particulars to your Upholsterer, or

The Compressed Air Carpet & Tapestry Cleaning Co.

Brook Green, W. Office: 94, Victoria-st., Westminster.
N.B.—The Trade and Public are invited to visit our Works, and convince themselves of the superiorities of our process.

ASK FOR DR. RIDGE'S

The Perfect Food for Children and Invalids.

Patent Cooked FOOD.

CAUTION. All the Genuine Packets and Canisters are enclosed in White Wrappers, the words DR. RIDGE'S PATENT COOKED FOOD are printed boldly thereon, so that none need be deceived or mistaken.

PREPARED AT THE ROYAL FOOD MILLS, LONDON, AND SOLD RETAIL BY ALL LEADING CHEMISTS AND GROCERS THROUGHOUT THE KINGDOM.

HEATHMAN'S LADDERS

Are a wonderful convenience. They separate or form steps, or extend to varying heights, just as one's needs vary.

Height (closed).	Extend to	Price.
6 ft. 0 in.	10 ft. 6 in.	16s. 6d.
7 ft. 0 in.	12 ft. 0 in.	19s. 6d.
8 ft. 0 in.	14 ft. 0 in.	22s. 6d.
9 ft. 9 in.	17 ft. 0 in.	26s. 6d.

CARRIAGE PAID.
37, ENDELL STREET, LONDON, W.C.

REAL GERMAN HOLLOW GROUND KROPP RAZOR

NEVER REQUIRE GRINDING.

Black Handle .. 5/6 | A Pair, Ivory Handles, | Duplex Strop 7/6
Ivory Handle .. 7/6 | in Rus. Leather Case, 21/- | Kropp's Strop Paste, 6d.
From all Dealers.—Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT, & CO., LONDON, W.

Pearsall's Washing Linens,

(British Made).

For Dresses, Blouses and Costumes. In Butcher Blues, Pink, Pale Green, &c., all of which will Wash. Sold by leading West-End Drapers. 'Pearsall's' on every yard.

WOODS' PATENT GALVANISED STEEL WIRE MATTRESSES & BEDSTEADS.

Carriage Paid, and Liberal Cash Discount allowed

Guaranteed for Five Years.

EXHIBITED CARRYING ONE TON At LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and other EXHIBITIONS.

SHOW ROOMS:
128, BOLD ST., LIVERPOOL.

Catalogues and Prices free on application to the

LONGFORD WIRE, IRON & STEEL CO., LTD.

WARRINGTON.

Please mention this Paper.

FAC-SIMILE OF STAMP ON BACK OF EVERY TWO YARDS OF ALL GENUINE

CHIPPING NORTON TWEEDS

W. BLISS & SON, MANUFACTURERS

W. BLISS C. NORTON

Specially for HUNTING & RIDING BREECHES, Tweed Suits, Boys' Wear & all HARD WEAR

THE MILDEST OF MILD INDIAN CIGARS are

OAKES & Co.'S SUPERS

NO. 3,

THE PAGODA BRAND. QUALITY & FLAVOUR UNEQUALLED.

The Cheapest and Best INDIAN CIGAR in the Market.

SAMPLE BOX of 100 SENT to ANY ADDRESS for FIFTEEN SHILLINGS.

OAKES BROS. & CO., 46, NEW BROAD-STREET, SOLE IMPORTERS.

The YOST Typewriter

HAS NO RIBBON.

Awarded FOUR GOLD MEDALS

(Highest Award Wherever Shown)

TRADE MARK (REGD.)

PARIS, MONACO, KIMBERLEY, and LAUNCESTON.

Writes three times as fast as the Pen; makes several copies at one operation.

THE YOST IS BEING UNIVERSALLY ADOPTED. USED BY

HER MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT.
THE EMPEROR OF GERMANY.
THE INDIAN and COLONIAL GOVTS.
THE KING OF WURTEMBURG.
THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE.
THE EARL OF SEFTON.
THE EARL OF DYSART.
VISCOUNT EMLYN.
THE LATE LORD MAYOR.
THE BARONESS DE WORMS.
MR. RIDER HAGGARD.
DR. NANSEN.

AND THOUSANDS OF COMMERCIAL AND PROFESSIONAL MEN.

THE YOST TYPEWRITER Co., Ltd., 40, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

And at PARIS. MANCHESTER, BIRMINGHAM, LEEDS, LIVERPOOL, GLASGOW, and BELFAST.

Marza Wine.

The Latest, Most Palatable & Scientific IRON AND COCA WINE.

SPECIAL REPORT IN THE "LANCET," July 1st, 1893.

"The Marza Wine is agreeable to the palate, and is valuable not merely as a stimulant but also as a Tonic, from the presence of a considerable quantity of Iron, also the principles of the Coca Leaf, Phosphorus, and Pepsine. The formula of Marza Wine is a commendable one and thoughtfully planned."

MARZA WINE
IS INVALUABLE FOR CONVALESCENTS,
ESPECIALLY AFTER
ACCOUCHEMENT, INFLUENZA, &c.
FOR DEBILITATED MEN, DELICATE WOMEN, GROWING CHILDREN, AND ALL FEELING BELOW PAR.

Marza Wine.

AWARDED THE GOLD MEDAL
—FOR—
PURITY, PALATABILITY AND EXCELLENCE.

RECOMMENDED BY EMINENT PHYSICIANS FOR

ANÆMIA,
INSOMNIA,
NERVOUS DEBILITY,
BRAIN FAG,
INDIGESTION,
MENTAL DEPRESSION,
EXHAUSTION,
VOCAL FATIGUE,
NEURALGIA, &c.

MARZA WINE makes rich red blood and gives tone and vigour to all the vital organs.

Price 3/9 per Large Bottle, 42/- per doz. Everywhere, or Carriage Paid of THE MARZA CO. Ltd., 19, Wilson Street, London, E.C.

ARTISTIC HOMES.

"ABOUT OUR HOMES."

MAPLE & CO. "ABOUT OUR HOMES." (Hazell, 1s.). Maple & Co. will be happy to SEND a COPY of this little BOOK, which contains much interesting information upon DECORATION and other matters in connection with modern furnishing, free of charge, upon application.

BEDROOM SUITES

1,000 BEDROOM SUITES

1,000 BEDROOM SUITES at from 70s. to £300, forming a selection without parallel in the world, in every conceivable variety of style and design, and every description of woods at prices ranging from £3 10s. to £300, thus readily suiting every class of residence. Every one about to furnish should visit the Exhibition of Bedroom Furniture.

MAPLE & CO LTD

TOTTENHAM COURT RD. LONDON

The Largest and most Convenient

FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN THE WORLD

EASY CHAIRS

FIVE HUNDRED TO SELECT FROM

MAPLE & CO. have always on show an immense assortment of their world-famous, luxuriously comfortable Easy Chairs, Lounges, and Settees, in various shapes and coverings, all ready for immediate delivery, and at most moderate prices. A Comfortable Easy Chair is always an acceptable present.

TURKEY CARPETS

FINE QUALITIES

MAPLE & CO wish to direct special attention to some very choice Turkey Carpets now on show, remarkable both for their exceptionally fine quality and purity of colouring—many being exact reproductions of the most beautiful specimens of XVII. century art.

NEZOOM CARPETS

NEZOOM CARPETS

MAPLE & CO.'s NEZOOM CARPETS (Registered) are now on show, in all the new patterns and colourings. These carpets, being of the finest quality, and made entirely without seam or join, will wear admirably, and all waste in matching is avoided. List of Sizes post-free

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,

33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.

Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

TAYLOR'S CIMOLITE

OR PREPARED WHITE FULLERS' EARTH,

Is the only reliable and thoroughly harmless SKIN POWDER. It is prepared by an experienced Chemist, and under its Latin name of "Terra Cimolia" is constantly prescribed by the most eminent living Dermatologists, and was especially recommended by the late Sir Erasmus Wilson, F.R.S., and the late Dr. Tilbury Fox. For general use it is simply invaluable. It is the best Dusting Powder for Infants. Formerly used in the Nurseries of Her Majesty the Queen, the Princess of Wales, the Duchess of Edinburgh, the Duchess of Teck, &c., and now extensively employed in the Nurseries of her Imperial Majesty the Empress of Russia, our own Royal Princesses and Duchesses, H.R.H. the Duchess of Cumberland, the Grand Duchess Paul of Russia, the Duchess of Sparta, and most of the Aristocracy. Recommended by the faculty. The eminent physician, Dr. Routh, says: "I feel I cannot too highly recommend it." "I cannot afford to be without it."—Dr. Bainbridge. A Lady writes: "Here, in India, for 'Prickly Heat,' I found it worth a guinea a teaspoonful." Post-free. Send 14 or 36 penny stamps.

Ask for "Taylor's Cimolite." See that the Trade Mark, Name, and Address are on every parcel, and do not be persuaded to take imitations.

Introduced into medical practice and prepared by JOHN TAYLOR, Chemist, 13, Baker-street, London, W.

The ONLY Antiseptic Saline.

SALT REGAL

FOR ALL

Bilious and Nervous Disorders,

SUCH AS

Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion,
Disordered Liver.

At all Chemists throughout the world, in bottles, 1/6 and 2/9.

Office: 49, ISLINGTON, LIVERPOOL.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?

PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement and biliousness, it has been pronounced by medical men of high authority as most efficacious.

"I use the Aerated Pitkeathly largely, and value it."—Dr. MATTHEWS DUNCAN.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

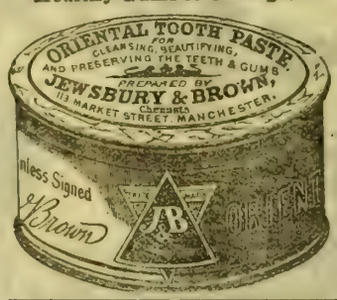
TOO FAT. Dr. GORDON'S

Elegant Pills cure STOUTNESS, rapidly and certainly. State height, weight, and send 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., or 11s. to DR. GORDON, 24, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

JEWSBURY & BROWN'S

Oriental Tooth Paste.

White, Sound Teeth,
Healthy Gums to Old Age.



CAUTION.—The only genuine is JEWSBURY & BROWN'S.

Pots 1/6 and 2/6. All Chemists.

60 YEARS IN USE.

AN ALWAYS ACCEPTABLE PRESENT.

An Original Case of MÜLHENS'

CASE OF SIX BOTTLES 12/6

GENUINE NO. 4711 BRAND OF

EAU DE COLOGNE.

THE PUREST & STRONGEST, YET MOST DELICATE EVER PRODUCED.

THE WORLD says: "Anyone desirous of getting a thoroughly genuine Cologne, cannot do better than send for a bottle of the '4711' Double Extract. Once having used it, repetition is a foregone conclusion."

Large selection of Choicest Perfumes, Toilet Soaps, &c. Quintuple Concentrated Extracts, made from Fresh Flowers gathered at Grasse.

Of All dealers in Perfumes, or at the
LONDON BRANCH:
62, NEW BOND ST., W.
(ONE DOOR FROM BROOK STREET.)
Price Lists on application to Mr. C. REUTER, Manager. And at COLOGNE, NEW YORK, VIENNA, RIGA, and ODESSA.

ANNA RUPPERT'S

COMPLETE Establishment for Natural Beauty includes MOST ARTISTIC MANICURING, 4s. 6d. SKILFUL CHIROPODY. Full line of Toilet Articles and Manicure Cases complete. New American LONG WAISTED CORSET, 12s. 6d. None better sold. RUPPERT'S DYSPEPSIA CURE and LIVER REGULATOR. Best article ever sold, Vegetable, 4s. 6d.; and the only RELIABLE SKIN TONIC on the market. Does not bleach or whitewash, tones, cleanses, and invigorates. Don't forget, there is only one CELEBRATED LECTURESS, one ANNA RUPPERT, who has given her life to this branch. Send 4d. for her new and Illustrated Book of Beauty—valuable hints. SKIN TONIC, perfectly harmless. Price, 10s. 6d.; three bottles, 25s. Sent all over the world. All matters sacred. Correspondence cheerfully solicited. No charge for advice, either in person or by letter. Don't forget THE ONLY

MRS. ANNA RUPPERT,

Celebrated American Lecturess and Complexion Specialist, in person at

89, Regent Street, London, W.

Branches where all goods are sold and advice freely given:—124, Western-road, BRIGHTON; 3a, Shandwick-place, EDINBURGH; 74, Grafton-street, DUBLIN; 8, King-street, MANCHESTER; Clarence Chambers, Corporation-street, BIRMINGHAM; 66, Marland-pl., SOUTHAMPTON; 17, Rue de la Paix, PARIS; BERLIN, VIENNA, MADRID, BARCELONA, CALCUTTA, SYDNEY, &c.

SUN LIFE
OFFICE FOR BUSINESS FACILITIES

LARGE CASH BONUSES AND SPEEDY SETTLEMENTS.

ESTD. 1810.

Apply for NEW PROSPECTUS at the Chief Office, 63, THREADNEEDLE STREET, E.C.

HARRIS C. L. SAUNDERS, General Manager.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—

WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.

£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.

£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.

£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

MILD INDIAN CIGARS. OBTAINABLE EVERYWHERE.
BAHADUR

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week; acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.
Botanic Medicine Co., 3, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

ANÆMIA
Or Bloodlessness.
DEEKS' ANÆMIA PILLS.
Blood Producing. Tonic. Non Constipating.
IN BOTTLES OF ALL CHEMISTS. Half course, 4s. 6d.; whole course, 9s.; or send postal order to W. THOS. DEEKS Chemist, Shanklin Isle of Wight.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, £1,600,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.
EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.
Invested Funds, £16,000,000.
The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited,
No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.
General Accidents. | Personal Injuries.
Railway Accidents. | Death by Accident.
C. HARDING, Manager.

ACCIDENTS OF TRAVEL
AND ALL OTHER ACCIDENTS INSURED AGAINST BY
The Railway Passengers' Assurance Company,
THE OLDEST AND LARGEST COMPANY PROVIDING FOR ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. W. D. MASSY, A. VIAN, } Secs.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.

(FIRE).

CHICAGO EXHIBITION.
CHEQUE BANK CHEQUES—the safest form of Money for Travellers—Cashed by nearly 300 Banks in United States and Canada.—Apply, Cheque Bank, Limited, 4, Waterloo-place, S.W., or George-yard, E.C.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.
MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.
Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.
List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to
FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.
No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
[ESTABLISHED 1867.]
ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,
From £30 to £5,000,
To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their NOTE OF HAND ALONE.
ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.
Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.
NO SURETIES REQUIRED.
Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

THE GRESHAM

LIFE OFFICE,

ST. MILDRED'S HOUSE, POULTRY, LONDON, E.C.

THOMAS G. ACKLAND, F.I.A., F.S.S., Actuary and Manager. JAMES H. SCOTT, Secretary.

WEST-END BRANCH—2, WATERLOO PLACE, S.W.

Sir FRANCIS OSBORNE, Bart., Local Secretary.

FUNDS.

Assets	Exceed	£5,000,000
Annual Income (1892)		£913,602
Total Payments under Policies		£11,000,000

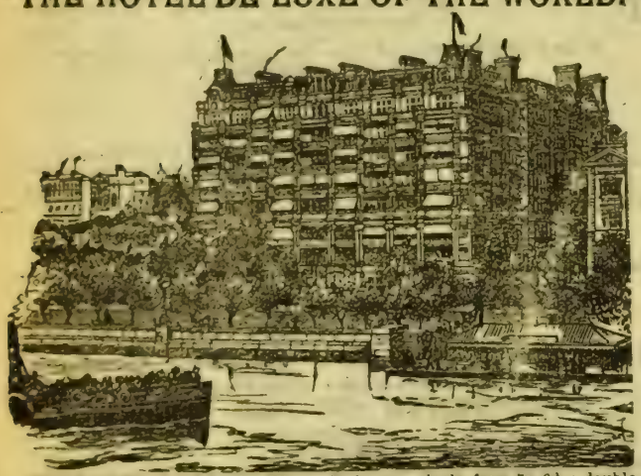
Moderate Rates of Premium. Liberal Scale of Annuities. Loans granted upon Security of Freehold, Copyhold, and Leasehold Property, Life Interests, and Reversions. Also to Corporate and other Public Bodies, upon Security of Rates, &c.

PROPOSAL FORMS, &c., to be obtained on application to the Society's Agents, or to the Head Office as above.

SAVOY HOTEL & RESTAURANT.

Victoria Embankment, LONDON.

'THE HOTEL DE LUXE OF THE WORLD.'



Magnificent River and Garden View Bedrooms, single, from 7s. 6d.; double, from 10s. 6d. Small and large suites, with bathrooms, &c., attached, from 25s. No charge for Light, Baths, and Attendance. Shaded Electric Light everywhere. No gas. The building is absolutely fireproof.

SAVOY RESTAURANT, with large terrace. The finest and only Open Air Restaurant in London. Private Rooms for Dinner Parties, &c.

THE VICTORIA ROOMS. Specially adapted for Balls, Banquets, Masonic and Regimental Dinners.

Chef de Cuisine, M. ESCOFFIER. Manager, L. ECHENARD.

General Manager, C. RITZ, Proprietor of the Hotel de Provence, Cannes.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.

Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON

Very agreeable to take.

A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,

HÆMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.

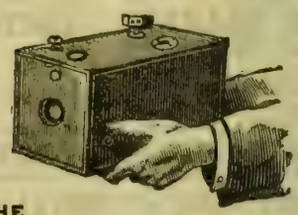
Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.

Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.

E. GRILLON,

69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.

The Camera that takes the World!



THE

KODAK

No previous knowledge of Photography necessary.

"YOU PRESS THE BUTTON, WE DO THE REST,"

(Unless you prefer to do the rest yourself)

AND THE PICTURE IS FINISHED.

Price from £1 6s.

EASTMAN PHOTOGRAPHIC MATERIALS CO. LD., 115-117 OXFORD-ST., LONDON, W.

SEND FOR PRETTY, ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, POST FREE.

Perfection! Regd. PRESS PIPE. Keble's Patent

The Press Pipe. Charms of smoking without its evils. The pernicious nicotine, generated during combustion, Deposits on a Flat Nickel Pin. The smoke, purified, is dry, free, and fragrant to end. Withdrawal of mouthpiece to wipe Pin automatically clears the stem of foulness, and choking bottom of bowl with burnt wet tobacco is impossible.

Public and Private Testimonials unanimous in unqualified praise. If not at Tobacconists, Retail price 1/6

Mr. KEBLE, Gazette, Margate, will forward sample

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

WORLD'S FAIR route to Chicago.

JAPAN and CHINA.—Fastest, finest, and only twin-screw Royal Mail Steamers on Pacific Ocean leave Vancouver every three weeks.

AROUND the WORLD Trips for £125.

SUMMER TOURS through Canadian Lakes and "Rockies."

FREE FARMS and Cash Bonus for Settlers.

For Tickets and Free Guide Books, apply Passenger Department, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, KING WILLIAM STREET, LONDON, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

PERSONAL LOVELINESS

is greatly enhanced by a fine set of teeth. On the other hand, nothing so detracts from the effect of pleasing features as yellow or decayed teeth. Don't lose sight of this fact, and remember to cleanse your teeth every morning with that supremely delightful and effectual dentifrice

FRAGRANT

SOZODONT

which imparts whiteness to them, without the least injury to the enamel. The gums are made healthy by its use, and that mortifying defect, a repulsive breath, is completely remedied by it. Sozodont is in high favour with the fair sex, because it lends an added charm to their pretty mouths.

OUR PUZZLES.

RULES.

1. The sum of £2 2s. will be given every week for the best EPIGRAM, CONUNDRUM, LIPOGRAM, BOUTS RIMÉS, or whatever the announced subject of the competition for the week may be.

2. The Puzzle Editor reserves the right, however, of dividing the above sum between two or more competitors, or of withholding the prize, should exceptional circumstances render such a course desirable.

3. The decision and award of the Puzzle Editor must be considered final and irrevocable, and, for obvious reasons, no appeal from his critical judgments can be entertained.

4. In every instance the prize will be given in money, subject to no condition whatever, except the publication of the winner's real name and address in this journal.

5. Competitors will be allowed eleven days for the composition and despatch of their efforts; but all such communications must, at the latest, be received at the TRUTH OFFICE by the first post on the morning of the second Monday succeeding the publication of the subject for competition.

6. Not more than one Prize will be given a Quarter to the same competitor.

7. ALL NEW CONTRIBUTORS ARE REQUIRED TO FORWARD WITH THEIR FIRST ANSWERS THEIR REAL NAMES AND ADDRESSES FOR REGISTRATION; such names and addresses will not be published except in the case of Prize-winners.

8. The nom-de-plume chosen by competitors should not exceed 12, and must under no circumstances consist of more than 14, letters.

9. COMPETITORS MUST ON NO ACCOUNT CHANGE THE NOMS-DE-PLUME THEY HAVE ONCE ASSUMED.

10. On the announcement of the Prize-winner's nom-de-plume, the successful competitor must write and make formal application for the Prize, stating the address to which the cheque must be sent. Any competitor failing to do so within three months of winning the Prize will forfeit all claim to the same.

11. No communications can be received on post-cards, by telegraph, or by hand. They must all be sent by the time named above. All post letters addressed—

PUZZLE EDITOR OF "TRUTH," CARTERET-STREET, QUEEN ANNE'S-GATE, S.W.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 750.—HOUSE-BOAT ALPHABET.

GOGGLES (real name and address will be given next week) ...	...	...	...	...	...	...	...	£1	1	0
STARLING ,,	,,	,,	...	...	...	...	...	1	1	0

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 757.

The prize in this competition has been divided between MARS and T. O. R.

PRIZE ANECDOTES RELATING TO CRICKET.

Scotch umpire at a village match to batsmen, who are disputing as to which was run out: "I'll no have any airgument about it. I'll ge ye both out, and then I canna make any mistake."—Mars.

Two country bumpkins were watching a cricket match, and were much puzzled by the umpires in their white coats, whose connection with the game they were unable to understand. Presently one said, "Oi sai, Bill! d'ye see them there coves in the white coats? Oi'm durned if they've stopped a bloomin' ball the 'ole bloomin' innen's!"—T. O. R.

I would also mention as worthy of special commendation Dorothea, Veracity, Malignant, Arundo, Mona, Clarissima, Suo Marte, Hippo, Leumas, and Moey.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 755.

Pope's well-known line in his "Essay on Criticism," "The sound must seem an echo to the sense," contains a principle which, I need scarcely say, has been often acted upon by writers of verse. Many of us do not need the phenomenal erudition of Macaulay's schoolboy to recall the well-known line in which the beat of the words so admirably represent a horse's gallop—"Quadrupedante putrem sonittu quatit ungula campum," or that equally well-known one in which the unwieldiness of the Cyclops is so effectively expressed, "Monstrum, horrendum, informe, ingens cui lumen ademptum." And who does not seem to hear the roar of the advancing wave as it beats upon the shore, and the swish of its recoil from the strand in the often quoted line from Homer:—

Βῆ δ' ἀκέων παρὰ θῖνα πολυφλοίσβοιο θαλάσσης.

In English poetry I may allude to Tennyson's lines:—

"The moan of doves in immemorial elms,
And murmur of innumerable bees,"

And to Pope's own quatrain:—

"When Ajax strives some rock's vast weight to throw,
The line, too, labours and the words move slow;
Not so when swift Camilla scours the plain,
Flies o'er th' unbending corn and skims along the main."

More examples of verses, in which the sound and sense go together, need not be given, but I will, without further preamble, announce that competitors are required this week to write some lines in which, as far as possible, a similar result is achieved. That is to say, they are asked to compose

FOUR LINES OF RHYMED ENGLISH VERSE, IN ANY METRE, WHICH SHALL, IF POSSIBLE, PRODUCE THE DELICIOUSLY COOL SENSATION CAUSED BY THE SOUND OF PIECES OF ICE TINKLING AGAINST THE SIDE OF A GLASS.

It will be noticed that I have chosen this competition with a special view to the present state of the thermometer. Competitors, I hope, will find it refreshing even to write of such a cooling subject as iced drinks; whilst I trust it is not too sanguine to anticipate that the perusal of the resulting lines, when they are published, will have quite a refrigerating effect on the reader. The Prize for the verse in which the cooling sound and sense are most skilfully combined will be Two Guineas, and all answers much reach me by the morning of Monday, July 24, at the latest.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 Several answers are held over until next week.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 752.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

ORIGINAL RECIPES FOR COOLING DRINKS.

Lime-juice, 1 pint; London gin, 1 pint; spring water or distilled water, 1 pint; milk, 1 pint. Sugar may be added, if required, in any quantity. Sweetened or unsweetened gin or Hollands may be used.—Moonlighter.

1. Take 1 bottle of aërated lemonade and about a wineglassful of vanilla ice-cream. Mix well together in a large tumbler. 2. To a bottle of gingerbeer add ½ pint of good stout and a little ice. —Stanchion.

1 lb. of lump-sugar, 1 oz. of tartaric acid, and 2 large lemons sliced fine to be put in a jug, and to have 1 quart of boiling water poured on them. When cool, decant, and it is ready for use. Add cold water according to taste. About one tablespoonful is sufficient to make a tumblerful.—Buffalo Bill.

Seek a cool grot and mossy cave
The purling waters softly lave;
'Tis a cooler drink than concocted brew,
But season it not with mountain dew!
Yin-Yin.

Take 1 lb. gooseberries, ½ lb. strawberries, and 1 lb. sugar; put it in a covered jar in the oven until the juice is extracted; pour the liquor out and let it get cold, taking care not to let the fruit mix at all, so as to keep it clear. When cold add 1 lb. clear Wenham Lake ice, broken small, and 1 wineglass of Maraschino. About an hour after mix 2 quart bottles of Salutaris water.—Penguin.

Make lemonade by the following recipe:—Cut in halves 2 large lemons, put in a jug with ½ lb. of loaf-sugar and a teaspoonful of powdered citric acid. Pour on 1½ pint of boiling water; stir well, then cover to keep in the steam, and set aside to cool. When quite cold stir and strain it. Fill half a tumbler with the lemonade, make to three-quarters with claret and finish with soda-water or potash from a syphon. Drink while effervescing. For total abstainers omit the claret.—Nurse.

Try the following cooling drink (original):—1 bottle saumur, iced; 2 bottles lemonade, iced; 1 bottle soda-water, iced; 1 sherry-glass of vermouth (Italian), as much powdered citric acid as will go on a sixpence.—Sirius.

Peel 2 good juicy lemons, taking care to remove every particle of the white under skin, cut them in pieces, and place in large jug (a high narrow one is better than a low open one), remove pips, cut the yellow part from the skin of one lemon and place in jug with from six to a dozen lumps of sugar, according to taste; next pour into jug 1 pint of water actually boiling, stand jug in cool place, or surround with ice, until cold. When cold add 2 full tumblers of dry champagne and 1 bottle of soda-water. Thoroughly stir, strain from lemons, and drink with a lump of ice.—Keynote.

Squeeze the juice of strawberries fine,
Add to them a little wine;
Apollinaris pour with care,
And sugar add—but, oh, beware!
For lavishness will spoil your brew,
And cause beginning it anew.
Ice will the needful coolness give.
Pour the whole through muslin sieve
Into jug of colours fine—
Drink and art you thus combine.
Vicar.

Put 2 tablespoonfuls of good Ceylon tea in a metal teapot; pour on half a pint of boiling water, and allow to stand, covered with a cosy, five minutes. Then pour at once, through a piece of muslin, into a glass decanter and allow the decoction to cool. When thirsty, take 1 tablespoonful of this and put it in a pint tumbler, with a squeeze of lemon and a slice of same, sugar to taste, and crushed ice at discretion. Fill up the glass with Apollinaris water, and suck through three straws. Strong coffee may be substituted for tea; but when Bourbon whiskey is used instead of either of these, you have a drink fit for the gods.—Churips.

We were all afflicted with the same complaint—namely, insatiable thirst. The days went on, still the heat continued—still our thirst continued; had we been given to alcoholic "imbibations," ere long we would have become irreclaimable drunkards. Suggestions were made by the different members of our party, and adopted for a time. Lemonade, tea, coffee, cold water (ugh!), and cocoa formed the chief part of our beverages. At last we decided to strike out on fresh lines, and discover something new in the shape of drink. Whether it was the fault of the sun, moon, excessive heat, or what, I know not—enough to say only one of our number hit on a fresh idea. Wandering through the house in search of food for the brain to make drink for the body, I came to the kitchen; forthwith made an investigation of all the tins, jars, &c., and so forth. What experiments I made to be sure! A chemist making up draughts wasn't in it. At last I landed on a discovery, which was put into practice next day, and unanimously voted "proper." Try it. To a large jug of very cold water, add an ounce packet of citric acid (used in making jelly), ¼ lb. of lump or castor sugar; let these dissolve. When thirsty, pour out a glassful, add ½ teaspoonful of Yeatman's yeast-powder, and drink whilst "fizzing." Very simple, is it not? but fine on a hot day.—Etoniensis.

Mix ¼ lb oatmeal in 2 gallons of cold water, boil for half an hour, thoroughly strain, add sufficiency of white sugar. When cold, put to this the juice of 2 lemons and the thin peel of 1, 3 oz. of citric acid, 1 bottle claret, 2 bottles Schweppe's soda-water, and the thick peel of medium-sized cucumber. Let mixture stand a few hours, then take out lemon and cucumber parings and just before using put in a little ice. This drink is still more agreeable to most palates by the addition of 2 small glasses of good old Cognac. For children home-made wine might be substituted, ¼ lb. of oatmeal, brown sugar, and only 1½ oz. citric acid, with not much cucumber-rind.—Psittacus.

One tablespoonful of oatmeal to 1 tumblerful of water.—Gristle.

1. Instead of pearl-barley, take 1 oz. of fine ground oatmeal, mix with a little warm water, then boil in a quart of water, stirring it well; 2 oz. of sugar and the juice of a lemon added make a refreshing drink. 2. Eau-sucrée (4 lumps of sugar dissolved in a tumbler of cold water) with lemon-juice, or lime-juice-cordial is also useful.—Esperanza.

Squeeze a juicy orange and strain the juice into a pint tumbler. If not very sweet, add a teaspoonful of sifted sugar. Put in a good sprig of mint or borage, and 3 tablespoonfuls of pounded ice. Fill the glass with any good mineral-water or natural filtered water. Stir and drink through three straws. A liqueur-glassful of whisky improves this considerably.—Olivastro.

1. For the Upper Ten:—Ice; peaches sliced in two; more ice; a bottle of very good champagne ('80 or even '84 will do); more ice. 2. For the Middle Classes:—Ice; a dash of cherry brandy; a pint of light champagne; a bottle of Apollinaris. 3. For the Masses (including artists, journalists, would-be solvers of TRUTH puzzles, criminals, and other brain-workers):—Cold tea with a slice of lemon; iced, if possible. N.B.—If the ice is obtained as a gift from the family fishmonger, previous prolonged contact with tainted salmon is not essential.—H. E. G.

MAYORK (SUMMER DRINK) ("MAY-YORK").

The juice of 1 lemon; 1 dessertspoonful of castor-sugar; 1 tablespoonful of vanilla, strawberry, or pineapple ice-cream; 1 bottle of soda or seltzer water. Squeeze the juice of a lemon into a jug, being careful that none of the pips fall in. Add a dessertspoonful of castor-sugar, a tablespoonful of vanilla, strawberry, or pineapple ice-cream. Pour upon these ingredients 1 bottle of soda or seltzer water. Stir well, and serve.—Pyn.

Into a soda-water tumbler put 1 tablespoonful or more of lemon-syrup, a glass of hock, a lump of ice, and fill up with any natural table-water. As the excellence of this drink depends on the quality of the ingredients, the syrup should be home-made, and the wine of the best. To make the syrup:—The juice only of 6 large lemons, ½ oz. citric acid, 1 lb. or more of loaf-sugar. Pour on these about a pint of boiling water. Stir occasionally until the sugar is dissolved, and when cold strain, and bottle for use when required.—Georgina.

Thirty drops of dilute sulphuric acid (or less, to taste), 1 tablespoonful of orange-syrup, 1 tumbler of water, stir, drink. This tipple is deliciously cooling, tonic, perfectly innocent, and, what is somewhat to the purpose, inexpensive. The orange-syrup can be obtained at Adam Hill's, Holborn, 1s. the pint, and the dilute sulphuric acid at any chemist's at the rate of 60 drinks for 3d.—Seedy C.

1. Lime-juice-cordial (Rose's by preference) with soda, potash, or plain water, is the most refreshing drink; and, having for two years taken nothing else, I can testify to its healthful anti-rheumatic properties. 2. A small tumblerful of boiled water, as hot as can be sipped slowly, is the most effective thirst-quencher, and will be found quite invigorating after being heated with exercise.—Dora.

Take 1 lb. of ripe raspberries, ¼ lb. of lump-sugar, the rinds of 3 lemons, and 1 oz. of cream of tartar. Put them all into ½ gallon of cold water, set them over a slow fire, and boil for a quarter of an hour. Strain it off, and ice just before required.—Gradatim.

Put 1 oz. of good tea in an earthen pot, add a pint of boiling water, let it stand four minutes, pour it off into a jug; when quite cold put a teaspoonful of juice from a fresh lemon in a tumbler, and add tea to taste—a little white sugar may be added if preferred.—Felsberg.

Cucumber slices three or four,
Borage and balm, two sprigs, not more,
Claret and seltzer—lumps of ice
And curaçoa just to taste nice.
A game of tennis from twelve to two,
And you'll call this a heavenly brew!
Ivy Leaves.

To drink, and be refreshed, ah! there's the rub.
In truth, I pray thee list, discard the pub;
Take pint of claret as the choicest wine—
With ice and soda water it's sublime;
Slice lemons two, the best that you can find,
Then flavour with some fresh cucumber rind—
Forgetting not to sweeten it I trust
With castor sugar that's as fine as dust.
Then you will have a drink that's charming cool,
Gives satisfaction always as a rule.
Providing these instructions not reversed,
'Twill prove assuaging to a Nation's thirst.
Sol.

1. Take a sheaf of MSS., well winnowed, but rejected, with a handful of polite editorial circulars; add about 1 lb. of outlying stamped directed envelopes. Stew in midnight oil; flavour with a weekly glance at the last leaf but one of TRUTH, and serve, drop by drop, throughout all seasons of the year. N.B.—The above is calculated to cool a "conscious Laureate." The dose, unless mitigated with—say, an occasional unacknowledged gratuitous insertion, would be fatal to a poetaster. 2. It is not generally comprehended that a few grains of "prussic" dissolved in a thimblefull of water will make any one cold in an amazingly short period.—E. C. L.

Slice up 2 good-sized lemons; put in a jug or basin, pour on them quart of hot water; cover over; leave till cold; strain it off into a bottle, then add ½ pint of port or sherry wine to do—say at 4s. 6d. the bottle.—Theology.

1. A very effective cooling drink may be made by mixing together 1 cupful "Black-currant Cordial," 1 cupful "Limejuice Cordial," and a pinch of cayenne. Bottle the mixture, and use 2 tablespoonfuls to a tumbler of water. (The cordials may be had from the grocer at about 8d. per bottle, holding 3 gills.) 2. Elderberry Beer (very cooling).—Boil together for half-an-hour 3 quarts water, 1 pint crushed elderberries, 1 lb. sugar, and 3 cayenne pods. Then, after letting it cool for 20 minutes, strain, and pour into a vessel together with ½ oz. ginger, the juice of 4 lemons, and 2 teaspoonfuls new yeast (previously mixed with a little of the beer). Let the beer stand for 8 hours, then, after taking the yeast from the top, put it into stone bottles or a small cask. 3. Strawberry Vinegar.—Put 1 lb. strawberries into a wide-necked jar or bottle, pour over them 1 pint vinegar, and let stand 3 days, occasionally stirring the mixture, then strain the vinegar from the strawberries, and add to it 1 drop essence of cayenne, 3 drops essence of lemon, and ½ lb. sugar. Bottle, and use 1 tablespoonful to a tumbler of water.—Rugeley.

Boil some liquorice-root in water for one hour. When cold add some orange-juice and ice.—Comtesse Olga.

Mix together ½ pint of Devonshire cider and 1 bottle of gingerbeer, with a few lumps of ice.—Ken.

Original or not, the coolest beverage, I think,
Is a cup of cold coffee, iced before you drink.
Tan-Tun.

1. Two bottles Chablis, juice of 4 fresh lemons, grated peel of 1 ditto, 3 large bottles of seltzer, 1 wineglass of rich old Madeira, a liqueurglass of Maraschino or Kirschenwasser, castor sugar if desired, a lump of ice. 2. Pint of good Devonshire cider, tablespoonful of Scotch whiskey, slice of lemon.—Falcon.

The juice of 1 lemon, ½ a tumbler of water, and a small quantity of carbonate of soda. A bit of ice will make the drink cooler, if that be considered desirable.—Blacksmith.

1. One pint hock (Nierstein), 1 bottle seltzer, 1 liqueur brandy and kummel (mixed), 2 drops Angostura bitters, ice ad lib. 2. 1 pint bottle champagne cider, 1 liqueur Maraschino and brandy (mixed), 1 small bottle soda, 2 slices lemon, ½ tablespoonful sugar, ice suff.—Geo. Javois.

The most refreshing and attractive cooling drink is an ordinary "lemon squash," with the addition of twopennyworth (or even less) of old rum for a delicate and delicious flavouring. Recipe: The juice of a lemon with a bottle of soda water and a little pounded ice stirred together with the rum; a little pounded sugar should be added last of all to make it fizz. Drinking through straws adds very much to the delight of this beverage.—Oriole.

An old woman from the Wild West assures me the following beverage will refrigerate blood at 102 deg. Fah. You will note that a simple kind of still is required, but the old woman, who brews tea as strong as poteen (which she can also brew in a kettle), says there is no drink worth a "small peaytic" unless it be distilled. On the strength of her vast experience I can guarantee the recipe:—Saturate 3 lb. or 4 lb. of purified potash with wine or malt vinegar (which has been distilled over charcoal powder if it can be done), evaporate the saturated liquor to the consistence of a dry powder, of which put 3 lb., accurately weighed, when still warm, into a glass, previously heated, and shut it with a glass stopper. Then pour 3 lb. of sulphuric acid into a retort, provided on its upper part with a pipe, and join it to a receiver large enough to contain about 20 pints of water. Begin to add to the sulphuric acid the above salt in small portions, shaking and stirring it frequently. After having mixed all the salt, add by degrees 1 lb. more of sulphuric acid, and shut the pipe with a wet bladder, and allow the whole to stand quietly one night. The next morning place the retort into the sand pot of a furnace, so deeply that the sand between the bottom of the pot and the retort be only ½ in. thick; put the receiver into a vessel of cold water, after which make a gentle fire in the furnace. About an hour afterwards the distillation commences, when the fire must be carefully managed. Be careful that the liquid flows in drops only, not in a continuous stream, and also take care that the thick and white fumes given off only lodge in the lowest part of the receiver; when they begin to rise, particularly with a whirling motion, take the fire out of the furnace. The upper part of the receiver should be cooled with the water occasionally. When the white fumes cease the distillation is ended. The liquefaction of the residuum in the retort will become known by a black, frothy fluid that will run into the receiver if it be not taken from the fire in time. The residium is ground to a dry powder, and, together with ground charcoal, added to the beverage, after which it should be rectified over a gentle fire to the dryness of the residuum. Taking the above proportions of ingredients, about 22 oz. of a delicious ice-vinegar can be obtained. Apparatus: Small retort, copper; length of tubing, india-rubber or metal (copper); receiver (any closed vessel); furnace (good close kitchen range, with large grate).—Moonlighter.

Slice up 3 lemons, put into a large jug, together with ½ lb. of sugar, 1 oz. tartaric acid, and half a teaspoonful ginger, pouring over the whole 3 pints of boiling water. Cover the vessel with a saucer, and, when cold, add 1 cupful of raspberry vinegar; strain, and bottle for use. Water may be added at pleasure, and, if an effervescing drink is desired, a pinch of carbonate of soda may be dropped in the tumbler when using.—Rugeley.

First fill a jug with Adlam's wine,
And claret add pure juice of vine.
Cucumber peel of thinnest rind,
Some lumps of ice will cool you'll find;
Lemon-juice add with spendthrift touch,
But sugar needs a miser's clutch.
Some drops of good French eau-de-vie
Will make this drink no'er disagree.
A lot of straws—a pretty maid,
A hammock slung in cool oak shade,
Tennyson, Swinburne, and my TRUTH
Will banish sorrow, pain, and ruth,
All thirsty souls try this receipt,
And prove it good by potions deep.
Ivy Leaves.

Mix together a small bottle of Bass's pale ale and a lemon-water-ice, and drink as soon as the ice is completely melted. The effect is that of a superlative shandygaff.—Almaviva.

Boil together for twenty minutes 4 quarts water, 5 cut-up sticks of rhubarb, ½ lb. raspberries, 1 oz. ginger, ½ lb. sugar, and the thin rinds of 2 lemons. When lukewarm, strain the mixture, and put it into a vessel with the juice of the lemons and 1 large spoonful of barm. Have ready 16 ginger-beer bottles with good corks, and when the mixture has stood for seven hours, skim off the barm (which will have risen to the surface), and bottle, tying the corks well down. Next day the beer will be ready for use, costing ½d. per bottle.—Oar Cross.

THE FINEST & CHEAPEST CYCLES. WRITE TO DAY FOR OUR 200 PAGE ILLUSTRATED LIST

Post Free, containing 6,000 Testimonials and particulars of over 1,000 New and Second-hand Pneumatic, Cushion, and Solid Tyre Safeties and Tricycles. Prices from £4 to £30. Easy terms from 10s. per Month.

MACHINES SENT CARRIAGE PAID. Cycles bought, sold, and exchanged.

BRITISH CYCLE MANUFACTURING COMPANY.
Liverpool: 45, Everton-road. London: 42, High-street, Camden Town, N.W.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL

CONTRIBUTIONS are EARNESTLY SOLICITED towards meeting the EXPENSES of this unendowed Hospital, and will be gratefully received by the Bankers, Messrs. Drummond, or by the Secretary.

TO CONNOISSEURS.

ST. EMILION . . . . CLARET . . . . 18/- per dozen.
MEDOC . . . . CLARET . . . . 15/6 per dozen.
ST. GEORGE'S . . . CLARET . . . . 13/- per dozen.
Price List of other CHATEAU CLARETS, from 21/- to 74/- per dozen, posted on application. LE MONNIER & CO., JERSEY.
CARRIAGE AND DUTY PAID.

Millions Drink it Daily!!

LIPTON'S DELICIOUS TEA.

LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD.

DIRECT FROM THE TEA GARDENS TO THE TEAPOT.

NO MIDDLEMEN'S PROFITS TO PAY.

WHY PAY 2s. to 3s. 6d. per lb. for TEA, when at LIPTON'S you can buy

THE FINEST THE WORLD PRODUCES

No Higher Price. At 1/7 per lb. No Higher Price.

RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT.

These Teas have a more exquisite aroma and delicious Flavour than any Tea ever introduced into Britain.

At 1/- and 1/4 per lb.

They have undoubtedly reached a pinnacle of success never before attained by any Tea in the World.

OVER ONE MILLION PACKETS SOLD WEEKLY in Great Britain alone, and the sale increasing by leaps and bounds all the time.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Delivered carriage paid for an extra 1d. per lb. to any address in Great Britain on orders of 5 lbs. and upwards.
Samples sent free on application. A GUARANTEE.—Money returned in full if Tea does not give perfect satisfaction in every way.

LIPTON, Tea and Coffee Planter, CEYLON.
The Largest Tea, Coffee, and Provision Dealer in the World.

Sole Proprietor of the following celebrated Tea and Coffee Estates in Ceylon:—Dambatenne, Laymastotte, Monerakande, Mahadambatenne, Mousakelle, Pooprassie, Hanagalla, and Gigranolla, which cover Thousands of Acres of the best TEA and COFFEE LAND in CEYLON.

Ceylon Tea and Coffee Shipping Warehouses:—Maddema Mills, Cinnamon Gardens, Colombo. Ceylon Office:—Upper Chatham-street, Colombo.
Indian Tea Shipping Warehouses and Export Stores:—Hare-street, Strand, Calcutta. Indian Offices:—Dalhousie-square, Calcutta.

GENERAL OFFICES: BATH STREET, CITY ROAD, LONDON, E.C. Branches and Agencies throughout the World.

COCA WINE

—(ARMBRECHT.)—

THE NEW RESTORATIVE NERVE-TONIC of VOCAL, MENTAL, and PHYSICAL POWERS.

Assuages Thirst and Hunger and Promotes Digestion.

COCA.

"The Remedy, par excellence, against worry."—CORNING.

COCA.

"The tensor, par excellence, of the vocal chord."—Dr. FARIVAL.

COCA.

"Relieves the depression resulting from the deprival of stimulants."—WAUGH.

COCA.

"A powerful nervine tonic."—Lancet.

COCA.

"A mild tonic stimulant and restorative in muscular exhaustion, convalescence, or debility. It has been recommended to assist the victims of alcohol or morphia."—PROSSER JAMES.

For Sleeplessness it is superior to Opiates, Chloral, and Bromides, as there is positively no reaction.

COCA.

"Valuable remedy in sick headache."—(MIGRAINE.)

COCA.

"Useful in Phthisis and Wasting Diseases generally, and also in convalescence from acute maladies."—PROSSER JAMES.

COCA.

"It is a stimulant to the muscular and nervous systems."—BOUCHARDAT.

It prevents a too rapid waste of tissue, and it enables the consumer to go a long time without food.

COCA.

Dr. CHRISTISON says:—"Coca not only removes extreme fatigue, but also prevents it. Hunger and thirst are suspended, but eventually appetite and digestion are unaffected; further, that he found it had no effect upon the mental faculties except liberating them from the dulness and drowsiness of great bodily fatigue."

COCA WINE EXTRACT
For Travellers, 3/9 (100 doses), post-free.

COCA LOZENGES,
For Singers and Public Speakers, 1/9 post-free.

COCA WINE,
45/- per doz., carriage paid. Single Bottle, 4/- post-paid.

From all Stores, Wine Merchants, Chemists, or Grocers, or direct from

ARMBRECHT, NELSON, & CO., DUKE STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, LONDON, W.

ELECTROPATHIC TREATMENT.

FOR THE

RELIEF AND CURE

— OF —

WEAK AND LANGUID FEELINGS.

The administration of Electricity at the Medical Battery Co.'s Institute, 52, Oxford-street, London, W., establishes harmony in the system, and harmony is health. Disturbance of harmony is disease. Electropathic treatment assuages pain, soothes irritation, induces sleep, gives vigour to the blood, vitality to the nerves, and strength to the muscles. It cures rheumatism, sciatica, spinal irritation, and other nervous diseases, because it supplies to the system what it requires in establishing permanent health. Without shock or discomfort, Electricity is made to penetrate to the deep-seated glands and most delicate membranes of the interior of the body, permeating every atom of the living organism. Electropathic Treatment is the best thing for business men, and is good for ladies in all critical periods of life, strengthening the system, and preventing mental depression. Call or write for descriptive pamphlets and book of unsolicited testimonials to the MEDICAL BATTERY CO.,

Limited,
52, Oxford-street, London, W.

ELECTROPATHIC TREATMENT.

HARNESS' WASHABLE TRUSSES

being practically indestructible, can be guaranteed to last a lifetime, thus involving no further expense to the purchaser beyond first cost, and the undoubted advantages they possess over every other truss extant constitutes them as absolutely the best, and therefore the cheapest, that can be produced. These trusses are of the best possible manufacture; they are self-adjusting, light, and comfortable. The external surface being completely covered with a non-absorbent material (xylonite) of a flesh colour, resembling ivory, they cannot be detected when bathing; they are absolutely impervious to perspiration and the acid excretions of the skin, cannot rust or get out of order, cause no cutaneous irritation, may be washed when necessary with impunity, and can therefore be worn for any length of time in any climate without becoming offensive, as is the case with those constructed with leather and other objectionable materials of a porous character.

HARNESS' WASHABLE TRUSS.

"A WONDERFUL INVENTION."
Mr. John Lovelock, 14, Chesterman-street, Reading, writes: "The comfort and support of your Curative Hernia Appliance has far surpassed anything I have ever worn. My rupture has almost disappeared, and I hope in a month or so to be able to dispense with it entirely. I shall be only too happy to answer any questions relating to your wonderful invention, and at the same time I beg to thank you for the attention you have paid to me."

TESTIMONIALS.

RUPTURE TREATMENT.
John Hurdell, 98, Shakespeare-road, Herne Hill, S.E., writes, August 18, 1892: "I have been wearing your Xylonite Truss for the last two years with perfect ease and comfort. I have tried many previously, none of which met my case. I can testify to the skill displayed by your specialists, and you are at liberty to refer any one to me, when I will give them any information on the subject."

RUPTURE.

Harness' Washable Trusses.
Self-adjusting, Flesh-coloured.

HARNESS' WASHABLE TRUSS.

"IT HAS MATERIALLY REDUCED MY RUPTURE."
"About eight years ago I bought one of your washable trusses, which I have worn night and day ever since, with great comfort. It has materially reduced my rupture (a very bad one), and at the present time the truss is as good as new. I have recommended it to many sufferers. The sight of your advertisement to-day reminded me that you were entitled to this testimonial. Previous to using your truss I used to buy padded ones, which were very uneasy in wear, and lasted but a few months. —W. A. BENNET, Esq., 3, Carr-lane, Hull, October 16."

TESTIMONIALS.

"NOT FELT THE SLIGHTEST PAIN AFTER USING IT."
"I write to you these few lines to let you know of the great benefit I have derived from the truss I bought of you some three weeks ago. I have the pleasure to state that I have not felt the slightest pain after using it. You are at perfect liberty to use this testimonial as you like.—ANTONIO MUSCHIALLI, 43, St. Martin's-lane, Charing Cross, W.C."

The Truss Fitter of the MEDICAL BATTERY COMPANY, LIMITED, has had more experience than any other fitter in London, and it therefore stands to reason that, with his practical experience, combined with scientific skill, he is far more capable of treating complicated cases than any ordinary practitioner. Sufferers should no longer torture themselves by wearing badly-fitting unhealthy Trusses, but call without delay at the

ELECTROPATHIC AND ZANDER INSTITUTE,

CONSULTATION FREE. 52, OXFORD ST., LONDON, W. CONSULTATION FREE.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER. "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st., Queen Anne's-gate. S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici.—Cicero."

No. 864. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, July 20, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Queen has expressed her intention of leaving Osborne for Balmoral on Thursday, August 24. Her Majesty is particularly anxious to be at Balmoral on Saturday, the 26th, which is the anniversary of Prince Albert's birthday.

The Court entertainments of the season finished last week, with a ball and a concert at Buckingham Palace, both of which were principally remarkable for the tremendous crowd, the oppressive heat, and the splendour of the dresses and jewels, to which may be added the beauty of the profuse floral decorations. On the night of the ball it was so exceedingly difficult to approach the buffet in the supper-room that many people contented themselves with the "light refreshment" which they were able to procure in the tea and ice room, which was open all the night. There was a really remarkable display of gold plate in the supper-room. It was all sent back to Windsor on Saturday, but many articles are to be despatched to Osborne for use during the visit of the Emperor William.

A countryman, who has been endeavouring to obtain some definite ideas about the Royal Wedding functions from the various illustrated papers, applies to me for help and enlightenment. His bewilderment is natural. He finds in the first place that we seem to have a new Queen reigning over us, for her Majesty's features in the illustrated papers bear no resemblance to the authorised portraits of Queen Victoria. A still more remarkable fact is, that in the course of the festivities, her Majesty seems to have continually changed her habiliments. One of the special artists shows her with an ermine train; another represents her with no train at all. Another shows her with a crown on her head; another appears to have seen her only a few minutes later in a bonnet. One picture represents the Queen and her guests all taking lunch at one table; another places them at different tables. One paper surpasses itself by two views of the route to the railway station, in each of which the Royal couple are provided with a totally different carriage, and different horses and attendants. I think I can explain how these discrepancies arise. Probably some of the special artists despatched to sketch the wedding made their sketches at Henley.

The Prince of Wales will terminate his visit to the Duke of Richmond at Goodwood on Friday, the 28th, when H.R.H. is to proceed, after the races, from Chichester by special train to Portsmouth Harbour, when he will join the Royal yacht Osborne, which is to carry him to Cowes. Captain Milne, whose command of the Osborne ought properly to have been terminated by his promotion, is to retain that post during the remainder of the season. The Prince is to pay a flying visit to Winchester next Tuesday on his way to visit the Duke of Richmond, in order that he may be present at the College celebration, which is to be a most elaborate function. The Duke of Connaught is also expected at Winchester on Tuesday for a few hours.

H.R.H. was expected at Sandringham for his sale of Southdowns and Shorthorns last Thursday, but he finally decided to stay at Newmarket, and he was represented by the Duke of York, and also by Sir Dighton Probyn (who had a small party at his house in the Park, including Lord Moreton, Sir Jacob Wilson, Sir Nigel Kingscote, and Captain Holford), but the absence of His Royal Highness exercised a prejudicial effect upon the biddings, which were by no means so brisk as they had been at the previous sales. The cattle were a most excellent lot, but the average for fifty-two head was only £32. 11s. 6d., as compared with £42. 1s. 3d. at the sale of 1891. Most of the animals went for much less than their real value. The sheep sold better, and the average of 68s. per head was considered to be highly satisfactory. Mr. James Blyth was the principal purchaser. The rams realised high prices, the average for these rising from £11. 2s. 8d. in 1891 to £17. 3s.

The Duke of York is going to start a farm of his own at Sandringham, and he intends to go in for breeding Red Polls and Berkshire pigs, and he will probably have a flock of Dorset Horn sheep.

A paragraph has been going round the papers which states that the Queen has invited the Duke and Duchess of York to visit her at Balmoral next month "for the grouse shooting." The Duke and Duchess are going abroad when they leave Cowes, and they are not likely to be in Scotland before the middle of September, when they will no doubt pay a brief visit to the Queen at Balmoral, and afterwards to Braemar, where they are to be the guests of the Duke and Duchess of Fife. The grouse shooting will then be over, but, as a matter of fact, there are very few grouse at Balmoral, the sporting features of the Royal domain being the deer-stalking in the forests, the salmon fishing in the Dee, and the drives for roedeer in the Birkhall and Abergeldie woods.

Princess Maud of Wales is going shortly to Vichy for a course of the waters, after which she will join the Princess of Wales in Denmark.

The Duke and Duchess of Fife go this week to Scotland for the season, and will reside for a short time at Duff House, Banffshire, before they proceed to Braemar for the autumn. There will not be much deer shooting in the Forest until the middle of September, when the Prince of Wales is expected at Braemar for a stay of three weeks or a month.

Last week the Duke and Duchess of Connaught gave two garden-parties at Government House, Portsmouth, for each of which about a thousand invitations had been issued. The Duchess was not well enough to appear, and the guests were received by the Duke in the drawing room. These were farewell entertainments, as the Duke and Duchess are leaving Portsmouth this week for Osborne Cottage, where they will reside until the Queen goes to Scotland, and then the Duke (having given up his command) will proceed to Hungary to attend the autumn manœuvres, and the Duchess is going to Wiesbaden.

I see that the German Emperor has bestowed an Order on a Member of the German Parliament for making a good speech on the Army Bill. This seems a curious proceeding, but in point of fact it is not one whit more curious than our Executive making a British M.P. a Knight or a Baronet for what are termed his services to his Party. It is, indeed, rather less curious, for with us these services are frequently nothing more than the contribution of a considerable sum for Party services. Had I my way, I would pass an Act prohibiting any Member of the House of Commons from being knighted, baroneted, or peered whilst a Member, and for ten years after he has ceased to be a Member.

The Grand Duke of Hesse and his sister, Princess Alix, are to be the guests of the Queen at Balmoral in September for several weeks.

A general hope has been expressed in Service circles that the Queen will give a set of apartments in Hampton Court Palace to Lady Hudson, the widow of that very distinguished soldier, Sir John Hudson, who is a daughter of the late General Havelock. Lady Hudson is left in very poor circumstances, with several daughters to support. Only a few weeks before Sir John's sad death he was put to great expense on taking up his appointment as Commander-in-Chief at Bombay.

For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see pages 148, 149 in the present issue.
For AMUSEMENTS, see pages 149, 150.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 145.

There will be a vote of nearly £1,000 for the expenses of admitting the Czarewitch and the Crown Prince of Roumania to the Order of the Garter, most of the money going in the shape of fees to the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. Thanks to the protests of TRUTH, the practice of sending an "outfit" (consisting of all the paraphernalia of the Order) to each Royal Knight has been discontinued, or the vote would be upwards of £2,000.

An ignorant weekly paper of Tory complexion makes a stupid attempt to extract fun out of the appearance of Mrs. Gladstone at the State Ball "in the last row of what are known as 'the Duchesses' Benches,'" a circumstance which is said to have caused "much amusement." Those who were so easily amused could only have been so because they were as benighted as the writer of this rubbish, who is apparently unaware that by virtue of Mr. Gladstone's office of Lord Privy Seal, both he and his wife rank above any Duke and Duchess, unless it were a Duke holding the office of Lord Chancellor or Lord President of the Council.

By a diligent perusal of the evening papers I am getting to know the exact nature of the charms of the ladies who shine at balls almost as well as if I had seen them. Last week Mrs. Arthur Wilson, of Tranby Croft, gave a ball. The next day my Star informed me that Lady Brooke was "the belle," and looked lovely, but that Lady Norreys, Lady Ormonde, and Lady de Trafford "ran her very close;" Lady Berkeley Paget looked "sweet," Lady Helen Vincent and Lady Ulrica Duncombe were a "lovely pair;" Baroness Henry de Worms "was resplendent," Miss Sarah Wilson looked "piquante," and Miss Muriel Wilson looked "pretty." When next all these charming ladies meet at a party, I trust that the Star will give me further particulars. Was the pretty lady also piquante; was the piquante lady also pretty? Which of the three ladies that ran Lady Brooke very hard was second in the race; which third? Which of the two ladies who made a lovely pair was the more lovely? In what way was the resplendent lady resplendent? There is a vagueness in the epithets, and an absence of detail as to the particular nature of the claims of this galaxy of lovely, pretty, piquante, and resplendent ladies which is tantalising.

Another complaint that I have to make is against the word "gowned" to denote the garment in which the lady is arrayed. I saw it in the Times the other day, and the Times is rather more of a purist than some other newspapers. If gowned, why not hatted and shod? Why not, "She was gowned in blue, hatted in black, and shod in brown?" "Gowned" may be American, but it is not English.

The Duke of Richmond will have a party of nearly forty guests next week at Goodwood House, and on August 4 he goes to Scotland, for his annual three months' residence at Gordon Castle, Banffshire. Among the guests at Goodwood, in addition to the Prince of Wales, will be Prince Christian and the Duke of Cambridge.

The late Colonel Luttrell, of Badgworth Court, was a brother of Mr. Luttrell, of Dunster Castle, and one of the most popular and best-known country gentlemen in the West of England. He had resided constantly at Badgworth ever since he retired from the Army after the Crimean War, was an active Magistrate and County Administrator, and was warmly interested in the Volunteer movement. To this it may be added that he was one of the best judges of horses in England, and his services were in constant request at shows, where his awards always gave satisfaction.

Mr. Dowdeswell, who died last week at Sarhill Grange, Leicestershire, belonged to a very ancient family, and was one of the most popular landowners in that county. He sat in the House of Commons for Worcestershire from 1865 until June, 1876, when failing health obliged him to resign his seat. He was a Tory, but by no means a bigoted partisan, and many Liberals supported him when his seat for West Worcestershire was contested at the General Election of 1874.

Lady Grey, who died last week at Torquay, was the grandmother of Sir Edward Grey, and the widow of Sir George, who was Home Secretary for many years under Lord Palmerston, and was a prominent member of the House of Commons for nearly forty years. Lady Grey was a daughter of Bishop Ryder, of Lichfield, who was one of the leaders of the Evangelical Party during the first forty years of the present century. Lady Grey and Sir George were great favourites at Court, and during the year after Prince Albert's death he stayed for weeks together at Balmoral as Minister-in-Attendance, by the express wish of the Queen.

Mr. James Jardine, of Dryfeholme, who died on Friday, was the eldest brother of Sir Robert Jardine, and one of the largest landowners in the south of Scotland. He was all his life an enthusiastic agriculturist, and he farmed several thousands of acres. Mr. Jardine was a noted judge of horses, and he kept a fine stud of Clydesdales and a very choice herd of Shorthorns, while his flock of long-woolled sheep was one of the best in Great Britain. He took a very active part in Dumfriesshire County affairs, and was most popular among all classes.

Mr. Thomas Fielden, who was the Tory Member for the Middleton division of Lancashire in the last Parliament, has been left the Grimstone Park estate, near York, by his uncle, the late Mr. John Fielden, of Todmorden, to whose death I referred last week. This property was purchased in 1872 by Mr. Fielden for £240,000 from Lord Londesborough, and he has since expended a great deal of money on it.

At the Exeter Bankruptcy Court, on Thursday, Lord Haldon obtained his discharge, and, at the request of his attorney, the Judge "declared that the bankruptcy was caused by misfortune, and not by any misconduct on the part of debtor." It was stated that the object of this announcement is to enable Lord Haldon "to exercise his privileges in the House of Lords," i.e., to vote in accordance with Lord Salisbury's commands. Lord Haldon may not have been guilty of "misconduct," but the reports of the bankruptcy proceedings (which have been on for several years) most assuredly do not justify the excuse of "misfortune." If Lord Haldon's case had come before the London Court no such declaration would have been forthcoming, and if he had been a small tradesman or farmer he would not have obtained his discharge so readily. The Palks (whom Thackeray called "The Porkers") used to be great people in Devonshire, and although their old prestige has utterly departed, yet the present head of the family might still rely upon tender treatment from an Exeter tribunal.

That I did not speak too strongly last week on the sanitary condition of Worthing was sufficiently proved by a letter which appeared in the Standard of Thursday, signed "J. Latimer Fuller." Writing from Worthing, this gentleman said that the fever had broken out with greater deadliness than before, and that "at the present time (July 11) it is terrible," and warning London excursionists against the dangers of the town. It seems that the source of danger is believed to be in the milk and the water, and, on the very day on which the above letter was written, notices were being distributed warning the inhabitants to boil both these articles before using them. Similar notices had been issued at the time of the first outbreak, but the official proclamation that the town was free of disease had naturally thrown people off their guard. It is now pretty evident that the official explanation of the fouling of the water was what it appeared to be—"a story of a cock and a bull," and it behoves the local authorities to set to work afresh in search of the real source of pollution.

Apparently it is not only when Royal Princes are inspecting the Imperial Institute that Fellows and their guests have to wait outside. The experience of these unfortunates on the occasion of the Duke of Connaught's visit was repeated on Thursday in last week—why I have no idea. After having been officially informed that the doors would be open to them at three o'clock, those who arrived by that hour were kept waiting till half-past three, by which time a considerable crowd had collected, making the position of the first-comers a most disagreeable one. Judging from the opinions expressed by "Fellows" so far, I should say that when the first year's subscriptions run out there will be a considerable falling off in the strength of the membership.

A member of the Junior Carlton Club, who thought that I was an enemy of cruelty to animals, finds fault with a recipe for cooking crawfish which my correspondent "Madge" gave her readers last week, and which began—"cut thirty crawfish (alive) into halves." Apparently my correspondent did not read the directions with which he finds fault. Madge continued:—

> The moment the point of a sharp knife penetrates the head the fish is dead; this is therefore a much more merciful way of killing them than that of putting them in cold water, and allowing them to remain till it boils.

BOURNEMOUTH.—ROYAL BATH HOTEL. The only hotel on the East Cliff. Grounds of Five Acres. 1,000 feet sea-frontage. South aspect. Moderate charges. Tariff on application. Comparison invited.

To stick a knife into the head of a crawfish (and no cook in her senses would begin to divide the creature in any other way) cannot be more cruel than to pole-axe an ox, or to put live lobsters and shrimps into boiling water.

My sentiments are all against cruelty to animals, but it is easy to make this form of sentiment ridiculous by exaggeration. To my mind this is done whenever creatures of low or rudimentary nervous organisations are treated as though they had the same susceptibility to pain as a human being. My friend at the Junior Carlton is exercised about the possible—I might say hypothetical—sufferings of a crawfish when a knife is stuck into him. Does he ever trouble himself about the sufferings of an oyster, which, after having his shell brutally burst asunder, is forthwith eaten alive? A friend of mine, who is an angler, once hooked a perch "foul." The hook pierced the fish's eye. My friend felt that he had not caught the perch according to the rules of the game, so, to compensate him for losing his eye, he put him back into the water. He then baited his hook with the eye, and went to work again. Within three minutes he caught that same perch again, with his own eye. This incident shows that the loss of his eye, and what a sentimentalist would consider the awful torture of being hauled out of the water with a hook through that part of his anatomy, did not cause the fish enough concern to take away his appetite. The only other explanation is that the perch so highly appreciated my friend's sportsmanship that, not to be outdone, he hooked himself the second time on purpose—even going so far as to swallow his own eye in order to achieve his end. But, of course, it may have been a case of suicide.

Pim had but little difficulty in wresting the All England Lawn Tennis Championship from Baddeley on Monday. After the first set the ex-Champion had really no chance, for Pim held him well in hand, and seemed to do very much as he pleased with his opponent. I will not say he played with him as a cat plays with a mouse, but he certainly kept him running all over the court at his pleasure till the time came to administer the coup de grâce. Volleying has been so much in vogue at Wimbledon this year, that it was a grateful relief to see a match in which ground play was the rule rather than the exception. Baddeley tried going up to the net at first, but so surely as he did so Pim passed him with one of his terrific drives, placed as a rule with the nicest accuracy on one or other of the side lines. The Pim drive is as notable in its way, in fact, as the Renshaw "smash" once was. There was a big crowd to see the fight, and the weather was perfect.

Professor C. E. Norton is editing a collection of Mr. Lowell's letters, which will be published early in the autumn both in the United States and in London.

The early death of Professor Nettleship is a really serious loss to English scholarship, and at Oxford he will be very much missed for a long time to come. He was considerably influenced in the course of his studies by Conington (whom Nettleship helped to complete his "Virgil") and by Mark Pattison. His appointment as Corpus Professor of Latin met with universal approval, as it was a post for which he was most thoroughly suited, and he filled it with distinguished success. A few years ago he published an admirable volume of "Lectures and Essays," which will well repay the reader.

Professor Lushington, who died on Thursday, filled with eminent distinction the Greek Chair at Glasgow for thirty-seven years. He succeeded Sir Daniel Sandford in 1838, when he was elected in preference to Tait (afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury), and to Lowe (afterwards Lord Sherbrooke). Professor Lushington's long tenure of office was remarkable for "an intellectual ability, a refined taste, a rare and comprehensive learning, which gave lustre to the Greek Chair." He was probably the most popular Professor in Great Britain, for he seemed to cast quite a spell over his students, and he did his work most admirably; in fact, his professorial duties so entirely engrossed his attention that he published next to nothing. He was elected to the Chair entirely through his pre-eminent merit, for he had no Glasgow connection, or interest of any kind. Lushington was Tennyson's brother-in-law, and they were most intimate friends.

The vacant stall in Chester Cathedral (worth £500 a year, with house) has been given by Bishop Jayne to Archdeacon Gore, who, resigns his Archdeaconry, but he is to continue to hold the living of Bowden, to which he was presented by Bishop Jacobson in 1873, and which is worth about £700 a year. This is a very objectionable arrangement, as Archdeacon Gore cannot possibly attend to his parochial work while he is in residence at Chester, and it was hoped that this pernicious and unfair system of pluralities was being stamped out. It would have been very much better for him to have kept his Archdeaconry and given up his living. Then the vacant Archdeaconry of Macclesfield is not given by the Bishop to a parish clergyman, as it ought to be, but it goes to an ecclesiastic who has been for some time a Diocesan Inspector of Religious Education, and who, having been previously a tutor of Keble College and Warden of Glenalmond, has enjoyed no parochial experience whatever. These arrangements have caused a great deal of grumbling in Cheshire among both clergy and laity.

Notwithstanding that in 1890 he took what seemed a last farewell of his clergy, the Bishop of Chichester has just been holding another triennial visitation in West Sussex, and at one parish his Lordship intimated that he felt justified in continuing to give the diocese the benefit of his "ripe experience and sagacity." No Bishop was ever more personally respected among his flock than Dr. Durnford, but it is obvious to every competent observer who now sees him in public that the weight of his four score and ten years is such as must prevent his efficiently discharging all the duties of his office. "Ripe experience and sagacity" are worth much, but they lose their value when not backed up by a certain measure of physical activity and vigour.

The Duke of Devonshire has presented the Rev. F. Broadhurst, who has been Vicar of Sutton in Ashfield for eighteen years, to the important living of Ault Hucknall-with-Heath, Derbyshire, which has become vacant by the death of Canon Cottingham, who had held it since 1859. Ault Hucknall is the parish in which Hardwicke Hall is situated.

It is high time that clerical domination in so-called National Schools received a check. On all sides it seems still to flourish, and it certainly looks as if the parsons had some good friends at Whitehall. A Wesleyan parent at Thrapston complained recently to the Education Department that the children at Thrapston National School were "marched to service at Church." He had called his son out of the ranks, and for so doing was denounced in public as a —— humbug. In reply to a communication from the Department, the aggrieved father added that the children were taken to Church in the ordinary school hours, that no notice had been given, although 50 per cent. of the children were Nonconformists, and that his boy had been put into a lower standard after his intervention. So far as can discover, the last communication sent from Whitehall to this correspondent merely stated that "the matter was receiving attention." The public, I think, would like to hear a little more of the sequel—if there has been any.

One of those disgraceful grave-side scenes in which the Anglican cleric appears at his worst occurred at Whitchurch, near Bristol, on Sunday week. The Vicar of the parish, the Rev. E. J. Franklin, first of all insisted that the bodies of two children should be interred in what is described as a roughly-excavated hole. One of the mothers objected, and, owing to the treatment she received at the hands of Mr. Franklin, decided to have the service conducted by a Nonconformist minister. The notice prescribed by law was given, but the Vicar curtly replied that he would bury the child, and that he would not permit any other service.

When the funeral procession reached the churchyard gate the Vicar temporarily barred its entrance, but he then gave way and hastened to the grave, at the same time reciting the opening sentences of the Burial Service. According to one report of the incident, this ornament of the Established Church continued his performance after the mourners arrived at the grave, and for about two sentences he and the Baptist Minister, who officiated, "were reading against one another." From the statement made by Mr. Asquith on Monday night, I see, however, that Mr. Franklin declares that he had "no intention to compete with the Minister at the grave-side." Whatever his intention was, I think it will be agreed with the Home Secretary that the whole affair was "a very regrettable occurrence." Very regrettable, also, it seems to me, is the fact that Mr. Asquith has no further authority in the matter. If a Dissenter behaved in the same scandalous manner at a Church funeral, it is pretty certain that he would be prosecuted.

Much indignation was also created at the funeral of a Forester at Buckhurst Hill on Sunday by the officiating curate, the Rev. H. D. Bridge, declining to allow the coffin to enter the church, on the ground that the corpse had been kept too long, and that its admission to the church would annoy the ordinary Sunday congregation. This would be good reasoning, if the fact was as stated. As, however, I have the evidence of the undertaker—presumably an expert—that the curate's allegation was unfounded, and the mourners were of the same opinion, it would be interesting to know on what evidence the reverend gentleman acted.

Acoustic excellence is, I should say, about the last thing at which the church architect aims, or any rate he rarely manages to achieve it. The Rev. Compton Reade, who has an article on the subject in the Religious Review of Reviews, asserts, indeed, that whilst the vast majority of London churches present to the eye "a congeries of confectioner's Gothic," the same buildings present to the ear "a really splendid dysacousticism." Mr. Reade urges that more attention should be paid to acoustics, and puts forward a plan of his own for the erection of a church on acoustic lines. Judging, however, from the queer pulpit utterances which occasionally reach me, I am almost inclined to think that "the really splendid dysacousticism" is often a distinct advantage.

There is a curious statement, by the way, in another article in the same review. Referring to the death of the Rev. C. Pritchard, Savilean Astronomer at Oxford, "on Trinity Sunday this year at noon," the Rev. E. S. Ffoulkes writes:—"A more appropriate day and hour for his passing away could not have been conceived; it looks like a special providence, for he was a devoted Trinitarian all his days"!

The Board of Management of the public hospital of St. Cross, at Rugby, recently passed a resolution that, "in future no Roman Catholic nurse or servant should be engaged, and that any nurse or servant becoming a Roman Catholic be requested to send in their (sic) resignation." It is really a monstrous thing that at this time of day the management of a public institution should be disgraced by sectarian bigotry of this kind, and I wish every success to the movement which is, I understand, on foot to repeal this obnoxious regulation. On behalf of the Board of Management, it seems to be contended that the object of the resolution was to stop the interference of Roman Catholic clerics with the officials; but on behalf of the clerics in question, it is denied that such interference ever took place, and, even if it did, it might be checked without proceeding to this odious extremity.

I have received the following amounts towards Lady Jeune's fund for sending poor and sickly London children into the country for a holiday:—An Irish Girl, £1; L. K. B., £1.

BRUSSELS.—The GRAND HOTEL. Magnificent establishment. Central position. Latest English hygienic improvements. Post, telegraph, and ticket offices. Unrivalled cave and cuisine.—DUBONNET, Propr.

C.O.M. WHISKY.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—ANDREWS & Co., C.O.M. WHISKY. Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand.

The dread and dislike of Lord Roberts which prevail at the War Office are finding vent in all sorts of intrigues to keep him out of a home appointment. I hear that before he left India Lord Roberts was sounded as to whether he would take the Malta command, and he expressed himself averse to the proposal. Efforts have now been made to get him to Gibraltar, but the reasons which influenced his Lordship in one case apply equally to the other. If he cares to take the post, Lord Roberts ought to have the reversion of Sir Evelyn Wood's berth at Aldershot, and there is no position in which he could do more valuable work. Probably for that reason no chance will be given him of going there. Lord Roberts is the most modest of men, and the very last who would prefer a request on his own account. It is therefore the more necessary for the country to see that its only other general is not permanently shunted.

I reproduced last week some very serious allegations made by Sergeant-Master-Tailor Henry on his defence before a Court-martial at the Verne Barracks. Reference was made in the prisoner's statement to the persecution which he had had to endure in consequence of his having made a complaint in regard to the amount owing to him by officers. I am indebted to the counsel who defended him for some particulars of this persecution. Among other things, Henry complained that, in the face of a Battalion order excusing Roman Catholics from church parade, he, being a Roman Catholic, had been ordered to attend such parade. Another complaint was that he had been subjected to "minor punishments," which, as a Non-Commissioned Officer, he was not liable to.

Whatever foundation there may be for these complaints, it is beyond all question that such allegations being made, and the prisoner's defence depending on them, his trial by the Court which condemned him was a farce. There actually sat upon this Court two officers of the prisoner's own Battalion, the very parties, or their intimate comrades, who would be incriminated if the prisoner's defence were accepted. I trust that Mr. Campbell-Bannerman will give his personal attention to this case, but still more do I wish that he would distinguish his régime in Pall Mall by reforming the whole constitution and procedure of Courts-martial. What can be more iniquitous than the practice of requiring all questions to be put through the prisoner himself? In a criminal court such a rule would not be tolerated for a moment, for it could obviously conduce to nothing but injustice. The objections to it are infinitely stronger in a military court, where the accused is in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the inferior in rank of his judges, and stands in corresponding awe of them. A lawyer with a very large experience as "prisoner's friend" once told me that he would undertake to win half the Court-martial cases he had ever lost, if he had a Civil Judge and the right of examining and cross-examining witnesses.

The Russian China Tea Company, who are under the patronage of Royalty and a very large number of the nobility and medical authorities, supply their Choice Teas as imported into Russia direct from their Head London Offices, 21, Mincing-lane. Carriage paid to any address. Write for price lists and leading medical and press opinions.

I trust that I may never number the Editor of the Broad Arrow among my friends; for should he ever take up his pen on my behalf I should know that it was time to prepare for the worst. He gives away all his friends with the same unfailing certainty. This week the turn of the Chaplain-General has again come. In the last issue of Truth I published a letter from a Chaplain who complained that he was formerly induced to support Dr. Edghill against Truth by the circulation of a draft Warrant promising the Chaplains at large certain advantages, whereas all that has at present come off is a Royal Warrant giving the Chaplain-General an extra £200 a year. Says the Broad Arrow:—

> The suggestion is not only malicious, but absurd, as it stands to reason that Dr. Edghill would be very glad if the authorities could see their way to appointing three Deputy Chaplains-General, with increased pay, to relieve him of some portion of his heavy duties.

No doubt, Dr. Edghill would have been pleased if he could have got further advantages besides his £200 a year. I quite agree, unkind though the remark may be to the Chaplain-General. But what bearing has this upon the other advantages promised for the benefit of Chaplains at large? The point against Dr. Edghill is that he appealed to his juniors for support on the ground that he was going to do great things for them, and that he has only done great things for himself. The Broad Arrow insinuates, rather than says, that "the authorities" did not see their way to do anything for the juniors. What is this but to say that the Chaplain-General held out inducements which he had not the power to procure? It is said that "the attack is one that can very well be ignored by Dr. Edghill." Then I would suggest to him that the best thing he can do is to ignore it, not to put forward answers which are no answers.

The members of the Dublin Corporation have been much exercised over the alleged desecration of Sackville-street, by its being used on Sunday evenings as a "promenade and rendezvous" by the soldiers quartered in and around the city. So concerned was the gentleman who brought this matter forward, that he proposed that a resolution on the subject should be forwarded to the Prime Minister, the Chief Secretary, the Secretary for War, the Commander-in-Chief, and the Commander of the Forces in Ireland. I am glad to say, however, that the majority of the Council took a Home Rule view of the question, and relegated it to the consideration of the police. So far as I can see, the cause of complaint does not lie so much in the conduct of our friend Atkins himself as in the unfortunate fact that wheresoever his carcass is, there eagles of an undesirable breed are gathered together. This same difficulty besets all garrison towns, but the police are clearly the proper authority to deal with it.

An ex-Sergeant of the Army Service Corps gives a curious account of the circumstances under which he was struck off the married establishment. He married without leave at Enniskillen in 1884. Six years later, at Chester, he obtained official permission to marry. The nuptial knot was then re-tied by a Registrar (the husband and wife describing themselves as "bachelor" and "spinster" respectively), and the certificate having been forwarded to headquarters, the Sergeant was duly enrolled on the married establishment. In August, 1892, the Adjutant-General became aware of the earlier ceremony, and the twice wedded Sergeant was at once removed from the list, on the ground that he had been guilty of "a gross attempt to hoodwink his superiors."

Primâ facie, the charge made in the War Office letter seems to be justified. But my correspondent denies that there was any deception whatever. On the contrary, his marriage in 1884 was known to every Officer under whom he subsequently served. In fact, the very Officer who recommended him for permission to marry was fully aware that he was already married and had two children. In spite, however, of representations from the superiors who were said to have been "hoodwinked," the War Office refused to reconsider its decision, and, as the man found, moreover, that his further promotion was checked, he has now quitted the service instead of re-engaging for another term. He asserts that the trick to which he resorted in going through the second marriage is "very common in the service." Is this so? And is it usual for Officers to connive in the pious fraud, as in the ex-Sergeant's case?

The following incident is narrated by a correspondent at Caterham, who vouches for its accuracy. Three Sergeants of the Guards Depot went to their mess, and called for some four ale, remarking at the same time that they could not afford anything better, as times were bad. "Four ale," it should be explained, is not served in the Sergeants' Mess, and the men were apparently joking. The joke, however, seems to have been taken amiss by two Colour-Sergeants present; and on the following day the Sergeants were brought before the C.O. and reprimanded in strong terms, for "highly improper conduct in the Sergeants' Mess." Relations are apparently somewhat strained among the N.C.O.'s at Caterham; and the course taken by the C.O. in this instance is hardly likely to reduce the friction.

Much has been said, but I fear much more has yet to be said, respecting the titles of Medical Officers. I give below an example of how the matter is ordered in America. Were I an Army doctor, I think that I should be content to be called an Army doctor. Army doctors, however, think otherwise, and as substantive rank has been granted to them, I do not see why we should make any bones about giving them whatever ornamental designations will please them best. It must be admitted that the present titles are highly inconvenient and cumbrous. The other day I had the pleasure of an interview with a Brigade-Surgeon Lieutenant-Colonel, and I had to begin by asking by which out of this queer farrago of titles he preferred to be addressed. Which it should be, was a matter of indifference to me, but I could not stand the whole collection. This is how the titles are officially given in the United States Army and Navy Journal:—

Colonel Joseph R. Smith, Assistant Surgeon General, will make an inspection, &c.

Major John R. Van Holf, Surgeon, is detailed as a member, &c.

Captain John M. Bennister, Assistant Surgeon, is detailed as a member, &c.

Lieut.-Colonel J. V. D. Middleton, Deputy Surgeon-General, &c.

I have it from an Army doctor that one of the weakest points in the Medical Administration is the neglect of practice in field hospital and bearer company work. Such practice as is at present undertaken seems to be of a very illusory character. For instance, at Aldershot, where there is a Depot and Training School of the Medical Staff Corps, a field hospital was ordered out during manœuvres last year. It was, however, sent to a prescribed spot the day before the Army moved; the transport employed returned to Aldershot to be used for other purposes; and the hospital remained where it had been planted until the end of the campaign. It is, of course, essential to the efficiency of a field hospital that it should be able to move with the Army: and as long as, for want of transport or want of money, such a state of things as the above prevails during peace manœuvres, so long will the breakdown of the hospital arrangements be a certainty in time of war.

For two or three months past the friends of a Non-commissioned Officer at Bodmin Depot have been sending me particulars of the extraordinary treatment to which he has been subjected, in consequence of the attitude which he has taken up towards certain Depot abuses of the kind to which I have so frequently referred of late. For various reasons I have thought it best to watch the development of this case without making any direct allusion to it. The matter has now developed to the point of the man being tried by Court-martial. It may be as well, therefore, that I should advise all parties concerned that a very serious responsibility will rest on this Court, and, as Bodmin is a long way off, I shall be obliged to any one on the spot who will furnish me with particulars of the proceedings.

As Lieutenant-Colonel Bally has not thought fit to contradict the statement that he had forbidden TRUTH to be taken by the Sergeants of the Royal Artillery at Gibraltar, I must reluctantly conclude that the allegation is correct, and this conclusion is supported by further information received since my last remarks on the subject. The Service journal which makes it its business to defend official idiotcy and tyranny in all shapes, pretended the other day that the Colonel must be actuated by regard for the finances of the Sergeants' Mess. We have heard this story before. This alleged anxiety of the C.O. lest his Sergeants should collectively spend 6d. a week more than they can afford, may be very touching to some beholders, though to me (as probably to the N.C.O.'s concerned) it merely wears the aspect of a piece of grandmotherly impertinence. But, unfortunately, the whole suggestion is a beautiful myth. The funds of the Mess in question at present show a credit balance of over £20—which is more than enough to provide TRUTH for the next fifteen years. The only explanation available, therefore, is that the C.O. does not approve of TRUTH himself, and consequently uses his authority to prevent his men reading the paper. Of the propriety of such a proceeding there can only be one opinion.

Midland Third-class Luncheon and Dining Carriages Glasgow (St. Enoch) and London (St. Pancras). 1.30 p.m. in each direction. Table d'Hôte Lunch, 2s.; Dinner, 2s. 6d. Service à la carte. Excellent cuisine. Popular prices. "A Model Restaurant on Wheels."—NOTE:—Midland Railway Company's Hotels at London (St. Pancras), Liverpool, Leeds, Derby, and Bradford. Excellent cooking. Choice wines.

"HEALTH AND STRENGTH."—If you value health and strength call and inspect the Combined Electropathic Belt invented by the MEDICAL BATTERY COMPANY, LTD., 52, Oxford-st., London, W.

Whoever the next Governor of Gibraltar may be, he will do well to look into the management of the Military Hospital at that station. He will find, I believe, that it is no uncommon thing for the doctors doing duty there to have their prescriptions returned because the necessary ingredients are not in the dispensary, and that, owing to this dearth of drugs, patients have occasionally been treated for a week or ten days at a time with drugs which bear no known relation to their complaints.

The most practical criticism which I have heard upon the Victoria disaster was made to me by a yachtsman. This accident, he said, occurred in the course of fleet manœuvres, and our fleets are incessantly engaged in such manœuvres, all of them being designed with an eye to a ever contest between fleets on the open seas. Now, it is extremely doubtful whether, in the event of war, fleet will meet fleet in the open sea. On the other hand, it is morally certain that the first and supreme duty of our fleet in war will be the protection of our long lines of commerce, and that under conditions which will be absolutely new since the last naval war. No manœuvres with this end in view have ever been undertaken; the question has hardly been discussed, although the greatest difference of opinion exists among naval officers as to how the duty should be carried out. Lord Charles Beresford seems to have taken up his parable in very much the same tune to the London Chamber of Commerce last week.

In view of the loss of the Victoria and the marriage of our "Sailor Prince," a Naval Lieutenant writes to me to suggest that at this juncture something ought to be done for the Navy. He further expresses the belief that Naval Lieutenants have as good a claim to have something done for them as any other branch of the Service. In both these views I entirely concur. From all that I have ever heard, I should say that no man holding a commission, and not having influence, has a harder time of it for the present, and a more unpromising outlook for the future, than a Lieutenant in the Navy.

There is, however, one class of Naval Officers, who, so far as the loss of the Victoria is concerned, seem to me to have even a stronger claim to sympathy at this particular moment than the Lieutenants. I refer to the Engineers. In continuation of what has been previously said in TRUTH respecting the block of promotion in this branch, I find that last month's Navy List shows in all thirty-four Engineers employed "in lieu of Chief Engineers." Everybody knows that for ordinary everyday work, the Engineer is now as important as any executive officer on board a ship. The Victoria disaster brings home to the public the further fact that in a moment of peril, the position of the occupants of the engine-room is the most hopeless and terrible of any on board. Escape for them is impossible, and death comes to them in a form almost too horrible to be thought of. The career of a Naval Engineer ought to be the most lucrative and attractive in the Service; and if, as seems to be generally understood in the Navy, one of the present Sea Lords is the most stubborn obstacle to any improvement in the Engineers' lot, it is the imperative duty of the rest of "my Lords" to sit on this obstructionist's head, and put matters right while he remains in that position.

On behalf of Mr. C. A. Swift, of the British and Foreign Sailors' Society, I have received a letter absolutely denying that he used at Launceston the words in reference to the loss of H.M.S. Victoria, quoted in last week's TRUTH. Mr. Swift was never on board the Victoria, and denies that he ever said he was. The quotation which I published was taken from a report of the proceedings in the Cornish and Devon Post and East Cornwall Times, and Mr. Swift will do well to obtain from the editor of that paper an explanation as to how the words in question came to be put into his mouth.

In reference to the case of Mr. Hogan, of Auckland, a medical gentleman, formerly a Surgeon Superintendent in the Emigration Service, sends me a voluntary testimonial in support of what was said in TRUTH of July 6. Without any support of this character, however, the facts of Mr. Hogan's case ought to ensure him some consideration. It will be remembered that Mr. Hogan, after having gained a commission by his distinguished services in the Crimea and the Indian Mutiny, and being now in straitened circumstances, is pronounced ineligible for a special pension because he held this same commission when he retired. Rarely has red tape involved itself in a more grotesquely unjust argument.

I have received from Roumania a curious narrative illustrating the efficiency of the British Consular and Diplomatic service, and its value to British traders in that country. The writer represented under power of attorney a firm with headquarters in London, and for the purpose of certain legal proceedings it was necessary that he should have the attestation of the signatures to the power of attorney officially translated into Roumanian and certified by the British Consul at Bucharest. On application at the Consulate, an old man, about eighty years of age, was found in charge, who could understand nothing; and on renewed application the next day, the whole establishment was found to have disappeared, and no one in Bucharest knew where the Minister or the Consul was to be found. The story of how the merchant hunted up the British Minister, how he further went in pursuit of the Consul, the difficulties and delays which ensued, and the outrageous fees charged him, occupy eight MS. folios. I am sincerely sorry that I cannot find room to publish them, for the British taxpayer ought to know what sort of results there are to show for his extravagant expenditure on these establishments.

The other day I had a conversation with a chemist who had just previously been detected by an emissary of Somerset House in selling a taxable medicine without a stamp. His detection was in this wise.—Just before closing time a working-man entered the shop and asked for something for his "missus," who was "terrible bad" with rheumatism. "I can't afford more than a shilling," said the proletarian; "have you got anything made up?" An assistant was behind the counter. He did not know that he had anything made up. "What's this?" asked the customer, pointing to a bottle which he had discovered in a glass-case, "won't that do?" The assistant did not know much about it, but thought the mixture might do, and it was bought and sold accordingly. The "working-man" was an emissary of Somerset House, and the next day the assistant's master learned that he had incurred penalties to the amount of about £50 for omitting the three-halfpenny stamp.

Not long since I published a chemist's complaint on this same subject. As the chemist charges the customer with the stamp, he has no reason for not stamping his wares, beyond the desire not to put the price up unnecessarily. But for his own sake he does not want to put stamps on bottles which he is not likely to sell. Now, in this particular case, and I can understand that it is a common one, the chemist happened to have one or two bottles of the particular specific made up, but had no demand for it, and, consequently, had not put stamps on them. Had he sold the stuff himself he would in all probability have remembered the necessity of putting on the stamp. The assistant never gave the matter a thought. The ground for complaint is that the Inland Revenue authorities should lay themselves out to catch tradesmen off their guard. The whole circumstances of the above case point to the laying of a trap; in fact, it is no better than a case of agent provocateur. And this system appears to be habitually employed. A spy makes it his business to look out in chemists' windows or in show cases for some dutiable article without a stamp. He then enters the shop under a disguise and endeavours to purchase the article, selecting a time when the master is out of the way, and when the shopman is not likely to be on the alert. Having secured his prey, he is rewarded by a percentage of the penalty exacted. This is a most detestable system of harrying tradesmen, and ought to be stopped.

I would go further, and abolish the tax on proprietary medicines altogether. It is not worth much from a financial point of view, and there are objections to it both in principle and practice. Apart from the economic objections, it conveys to the ignorant an idea that the articles bearing a stamp are in some way guaranteed or approved by Government, than which nothing can be more mischievous; for many of the compounds thus protected are of a baneful nature, while some are little better than deadly poison. I recommend the tax for repeal in the democratic Budget which we are promised for next year; but, if it cannot be repealed, at least let it be levied with some regard for justice and fairplay. It is not a tax on the vendor, but a tax on the consumer, and the vendor ought not to be punished unless he is guilty of deliberately and systematically assisting the consumer to cheat the revenue.

Some time ago I mentioned that there have been disturbances at Sunningdale in consequence of the Countess de Morella having closed a footpath which has always been open to the public and which gives a valuable right of way, for it affords access to several other important paths, and was described the other day as "the key to the beauties of the neighbourhood." The Countess de Morella is taking proceedings in the Court of Chancery in order to close the path, so a largely-attended public meeting has been held at Sunningdale, which was attended by Sir Joseph Savory, M.P., and Sir William Farmer, at which it was resolved to raise funds for the purpose of properly defending the rights of the public. These attempts to close pathways are decidedly unseasonable at the present time, when the public are resolved not to submit to such unwarrantable interferences with their rights.

The allusion in last week's TRUTH to the attempted enclosure of the summit of the Wyndcliff at Chepstow was followed within a couple of days by an announcement, in two of the local papers, that the palisade had been put up under a misapprehension, the intention having been to place an iron railing for safety on the low wall at the edge of the cliff. This explanation is one of those stories which are supposed to be specially adapted to the intelligence of the Marines. I take it that the "misapprehension," which caused a tall wooden palisade to be erected at one part of the summit, instead of an iron railing at another, was a misapprehension as to the extent to which the public would submit to have their rights filched without making an outcry.

An American reader sends me the New York World with a view of letting me know that Mr. Harry Furniss has been airing a personal grievance against TRUTH in a letter which he contributes to my American contemporary. It seems that Mr. Furniss charges me first with publishing a statement "utterly without foundation," and, secondly, with "not having the pluck or fairness" to publish the letter of correction which Mr. Furniss himself wrote. If a charge of this sort had to be made it should have been published, as I think everybody will agree, where I and others concerned would have been likely to see it. As it is, there is no obligation on me or any one else concerned to notice it. But, for the information of my American readers, I prefer to give my view of the case. The matter concerned a golf club at Hastings. A tradesman complained that tradesmen, after having been invited to subscribe to the club, were given to understand that they would not be eligible for membership. Mr. Furniss denied that this was the case in a long and rambling document, mainly composed of facetious, but irrelevant, personalities at the expense of this paper and its Editor and correspondents. No Editor in London would have published such a letter addressed to himself. I stated all I was under any duty to state—namely, that Mr. Harry Furniss contradicted my original statement. I added what I had a perfect right to add, that I had no means of judging what Mr. Harry Furniss knew about the matter, and that I preferred the authority of my original informant. On the strength of this, Mr. Harry Furniss is now good enough to inform the American public that he has "tested the proprietor of Truth, and found him wanting." So be it.

THE IMPERIAL, EAST CLIFF, BOURNEMOUTH.—Position, appointments, and cuisine unsurpassed. 100 rooms. Luxuriously furnished. Electric light. Private omnibuses meet trains. Telegraphic address, Imperial, Bournemouth.—CHAS. A. REINGPACH, Manager.

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one-half West-end price.—PHILLIPS & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate-street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to latest fashion.

A Word or Two in Season.

By an Old (Financial) Hand.

What! frightened again into purposeless panic?
Alarmed at a shadow that falls from afar?
Mere molehills enlarging to mountains Titanic—
O jobbers! O brokers! how silly you are!
Were the danger as great as you seem to be thinking,
Why, that were a reason for courage and nous,
And not for this cowardly shirking and shrinking,
This abject misgiving that's filling the House.
Do try to be men, and not nervous old fogeys,
By rumours dismayed and affrighted at bogeys.

You pose as the props of our system financial,
But rarely indeed do you show yourselves such;
For pillars, of course, should be stout and substantial,
Whilst, time after time, you collapse at a touch.
And just when your ranks should be closed up in battle,
To fight 'gainst ill-fortune, its jar and its jolt,
You wildly stampede, like much-terrified cattle,
You cry "Sauve qui peut!" and insensately bolt—
Increasing the ills you should try to alleviate,
And prolonging the panic you ought to abbreviate.

For, sad to relate, spite the many occasions
On which you have failed when a crisis has come;
The public, misled by your tricks and evasions,
Still follow your lead with a confidence dumb;
And deaf to the warnings which point out their error,
The pathway of panic dementedly tread,
Fall victims with you to unreasoning terror,
And help to make greater the ruin they dread;
Like those wise men of Gotham, immortal in fame,
Who to put out the fire took to fanning the flame.

When, when will investors, some prudence displaying,
Refuse to give way to such unfounded fear?
Capel Court, it is true, may with panic be swaying,
It doesn't, though, follow that chaos is near.
And the tidings that A, B, and C are defaulters,
Though affecting, no doubt, certain "corners" and "rings,"
In no way the march of the universe alters,
In no way disturbs the foundation of things;
Drapers' Gardens may shriek in a nightmare of fright,
But affairs, all the same, very soon will come right.

For shame, then, investors! do show some discretion,
Cry "Bo!" to the bogey Throgmorton Street dreads;
This is not a time for delight or depression,
'Tis a time when, 'bove all, you should keep level heads.
Stocks have fallen, I own, markets still may be flagging,
That there has been a slump I by no means contest,
But when, for small reasons, all prices are sagging,
Your course is a clear one—Go in and invest!
Speculators on all sides are desp'rately glum.
Very well, then, the time for investors has come!

Having business last week (as doubtless some of my readers have seen) in the Law Courts, I was privileged to witness the ceremony of calling the new Queen's Counsel within the Bar. After a whisper from the usher to the Judge, a party of middle-aged gentlemen, arrayed in full-bottomed wigs, knee-breeches, and silk hose, suddenly marched into Court. One by one they were invited by the Judge to take their seats within the Bar. One by one, as they did so, they bobbed to the Judge, who bobbed back; bobbed to their brother Q.C.'s, who bobbed back; and bobbed to the Junior Bar, who bobbed back. The Judge then inquired of each whether he "moved," which led to more bobbing. Then the whole party moved literally, marching off in procession to repeat the performance before the rest of the Judges.

My little interview with Mr. and Mrs. Zierenberg before Mr. Justice Hawkins being for the most part a somewhat heavy performance, all parties were, I think, gratified by this interlude. I cannot help admiring the wisdom of our ancestors which devised this humorous mode of enlivening the proceedings of the Courts, but still more do I admire the solemnity of the assembled lawyers, who succeeded in preserving their gravity throughout the whole function. The self-command of a haruspice was nothing to this.

As is usually the case, several of the new Q.C's are gentlemen who apparently hope to win as leaders that fame and fortune which they failed to conquer as juniors. A few of them, however, are really successful lawyers. Conspicuous among these are Mr. Blake Odgers, who has long been regarded as a leading authority on the law of libel and slander; Mr. Swinfen Eady, a very prosperous Chancery man; and Mr. Oswald, who has the reputation of being the "hardest fighter" at the Bar. Various stories illustrative of the persistency of the last-mentioned have recently appeared in the papers, but I have not seen the following, which is, perhaps, the best:—Mr. Oswald was arguing a case in the Court of Appeal at great length. Already the Court had intimated pretty clearly that it had heard enough, but Mr. Oswald had treated these intimations in his usual manner, and went on raising point after point. "Really," at last one of the Lord Justices remonstrated, "really, Mr. Oswald, if you intended to rely on these points you should have raised them in the Court below." "So I did, my lord," replied Mr. Oswald, "but their lordships stopped me." "They stopped you, did they?" inquired Lord Esher, eagerly. "How did they do it?"

It is understood that the Council of Judges are now considering whether it would not be expedient to abolish the Circuit system. If they do not hurry up their decision, it is just possible before their deliberations are over the Circuit system will abolish itself. The fact is, it is dying of inanition. Barristers tell me that the Bar is ceasing to go circuit because it can find nothing to do when it goes. All the old circumlocuting hands emphatically declare that the present Assizes are, from a lawyer's point of view, the very worst on record, and there seems no reason to doubt this opinion.

The Burgundy of the season, Clos de la Grotte, vintage 1889 (Santenay), 21s. per dozen cash delivered. Sample Bottle, 2s. per post. A trial order will convince of its sterling quality and value. Arnold, Perrett, & Co., Ld., 7a, Lower Belgrave-street, S.W.

The scandal of the Noel case at Ramsgate shows one of the disadvantages of muzzling the Press pending legal proceedings. That comment tending to prejudice an issue under trial should be allowed without any restriction in newspapers is probably undesirable; but that the Press should be tied hand and foot at such times by the fear of an ill-defined and antiquated law cannot be to the public interest. The behaviour of the Ramsgate Bench in reference to the Noel case was a monumental exhibition of the incompetence of the Great Unpaid, fully deserving all that Mr. Justice Grantham said about it. Nothing would have given me more pleasure than to have expressed the opinion which I entertained of the whole proceedings. Other Editors probably entertained equally strong opinions, and a few words of criticism in the newspapers would, doubtless, have served to inspire the Ramsgate Solons with some glimmering of the laws of evidence and the requirements of common justice. But who will take the risk of saying a word, when, no matter how true or how necessary that word may be, the utterance may be treated as contempt of court, and visited with penalties which are absolutely at the discretion of the legal luminaries who feel themselves aggrieved?

I have a fellow feeling for a certain Mr. Whitwell, who made an application to Sir Richard Harrington last week in the bankruptcy of a gamekeeper named Crooks. Some time back Whitwell recovered £10 damages from Crooks on behalf of his son, who had been shot and very badly wounded by the keeper. Although the defendant was only ordered to pay by instalments, he has now taken refuge in bankruptcy, and the chance of young Whitwell ever getting anything out of him appears to be remote. Sir Richard Harrington, when the facts were laid before him, sympathetically promised that if an application were made at the right time he would consider the matter on the debtor's application for discharge; but, of course, he could not do anything more. Having had a good deal of experience in the same direction as Mr. Whitwell, I am inclined to think that there are many cases where a man who resorts to bankruptcy in order to escape from the consequences of a judgment against him might be very properly dealt with for contempt of Court.

A Canadian reader wishes me to find a place in the "Pillory" for a Toronto case. The extraordinary levity shown towards a Bank accountant, who had stolen twelve thousand dollars, is cited as proving that in the Dominion, as elsewhere, the law, "while prepared to jump with both feet on any poor beggar of a chicken-thief, is ready to condone the offences of the well-dressed rascal who has friends at Court." This, I have no doubt, is perfectly true. But will my colonial friends please note that the "Pillory" is not open to the whole British Empire? The judicial aberrations of the United Kingdom are more than enough to deal with here.

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. Amongst a number of extraordinary decisions that given by the Leominster Bench in a poaching case is, perhaps, the most indefensible. It appeared that one of the defendants was shot by a watcher, but it was affirmed that this was an accident, the gun having been fired only as an alarm, in accordance with a previous arrangement with the gamekeepers. For this or some other reason the solicitor for the prosecution urged the Bench to let the defendants off with a lenient punishment, and pointed out that under the Summary Jurisdiction Act a fine could be imposed. The defendants all bore good characters, but, in spite of this fact and of the very unusual appeal made by the prosecution, Colonel Prescott Decie and his colleagues insisted upon sending the men to gaol for a month each. "They would not be doing their duty," said the Chairman, "unless they took advantage of the power contained in the statute, and sentenced the defendants to a term of imprisonment without the option of a fine." Rarely have I seen a more shocking example of the relentless severity with which the Game Laws are enforced:—

Liverpool County Sessions. Before Mr. Hugh Perkins and other Magistrates. John Costa, charged with unlawfully wounding Daniel Gilroy. Bound over.

Penarth Police-court. Before Mr. T. R. Thompson and Mr. Llewellin Wood. Charles Preece, convicted of assaulting his wife. Mr. Wood said the Bench were agreed as to the cowardly and brutal conduct of the defendant, who had grossly assaulted his wife. Fined £2, or one month.

Leicester County Public Office. Before Mr. E. R. Norman, Dr. Emms, Mr. W. Kempson, Colonel Bellairs, and Mr. J. T. Pilgrim. Edward Parkinson, charged with cruelty to a horse. The animal, which was attached to a heavy load of timber, was lame, its back was a mass of sores, one foot, from which matter exuded, was covered with a piece of leather, and the crupper was buried nearly half an inch in the tail. Defendant was seen beating the horse. Fined 20s. and costs.

Sheffield Police-court. Herbert Bouldring, charged with assaulting a woman who had given evidence as to his ill-treatment of his children. He struck and kicked the complainant, who was near her confinement; and whose injuries were so serious that her depositions were taken. Fined £5.

Stockton County Police-court. Elizabeth Sheridan, a middle-aged woman, charged with assaulting a boy. She struck him on the forehead with a poker. A doctor said it was a serious case. Fined 5s. and costs.

Barnsley Police-court. Before Messrs. F. H. Taylor and H. Pigott. William Oates, butcher, convicted of a disgraceful assault on a little girl eight years of age. Fined £5 and costs.

Liverpool County Sessions. Before the same Bench. Thomas Richards, charged with stealing ½ lb. of sweets and tenpence. Six months.

Penarth Police-court. Before the same Bench. George Smith and William Barnett, charged with night poaching on land belonging to Lord Bute. Fourteen days each.

Leicester County Public Office. Before the same Bench. John Hulbert and William Wright, charged with damaging a wire fence to the extent of 1s. by climbing over it. Ordered to pay 16s. 6d. each.

Thomas Horman, charged with coming from land and having snares in his possession. Fined 10s. and 12s. 6d. costs.

Salford Borough Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. J. M. Yates, Q.C., Recorder. Adelaide Platt pleaded guilty to stealing a pair of trousers. Three years.

Henry Berry (65) pleaded guilty to having attempted to commit suicide. One month.

Maidenhead Police-court. Before Messrs. C. W. Cox, J. Budgen, H. R. Burrows, and J. Truscott. William Sellers, charged with stealing two pecks of oats. Fined £5 or one month.

Rotherham Police-court. Before Alderman Neill and Mr. G. Eskholme. John Finn, charged with damaging a window at the workhouse. One month.

PFUNGST FRÈRES' EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNES.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. PFUNGST & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

Nelson Police-court. James Burke, charged with committing a breach of the peace by kicking his wife and causing a crowd to assemble. Ordered to pay the costs, and bound over.

Wigan Police-court. Before Messrs. T. Wall and J. M'Clure. Patrick Higgins, charged with assaulting his wife by kicking her. He also threatened her with a knife and poker, assaulted her again when a policeman arrived, and swore he would make a "Greenough-street murder." Fined 20s. and costs.

Middlesbrough Police-court. George Bone, cab driver, charged with furious driving and with being drunk. Four passengers in the cab were injured. One came to Court with his arm in a sling, another was on crutches, and a third was confined to her bed, suffering from the shock. Fined 40s., including costs.

Abingdon Borough Petty Sessions. Before the Mayor and Deputy Mayor. Caleb John Steane and Agnes Steane, charged with assaulting Alfred Steane, aged 11. The evidence showed that the boy was constantly ill-treated, and on one occasion his legs and arms were tied, and his father thrashed him for an hour and a half. The case against the woman was dismissed. The man was fined £1 and costs.

Airdrie J.P. Court. Before Major Neilson and Mr. George Findlay. John Gillon, convicted of assaulting his wife by knocking her down, striking her with his fists, and kicking her repeatedly. Fined 40s., or twenty days.

Chester County Police-court. Before Messrs. H. Trelawny, B. C. Roberts, and J. Grace. A number of cab drivers charged with cruelty by over-working and ill-treating horses during the Royal Show week. A witness said the over-working was shameful, and four or five horses died from it. In each case fines were inflicted.

Widnes Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Birchall and H. Gaskell, jun. Two men, named Hagan and Lea, convicted of sleeping out. Fourteen days each.

Farringdon Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. W. J. Butler and E. Hanbury, and the Hon. D. P. Bouverie. David Whiting and Joseph Price, charged with trespassing in search of game. In default of paying fines, Whiting was committed for fourteen days; Price for seven.

Leominster County Police-court. Before Colonel Prescott Decie, Mr. A. Benn, and Mr. T. B. Stallard. Edward and Richard Brown and William Jackson, charged on the information of Captain Parkinson's gamekeeper with night poaching. The circumstances are stated above. One month each.

Southampton County Police-court. Before Admiral T. H. M. Martin and Mr. H. H. Culme-Seymour. John Goodwin, charged with lodging in the open air and being without visible means of subsistence. Seven days.

Hamilton. Before Sheriff Davidson. Alexander Eadie, Robert Wilson, and John McGuffan, charged with poaching. Thirty days each.

Chester City Police-court. Before Mr. C. Brown and Mr. L. Gilbert. Frank Johnstone pleaded guilty to stealing a coat from a shop-door. Fourteen days.

Stranraer Burgh-court. Before Bailie Logan. John M'Dowall, Whithorn, convicted of having in his possession 147 lb. of pork unfit for human food, which he had consigned to an auction-mart for sale. Fined 30s. and expenses.

Aldershot Petty Sessions. Before Mr. F. H. Fitzroy, Colonel Birch, and other Magistrates. George Hicks, a lad, charged with stealing a pair of trousers. Twenty-one days.

I have always contended that it is a monstrous thing that, while gipsies and other "fortune-tellers" are hunted down and imprisoned for cheating servant-girls of sixpences, the aristocracy of the same trade, who profess the subtle craft of palmistry, should be left undisturbed. I am therefore glad to see that a lady palmist at Darlington has been convicted and fined for endeavouring "to deceive and impose on certain of her Majesty's subjects." Palmistry has, I fear, rather gone out of fashion during the last year or two, but if there are still any prophetesses at the West-end reading palms at their "chambers" for guinea fees, or driving about in broughams to call on their clients, I hope the London police will imitate the vigilance of their Sunderland brethren. The question whether any professors of these black arts—big or small—ought to be treated as criminals, is a different matter. "Caveat emptor" is a common-sense rule. In these days of free education and popular science, if anybody thinks it worth while to pay a shilling or a pound to have the future read from the wrinkles in his hand, or the bumps on his head, I hardly see why anybody else should not be allowed to earn that shilling or pound by gratifying his desire.

And while the Police are looking up fortune-tellers, I recommend the following card that has been sent me to their consideration:—

J. H. Evans,
146, Maygrove-road, N.W.

Teacher of the New Spiritualism, the greatest discovery of modern times, bringing oral messages from a Spirit to suitable persons. Incredible!

It is nevertheless true.

On the "sleeping-out" question, a Lincolnshire farmer writes:—

It is utterly impossible for a farmer to lock up all his out buildings. Half of them are open sheds, and besides, tramps are quite as likely to make a bed in a corner of a straw-stack as in a shed. Our farm is in Lincolnshire, mid-way between two seaports, and we have our fair share of tramps. It is a part of the foreman's business to go round the last thing at night and see all safe. If a tramp is found—well, he has to shift, or stand the chance of being handed over to the police. But, on the other hand, had the same tramp gone openly to the foreman or come to the house to ask for a night's shake-down, he would then have had to give up his pipe, tobacco, and matches, and would then have been allowed to sleep in the chaff-house, and, if the night were cold, would probably get a sack or two, or an old rug to cover him, and, not unlikely, a good drink of milk. There is not a farmer I know that would not give a man shelter, but neither is there one who would allow one to sleep on his premises without leave.

These sentiments are highly creditable to the writer, and to the Northern Farmer (new style) generally. But in the South we are, I fear, less hospitable. For the rest, no one suggests that a farmer or any one else should be expected to let a man sleep on his premises without leave. But a good many people (of whom I am one) protest against the man who so sleeps being treated as a criminal, and punished with several weeks' or months' hard labour. The only valid argument for punishing him at all is the fear of fire. I would not object to a reasonable punishment, when a tramp is proved to have matches in his possession, and to have entered a building of an inflammable character. But in half the sleeping-out cases nothing of the kind is proved. Many a tramp is imprisoned for sleeping under a hedge, and I have pilloried a case where a man was so dealt with for making his bed in a pig-stye.

It is a long time since I read such disgraceful disclosures in connection with a London hospital as those made at an inquest on Thursday. On Monday week a painter named Smith met with a scaffold accident, falling on his head from a height of 15 ft. He was taken to St. Thomas's Hospital, where, after half an hour's waiting, the wounds on his head were stitched up. By direction of Dr. Purvis, senior house surgeon, Smith was removed from the hospital at 11 p.m., being partly dragged and partly carried to a cab—one witness said

Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer. Restores the colour. Renews the growth. Arrests the fall. Cleanses the scalp.

Fire Protection of Mansions.—Water Supply to Mansions and all Buildings. Practical pamphlets and designs, free, of Merryweathers', 63, Long-acre, London.

"frog-marched." Next day the injured man was admitted to Chelsea Infirmary, where he died. It was then discovered that besides the scalp wounds deceased had six ribs fractured, and that his body was covered with bruises.

The St. Thomas's people sought to exonerate themselves by asserting that Smith "smelt of drink," and that he used bad language. The jury, however, estimated this very feeble excuse at its proper value, and found that death was accelerated by Dr. Purvis having ordered Smith to be removed from the hospital in an unconscious state. They further expressed the opinion that greater care should have been taken in the medical examination of the man, and also in his removal. The scandal ought also to receive the serious consideration of the St. Thomas's authorities. If the treatment accorded to Smith is in any way typical of what happens to similar patients, radical reforms are needed in this institution.

A Water Company case which beats anything yet seen, even in London, was heard last week at Camborne. In consequence of the drought, a Mrs. Sims was out of water, and she applied for water to Mrs. Higgins, a customer of the Camborne Water Company. Mrs. Higgins allowed her to draw a pitcherful. For this both Sims and Higgins were prosecuted by the Company, although they were both poor and perfectly respectable women—one with a sick husband and a family of children dependent upon her. Both were fined 2s. 6d., the Bench kindly remarking that they did not think either of them had acted with a bad intention. "Intentions," however, have no place in the law which modern Parliaments have made for the benefit of our Water Companies. The Christian who acts up to the Gospel precept in these days by giving a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple, must first ascertain that he is giving to a customer of the Company, or else, Christian or not, he will find that he is a criminal.

The Lewisham Guardians, whose proceedings have at one time and another monopolised so large a space in these columns, last week committed themselves to a stupid and childish refusal to let the Press reporters see one of the official books, containing a recent report of a Local Government Board Inspector. It need scarcely be said that the report in question contained some damaging criticism of sundry points of workhouse administration, to which criticism, very naturally, the Guardians took exception. As the book containing the report had always up to this point been placed in the reporters' hands, the action of the Board was the more indefensible. There can be no conceivable excuse for the perpetual attempts of Boards of Guardians to shroud their official proceedings from the ratepayers; and it seems high time that the Local Government Board made rules to ensure that proper publicity is given to all matters in relation to the Guardians and their doings which the public has a right to know.

I would again warn the charitably disposed against the appeals of Sir Charles Algernon Coote, Bart., who indites begging letters from 15, Summer Hill parade, Dublin. One of his letters was published in TRUTH a few weeks back, and since then several have reached me, and there can be no doubt that this ornament of the Baronetage—who must not be confounded with Sir Charles Henry Coote, of Ballyfin—has been for a long time past largely driving a busy trade as a professional begging-letter writer. The most extraordinary thing about it is that the mendicant baronet should be able to use the names of the Lord Chief Justice of England, the Earl of Dartrey, and other more or less distinguished persons as having testified their sympathy with him by responding to his appeals.

The wife of a Vicar at Northampton recently advertised for a "lady nurse" in the Daily Telegraph, and the place was almost immediately filled. Since then she has received a number of letters from aspirants, beginning "Madame ——" (naming the head of some Servants' Registration Office) "has given me your address." It would seem, therefore, that these Registration Offices simply look up advertisements, and give the names of advertisers to those who apply to them to procure situations. I presume that a fee is charged for this. If so, it is a swindle, for as in this Northampton case, the situation may have already been filled up. I should, therefore, advise any person wanting a situation to invest in the purchase of some newspaper containing advertisements of "Wanteds." This will cost 1d., whereas the fee to the Servants' Registration Office will be much more.

During the last week I have been inundated with turf touts' circulars, sent on to me by readers in different parts of the country. Anxious as I am to oblige everybody, I have so many more important matters on hand at this moment, that I really cannot find time to attend to these gentry. Besides, they are all of them obviously designed solely to entrap those who are both gamblers and fools; and to warn my readers against them would, therefore, imply that my readers are both gamblers and fools, which is absurd.

As Mr. Edward Shuckburgh, the Bristol money-lender, is still circulating the sheet of testimonials to his virtues from clergymen and doctors which was the subject of recent reference in TRUTH, inquiries have been addressed to me as to how matters stand between Mr. Shuckburgh and myself. They stand thus:—On May 25 I made a comment on Shuckburgh's circular, in which, among other things, the testimonials in question were described as "pretended testimonials." After an interval of eighteen days, a solicitor, named Cumberland, wrote to me on Shuckburgh's behalf that my statement was "absolutely untrue." He also called on me to apologise for it, under threat of very unpleasant consequences. Not being in any way impressed by this threat, I took no notice of the demand for an apology; but on June 15 I referred to the letter, and stated that if Mr. Cumberland would give me his personal assurance, as a professional man, that the testimonials were genuine, I would publish a statement to that effect. From that day to this I have heard nothing more from Mr. Cumberland or Mr. Shuckburgh. And that is how matters stand.

FASHIONABLE STATIONERY.—Invitations for Weddings, Dinners, Dances; Ball Programmes, Menus, Visiting Cards, &c.—PARKINS & GOTTO, Court Stationers, Oxford-street, London. Patterns free.

FIELALBO.—Cleans buff gloves, belts, liveries, girths, shoes, &c. Perfectly white. Guaranteed not to rub off. Supersedes pipeclay. —FIELALBO CO., 31, Francis-street, Woolwich. Sample free.

I may add, however, that if Mr. Shuckburgh, or his solicitor, are prepared to answer my interrogatories—or, still better, favour me with the name of the Northumberland Vicar who is alleged to have written the first testimonial in the batch, and who authorises Shuckburgh to refer any gentlemen to him—now is the time. Mr. Shuckburgh is still sending out his circulars. Those whom he thus addresses evidently feel a little doubtful about the authenticity of the testimonials. They are writing to me for advice. What could be more advantageous for Shuckburgh than that he should at this juncture avail himself of my liberal offer to certify the genuineness of his valuable documents?

Thanks to Governor Wade of Colorado, we have the reductio ad absurdum of bimetallism. His Excellency declared that it is "better that blood should flow bridle-high than that the national liberties as to the free coinage of silver should be destroyed." This, translated into plain English, means that Colorado produces silver, and that the United States Treasury must, therefore, buy it at a fictitious price, in order that a market may be found for it. I have always believed that at the bottom of bimetallism is a ring on the part of those engaged in silver-mining. "Buy my silver or your life" denotes the last despairing struggle of the ring.

Naturally Colorado would like to be able to convert its product into legal-tender money. But that the United States should consent to keep going an industry, limited to a few States, which utterly disorganises the currency of the entire country, is to suppose that the Americans are much greater fools than I take them to be.

The letters of the Times correspondent in Uganda throw an interesting light upon the action of the East Africa Company in that country, and show that I certainly never exaggerated these high-handed doings. The correspondent holds that, in the main, the Catholic Missionaries were in the right in their dispute with the Protestant Missionaries and Captain Lugard, the fact being that the latter Missionaries may be very estimable men, but not necessarily wise ones. The Waganda—the inhabitants of Uganda—are described as men not without intelligence, but proud, and thoroughly averse to a European domination. Altogether we, it would seem from the letters of this apparently impartial gentleman, have got into a hornets' nest, and our contribution to civilisation has as yet been limited to giving Protestants Snider rifles, with which they shot those who are not Protestants; to slaying numbers of the inhabitants with a Maxim gun, because they fled with their King rather than wait to be killed by the Snider-armed Protestants; to having introduced into the country a lot of Soudanese ruffians who are living by pillage; to having divided Uganda into Protestant and Catholic spheres, to the discontent of both Catholics and Protestants; and to having frightened all neighbouring potentates by the threat of laying hold of their dominions. The only excuse for this is, says the correspondent, that the climate has a trying effect on the nerves of Europeans. Mr. Squeers might with equal force have pleaded that keeping a school had a trying effect upon his nerves.

I should be glad were we to withdraw bag and baggage. But, if this is impossible, I do sincerely hope that we shall not make ourselves directly liable for good order in Uganda. The cost will be enormous, the profit nil. At most we ought to bring the country into some sort of relation with Zanzibar, and, so far as we possibly can, to assume no further responsibilities.

A gentleman who lays claim to special knowledge of the manners and customs of the natives of Africa tells me that the recent raid of Matabele warriors upon the Mashonas in the neighbourhood of Fort Victoria may be taken as a sure portent of trouble for the European settlers in that corner of the world. History shows clearly, according to this authority, that every trouble which has arisen between the Zulus and the Europeans has begun in raids by chiefs who have remained independent, for the purpose of recovering cattle or slaves alleged to have been stolen by tribes that have submitted to Europeans. Whether my informant is further right in his view that an understanding may possibly exist between Lobengula and Gungunhana, and that an attack by the Matabeles on the Chartered Company would be furtively supported by the Boers, and be regarded with sympathy by the Africander element in Cape Colony, I cannot say. But I can certainly say that any effort of "Lo Ben" to assert himself would be viewed with sympathy by me personally, and I have always expected that he would some day take steps in that direction.

"Were I to die on the banks of the Ganges," said Voltaire, "it would be with a cow's tail in my mouth;" by which he meant to say that any one is a fool who sets himself against the ordinary conventionalities of the place in which he resides. Some countries have a Republican form of Government, some a Monarchical form. Here we have the latter, but the Monarch reigns and does not govern. The Throne, consequently, is more of an emblem than a political reality. It is like the flag. What will be the form of government in these Isles fifty years hence, I do not know, and, as it does not concern me, I do not particularly care. A Radical whose lot is cast in the present period of our development should take heed that the Monarch does not rule as well as reign, and that the cost of the Monarchy be not excessive.

The main reason why some would prefer a Republic is that Monarchy, with its mediæval tomfooleries and genuflexions, tends to foster that spirit of flunkeyism which unfortunately is very rife amongst us; and to promote the notion that a herd of people with titles are, in some

In preparation for the approaching sporting season, ladies and gentlemen should visit Ulster House, Conduit-street, W., where their orders for every kind of garment will have prompt and careful attention.

SPA, BELGIUM (10 hours from London and Paris.) Racing, tennis, golf, pigeon-shooting, &c. Splendid Casino, with theatre, &c. Waters unrivalled in cases of anæmia and dyspepsia.

mysterious way, superior to those without those appendages to their names. A Baronet is, to my thinking, a greater absurdity than a Sovereign. For the latter, when the office is a non-political one, as with us, there are arguments to be urged; for a Baronet there are none. It is the custom for the House of Commons to offer its congratulations to the Throne when an heir in direct line to it marries. To object to this is silly—as silly as it would be to object to the mace in the House of Commons being moved whenever the House goes into Committee.

Mr. W. Redmond's contention, that the late Royal marriage ought to have been celebrated by granting a pardon for those imprisoned for offences connected with dynamite, hardly holds water. Either these men ought to remain in prison or they ought not, and the fact of a Royal marriage does not affect the issue. Still more illogical was Mr. Keir Hardie's speech. His objection was that the formal motion of congratulation was a waste of time. I hardly, however, see how he thought that a speech against the motion would reduce the time spent on it. The speeches of Mr. Gladstone and of Mr. Balfour were, perhaps, a little florid, but on the occasion of a wedding this was allowable. A bride is always the fairest of her sex, a bridegroom the most chivalrous of his sex, and bridesmaids a galaxy of roses, just as when a Lord Mayor's health is proposed he is described as the man who is the most fitted for the post that he occupies.

Last week it was decided that the Irish should continue to sit in Parliament for all purposes after Home Rule had become law, and Dr. Wallace read out various extracts from TRUTH in order to show that in assenting to this I was inconsistent. Quite the reverse. I have always been for exclusion. But when I found that, if exclusion were carried by the aid of Unionist votes, a considerable number of Liberals were so pledged against it that they would have to vote against the Third Reading of the Bill, I recognised that it was impossible to pass the Bill with exclusion. Moreover, as the Bill only gave the Irish control over police, land, and taxation after a term of years, it was obvious that exclusion could not take place until after that period had elapsed.

The issue that remained was full retention or partial retention. I hoped that a scheme might be elaborated which would render the latter workable. Mr. Gladstone tried his hand, and admitted that the scheme that he submitted was not workable. In this I respectfully agreed, and I certainly could not devise any other scheme that would be workable. The difficulty was this: Partial retention involved two majorities in the House of Commons possibly antagonistic. The Cabinet is now the Executive Committee of the majority. There could not be two majorities unless there were two Ministries, and this was not contemplated. The consequence, therefore, of partial retention would have been, that the Cabinet would have held office by the initiative of the Crown, and the House of Commons would have lost all real control over the Executive. Dr. Wallace admitted this and approved. I did not, and therefore I sacrificed an ideal perfection of detail, because it involved the far more important disadvantage of utterly destroying all control of Parliament over the composition and duration of Ministries, thus increasing the power of the Crown at the cost of the power of the people.

When Dr. Wallace read an extract from TRUTH, in which it was said that, if we allowed the Irish to continue to have a voice in our local affairs, after permitting them to manage their own, we should seriously compromise our success at the next General Election, this was loudly cheered by the Unionists. In this I have nothing to retract. I believe that our success would have been more assured had we agreed to absolute exclusion. But, as I have said, we could not do this, owing to the pledges given by many Liberals to their constituents, and to the Bill only giving for a term of years partial Home Rule.

But does not the accusation of inconsistency come with scant grace from the Unionists? They are counting on the country having a very short memory. In Mr. Gladstone's first Bill he proposed exclusion. This was the main plea of the Unionists, and especially of the Liberal Unionists, for their opposition to the Bill. It meant, we were told, absolute independence of Ireland, and the disintegration of the Empire. But no sooner had Mr. Gladstone proposed retention in his second Bill, than these same Unionists declared that it was a monstrous suggestion, and they all voted for that very exclusion against which, when first proposed, they had fulminated.

Even this, however, does not fill the measure of their inconsistency. Having always complained that Ireland is too fully represented in the Imperial Parliament, they voted against the proposal to reduce the Irish representation to 80 members. It is true that they assert that this was not in their minds. We must, however, judge men by their acts, not by what they say is in their minds. The reduction of numbers was set forth in a sub-section. The question put was whether this sub-section should be left out. "You are," said the Chairman when appealed to, "voting between 103 and 80," on which the Unionists voted for the sub-section being left out, which would have left things as they are—i.e., the Irish representation in the Imperial Parliament at 103. Minds, indeed! A donkey might as well have said that, when trotting along in the shafts with a cart behind him, he had it in his mind that this was the way to carry out the intention of not moving forward.

I never complain of the tactics of my opponents. I rejoice when they are bad. I am, therefore, far from complaining of the Unionists voting black one day and white the next. I cannot help, however, expressing the opinion, that it is the very climax of impudence for these most inconsistent of politicians to accuse the Liberals of inconsistency because, wishing Home Rule to pass, they subordinate all minor questions of detail to the paramount end in view. That the Unionists should be very angry because we decline to aid them in wrecking the Bill is, perhaps, natural; but it is equally natural that we should not lend a helping hand to them in their dirty work.

LAW'S PEACH BITTERS with all wines and spirits. See opinion of Erasmus Wilson, C. Plowman, M.D., Dr. Roberts, Lady Constance Howard, &c.—110, Cheapside.

Without in any way wishing to quarrel with the bread and butter served out, I take the liberty to think that the provender would have been better, had the Home Rule butter been more thickly spread, and had the Irish been left for a few years to the sole task of digesting it. All that is involved in Home Rule I would have given at once. I would have relieved the Irish for a time of the necessity of attending the Imperial Parliament, in order that they might devote themselves to the task of getting their Government into running order, and I would have spent that period in pushing forward British reforms. This, I cannot help thinking, would have secured us a majority in the constituencies, whilst, as it is, the Unionists will make diligent use of the Irish remaining arbiters of our affairs, and of our being still saddled in Parliament with the obligation of looking after many of theirs. This Irish issue has been so long before the country, and it has been such an impediment to British reforms, that even many Unionists would have welcomed a scheme that had the merit of finality.

What is going on in Siam is interesting. There is a huge Peninsula. West is Burmah; east is Tonquin, Annam, and Lower Cochin China, and in the middle is Siam. We annexed Burmah. The French annexed Tonquin, Annam, and Lower Cochin China. The French now, on a question of frontier, have fallen out with the King of Siam, and the entire dominion of that potentate is to them as Naboth's vineyard was to Ahab. This we regard as most criminal, not because we have any particular affection for the Siamese, but because we hold that, having annexed Burmah, Siam becomes so far within our sphere of influence as to render it undesirable that it should fall into French hands.

This is probably true, and it will be well if Siam remains as a buffer State between us and the French in the far East. But I really cannot get up any indignation against the French; for if it is monstrous of them to want to absorb Siam, it was equally monstrous of us to absorb Burmah. As regards the entire Peninsula, we are both Ahabs, and our rival lust of what belongs to neither will possibly keep both of us out of Siam, to the great advantage of the Siamese.

Alike in Siam, in Newfoundland, and in Paris we suffer from the French feeling that we are improperly holding on in Egypt. We went there under the pledge to leave as soon as an Egyptian Administration could be established. We have done nothing to train the Egyptians in self government. We say that we remain there from a philanthropic desire to benefit the natives. But it is obvious that the one aspiration of the natives is that we should withdraw. Anywhere else we should term this patriotism, and a laudable love of independence. In Egypt we call it intrigue.

We remain because we think it to our own interests to do so. This I have always denied. Only bondholders and officials benefit by our remaining there. We sacrifice our good name, we are dragged into European complications, we put ourselves in the wrong with France, we are forced to take sides with the Triple Allies, and all this, far from being to our advantage, is the reverse. Suppose a war. Will any human being explain how we should gain by having a land force in Egypt? Without this land force we can close the Canal to our opponents, for we hold the outlet from the Red Sea. Our military authorities have again and again explained that this land force would be a serious encumbrance to us. If not vastly increased, it could not maintain itself against a hostile landing; if increased, we should denude of men either India, or England, or our garrisons abroad. I am, therefore, no sentimentalist in wishing to bring our occupation of Egypt to an end, and to secure its practical neutrality by a European concert. Admitting that the end justifies the means—that we have a right to violate our pledges, and to lay hands on any country that we desire, the most cynical of Jingoes must admit that it is foolish to do this, when, far from reaping any advantage from it, the course involves us only in risks and danger.

The two grounds on which, I presume, our occupation of Egypt would be justified, were the advocates of that occupation to be candid, are (1) that the southern frontier is exposed to an attack from the Soudanese, and it might be that Egypt, if left to itself, would be conquered by these Soudanese; (2) that we want to be in a position to hold the Canal in case of war—say with France and Russia—and thus to be able to throw into the Mediterranean our ships in the Indian Seas. As regards the first, it really is not our business to defend one portion of Africa against another; as regards the second, it seems to me a somewhat monstrous contention that we have any right to convert the Canal into a door that we can open or shut at our pleasure, considering that we neither made it, nor own the country through which it runs. Eventually I am certain that all the Powers will unite against such a pretension.

But there is another danger ahead. If, holding as we do the western entrance to the Mediterranean, we insist upon holding the eastern entrance in order to destroy the fleets of the Mediterranean Powers by bringing up our fleets from west and east, the French will counter us by making a ship canal connecting their Mediterranean and Atlantic shores. The project has often been suggested, and it is a mere question of expense, for there are no engineering difficulties. Most of the French army is recruited from peasants accustomed to manual labour, and for a few extra sous per diem the soldiers would be delighted to be employed in digging this canal. When made, it would practically more than double the naval force of France for purposes of attack and defence, and consequently be of far greater advantage to that country, than would the possession of the Suez Canal for military purposes be to us.

Carriages Insured against Accidental Damage, whether caused by collision, falling or bolting of the horse, or being run into by other vehicles. Prospectuses post free.—Carriage Insurance Comp'y., Ltd., 17, Pall Mall East, London, S.W.

SCRUTATOR.

PILLORY STOCK TAKING.

WEEK by week for the last sixteen months I have recorded some of the grotesque anomalies and hateful wrongs which disfigure the administration of the law in the criminal courts of the United Kingdom. The Pillory does not profess to be a complete catalogue of these sorry exhibitions. It gives only samples. Having regard to the patience of my readers and the exigencies of space, my chief difficulty as a rule is to keep the list within reasonable limits. That in its present form the Pillory has supplied a necessity I am convinced by the number of correspondents who bring erring functionaries to me with the request that they be forthwith nailed by the ear to the post. Perhaps a still better proof of the value of the work is afforded by the indignant remonstrances which reach me from Shallows who resent the public exposure of their fatuous blunders. It is a satisfaction to me to know that dread of such an exposure now exercises a most wholesome influence upon not a few of the Great Unpaid. I think, too, I may fairly claim that the startling inequalities of the sentences set forth in TRUTH week after week have done something at least to stimulate public feeling in favour of a more rational and uniform system of imposing punishment. In connection with the frequent discussions on this subject, it has been suggested that I should focus into one or two articles the more striking object-lessons in injustice hitherto presented by the Pillory.

With this purpose in view, I have had a careful analysis made of the whole of the cases dealt with in the Pillory since its commencement. The sum total of judicial harshness and stupidity thus brought to light is truly appalling. In the sixty-nine weeks over which the list extends no fewer than 1,985 cases have been reported, arising in upwards of 550 different courts. A vast majority of these cases have come from courts of summary jurisdiction, but a fair number have been furnished from Quarter Sessions and Scotch Sheriff Criminal Courts, and a sprinkling from Assizes. In the 1,985 cases there were 1,078 in which the punishment inflicted was more or less shamefully excessive; the other 907 were instances in which there was either a ridiculously inadequate penalty or no penalty at all. Looking into the details, I find that the relentless severity of the Bench has been mainly displayed in respect of 376 petty larcenies, 189 offences under the Poor Laws and Vagrancy Acts, 133 offences against the Game Laws, and 52 cases of damage to property. On the other hand, Magistrates and Judges have had their compassion excited to a surprising degree in favour of 354 persons convicted for assaults upon women, 131 for assaults upon men, 129 for cruelty to children, 42 for indecent assaults, and 118 for ill-treatment of animals. Many Benches have repeatedly figured in the list, whilst others have only been held up to reprobation for an occasional deviation from the path of justice. To the Magistrates who sit at Barnsley belongs the discredit of being the most constantly pilloried Bench in the whole country. These muddy-minded gentry have stood forth for thirty out of sixty-nine weeks. Close competitors with them for this unenviable distinction are the Wolverhampton J.P.'s, who have made twenty six appearances. Of the other places which have been represented in the "Pillory" the most familiar have been Bristol, Bradford, Birmingham, and Manchester amongst the important centres; Yarmouth, Southampton, Worcester, Stockport, Preston, and Chester; Dudley, Willenhall, Tipton, and other Black Country Courts; and, in Scotland, Kilmarnock, Dundee, Aberdeen, Paisley, and Glasgow.

One of the most sickening features in the whole record is the indirect encouragement which seems to be given to brutal attacks upon women, especially where the parties stand in the relationship of husband and wife. So long as wife-beating is made such a cheap pastime it is bound to be popular with the Yahoos of this Christian land. And what a very inexpensive sport it is may be gathered from a couple of cases, taken at random from hundreds in the "Pillory." A man at Wigan seized his wife by the throat, struck her in the face with such force that he dislocated her jaw, and then proceeded to kick her. For this shocking outrage he was amerced in the modest sum of half-a-sovereign. If he read a case which occurred at Barnsley about the same time, the Wigan gentleman probably thought he had been charged too much. Prices rule lower in the Yorkshire town. There a man was accused of an aggravated assault upon his wife. Her face was "smashed up and both eyes were in a fearful state." But justice, as it is administered at Barnsley, did not demand a fine. Nothing of the kind. The defendant was allowed to go scot free "on promising to behave differently in future!" These must not be looked upon, however, as exceptionally gross examples of Magisterial imbecility. Half-a-dozen equally bad can be seen in the "Pillory" nearly every week. It would really appear, indeed, that, in the opinion of a considerable proportion of the wooden-heads who adorn the Bench, a husband has a moral, if not a legal, right to thrash and kick and ill-use his wife in any way which best pleases his ruffianly fancy. Only on this hypothesis can I account for the fact that these brutes are so persistently let off with a small fine or a mere admonition. As might naturally be expected, although wife-beaters, unfortunately, flourish in all parts of the country, they most abound, and are guilty of the most savage excesses, in those regions where they are surest of the kind consideration of the Courts. The Black Country and the Potteries, and certain mining and manufacturing districts of Lancashire and Yorkshire, are notorious in this respect. Indecent assaults constitute another class of offences which a great number of the magistracy treat with inexplicable tenderness. Apparently very little importance is attached to a child's purity or a woman's honour, and it is a regular practice to reduce the charge to one of common assault, not because there is any doubt as to the more serious offence, but because the Solons on the Bench desire to impose a fine. Other offenders for whom the quality of mercy is strangely strained are those who—often through sheer lust for cruelty—starve, neglect, beat, and torture helpless little children. There are dozens of instances in my record in which perfectly fiendish conduct on the part of parents and guardians has not been thought deserving of more than a nominal pecuniary penalty. And it is the same with wanton cruelty to dumb animals.

CAUTION.—The Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company, 112, Regent-street, W., beg to state that they have purchased the whole of the business of the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Limited, late of Cornhill. The stock being old and unsuitable for the Company's trade was disposed of to the Public by Auction at Christie's, and any statement to the contrary is inaccurate and misleading. The Company, having also bought the dies of the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Limited, is the only firm in a position to supply the Goldsmiths' Alliance patterns.

I come now to the class of cases for which the average J.P. reserves his most drastic treatment. He makes a broad distinction between offences against the person and offences against property. However indulgently he may look upon atrocious crimes of violence and cruelty, he visits with the utmost rigour of the law all culprits whose offences trench upon the sacred rights of property. An admirable illustration of the two scales of punishment is given in the following extract from the Pillory:—

Charles Banks, convicted of assaulting his wife, breaking her leg in two places. Fined 10s. and costs.	George Storer, convicted of killing a duck. Six months' hard labour.

A girl has been sent to prison for six weeks for stealing a handful of flowers from a clergyman's garden, a boy for a month for the theft of a couple of eggs, and three months' hard labour has been awarded to a man who, driven desperate by starvation, took a loaf of bread. As to the monstrous manner in which offences under the Game Laws are punished by game-preserving Justices, I could cite cases without end. This is a not unusual method of disposing of a poacher, convicted possibly on the flimsiest of evidence: "Three months' hard labour and a further six months in default of finding sureties for his good behaviour." Poverty, like poaching, is almost everywhere regarded as a crime of the first magnitude. The fact that a man, being homeless, "sleeps out" for a night, or is "without visible means of subsistence," is sufficient to ensure his incarceration for days, weeks, or months, just as it suits the whim of the J.P.

But who can wonder that these things are done by the untutored Magistrate in the Police-court when quite as scandalous a mockery is made of justice by learned Recorders and Chairmen of Quarter Sessions, and sometimes even by her Majesty's Judges? Here are two Assize cases:—

William Arthur Smalley pleaded guilty to indecent assaults upon a girl of thirteen. Four months.	Patrick Sheridan, convicted of stealing 1s. Seven years.

As to the "collective wisdom" of the Magistracy in Quarter Sessions, quite recently the Pillory contained cases from Essex which, as exemplifications of the relative sanctity of property and person, have never been surpassed. There were two sentences of seven years for thefts of a cake and a handkerchief, and two sentences of one month for indecent assaults!

It would be easy to multiply, ad infinitum, such perversions of justice and abuses of judicial powers as I have outlined above. Enough have been given, however, to more than justify the existence of the Pillory. It is hopeless, I fear, to expect the disappearance of some of the evils disclosed until radical reforms have been introduced into the criminal law and its administration; and upon this aspect of the question I propose to say something in a future article. Meanwhile, an appreciable amount of good is accomplished by giving publicity to the more flagrant cases of uneven-handed justice. However much Dogberry & Co. may dislike it, the Pillory will be continued.

"THE HUNCHBACK" AFTER DATE.

I wonder how many of us, even though for our sins we are the most constant of playgoers, would be prepared to tell off-hand the story of "The Hunchback"? Of course we have seen Sheridan Knowles's once famous play over and over again, now in the shape of a formal revival and now as the subject of an afternoon experiment, undertaken by some elocution-master and his pupil, anxious to show what they can make between them of the scenes between Master Walter and Julia or Modus and Helen. And yet I do not believe that most of us could get even half marks if we had to stand an examination in the plot of the piece, the sequence of its incidents, and the motives of its characters. As for me, I confess that I have never been able to regard Sheridan Knowles's dramatis personæ as human beings at all. Rather do they seem to me to be mechanical figures, with movements more or less ingeniously devised for the illustration of a series of detached moods, selected simply with a view to contrast one with another. Pull one string, and Julia shall display the waywardness of the typical heroine of light comedy; pull another, and she will show the tragic rage of the woman scorned. Now she shall have a scene of melodrama over the signing of a marriage contract, and now an exhibition of tender sentiment as she half-recognises her lover in his lowly disguise. It is much the same with that puzzling old gentleman Master Walter, who never seems content to do in a straightforward fashion anything about which he can possibly get up a mystery. The two rôles, in fact, represent a species of histrionic exercise; and why such an exercise should have been set at Daly's Theatre I am at a loss to understand. It was, of course, performed satisfactorily enough by Miss Ada Rehan and—though this was not equally a matter of course—by Mr. George Clarke, whose dignified and really impressive Hunchback constituted a pleasant surprise after his wooden Petruchio. But when it had all been gone through, little had been accomplished towards the entertainment of a fashionable audience of to-day, which found Julia an exasperating young person, Master Walter a venerable bore, and Sir Thomas Clifford the least interesting lover that ever poured out his passion in blank verse. That blank verse, too, how terribly blank it sounded, and how absurdly forced its inversions of the natural order of the words in its lines! Why in the world should Miss Rehan, whose chief charm lies in her piquant rendering of artless impulse, have chosen to work on a medium so essentially artificial as this? The play did not suit her in the least, and still less, I thought, did the quaintly-arranged yellow coiffure which she self-denyingly adopted in order to mark the period of Julia's fascinations. Thanks to an ability which never deserts her, she did well, but she could not hope to do well enough to justify her manager's mistaken selection of "The Hunchback" after Date. Of Sir Thomas Clifford, Mr. Bourchier made a very earnest but very commonplace young gentleman, whilst the American representatives of Fathom and Thomas clowned their low comedy with a vigour which would have done credit to the Two Macs. If I cannot congratulate Mr. Daly upon the semi-classic revival which has so soon made way for a farcical production of his own, I can, at least, thank him for having at once painted out the vulgar act-drop which so offended me on his opening night. He seems to be open to conviction, and I think he must be convinced by this time that "The Hunchback" was a mistake.

Sanitary Surveys.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

SHYLOCK FOR THE PARALYSED.

We have not so many possible representatives of Shylock on our stage just now that we can afford to ignore the claims of any actor of fair repute who professes himself able to embody for us "the Jew that Shakespeare drew." So although I have not much confidence in scratch Shakespearean performances got up for charities, I determined to look in the other night at the Opera Comique to see what Mr. Herbert Waring and his colleagues would make of "The Merchant of Venice" on behalf of the National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic. I am sorry to say that I found them only too conscientious in their fulfilment of their kindly undertaking. They had evidently thought it necessary to make the performance fit the cause as accurately as Mr. Gilbert's Mikado used to make the punishment fit the crime. A weaker rendering of a strong play I have never heard, save, perhaps, at the schoolboy theatricals which sometimes mark the ceremony of "breaking up" for the holidays. Few of the performers seemed to know how to speak blank verse at all: none, save, perhaps, Mr. Arthur Wood as Launcelot Gobbo, and Mr. Bassett Roe as Antonio, appeared to have had any experience of Shakespearean work to guide them in their efforts. A hobbledehoy Bassanio seeking the hand of a schoolgirlish Portia, was by no means the most incompetent of Mr. Waring's supporters, in his generous and self-denying attempt to make Shylock meet the needs of the paralysed and epileptic. This attempt cannot, in the circumstances, be held to measure the resolute and intelligent young actor's aptitude for his self-imposed task. The Shylock of Mr. Irving himself might well have failed to be impressive in such surroundings.

THE WISDOM OF THE "SERPENTINE."

Skirt-dancing is pretty enough to look at provided that the skirt is a pretty one and is worn by a pretty girl; but I do not regard it as by any means the highest development of what reporters delight to describe as the Terpsichorean Art. The skirt too often serves for its chief purpose the concealment of indifferently-executed steps, and the actual dancing is of a kind which a good many young ladies seem able and willing to acquire in a few lessons for the diversion of their friends at evening parties. I fancied that the rage for it was dying out, at any rate at the theatres, but it seems that I was wrong, for Miss Loie Fuller has managed by its aid to give a distinct fillip during the past week to the burlesques, both at the Shaftesbury and the Gaiety. This is very clever of Miss Fuller, who as I remember her at the Globe a few seasons ago in an American variety play called "Caprice," made very little mark by her dancing and none by the rest of her achievements. Even now I am not sure that any one would think very much of her "serpentine" doings if she did not come to us direct from Paris with paragraphic announcements of an enormous salary, and with the popular prestige implied in the French reporters' allusions to her as "La Loie." She is, however, wise in her gyration. La Loie, or her manager for her, dubs her series of trippings and wavings and posings a "répertoire," and—perhaps less wisely—gives them names to suggest the subjects which they are meant to indicate. Thus, on a darkened stage, and with the ingenious assistance of minions who work coloured lime-lights in the wings, Miss Fuller impersonates successively a serpent, a butterfly, and a violet, and a something which the spectator is left to identify by his own resources of imagination. As I have said, it is all very pretty; and if on the strength of it Miss Fuller is pleased to style herself "créatrice de la danse serpentine," and is able to draw crowds to the theatres, I do not see that any one save her rivals at the music-halls need object. It is only the wisdom of the serpentine after all.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

LA SAINTE BASTILLE.

LA SAINTE BASTILLE takes place at a bad time of the year for festivity. The day is too long on July 14 for the police and every one else not to be tired to death before it is half through. Then the weather is generally as hot as a furnace. Men drink in wineshops and are the worse for it in the evening and next day. The rich people being all in the country, no signs of wealth are shown in the festivity, beyond what the State shows. It is also a pity that the pomps of the Church, which has in its sacristies so many spectacular properties, are not brought in a little more, as in former times. The episcopal blessing of trees of liberty in '48 replaced the blessing of street bonfires, which was a great feature of public rejoicings under the ancient Monarchy. Bells rang out chimes all over the city. Choristers singing psalms walked before and after the Bishop, and the Royal Family in State carriages participated in the ceremonial. One thing which kills public festivity by making it unendurable is the cheap excursion trains. Excursionists pour in from all parts of France and from abroad. Prices go up with a bound, never to come down again, and microbes that breed pestilence are imported. Din, dust, dearness weigh on the spirits and make tempers snappish. How this is to be avoided I know not, unless a ukase be issued to prevent any stranger coming to the scene of the festivities for a week before the date at which they are to come off. Such prevention would leave room to breathe and move in the streets, which are usually blocked up whenever anything spectacular goes on in them. We are tired of inauguration of statues, with the accompaniment of too long speeches and military music. Dancing in the public places under a grilling sun did well enough while the Sainte Bastille was novel. But it is now unsatisfactory. The style of decorating public buildings and houses is played out, and the now all-prevailing scepticism crowds out that enthusiasm which used to blind eyes to whatever was defective. The popular characters being all dead, we have not the prospect of spirit-stirring street opera taking the form of a grand funeral. A more soulless funeral than M. Jules Ferry's could not be imagined, though all the State could do to make it a grand function was done. We have got to that state of ennui which was reached at the close of the Directory, which was always giving fêtes in which there was art of the finest kind, plenty of imagination, but no soul. Bonaparte's conquest of Italy and his bulletins of victory gave a new zest to street festivity, and Paris ceased to s'ennuyer for a while. After the fall of the First Empire it was diverted by the reviews of the allied armies in the Champs Elysées. Highlanders, Cossacks, Pandours, Brunswick Hussars, and Brandenburg Uhlans were to be seen there, and citizens rejoiced to think that in Paris only could one witness such a spectacle. Poor Louis XVIII. afforded the Parisians the first and last King's funeral of the present century. Poor Charles X., who headed a Gouvernement des Curés, thought to edify and amuse by religious street processions into which the Court was brought. Unluckily he was old, the Duc d'Angoulême looked a driveller, the Duchesse a woman of stone through excess of grief, and the Duchesse de Berri a squinting cocotte. The two children, Mademoiselle and her brother, then the Duc de Bordeaux, were alone interested. Louis Philippe had reviews of the National Guard until Fieschi tried to sweep away with his infernal machine that King and all his sons who rode with him. Napoleon III. trotted out a number of Emperors and Kings in 1867, and had two grand street functions. One was the cortège in which he and the Empress went on their wedding-day to and from Notre Dame, and the other the distribution of medals to the Army of Italy in 1859. The Empress was a success as a bride; but the people were out of touch with the military pageant. The grand street shows of this Republic were funerals. Thiers's was the greatest, though the heart of the working classes went out to the coffin of Louis Blanc. Gambetta's popularity was nearly used up when he died; but his death revived it. The most spectacular of all the funerals was Victor Hugo's.

To Overcome Weakness.—Pepper's Quinine and Iron Tonic gives New Life, Appetite, Health, Strength, Energy. Cures Neuralgia, Indigestion, Nerve Debility. Pepper's Tonic. Kept everywhere.

The Duchesse d'Uzès blames herself generously, and I think without just reason, for the evil fate which befell her eldest son. Because she, at the instance of M. Arthur Meyer, of the Gaulois, and the Comte de Paris, flung away money on General Boulanger, the ill-starred young Duc thought himself justified in running through His De Crussol patrimony of 1,500,000 f. Caprice drove him to Mdlle. Emilienne Alençon, of the Cirque d'Hiver. When his mother reproached him with squandering his fortune on a girl whose profession it was to teach rabbits to perform tricks, he asked whether he had been set an example of careful husbandry. He not only showered gold on Mdlle. Alençon, but paraded himself with her and her four-footed pupils, which he fetched and carried to and from the circus, with a following of young noblemen of the oldest brands or brevets The Duchesse very properly caused him to be, though of age, declared by a court of law incompetent to manage his fortune. He took huff, just like the late Prince Imperial, when he found he could not sign away by anticipation his maternal inheritance, and made up his mind to win glory as an African explorer. The poor infatuated young man had the notion strong in his head that this planet is the birthright of his class, and that Ducs, though reared as carefully as asparagus plants, may by some special privilege set the laws of nature at defiance. He was bitten with the desire to shine in the field of geographical exploration by the reception given to Prince Henri de Chartres at a meeting of the Geographical Society, and by reading in the papers of the Duc d'Orleans's intended tour in the Somali country and South-eastern Abyssinia. But the Duc d'Uzès, unlike Prince Henri, had not the shrewdness to get himself personally conducted; or the prudence of the Duc d'Orléans, who after putting his hand to the plough turned back. The Duc d'Uzès was perfectly sincere in setting out on a journey of African exploration, and did not regret the Champs-Elysées Palace, the Château at Bonnelles, with its kennels, huntsmen, well-filled stables, and generous, stirring life. One of the notions that filled his head was this: He was a son of the Crusaders, and the Crusades were the making of Europe as she emerged from the Dark Ages. The humbly-bred Stanley, the factory-boy Livingstone, were the right men to explore Africa. When the Duc first started his notion of winning Africa for his country, he was advised to follow in the tracks of Dupuis, in exploring the old trade routes from Tonquin to Thibet, or to learn how to prospect and then see what could be done to bring Yunan, the richest country on the face of the earth in minerals, within the range of French influence. This, however, did not chime in with his fancy. Follow in the tracks of a bagman of Puy? No! The Dark Continent was the land for him. He hoped there to earn the title of a Great Frenchman, and to be a Providence to other explorers who had neither wealth nor family influence to back them up.

The Duc was an artist if nothing else. He took out photographic apparatus and drawing and water-colour materials enough to supply his needs for years. Distance from home endeared it to him. He must in Africa have longed to come home, but never confessed to the feeling in the letters he wrote to his mother and other members of his family. They have quite a gallery of photos and sketches. He had soon, however, to yield to the African climate in not venturing far inland with his comrades, and finally to try to return to the Coast. Death seized him on the way. The body is to be conveyed to France. Funeral services have been celebrated in parish churches in Paris and at Crussol, Uzès, and Bonnelles. The hatch-ment hung out at each bore the De Crussol motto, "Ferro non auro," which certainly was not one which the late Duc's forbears practised. "The Royalist youth of France" sent a cushion of flowers girdled with a tri coloured ribbon—a sign that the Comte de Chambord is as dead as Queen Anne and apparently for a longer time. All the grand world of Paris attended the corpseless obsequies save the mother, who was too broken-hearted to appear. She was right to stay away. Her bereavement coincided with an artistic triumph—the erection of a statue of Emile Augier by her at Valence. It looks across the Rhine at the ruins of the Castle of Crussol, and is signed Anna Mumsela. Considering what a spoiled child of fortune this accomplished lady is, she is a miracle of kindness. For years she has gone every Friday when in Paris to serve as infirmarian in a cancer hospital.

The resources of Ulster House, Conduit-street, enable Messrs. BENJAMIN, in cases of need, to execute orders in 24 hours.

Max, the only son of the late M. Lebaudy, the sugar refiner, has joined, under a decree of the Civil tribunal, the ranks of perpetual minors. The father left his widow and son a fortune of £6,000,000 with the sugar-refining plant and business. Madame Lebaudy has four-fifths of the whole during her life and Max the rest. She lives in a small house at St. Cloud and spends about £200 per annum! The son is known in le monde où l'on s'amuse as "Le Petit Sucrier." He is small, pale, rather weakly, and has not yet learned to say "No." Two advocates at the Paris Bar were engaged to defend him against his mother's suit for his civil "interdiction." I scarcely see the use of preventing the great fortune of Max from going into a number of other pockets. The women employed in the Lebaudy refinery suffer horribly from breathing air thick with sugar-dust. They struck a few months ago for higher wages; but they had to yield. If "Le Petit Sucrier" were a reformer, he would have a fine field for reforming energy in his factory. He is not a bad sort, though good for little. The counsel against him laid to his charge his being a prey, when a minor, of adventurers, bill-discounters, and sirens. He bought a yacht on credit at a monstrously dear price, and sold it for a few thousand francs. A mine in Norway, purchased at 500,000 francs, was sold for 20,000 francs. He presented jewels to the value of 12,000 francs to a lady, and promised to pay for them, on coming of age, 160,000 francs. In a few days he spent for dinners, ordered for ladies at a restaurant in Nice, 6,000 francs. One of his modes of running through his fortune was to keep a racing stud. But the counsel of "Le Petit Sucrier" contended that his colours triumphed at a race at Autenil. As to the other acts of extravagance they were to his client's honour, and trifles compared to the fortune he actually has, and just nothing compared with the one he must inherit from his mother, who is only forty-seven years old, and leads a miserly life. Why should he not have a yacht to go to Japan or elsewhere? He was taken in when he bought it. But he would not be so foolish another time, and, indeed, it was sharp to have sold it for the sum he obtained, it not being seaworthy. The tribunal, however, sided with Madame Lebaudy mère. "Le Petit Sucrier" will appeal. I hope he will succeed, and stand to other sugar-refiners as an object-lesson to teach them the vanity of heaping up millions upon millions. The same tribunal has refused to allow the claim of Pasquier & Co., dressmakers, for 60,000 francs against Georges Hugo. He was acting under undue influence when he signed the promise to pay that sum.

Wales and its Future Prince and Princess.—The Employés of Pryce Jones, Ltd., the Chairman of which is Sir Pryce Pryce-Jones, M.P., had the honour of making a wedding gift to their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of York. The gift comprised specimens of a new industry recently established at Newtown, the seat of the firm, and in its complete form consisted of:—Real Welsh Flannel, Powysland Tweeds, Ye Olden Time Costume Cloths, Snowdon and Rampoor Shawls, Travelling Wrap, Pyjama Suit, Knitted Riding Pantaloons, Knitted Petticoat, Knitted Gaiters, &c.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

DECIDEDLY, dear Lady Betty, we Englishmen suffer from ball on the brain. It may be taken for granted that whatever an able-bodied Englishman does not do with a ball cannot be worth the doing. The main feature of our race is this irrepressible impulse to do something either with, at, or to a ball. We kick it, we hit it, we thump it, we throw it, we drive it, we bump it, we roll it, slap it, and catch it; we run for it, ride for it, and scramble over it. Upon the earth, in the air above, and in the very waters even, there can be no possible rest for a ball so long as an average Englishman is within measurable distance of it. Give one of our fellow-countrymen a bit of board and a ball, and he will at once possess the essential elements to ensure his happiness.

These reflections were forced upon me as I sat at Lord's last week and observed the earnest interest with which thousands of men, women, and children present watched the progress of the Eton and Harrow match. A wide circle banked by an irregular patchwork of people; the clear ringing cheers of a multitude of impulsive boys; the enlivening jingle of knives, forks, and crockery; the more exhilarating sound of popping corks; some dozen brisk youths absorbed in the methodised pursuit of the all-popular ball. "Well hit!" "Well caught!" "Well bowled!" "Well stopped!" Believe me, our national malady is ball on the brain.

Other races may cultivate the delicacies of the table; they may devote themselves to the refinements of society, art, music, and literature; they may pursue leisure and pleasure—but give an Englishman a bit of board, a ball, and a bath, and he will need little else to secure supreme happiness in life. He will forthwith organise a game, dub it "sport," and despise the rest of the human race for not attaching the same importance to it that he does himself. And yet this physical activity is not a generic quality, but the mere consequence of having to live in a damp climate. The cooking of France is surely better than cricket; the art of Italy is better than football; and European polish preferable to polo. We have the worst food, the worst music, the worst art, and the most work of any living race—and yet we are jubilant because we are able to do a multitude of things to a ball with bits of board!

* * * * *

The primary impulse of a race is due to the climate of the country which it inhabits. The damp of England compels us to take violent exercise in order to live. Hence it is that we sacrifice all considerations of refinement, luxury, and art in favour of this one all-important purpose. Though we admire admirable things, we seldom create them. Our national heroes are not the giants of intelligence, imagination, and wit, but the men who can run the fastest, jump the highest, hit the hardest, and those who own the most successful racehorses. Proficiency in exercise is that which meets with our highest approval. For this reason it is, too, that our cooking is so simple and substantial. The average Englishman comes to table fresh from outdoor exertions, and with a keen appetite for gross food. The Italian, who inhabits warmer climes than ours, is far less active than we are. He loves to surround himself with the luxuries of art and imagination. There the poet, the sculptor, and the painter are the heroes of the people. In the mid-way climate of Germany we find that the national favourites are the professors, the men of science, and the analysts; whilst in the exhilarating atmosphere of France they worship brilliancy and frivolity. Solid foods, too, are out of place in such countries, where what men need are dishes temptingly concocted to stimulate the appetite. It is absolutely pernicious, then, to attempt to Continentalise the English character and to try to make us as a nation artistic, refined, and critical. The best prescription for us is balls, bats, beer, beef, and prejudice. On this we have thriven and prospered for centuries, and if we continue to live up to these so shall we continue to thrive.

All of which considerations were suggested to me by the cricket-match at Lord's on Friday!

* * * * *

For fully eight years Eton has not sent a better eleven into the field than it did last week, and it may be said with equal justice of Harrow that it has seldom sent up to Lord's a worse one. The batting of the Harrow boys was execrable, as also ungainly. The Eton team may have been composed of boys, but they were certainly the biggest boys I ever remember to have seen here. Meeking, the wicket-keeper for Eton, kept wicket brilliantly, never missing a chance of any sort, however difficult it was. He is, moreover, a good all-round cricketer, and scored fifty in the first innings. The attendance was very much smaller than it has been for years — a circumstance which may be partly accounted for by the rival attractions of the race for the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown Park. Added to this, London has emptied rapidly since the Royal Wedding, and, for all practical purposes, the season may be considered to have ended with that function. The members of the Cavalry Club have established a tent at Lord's, and here, both on Friday and on Saturday, they dispensed the most generous hospitality to a large number of friends. The lunch was excellent and the friends were plentiful. The latter came eagerly and they left reluctantly. "Friendship," says the proverb, "multiplies joys and divides griefs." That is the reverse of my experience. It multiplies expense and divides the spoils.

The defeat of La Flèche by Orme on Friday at Sandown Park gave intense satisfaction to the Duke of Westminster, who evidently looked upon it as a vindication of his opinion that the latter would have won the Derby had it not been for his mysterious illness which has now passed into turf history. The victory has, however, cost the London charities ten thousand pounds, for Baron Hirsch would have handed over the stakes, as he usually does, for the benefit of the more important hospitals.

And, by the way, Mr. Charles Duff will sell at Tattersall's all his racehorses, with the exception of the celebrated steeplechaser Cloister, on September 11 next. With this Mr. Duff definitely retires from the turf, after a short but brilliant career. He was a good sportsman, who raced for pleasure, and not for profit.

Lord and Lady Frederick Brudenell-Bruce were "At Home" on Tuesday last at Wolfhall Manor House, Marlborough, when Mr. Arthur Heathcote's Dramatic Troupe performed "Old Cronies" and "Till the Half Hour." Both pieces were capital, though the latter, by Mr. Heathcote, was, perhaps, the better of the two, and both were admirably played. A topical prologue composed by Lord Frederick opened the proceedings. The performance took place in a barn that dates back to the reign of Henry the Eighth, and in which that much married monarch was entertained about the period when he was taking Lady Jane Seymour to wife. Some years ago Lady Frederick Bruce established "St. Michael's Home for Motherless Girls," at Shalbourne, near Hungerford. Here, under careful supervision, a number of unfortunate children have been trained and launched into the world, with a happy youth to look back upon, and a promising future to look forward to. Amongst the patrons and patronesses of the home are the Bishop of Oxford, Lord Selborne, Lady Scarbrough, Lady Wantage, Lady Hillingdon, and other well-known and charitably-inclined people. St. Michael's is a growing institution, and is in need of funds.

The prevalent scarcity of money does not appear to affect the prices paid at art sales. On Thursday afternoon, at Christie & Manson's, two small prints by Rembrandt, neither of which measured more than 6 in. square, fetched between them £4,000! Their chief value was not beauty, but the fact that only a very limited number exist. Forty pounds a square inch seems to be an excessive price to pay for an etching, even had it been the only one in the world. Mr. George Salting, who has spent some £45,000 over the recent Spitzer collection in Paris, was in the room making fresh purchases as if no Spitzer sale had ever occurred. But for Mr. Salting probably not a single valuable specimen from the latter collection would have found its way to England. As it is, the British public has the opportunity now of studying several cases full of priceless gems at the South Kensington Museum, where nearly all of Mr. Salting's latest purchases are already exposed. On Saturday, the 22nd, several of Lord Onslow's pictures are to be sold at Christie & Manson's. The best of these are the Ruysdaels, a "View in the New Forest," by Stark, and an Italian landscape by J. Both. The Cassiobury Park pictures will be sold upon the same day. These are all of them good, and are certain to realise large prices.

Mr. Keir Hardie interrogated Mr. Campbell-Bannerman in the House of Commons on Tuesday with regard to an officer of the Life Guards, who, it is alleged, struck a civilian with his sword on the morning of the Royal Wedding. Mr. Keir Hardie is evidently unaware that stringent orders were issued to the officers to cut down, if necessary, any who might attempt to break through the lines; and that, moreover, ball-cartridges were served out to the men on duty that day to be used in case of emergency. As I said last week, the authorities of Scotland Yard had serious reasons for believing that a dynamite outrage was contemplated.

It is with more than regret that I record the death of Mr. William Hale Willats, of Denton Court, Canterbury, which occurred at Heathfield, Ascot, on Saturday last, after an illness of several months. "Wily" Willats will be missed by an unusually large number of much attached friends. A most accomplished man, shrewd, witty, and wise in the ways of the world, the late "Wily" Willats was one of the most brilliant-minded men of our generation. As a draughtsman he was remarkable, whilst as a writer he possessed a sparkling style which was peculiarly effective. Through his death I have to deplore the loss of one of the wittiest, most shrewd, and most experienced of companions.

Amusement has been caused by invitations recently issued for the French Embassy. "To meet Mr. Gladstone and the Comédie Française" is an association of ideas which is curious and might be—sarcastic.—Believe me to be, very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

A FORTNIGHT ago I expressed an opinion that Phocion and Medicis are the two best outsiders in the Leger, and my favourable view of Baron Rothschild's horse has been justified by his running at Sandown Park, which has brought him up in the betting for the Doncaster event to 9 to 1. Medicis ran extremely well in the Eclipse Stakes, and if he goes on all right he ought to gain a place at Doncaster, for which I would a great deal sooner back him than Ravensbury, about whom ridiculously short odds have been accepted for 1, 2, 3. Medicis is very well in for the Stewards' Cup, but the distance at Goodwood may not be far enough for him.

It is a most lucky thing for the gullish herd of backers that La Flèche was started on Friday, as if she had been withdrawn from the Eclipse Stakes she would certainly have become first favourite for the Cambridgeshire, and would probably have so remained until the flag fell with the result that she would have disappointed her admirers as grievously as did her sister Memoir two years ago. Nearly all the famous fillies have been useless for racing as four-year olds, and I do not wonder that La Flèche has gone off, considering how hard she was worked last season. Months ago I predicted that La Flèche would be found to have lost her form whenever she came to be raced. The confidence about the mare at Newmarket was simply miraculous, for the people who vowed that she would beat Orme easily had nothing whatever to go upon, except that the mare looked well and went well, and on Friday she appeared to be in every bit as good condition as she did last autumn when she was carrying everything before her. I do not for a moment believe that La Flèche will ever recover her form, and she may as well be relegated to the stud. It is all nonsense and rubbish to talk of her retrieving her reputation at Manchester by beating Isinglass. The distance at Sandown is a trifle too far for Orme, and the Sporting Times states, with perfect truth, that "the last ounce" was out of him to win, and that "fifty yards from home Medicis looked like beating him." Orme stopped suddenly, after having appeared as if he would come in alone, and then he came again when called upon, and just won, but if there had been another hundred yards to go, he would assuredly have been beaten. May Duke made running at a fast pace, and Medicis seemed to lack speed during the early part of the race, which does not look well for his Stewards' Cup chance. If anything had kept Orme away, what a crash there would have been, for long odds would have been recklessly betted on La Flèche, and she would have been beaten anyhow by Medicis. Silene ran so prominently that the form of the race does not seem to be so good as could have been wished, and it is exceedingly fortunate for Orme that neither Isinglass nor Marcion was included in the field. One of the sporting papers is so infatuated as to state that Medicis "made the show of a race," but in reality Orme "had won a quarter of a mile from home." These must be the ravings of an escaped Bedlamite, and one can only pity the unfortunate geese who may be misled by such horrid balderdash. It was a most chaotic aberration to make La Flèche favourite, when, as I have all along pointed out, nothing was really known about her racing form. On the other hand, Orme had run in a satisfactory manner at Ascot. There is nothing in the race or in Orme's performance to throw any reasonable being into paroxysms of enthusiasm. The Duke of Westminster ought to think himself vastly fortunate in winning such a stake with a horse that was so ruthlessly and so muddishly knocked about last year, and Orme must be a great horse in himself not to have become an arrant rogue after his exasperating experiences as a three-year-old. Porter deserves enormous credit for his very sagacious management of the horse, and M. Cannon rode a very fine race. The fact that there were only six starters out of forty-five horses which were left in last January shows that most owners must conduct their studs in a very skimble skamble fashion, as an additional £52 had to be paid on every one of these entries. El Diablo was palpably very backward in condition, and he might just as well have remained at home. The holders of place books had a good turn by the collapse of May Duke, who seemed to be the general fancy of 1, 2, 3 backers. It is odd that Meddler was the only prominent three-year-old that was entered for this race, and had he been qualified to start he would certainly have won.

There were forty-five acceptances for the National Breeders' Produce Stakes of £5,000 on Saturday, but only seven starters appeared. Mr. Blake's Delphos, by Necromancer out of Sibyl, had been galloped at Newmarket on Monday, and as Prince Hal was beaten by him a long way in the trial this race looked a good thing for him after that colt had won the Maiden Plate on Thursday, and especially as he had the advantage of a 10 lb. breeding allowance. Delphos won very easily indeed from Glare (who was giving him 16 lb.), and Wedding Bell was among the beaten lot. I only wonder that very much longer odds were not asked for about Delphos, whose merits were known to every one who had been at Newmarket, and all the touts then sent him off as a real certainty. Delphos has so few engagements that it is a wonder that he has not been entered for the Halnaker Stakes at Goodwood, which race he would certainly have spoilt. His next engagement is the £800 stake at Kempton Park on August 8, in which he may meet Chin Chin, the highly-bred winner of the Seaton Delaval Plate at Newcastle.

Jocasta, Mr. Milner's grandly bred filly by St. Simon out of Thebais, about which there has been a deal of talk, was badly beaten in a trial on the Limekiln ground last week, and it is to be feared that she will prove to be very moderate. Thebais was a very good mare on the turf, but she has so far been as abject a failure at the stud as Marie Stuart, or Fraulein, or Jannette.

Except for the two-year-old racing the sport at Newmarket would have been wholly unworthy of notice, for it was of no general interest whatever. Vulpecula won the Soltykoff Stakes cleverly for Prince Soltykoff, as I had anticipated would be the case. This filly ran well at Ascot for the Coventry Stakes, and I then referred to her promising appearance. Stowmarket, who was second to Vulpecula, is a speedy colt, but he cannot get a yard beyond five furlongs, and here he had 7 lb. the worst of the weights with the winner. In the absence of Galloping Dick (who had been greatly fancied at Newmarket for this race), the Chesterfield Stakes looked a really good thing for Speed, none of the others being fancied. The result, however, was a terrific finish, there being only four heads between the first four. Speed was giving 7 lb., but surely this is not really his true form, or he has been outrageously overrated. Some people declared that Webb was riding carelessly, thinking that he had the race in hand, when the others came with a rush, and that he found it difficult to set Speed fairly going again. Throstle, who was second, is half sister, by Petrarch, to Common, and a racing-like filly, but she has bad fore-legs, and we shall see the best of her as a two-year-old. I understand that she had been beaten in her trial. Lady Rhoda was a regular July week "pot" for the Maiden Plate, 5 to 4 being eagerly taken in a field of seventeen. She was cleverly beaten by Prince Hal, by Royal Hampton, a colt for which Jewitt had given 420 gs. at the sale of "Mr. Abington's" stud, and he could not have been fancied, as he was backed for very little money.

After all the trumpeting about the unreserved sale of Lord Rosslyn's horses (concerning which there had been as much elaborate noise raised as if he had possessed a stud like the Duke of Westminster's or the Duke of Portland's, instead of a collection of platers), it was somewhat surprising to find Buccaneer being bought in at 5,400 gs. If there was a genuine bid of this sum, then Lord Rosslyn was exceedingly ill-advised not to let the horse go, in the present state of the market. Buccaneer will never fetch a high price, for he is not so fashionably bred as to induce breeders to run after him, even if he had done much better on the turf. The most remarkable transaction at Newmarket on the first day of the sales was the disposal of the two-year-old La Rosière for 610 gs. This is the filly by Rosebery out of Empress Maud, for which Lord Roslyn gave 3,500 gs. at Doncaster last September, and as she had twenty-four engagements there will be a considerable sum to pay for her forfeits. Sybil Roy, on the other hand (she cost 170 gs. as a yearling), was very well sold at 1,250 gs. Leonardo, by Royal Hampton, realised only 35 gs., having cost 350 gs. at Newmarket just a year ago. Ingebright, a heavily-engaged colt by Friar's Balsam out of Serpolette II., went for 700 gs., having cost 660 gs. twelve months ago; and Grong, by Paradox out of Canoe, went up from 35 gs. a year ago to 260 gs.

THE GOODWOOD PROGRAMME.

There ought to be excellent sport at Goodwood next week, for there are capital entries for most of the races, and the course is in first-rate order.

The two-year-old racing will be exceptionally interesting and important. The Ham Stakes looks like being a match between Theseus and Bullingdon, and I shall expect the Duke of Westminster's colt to win, in spite of his despicable exhibition at Stockbridge. Forty-eight two-year-olds have been left in for the Richmond Stakes, which will be worth about £1,100, including Matchbox, Sempronius, Galloping Dick, Glare, Theseus, Mecca, Schoolbook, Clatterfeet, Basildon, Illuminata colt, and Vulpecula. The meeting between Sempronius and Illuminata colt would be interesting, and I expect that Lord Rosebery's animal will win, but he will be beaten by Galloping Dick if Mr. Baird's colt will only run up to his trial, as the latter will have 12 lb. the best of the weights. The Lavant Stakes on Wednesday will be worth about £900, and the entry includes nothing better than Melancholy, who was evidently out of form at Stockbridge. Theseus, Strike (half-sister, by Satiety, to Isinglass), and Janetta are also engaged. There is a large entry for the Halnaker Stakes, including Vulpecula, who has 7 lb. extra to carry. Baron Hirsch may very likely win with Government—a colt about whom there has been a great deal of talk. The Prince of Wales's Post Sweepstakes, on Thursday, will be worth £2,400, and the entry includes Galloping Dick, Glare, Schoolbook, Speed, and Bullingdon. I expect that Speed will win if he is kept for this race. There are no penalties in this race, but Glare has a 3 lb. breeding allowance. The sweepstakes being £200 p.p., it is probable that most of the subscribers will be represented. The Prince of Wales may run St. Valerie, by Hampton out of Welfare, or Florizel II., by St. Simon out of Perdita II. Mr. Baird (in addition to Galloping Dick) has St. Florian, who is own brother to Silene, who won this rich stake last year. Lord Bradford (who is often dangerous at Goodwood) has two well-bred colts, the one by Chippendale out of Hemlock, and the other by Chillington out of White Heather. Mr. Houldsworth has Rowallan, by Galopin out of Morgiana; and Ponzano, half brother to Orvieto by Springfield. Sir Blundell Maple has Athlone, own brother to Clarence, and Royal Victoria, by Royal Hampton out of Hackness. Mr. Milner has Veneration, by St. Simon out of Devotion, and None the Wiser, by Wisdom out of Corrie Roy. Fifty-two animals remain in for the Rous Memorial Stakes, which will be worth about £1,200, and among the lot withdrawn last October is Bullingdon. The entry includes Galloping Dick, Theseus, and Vulpecula; but this race will depend so much on previous running that it is impossible to attempt to predict the winner now. The Findon Stakes on Friday may be won by the Duke of Westminster with Grey Leg. The Molecomb Stakes, which will be worth about £800, has a large entry, including Throstle, La Nievre, Schoolbook, Clatterfeet, and Mecca. La Nievre should win, as she has improved very much since her unsuccessful début at Newmarket, and she has been well tried.

I hear that the Duke of Westminster's dark colt Joyful (about which there has been so much egregious jargoning during the last six months) will make his debut in the Gratwicke Stakes, and he will have so much the best of the weight that he ought to be able to beat Raeburn if he is worth keeping in training. Fifty-eight three-year-olds remain in for the Sussex Stakes on Wednesday, which will be worth about £1,200 including Isinglass, William, Harbinger, Son of a Gun, Turiddu, and Joyful. Isinglass will not run, and over this course Harbinger may be able to win. Isinglass is also in the Gordon stakes on Thursday, but he will not run. The entry includes Orme, Perigord, Buccaneer, Ravensbury, Royal Harry, Lady Caroline, Harbinger, Watercress, and La Flèche. In the absence of Orme, Watercress may be able to win. There is a large entry for the Nassau Stakes, which will be worth about £800, including Drill, Silene, Dame President, Tressure, The Prize, and Medora. I shall plump for Dame President.

The hurried withdrawal of Meddler to America was a most foolish arrangement, as the horse was fit to run, and there was every reason to believe that he retains his form. His value as a sire would have been much increased by a victory in the Goodwood Cup, even although he had beaten practically nothing in that race, and I do not see how he could possibly have lost, as a wretchedly bad lot are engaged, and the entry does not include Marcion; nor has Mr. Vyner's horse been entered for the Jockey Club Cup, although there are no penalties in that event. Chesterfield appears to be now in form, and he may perhaps be able to win the Goodwood Cup, although he has 8 lb. extra to carry in consequence of his having won last year's Doncaster Cup. Next to Chesterfield I prefer the chance of Convent.

The early favourites for the Stewards' Cup were Persistive (who has been the universal tip at Newmarket for this race ever since the Spring meetings), Scarborough, Acrobat, Inferno, Cuttlestone, and Bill. Persistive has been thrown in, for he has only 6 st. 9 lb. to carry, but I believe he is a very bad horse. It will be remembered that last year he was heavily backed for the Two Thousand. The stable have such good trial tackle for a race over this distance that no mistake ought to be made in galloping Persistive. Another horse that is much fancied at Newmarket is Inferno, who is believed to be really smart over this distance, and he is very nicely in with 6 st. 8 lb. Last year, at the Newmarket First July meeting, Inferno gave 3 lb. to Medicis, and beat him cleverly, Baron Rothschild's colt being a great favourite for the race

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—The last fortnightly settlement proved almost as formidable an ordeal as that of the end of May, with the important difference that, while money was most difficult to procure and very dear then, it was very plentiful and cheap last week. But the further fall which has taken place during the last six weeks, especially in silver securities and American Rails, had created a situation which was fraught with considerable danger, and it is surprising that the casualties in the "House" amounted to no more than ten, amongst which the failure of Mr. J. E. H. Read was the most important.

The Crisis on the Stock Exchange.

Great sympathy is shown on the Stock Exchange with this old and highly-respected member, who has lost a fortune through a series of adverse events. Mr. Read was very popular, and was not only a member of the Committee, but also President of the Orchestral Society. The other nine failures were of less consequence, although one broker had as many as 10 to 12,000 Yankee shares open. It is, however, an open secret that a good many other members have had to be helped, and the danger in the position is that another heavy fall in prices would precipitate the failure of a still larger batch of members. Yet such a contingency is hardly probable, especially as a more serious disaster, which had been threatening, and to which some recent heavy sales all round the House, and especially in the American market, were due, has been averted by timely assistance given by a well-known millionaire. The firm in question, it appears, had plenty of securities, but was unable to obtain the necessary advances. Now that this trouble has been surmounted, it is not improbable that a moderate recovery may come about. The esprit de corps again shown by the members of the Stock Exchange in this fresh crisis is to be highly commended. Help has been freely given in many cases, and great forbearance has been shown to weak operators or brokers who were left in the lurch by their clients. One of the largest brokers told me that he had given in this way, with little chance of present return, as much as his entire earnings during the six months came to. The unpleasant predicament in which so many members find themselves is such as to rouse great sympathy. Hardly was the effect of the

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

Baring collapse wearing off, when the Australian crisis burst upon the community, followed by a still greater trouble, the silver panic. The Australian Bank crisis I had been predicting for some years, and my warnings were instrumental in saving many of my readers large sums of money. I also took a strong view that Australian undertakings like that of Goldsbrough, Mort, & Co., now in course of reconstruction, would not be able to weather the storm, and gave advice accordingly. Again, many of my readers, when reading the announcement of the suspension of the New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency, will have remembered the strictures which I passed upon the management of that Company some years ago, when it was practically under the same management as the Bank of New Zealand. Then followed the disclosure of the heavy losses of that Bank, and a change in the management and policy, which has resulted in a more prosperous career of that Bank. But concerning the New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency my views remained unchanged, as applicants to "My Letter Box" well know, and the result has only too completely borne out my warning. Now with regard to the silver panic, which has wrought so much havoc in values of stocks. Although most of the great financial houses had laid in a stock of Rupee Paper in anticipation of some action by the India Council, it may be said of all of them that they were not prepared for the enormous fall in other silver securities and allied stocks, or for the panic which has been brought about in American Rails. The heavy sales of the latter are, in fact, distinctly traceable to the "break" in Mexican and similar stocks, which caused the forced liquidation of large holdings of Americans which were in the same hands. That was the chief cause of the collapse in the American Market, the purchasing power of the great financial houses being exhausted at a time when the currency troubles in the States and strong efforts of the "Bears" produced an exceptional state of things. I must admit that I did not foresee such a combination of unfortunate circumstances. But I cannot accept the absurd reproaches addressed to me by some of those persons who never thank you when they make money by your advice, but turn round upon you when things temporarily go wrong. Because I advised the purchase of the most substantial amongst Yankee Rails, paying good interest, and because there has been a decline, owing to the present panic, one individual in particular is very wroth. But his anger is, perhaps, somewhat artificial, as I remember once having expressed an adverse view of a Mine in which he was heavily interested. The price of the shares broke away, and my readers, having sold out in time, had every reason to be satisfied with my advice when eventually the announcement was made that the reef had pinched out. I do not pose as infallible, but the advice which I tender to those who apply to me is conscientiously given, and based upon information which I take some trouble to obtain, and I am glad to say that the persons to whom I have referred are only a few amongst the large circle of my readers. To speak candidly, I expected a number of complaints, and the fact that they have not come to hand shows that the vast majority of my readers are sensible and intelligent enough to see that the present panic is the result of a totally unexpected and almost unprecedented combination of circumstances. I might liken it to the case of a line of railway on which a formidable accident suddenly happened. Should people not use that railway, or should its stocks be tabooed for fear of a possible accident? The present position of the stock markets is not dissimilar to that of a line on which an accident involving heavy loss has occurred, which is, of course, greatly to be deplored. But when the wreckage is cleared away, and compensation has been made, the trains will run again, and the line will recover its prosperity. In this silver panic uncertainty is the worst feature. When the extent of the mischief is ascertained and the weak spots are weeded out, confidence will return again. The American railways are still in existence and earning large sums, whatever may be the value of silver, and their stocks will recover again from this heavy blow, just as many other securities, now extremely depreciated, will improve when the present unwarrantable distrust passes away. My advice to all holders of substantial securities is to stick tight to their stocks, and again, I say, as I did last week, the present is the opportunity for the investor to pick up cheap stocks, which will grow into money as the panic passes away!

THE BRIGHTON DIVIDEND.

The Brighton dividend was announced last Wednesday at the rate of 4¼ per cent. per annum, or £2. 2s. 6d. for the half-year on the undivided Ordinary stock, which is most satisfactory when taken in conjunction with the large sum of £42,539 carried forward. It is, in fact, the largest paid during the last ten years, when much smaller amounts were brought forward. Assuming that earnings in the current half-year would be the same as in 1892, the dividend for the whole year would work out to 6¾ per cent. on the undivided Ordinary and 7½ per cent. on Brighton "A." But this does not take into account the much larger balance carried forward, which shows an increase of £29,000 over the sum brought forward on June 30, 1892, and would allow of a much larger dividend being paid, provided that earnings in the present half be maintained. So far from being over-sanguine as to the results of the past half-year, my Brighton prophet has under-estimated them. In his letter published four weeks ago (TRUTH, June 22), he calculated the total balance available at £208,639; but he expressed at the same time the view that this estimate was "studiously moderate," and he had "little doubt that the net earnings for the half-year would aggregate £215,000." As a matter of fact, the Directors' report states the balance at £213,338, and therefore constitutes my correspondent's forecast one of the most accurate ever made. The report states that "it is obvious that a larger dividend might have been declared for the half-year; but the Directors think it wiser to be content with a moderate increase over that of the corresponding half-year of 1892, carrying forward a larger balance, in view of the uncertainty of the course of traffics for the second half-year, depending as it does to so large an extent upon the weather, the state of trade, agriculture, and other contingencies." No one will find fault with the conservative action of the Board, which has, no doubt, also been influenced by the prevailing crisis. Unless most exceptional circumstances should intervene, my anticipation of a distribution of at least 8 per cent. for the whole year will, however, be fully borne out, and there is every prospect of a larger dividend being paid. But assuming that the dividend would only be 8 per cent., Brighton "A" at 154 would yield over 5⅛ per cent., and my recommendation of this stock to investors is thus fully justified. The result obtained during most depressing surroundings reflects great credit upon the management of the line, although Mr. Sarle has, of course, had the co-operation of an amount of brilliant sunshine such as has not fallen to our lot for years. Traffic decreases are not improbable for some time, as the returns last year, with which comparison is made, were exceptionally large, but with the end of August last year traffics fell off heavily, and the comparison should then be more favourable. One word more. Six months ago some severe comments were made in the Press on the gambling in Brighton "A," and it was asserted in many quarters that there was a leakage of information concerning the Company's business to certain operators of the Stock Exchange. I was induced by numerous complaints reaching me to urge upon the Board some measure to check the mischief, and the publication of daily traffics has since been discontinued. This step has apparently had a most beneficial effect, as the excessive gambling has been put a stop to. A further proof of the check put upon such leakage was the fact that some of the so-called

FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

"insiders," having apparently got an inkling that the dividend would be only 4¼ per cent., sold down Brighton "A" to 152½ on Wednesday morning, unaware evidently of the large balance carried forward, the announcement of which caused a sharp rebound. Well done, Mr. Sarle! Investors will not be slow to appreciate the beneficial change.

The Yankee Scare.

Forced liquidation in this market and "Bear" pressure, combined with scarcity of money in Wall-street, have caused a heavy decline in American Railroad stocks, a veritable panic prevailing at one time. The fact that no resistance was offered to the decline on this side, owing to the large financial houses having their hands full with their own troubles and heavy losses in Mexican and other securities affected by silver, emboldened the New York "Bears," under the lead of Addison Cammack, to most enterprising attacks. They have gone so far as to sell through London brokers in the morning heavy blocks of stock, which, as the dealers here were unable to take them, were offered again by the arbitrage houses in Wall-street, thus creating the impression that London was throwing over all its stocks wholesale. The failures on the Stock Exchange, and certain embarrassments which had evidently become known to the American "Bear" contingent, helped them to carry out their nefarious designs. There are, however, indications that matters have been pushed far enough, and as soon as ever the money position in New York improves (the last return of the New York Associated Banks shows a distinct improvement) and the "Bears" discover that the forced sales here are completed, a sharp recovery may be looked for. After all, the panic is altogether overdone. The fall in silver is no doubt bad for the silver mines, but the railways will run all the same and continue their earnings. Many of the substantial stocks have reached a level at which they yield an excellent return on present dividends, especially Milwaukees, Louisville, and Atchison "A" and "B" bonds, while the low-priced speculative stocks are exceedingly cheap. I have already stated my view that it would not be wise, under present conditions, to run stocks speculatively, but any one who can afford to take up the stocks bought will see a good profit on them in a comparatively short time. Louisville at 56 ex. div. yield over 7 per cent., Milwaukees at 61 return 6⅝, Atchison "B" bonds at present price as much as 9 per cent. per annum on the investment. Canadian Pacifics and Grand Trunks have also declined in sympathy, but even at present prices they are not nearly so cheap in comparison as American Railroad stocks. For this they are indebted to the fact that the Yankee "Bears" do not devote the attention to them with which they are favouring their own stocks. Some correspondence has of late appeared in the Press concerning the Chignecto Marine Transport Railway Company, the object of which is to unite the Gulf of St. Lawrence with the Bay of Fundy and the waters of the Atlantic Ocean, greatly shortening the sea voyage between Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, and the Gulf of St. Lawrence ports, and the Atlantic cities of the United States. It is undoubtedly an undertaking of importance to the Dominion of Canada, and that the Canadian Government consider it to be so is proved by the fact that they have granted the Company a subsidy of 170,000 dols. per annum. Unfortunately the general depression has prevented the placing of the remaining Debentures, and the work has only been completed as to three-fourths, the greater part of the machinery being already erected, while the line and works are stated in an official report from Amherst as in a satisfactory state, in spite of the late severe winter. It is now urged that, as the funds cannot be obtained in the market under the prevailing conditions of depression, the Canadian Government should come to the assistance of the Company in order to raise the remaining £200,000 required to complete the undertaking. This would appear to be the best solution in the interest of all parties, and would greatly enhance the credit of the Canadian Government, the more so as they have got ample security.

Foreigners and South Americans.

The unfavourable views which I have for some time expressed respecting Italian finance are being fully borne out by present events. I consider the position thoroughly rotten, and I am not at all surprised at the rise in the gold premium in Rome to over 9 per cent. Italians have consequently dropped heavily to 87¼. Spanish have experienced another spasm, and are lower at 61½. How long the Banque de Paris will continue to supply Spain with funds remains to be seen, but the end will come one of these days. Russians, on the other hand, are being kept at their present high quotation by Government rigging. Greeks are unable to shake themselves together again, times being, of course, very much against them. Turks have eased off all round, but it is, on the whole, surprising that all these old-world securities keep up as well as they do in the midst of a crisis which knocks down values in all other directions. The fall in the gold premium in Buenos Ayres seems to indicate an improvement in the political position in Argentina, but what I should like to hear is some definite news to the effect that the Minister of Finance is dealing with the Railway guarantees. The payment of the August coupon on the Uruguay bonds is stated to be assured, yet the price does not respond. Mexican securities remain in a state of collapse, but holders of these and of Peruvian Corporation stocks should really hesitate before they throw them away at these prices.

The Kaffir Circus.

The South African market got over the settlement better than had been anticipated, money being plentiful and rates easier, but subsequent forced sales brought about some decline. It is also assumed that one of the big operators in this market has been keeping prices down purposely in order to get hold of cheap stock. This is not the first time that the firm in question goes on this tack, which is not very creditable, and is decidedly bad policy as regards the public to whom they will look later on again to buy stocks at a higher level. Many of the Witwatersrand Mines are at present at low prices, and the leading dividend-paying Companies yield good returns on the investment. Nigels, Meyer and Charlton, Rietfontein, and especially New Primrose, may be mentioned as such. Glencairns have hardened to 34s. 6d., and now that the reconstructed heavy battery has commenced crushing, good results are looked for with a promise of early dividends. New Crœsus, Kimberley, Roodepoort, and especially Buffelsdoorn, are amongst the coming Mines. With respect to the latter, I have had my favourable opinion fully confirmed by an expert, who has just returned from South Africa. Excellent news is to hand from the Afrikander property. As development goes on, ore is being crushed and gold to the value of £3,000 has been obtained in a few months, but it appears that the small leader, which was only a couple of inches wide at the first level, has increased to 12—18 in. on the third level, a large quantity of ore is in sight, and when in a short time crushing proceeds with 25 head of stamps and the Cyanide Works are going, there will be a large output. When it is, moreover, considered that the Company, with its small capital of £40,000, owns fifty-four reef claims, which alone are worth several times their capital value, it may be said that Afrikanders at 25s. are exceedingly cheap, and I should not be surprised if they were to take a jump of 10s. to 20s. one of these days. As I anticipated, the amount of gold recovered at the Randt by the African Gold Recovery Company in June has reached the large total of 26,000 oz., with 1,400 oz. in other districts, against 24,004 oz. in May. I see from the report of the Chamber of Mines that the MacArthur Forrest Cyanide process is now the only one employed on the Randt for the treatment of

"Toilet Lanoline" softens, clears, and preserves the skin, and should be used in every household. "Toilet Lanoline" protects the skin from the effects of exposure, and adds to the natural beauty. In collapsible tubes, 6d.; in small boxes, 3d., from all chemists and druggists. Wholesale depôt, 67, Holborn-viaduct. The genuine bears the trade-mark, "Lanoline."

tailings, other processes having failed in extraction or by excessive cost. Progress is now also reported by the Australian Gold Recovery Company, which announces having entered into a contract with the Mitchell's Creek Gold Mining Company for the treatment of tailings. The next new departure will be the extraction of gold from the 100,000 tons of tailings of the Caratal Gold Mine in Venezuela, and it is probable that the MacArthur Forrest process will do as much for this Venezuelan Mine as it has done for the Witwatersrand Mines, many of which would now yield but small profits without this process. According to the Mining World highly satisfactory news may be expected very shortly from Mr. Bull, whose arrival at the Caratal Mine has been already notified. The statement is added in the same paper that this news "will most likely be received in the form of a brief report, and that, like all Mr. Bull's communications, it will be to the point." My contemporary does not forecast the precise nature of the report, but, from information of an independent character, of which it is in possession, it feels justified in saying that the shareholders will have exceptional pleasure in perusing it. This coincides with the reports which have been communicated to me, and the more active dealings which have taken place of late, point to a considerable improvement in the price of Caratal shares. With reference to the Holcombe Valley Gold Mine, I find that shares are being quietly absorbed in the market, in view of the news of the first return, which is expected daily, now that the machinery is erected on the property. Amongst South African Land Companies British Chartered of South Africa have fallen heavily to 29s., chiefly on advices of Lobengula's raid into Mashonaland. I wonder what would happen with these shares, should some day Lobengula go to work in earnest and annihilate, as he easily could, the Chartered Company's handful of police. Oceana and Oceana Development shares have declined on a few forced sales, but are again recovering, the news from the various properties being most favourable. With reference to the Kilkivan Mine, the manager reports, under date June 3, that the shaft was down to 107 ft., and that all was going well. He also mentions the circumstance, previously reported by cable, that in the adjoining property the main reef has been struck in a shaft only 100 yards from their western boundary, and not more than 250 yards from their present sinking. It is estimated that this main reef, which runs high through the Kilkivan property, and is one of those that gave such good yields to the original finders there, will go 4 oz. to 5 oz. to the ton. Under the circumstances Kilkivan shares, now quoted 8s.—10s., are well worth picking up.

Indian Mines.

The circular of the Mysore Gold Company announcing the intention of the Directors to ask shareholders for authority to increase the capital of the Company to £250,000 by the issue of 25,000 shares of £1 each, at a premium of £2, has not been well received by the market, and it has had the effect of knocking down the shares to 3$\frac{1}{16}$. These continuous issues by the leading Indian mining Companies are creating a feeling of uneasiness among a certain section of the proprietors, and this is not surprising when one looks back upon the past few years. In 1886, when Mysore shares touched 9$\frac{3}{8}$, the capital of the Company was £135,000. In that year 15,000 new shares were created, and issued at a premium of £3 each. In 1888 there was an issue of 25,000 shares at a premium of £1 each. In 1890 there was an issue of 25,000 at a premium of £3 each. In 1891 there was another issue of 25,000 shares to purchase certain properties of the Gold Fields Company. In January of this year, the Mysore sold their holding of 10,000 Champion Reefs at an average price of 35s. On the top of all these issues another £75,000 cash is now asked for. No doubt the money will be subscribed by the shareholders, as the allotments will give each holder a fair bonus on the price ruling in the market; but, nevertheless, this continuous piling up of the capital account is unhealthy. A highly successful mine like the Mysore should long ago have put itself in a position to meet all future developments without asking for more money. It is only a few weeks since that I protested against a new issue of capital by the Nundydroog Indian mining shareholders should put a curb upon their Directors. The Nundydroog is showing considerable improvement; and the recent development of the Golconda and Oriental blocks look decidedly promising to the shareholders of the goldfields of Mysore. Indian Consolidated shares are now quite unsaleable, nor is this surprising. It appears ridiculous to ask shareholders after their past experiences to undertake a further liability of 3s. per share, in order to find £80,000 cash to acquire a property altogether undeveloped. I expressed this view as soon as the reconstruction scheme was issued, at which time the shares could have been sold at 1s. 9d., and I know many of my friends took the hint to at once dispose of their holdings.

The Syndicate Touts attack Montrose.

The fact that the syndicate touts continue to flood the country with their circulars seems unfortunately to prove that there are still fools left gullible enough to part with their money to these swindlers. A reader of Truth in Montrose sends me a collection of circulars received by him from fourteen different worthies of this stamp, expressing the hope that I "may still go on, and save an innocent public from getting their pockets picked by such sharks, whose operations reach even these hyperborean regions, where such iniquity was not hitherto known." The touts who have so honoured Montrose with their nefarious missives are the following:—

British and American Investment Trust, 181, Queen Victoria-street.
T. Nelson, 12, Great St. Helen's.
E. Barton, 81, Gracechurch-street, E.C.
Land, Dale, & Co., 118, Fenchurch-street, E.C.
George Macdonald & Co., 164, Fenchurch-street, E.C.
The London Central Stock and Share Corporation, 17, Coleman-street.
United Kingdom Stock and Share Corporation, 58, Cheapside.
The Metropolitan Financial Association, 52, Queen Victoria-street.
Staveley & Co., 83, Lombard-street.
F. Compton & Co., 1, Tokenhouse-buildings, Lothbury.
Walton, Price, & Co., 61½, Fore-street.
London and Counties Stock and Share Corporation, 143, Cannon-street.
Duncan, Short, & Co., 39, Lombard-street.
Clarkson & Co., 118, Fenchurch-street.

All these firms have already been mentioned in Truth, and I have warned my readers to have nothing to do with their system of syndicates, amalgamations, combinations, &c., a warning which I herewith repeat especially for the benefit of the good people of Montrose and other dwellers in the North. What I am surprised at is that Percy Barclay & Co. have, apparently, not yet found their way to Montrose, for hardly a week passes that I do not hear from some one or other who has lost money with them. This week I got a communication from a clergyman in Essex, who had been victimised in half a dozen syndicates to the extent of £5 a-piece. Wiser in his generation is a clergyman in Ireland, who sends me a circular received from Harvey, MacDonald, & Co., of 20, Great Brunswick-street, Dublin, to whose endeavours to draw the innocents in the sister isle into their net I have already referred. My correspondent takes special umbrage at the statement made by these touts that "most of their clients are clergymen of all denominations." That, of course, is a lie, but that parsons do sometimes go in for a little gamble of this kind is unfortunately true enough. But, parsons or no parsons, I urge upon all my readers to have no dealings with these gentry, whose only aim is to pick the pockets of the unwary.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

R. W.—Of the three securities named I should prefer Costa Rica "B" bonds as a speculative investment for a small amount. Lion.—What you say respecting the special security of City of Mexico bonds is quite correct, and I think you are right in sticking to them. The fall is, of course, a result of the silver panic. Inquirer.—The decline is due to the silver scare; this does not affect the bonds directly, and you should hold.

BANKS, TRUSTS, AND FINANCIAL.

Subscriber, Dunganmon.—I think your intention to sell out the Colonial Bank shares in question, and reinvest in the unduly depressed American Railroad shares, is wise. Certainly, hold the stocks you have already got. A Constant Reader, Tottenham.—The South American and Mexican Company has been sadly mismanaged, but I am afraid there is no option but to adopt the measure now proposed by the directors. G. R. K.—I am afraid that the outlook for this Trust is not very bright, and it might be wise to do as you suggest, viz., to exchange into the Argentine, 1886, or Funding loans. H. S., Cardiff.—It is a substantial American Company, but no one will consider matters in the United States as stable as in England, and this is a matter to be more specially considered when dealing with life assurance. I do not reply by letter. E. de P.—I do not like this Trust, and have expressed an unfavourable view ever since its formation. Your proper course would have been to pay up the call and sell the shares. The Company has probably the right to confiscate the shares and recover the call. You should compromise the matter and sell out. I cannot reply by letter. Chip.—It is really difficult to advise. If these bad times are going to last a call will no doubt be made. Sell half your holding. H., Upper Norwood.—You are quite right, the public ought to be warned of dealing with banks which pay 10 per cent. interest on deposits, but is not such a transaction on the face of it most dangerous, and how can, after the collapse of Barker's Bank, any sane person expect to get such high interest with safety? Query.—The matter looks very doubtful, the arrangement being probably only proposed in order to get hold of your money. It is an old dodge. Don't. Strax.—The affairs of the South American and Mexican Company have been sadly mismanaged, in addition to which the concern has fallen upon very bad times. Yet, under all the circumstances the proposal now made seems to be the least disastrous way out of the difficulty. E. W. K.—I am sorry you are interested in Goldsbrough, Mort, and Company. I have for a long time advised against such Australian investments, but I hope that the difficulty will be surmounted. No, I do not recommend the Brewery Debentures, but you may safely put the money in Brighton "A," which will pay you good interest. See under "The Brighton Dividend." Anxious, Newcastle.—No, I should not buy any more Trust shares now, but await the passing off of the scare. Dubitans.—Do not buy any more of these Eastern Bank shares. It is too great a risk to run. Troubled—I should not buy more of the Trust shares, but stay where you are. If a broker, a member of the Stock Exchange, should charge a client more than he gave for the stock, and this can be proved, he can be brought before the Committee of the Stock Exchange. Guernsey.—I really cannot tell you if the person in question is an authorised agent of the Hamburg Government Lottery. These Lotteries are conducted fairly enough, but so much depends upon the intermediary. Bees.—You should inquire of your broker how he can buy the Coal shares. Write to the office of the New English Bank of the River Plate; you will, no doubt, obtain the information there. Avalon.—I cannot reply by post. The South American and Mexican Company has been very badly managed, but the meeting has adopted the resolution proposed, and I am afraid there is no option in the matter.

HOME RAILS.

Optimist.—No, I do not advise investment in Birmingham and Henley-in-Arden Railway shares.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN RAILS.

Rothesay.—1. You should hold your Missouri, Kansas, and Texas shares, especially as they are taken up. A turn is very near, when you might average as you propose. 2. Peruvian Corporation debentures should be held now. Severe "Bear" pressure has been put on, but, according to statements made by the Directors, there is no fear of the Debenture interest being defaulted on. Regent's-road.—No; I should advise you to keep the Atchison "B" Second Mortgage bonds, but you might exchange from Interoceanic of Mexico into Peru Debentures, as you propose. The distribution to the Assets Certificates should take place within the next week or two, as the Chilian bonds have been handed over to the Corporation. D. M. Yes; I think it would be wise for you to take up the Atchison "A" bonds, New Primrose and Day Dawn P.C. The two former pay good interest, and will rise to much higher prices again. The prospects of the latter are good, and an advance is imminent. R. H. B. The Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent., 1925, bonds are a gilt-edged investment, but as they leave you so good a profit you might sell half and re-invest, as you propose, in sound American Railroad bonds. I should not like to take the responsibility in the present times to advise upon the safety of stock brokers. Janet.—You have done right to invest in Atchison Second Mortgage "B" bonds. They receive at once 4 per cent. annual interest, while the "A" bonds rise gradually from 2½ to 4 per cent. in three years. Both have the same powers of foreclosure. Gene Dabchick.—I do not care so much for Erie Seconds and should consider Atchison Second Mortgage "A" or "B" bonds preferable. Nemo.—a. Yes, Costa Rica shares would be a suitable speculative "lock up" for a small amount. b. Atlantic Firsts are very cheap. c. The Balaghat lode has pinched out, everything depends upon its widening again. I should risk holding for a month or two. d. The progress of the Nine Reefs Company is not up to expectation, but I should not sell during the present stagnation. Watching.—1. Yes, you can do no harm in averaging Eries now. 2. This also applies to Costa Rica Rails for a small amount. 3. I do not recommend the purchase of these, either Preferred or Deferred. Cable property is not in the ascendant. E. E., East Cowes.—Traffics of Argentine Railways generally fall off at this season, but the Central Argentine is doing well, and the stock should be held for a smart recovery. Texas B., Dublin.—No improvement can come about until the general depression in the American Market passes away. Then a revival may be expected. Topeka.—1. I should not advise you to sell your Atchison "A" bonds on the chance of buying cheaper before Congress meets. Whenever the turn comes the improvement will be so sudden that you will not be able to get in again. 2. No the Colorado Mines have no bearing on this Company. Tommy Dodd.—1. Those connected with the Nitrate Railway are of opinion that the dividend of 20 per cent. will be maintained. 2. Yes. Peruvian Corporation Debentures are a cheap speculative purchase, and the interest is reasonably secure. Simon.—Amongst the thirteen bonds mentioned, Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 seem to be the most suitable under the circumstances mentioned. Peter.—This is a panic which will no doubt pass off presently. It is not a time to buy stocks on margins, but to lock them up. The market, however, will no doubt turn upwards again.

MINING SHARES.

Inquirer, Kilmarnock.—The Glencairn battery has just re-started crushing. On the whole, I think Broken Hill Proprietary shares had better be held now; but I do not think much of British Broken Hills. Leitrim.—I should certainly prefer new Crœsus Gold shares to the New Aurora West. L. P.—The news from the Caratal mine is most promising, and you should buy at once at anything like 9d. per share. Lional.—New Primrose and Glencairn should be held for a marked rise. N. P.—The Mysore Gold mine is a good property, and likely to continue to earn good dividends; but I protest against the frequent issues of new shares. Investor, Paisley.—1. I should not advise the investment. 2. The progress of the Nine Reefs Company is not up to expectation; but I should not sell during the present stagnation. M. A.—1. The gentleman in question is at present travelling abroad. The shares are not introduced upon the Australian market, the Company having been formed here. 2. It is a high-priced share, and therefore specially susceptible to the prevailing depression. 3. Not yet. 4. The Kimberley Roodepoort is expected to do well, and to eventually rival the success of the Company named. 5. I certainly should not pick out Modderfontein for a purchase. M. F.—You are mistaken. The South Darren shares are not fully paid. They were issued in the reconstruction as 5s. shares with 2s. 6d. credited as paid. B., China.—Yes, the charge on Balkis Land shares is rather high, but having bought through your Banker, you know, at least, that the shares are safe, and that you cannot become the victim of an outside broker's dishonesty. I am much interested in the fact related by you, that the touts in question are circularising China. I have repeatedly warned my readers of them, and I am now conducting a special inquiry into the matter. Cromer.—You are right, the Rietfontein dividend was 15 per cent. Wychbury.—1. Yes, South African Trust and Finance is a good speculation. 2. On Holcombe Valley shares only 2d. per share remains unpaid. This is a very good speculative purchase. Your purchases of Gold Mines Nos. 1-7 are well selected, but you seem to have paid a high price for Buffelsdoorn, viz., 30s. This is a rising Mine, but you ought to have got in below that price. 8. Leave De Lamars alone, as it is a Gold and Silver Mine, and silver is not now in the ascendant. Nodrog.—With regard to the twelve Australian Mines upon which you ask my opinion, I should say that Nos. 1, 4, 11, and 12 are very good, Nos. 2, 3, and 8, good, Nos. 5 and 6 are promising, and Nos. 7, 9, and 10 require development. Nora.—Caratal and Holcombe Valley are low-priced Mining shares, which you should, however, consider as a speculation. There are excellent chances of a smart advance, and you cannot lose much. In these days, this is a question of some moment. Claret.—The Moonstone Gold Mine is a good property, but I know nothing of Messrs. Elmslie's circular, asking the shareholders to give them "the option of buying the shares at a given price for three months." In such cases it is best not to bind yourself, and to sell only when you see a good profit. I do not believe in "Bear" catching. Granite.—Both are good properties, but require more development.

INDUSTRIAL COMPANIES.

Rose Land.—Do not buy more of the Brewery shares to average yet, but await a more decided turn in the market. Merlin.—I do not think prospects of this Spanish line promising. Sell! You will have remarked that I consider the Tyre Companies as greatly overdone, and, if the loss is not too heavy, I should clear out. M. K.—I suppose that the bad times are telling upon this Company. You should not have all your eggs in one basket. Why not sell part and re-invest the money in other stocks? Rastus.—1. No, the mortgage does not represent the floating debt, which would be represented by the bills, and probably by an advance from bankers. 2. The general depression accounts for the low prices. 3. Yes. 4. You forget the jobbers' turn, which has to be paid by the brokers.

BIRDS of a feather flock together. The first grey hair will soon have companions, unless their coming is rendered impossible by the use of Mrs. S. A. ALLEN'S World's Hair Restorer.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

Border.—A. There is absolutely nothing in this comment on Holcombe Valley, which is entirely opposed to the views of experts. But the matter will shortly be decided, as the new machinery is now erected, and a trial will shortly be made. If it is successful, there will be an important advance in the shares. B. Yes, you might re-invest in Atchison "A" bonds. C. No reason to sell. I did not wish to refer to this Canadian line. D. I do not think much of these Mines. E. Yes, prospects have improved. Sussex.—1. Mexican Central Gold bonds have declined through the silver scare. The fall in silver must, of course, affect the line, but independent from the revenue the interest on these bonds is secured for some years to come. 1. Louisville have fallen through forced sales, and should be held. This also applies to Atchison "A" and "B" bonds. As soon as the weak accounts are closed out, you will see a recovery. The Uruguay coupon is already in hand, and the low price is due to the general depression. Craigdale.—1. The outlook for Tramway shares is not favourable in view of the fodder question. 2. Northern Pacific and Montana First Mortgage Six per Cent. Gold bonds stand at 86 90, Union Pacific, Lincoln, and Colorado First Mortgage Five per Cent. bonds 81-85. Neither is a first class bond, but there seems to be no reason to sell in the present depression. 3. Doubtful. Sell if you can. W.—Sell Lomas (1), but hold Nos. 2-4. They will recover again. No. 62.—I do not see how I can advise you to sell the Trust stocks Nos. 1-3 in the present depression. Certainly hold Nos. 4 and 5 for a recovery. A. B. B.—The general depression has, of course, caused most of your stocks to depreciate, and this is a bad time for selling. I should hold all the stocks now, but when a recovery comes about I should sell Nos. 3, 8, and 9. Under no circumstances sell your Peruvian Corporation stocks now. The position is much better than has been asserted. St. Vincent.—The Uruguay and Chilian Railway stocks Nos. 1-3 should improve. Hold also Nos. 4-6. Of the Mines, sell Elkhorns (1) and hold the rest. No. 2 should be sold when they touch 25s. again. Hold the Chilian Loan and Montevideo Waterworks. Exeter.—For the Trust No. 1 select Brighton "A" stock at, say, 155. St. Paul Minneapolis and Manitoba Consolidated Four and Half per Cent. Mortgage bonds at 103, Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent. bonds, 1925, at 107, Natal Four per Cent. Inscribed stock at 108, Nizams State Railway Four per Cent. Mortgage debentures. For the second speculative Trust you might buy Mexican Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds, Costa Rica "B" bonds, Chilian Loan of 1892, Louisville and Nashville shares, Atchison "B" Second Mortgage bonds, and Peruvian Corporation debentures.

VARIOUS INVESTMENTS.

The issue by the Indian Government of 3½ per Cent. Rupee Paper is a novelty, but it has not, so far, affected the quotations of the Four per Cents. The failure of the New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency has revived the feeling of distrust as regards Australian affairs, and fully bears out my view that the full effect of the financial crisis in Australia had not been felt yet. There has also been a slight fall in the shares of the Banks which have weathered the storm, but it may be hoped that this will not go any further. Mexican Rails are weak, the First Prefs at 59½, the Second Prefs. at 38. With regard to the latter stock, the most notable feature was the attempt which was made on "carry-over" day to bid up the making-up price to a fictitious figure. A young broker was sent into the "House" to bid in thousands up to 45. He got the stock, but the jobbers were even with him, and offered at once Second Prefs. for next account from 40 down to 38, while the making-up price was fixed at 40, and remained there, notwithstanding an appeal to the Committee. Truly, matters are not prospering with Mr. Mackusick's little spec. The following communication reaches me from a correspondent, who does not stand alone in his grievance:—

Have the Inland Revenue a right to deduct 7d. income-tax for the whole six months from January 31 last, more especially as this rise of 1d. only became law somewhere about April 4? I am a depositor in a certain bank, and I found when they paid me interest they had deducted 7d. for the whole half-year. When I expostulated with them, they wrote to the Inland Revenue Board, and this is the Board's reply:—

"I am directed by the Board of Inland Revenue to acquaint you that income-tax was properly deducted from interest on deposit paid by your bank for the half-year ending 1st instant, at the rate of 7d. in the £, being the rate in force when the interest became due and payable."

Now, this really seems most unfair. How can they make it retrospective and charge me 7d. for three months, when according to Act of Parliament I am only to be charged 6d.? How is it also that railways, &c., and many other investments charge you so many days at 6d. and so many at 7d., or to simplify matters, some charge 6½d.? I should be extremely obliged if you will inform me if they have a right to charge me 7d. for the whole period since January 31 last, taking into consideration that the Bank has had full use of my money for the whole time, and only pay interest for the half-year, after they have used it for the half-year it is not as if they paid me in advance; the interest is accrued and due.

On the face of it my correspondent has made out a good case for himself. It is manifestly unjust that income tax should be charged at the rate of 7d. for the three months during which it was only 6d. If the Inland Revenue are in the habit of enforcing the deduction of income tax on deposits "at the rate in force when the interest becomes due and payable," irrespective of the rate of income-tax which prevailed during part of the time, the sooner they abandon this practice the better. With reference to my remarks on the Mexican Inguaran Company, I have received the following letter from "A Country Broker":—

I have noted the correspondence on this Company appearing in your paper. I, at or about the time named in your journal, was persuaded by the glowing and persistent puffs made by the editor of one of your contemporaries who, I had supposed, was a respectable and honourable personage, to induce some of my clients to go in for these shares. Since then, however, I notice that all reference to it has been dropped, and I have been unable to gather anything about this Company. The Secretary (Mr. Salmon I think it was) wrote me some time ago that the Company was requiring further capital and asking if I could send any—not much. I think the investing public owe a deep debt of gratitude to you for exposing such swindles.

What has Mr. W. H. Salmon to say to this? As the directors of this Company (which has so mysteriously disappeared from the face of the earth without even receiving decent burial at the hands of a liquidator), John Merrylees, Roman de Olano, and E. Figges persist in their silence, perhaps he, as former secretary, can throw some light upon the matter?—Your affectionate uncle,

MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

MR. DOBSON'S NEXT OF KIN.

IT was a bitter disappointment for Mr. Crafton Deedes when old Joshua Dobson adopted the orphan son of his old friend, Major Seaton, with the avowed intention that the lad should take his name and inherit his money. Mr. Dobson, who had retired from the timber trade on a comfortable competency, was now within a year or two of sixty, a widower, and childless. Consequently Mr. Deedes, as the old gentleman's cousin, as well as his solicitor and confidential adviser, had not unreasonably come to consider himself entitled by every right to succeed to Mr. Dobson's property. The expectation was fully shared by Mrs. Deedes, and on the strength of it the solicitor and his wife had long been cultivating their relative with much assiduity and at considerable cost.

However, Crafton Deedes was a man of resolute temper, and much faith in his own luck and resources. He consequently took a philosophical view of the situation.

"We must bide our time, Emily," he said to his wife, "and keep our eyes open. Young Seaton is going into the Army. He might happen to get cut off in his prime. He may grow up wild and quarrel with the old man. A thousand things may happen. Our cue is to be civil to him for the present, and, above all things, to make no difference in our behaviour to Cousin Deb. Remember, as long as the old boy lives there is hope for us."

Mr. and Mrs. Deedes carefully followed up the policy

RATIONAL DOG FEEDING.—Give wholesome and nutritious food (Spratt's Patent Meat Fibrine Dog Cakes). Do not give tit-bits and dainties because your dog, like a spoilt child, prefers what suits his palate. See that the Dog Cakes are stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "★," as cheap and innutritious imitations are often substituted for extra profit. Pamphlet on Canine Diseases post free, SPRATT'S PATENT, Limited, Bermondsey, London.

thus sketched out, and with the best results. When Mr. Dobson presently made a new will to provide for the lad whom he had adopted he showed his appreciation of the magnanimity of Mr. Deedes and his wife by giving them substantial legacies, though not by any means enough to reconcile the solicitor to his position or divert him from the purpose he had in view. Young Arthur Seaton—or Seaton-Dobson, as he was now styled—soon showed, on his part, a gratifying disposition to play into the hands of Mr. Deedes. When old Mr. Dobson adopted him he was not a little influenced by the boy's handsome face, high spirits, and winning manners. But in the critical period between eighteen and one-and-twenty Arthur's character underwent a disagreeable change. He evinced on all occasions a disposition for undesirable company. He became more than slightly addicted to betting and gambling, and he displayed a wonderful facility in running up debts. At Sandhurst, whither he had been sent in deference to what Mr. Dobson knew to have been his father's wish, he was continually in all sorts of discreditable scrapes. Mr. Dobson did not know the whole truth, but he saw quite enough to make him uneasy, and he was not slow in expressing his uneasiness. Some rather unpleasant scenes were the consequence. Neither remonstrance nor warning, however, prevented Arthur from blundering on steadily down hill, until he was brought up by coming hopelessly to grief in his final examination, and forfeiting his last chance of a commission.

Then Joshua Dobson put his foot down firmly. He offered his adopted son one more chance, paid his debts, gave him three months in which to select any commercial pursuit which he would undertake to stick to, and promised to advance him therein to any reasonable extent. But at the same time he made it clear that Arthur's next act of misconduct would involve the termination of their relationship.

Mr. Crafton Deedes looked on at all this with grim satisfaction. It was not his business, he argued, to prevent his enemy going to the devil. On the contrary, he was pleased to find an occasional opportunity of smoothing the young man's road towards that desirable goal. He was always friendly and plausible. He took an active part after the last crash in squaring matters between the old man and the young, and Arthur constantly came to him for advice and assistance.

Arthur's three months' grace had nearly run out, when he one day hurried into Mr. Deedes's office in a state of evident trepidation.

"I say, Crafton," he cried, "what is a post-obit?"

"A simple means of selling your birthright for a mess of pottage," replied the solicitor, agreeably interested by the question.

"Oh, hang that! Tell us what the thing means."

"I am not joking. You have a prospect of inheriting, let us say, a thousand pounds on the death of a wealthy relative, and you sell that prospect to a benevolent Hebrew for perhaps £50 cash, and a few shillings' worth of bad cigars and sham jewellery."

"Well, and how is it done?"

"Before I answer that question, my dear Arthur, I should like to understand the reason of your sudden curiosity about post-obits. I have a duty, you know to Mr. Dobson."

"Oh, you needn't be alarmed about that!" replied Arthur. "I only inquired on behalf of a chap I know. He's rather hard hit over the Cambridgeshire—wanted fifty pounds sharp, and went to our friend Ikey. Ikey, knowing that he had prospects, suggested a post-obit."

"I see," returned Mr. Deedes, and having thus learned all he wanted to know, he waived any professional scruples about advice gratis, and gave the information which Arthur had requested.

Now when Crafton Deedes had been assisting, as mentioned above, in the settlement of Arthur's affairs, Mr. Dobson had exhorted the solicitor to give him early warning should he detect any inclination on Arthur's part to revert to his recent evil courses.

"You are more likely to get a hint of such a thing than I am," the old gentleman observed. "I hope, therefore, that you will watch him carefully, Crafton, and not allow any mistaken feeling of friendship for the boy to weigh with you if you see anything wrong. Mind, I rely on you in this."

With this injunction upon him, Crafton Deedes saw clearly where his duty lay in the present instance. Accordingly, a few hours after Arthur had left him, he drove round to the office of Mr. Isaac Davis, the gentleman to whom Arthur had referred. He found Mr. Davis in, and being well known to him, had no difficulty in learning that Arthur had recently called, and what his business had been.

"Did you let him have the money?" Mr. Deedes inquired.

"Not quite," replied Mr. Davis. "The shecurity was not good enough. What is it? A will, which may be revoked to-morrow."

"Just so," assented Mr. Deedes. "All the same, I want you to lend him the money—to oblige me."

"To oblige you!" said the money-lender, with that peculiar laugh which made every one hate him who heard it. "My dear friend, I am delighted to oblige you. But why cannot you lend him the money yourself?"

"That is just what I want to do, but in your name!"

"Eh—vat?" exclaimed Mr. Davis.

"I want you to lend him £50, which I will advance, on a post-obit which you shall assign to me. No one's name but yours must appear in the transaction, and in the event of inquiries being made, you must keep my share in it dark."

"For which you are willing to pay me ——."

"Whatever you think a reasonable remuneration for your trouble when the whole business is concluded."

"Always willing to oblige a friend on those terms," said Mr. Davis, with another agreeable smile. "Would you like me to write to our young friend at once, and tell him he can have the money?"

"If you please," replied Mr. Deedes, and after a little further conversation, he left the money-lender's office in the highest spirits.

Two or three days passed. The last day of Arthur's term of grace arrived, and the young man had not fulfilled the conditions imposed on him by selecting a new profession. The old gentleman was consequently in a state of bitter indignation against his adopted son, when Crafton Deedes arrived and told his ingenuous story—how his suspicions about Arthur had been aroused, how he had made inquiries, and how he had found that the reprobate had been actually raising money by a post-obit bond on the life of his benefactor. Almost incredulous at first, Mr. Dobson insisted on accompanying Deedes to the money-lender's office, where he learned the bitter truth. Then he gave way to his wrath. That night, when Arthur came home, he received a letter enclosing a cheque for £100, together with an intimation that he must leave the house at once, and that Mr. Dobson desired neither to see nor hear of him again.

After this Mr. Deedes had an easy task, and circumstances seemed to conspire to render it yet easier. Though Mr. Dobson was a hale and vigorous old gentleman, he had been visibly affected in health and spirits by his recent anxiety. A day or two after Arthur's dismissal he was seized with a fainting fit. His medical man pulled a long face, and prescribed rest and careful nursing. Where could these be so advantageously obtained as in the comfortable house of Mr. Deedes and under the watchful eye of that gentleman's wife? Mr. Dobson, who was rather downhearted and lonely, took kindly to the idea, when it was suggested to him. The arrangements were soon completed, and when the testator had been once installed under the roof of Mr. Deedes, it need not be said that many weeks did not elapse before his former will was replaced by a new one, in which the solicitor and his family got all they had so patiently waited and plotted for.

* * * * *

There was only one person in the world, besides old Dobson himself, who felt any genuine sorrow for Arthur Seaton's downfall, and that was Miss Nellie Goodwin, who occupied the post of nursery governess in the family of Mrs. Crafton Deedes. Under the fostering care of Mrs.

Herefordshire Cider & Perry, six distinct varieties. Gold Medal, Paris, 1888. The Bishop of Ely writes, 1892, "Your Cider & Perry are excellent." List from H. P. Bulmer & Co., Rylands, Hereford.

Deedes, who thought it an excellent idea that Arthur should crown his misdemeanours by an attachment to a nursery governess, a dangerous flirtation had been for some time in progress between Seaton and Nellie; and so successful had been the diplomacy of the solicitor's lady that, at the time Arthur was cast penniless on the world, the pretty but imprudent little governess had already promised to become his wife. Nellie ought to have known better, it is certain; but she was only nineteen, and an orphan besides.

To do Arthur Seaton justice, he was not the man to contemplate a romantic match upon nothing a year. But as he was fond of Miss Goodwin in his way, and the girl was much fonder of him in hers, they kept up a clandestine correspondence after the final breach with Mr. Dobson, and even met furtively from time to time. In this way Mr. Seaton was kept pretty accurately informed of all that occurred in the house of Mr. Deedes. He heard something about the new will, the nature of which Mrs. Deedes had confided to Miss Goodwin. He heard, further, that the doctor in attendance on Mr. Dobson had privately confided to Mr. and Mrs. Deedes that his patient's heart was in such a condition that it was extremely doubtful whether he would live six months. Mr. Seaton was now in a position to form a much more accurate estimate of Mr. Deedes's character and motives than he had ever done before, and his change of opinion caused him to run into the opposite extreme of ascribing to the solicitor all his own misfortunes. He had thus worked himself into a fine condition of misery and hatred, when an unexpected opportunity for revenge presented itself.

At one or two of their meetings, Miss Goodwin had laughingly told her lover of numerous little attentions paid by Mr. Dobson to herself. The old gentleman was very fond of his cousin's children, and spent much time in their nursery and school-room; besides which he would accompany the children on their daily walks. He had also been profuse in small acts of gallantry to Miss Goodwin, paying her pretty compliments, and buying little presents for her.

All this, however, was nothing more than might pass for a display of fatherly regard on the part of a widower of sixty-three towards a pretty girl forty years younger, and Nellie and her lover joked often over it.

"Arthur," said Nellie one evening, when they had met as usual, "do you love me very much?"

"What do you think?" responded the young man, ambiguously.

"Would you be very heart-broken if I were going to marry some one else?"

"I don't know," replied Arthur, with an affectation of stoical indifference. "Are you thinking of doing it?"

"I have got the chance," said Nellie, demurely.

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that I have been asked to become Mrs. Joshua Dobson."

"What!" cried Arthur, stopping in astonishment. "You don't mean to say the old boy has actually proposed?"

"He really did, though—on a seat in Kensington Gardens, this morning, while the children were playing a little way off."

And Miss Goodwin exploded into a fit of laughter, in which Seaton heartily joined.

"What did you say?" asked Arthur, when their merriment had slightly subsided.

"He would not let me say anything. He was very kind to me. It is wicked of me to laugh at him," said Nellie, more seriously, "but, indeed, he made me cry at the time. He said he knew it would take me by surprise, and insisted that I should think it over for a week before I gave him an answer."

"You might do worse than take him, Nell," Seaton observed, in a mournful tone. "Why, if the doctors are right, you are safe to be a widow in six months' time, and worth seventy thousand pounds. By Jove!" he added, "and I might marry you after all. Wouldn't that be a sell for Mr. Crafton Deedes?"

Miss Goodwin looked rather grave at this suggestion. But the idea which had occurred to him did not pass out of Mr. Seaton's mind. On the contrary, for some time afterwards he thought of little else, and the more he thought about it the more he liked it. The only point on which he was not quite clear was what the legal consequences would be supposing Mr. Dobson to marry Miss Goodwin and die at the end of a month or two, leaving the will which he had now made in favour of Deedes uncancelled. On this question Arthur determined to consult an intimate friend who was studying for the legal profession, and whom he contrived to see early on the following day.

The answer to his question proved very much what he had anticipated. Mr. Dobson's marriage with Miss Goodwin would absolutely revoke any pre-existing will. If he should die without making another, half his estate would by his intestacy go to his widow and the other half to the next-of-kin—that is to say, Crafton Deedes and his family. In this way, Mr. Seaton by marrying the widow would, at any rate, divide the fortune with his enemy. On the other hand, if Mr. Dobson should live long enough to make a new will in favour of his wife, Mrs. Dobson's second husband would cheat Mr. Deedes of the bulk of his sordid expectations. The idea was so admirable that at his next interview with Miss Goodwin, which took place the same evening, Seaton urged her to lose no time in marrying Mr. Dobson. The old man, he pointed out, might easily be persuaded into a secret marriage. She herself might find a pretext for that course, and, if not, the state of Mr. Dobson's health, and the strict injunctions of his physicians that he should avoid all excitement, would furnish a sufficient reason.

Miss Goodwin listened with a solemn face, which flushed hotly as Seaton unfolded his scheme.

"You surely do not mean this seriously, Arthur?" she said, when he finished.

"Of course, I do. Why not?"

"Oh, Arthur, how can you ask? It would be a vile and wicked thing to do!"

"Nonsense!" was the curt response. "Where's the wickedness?"

"It would be wicked to everybody concerned, and it is a horrible thing to ask of me—you, of all people! Is this what you call love?"

"Love, indeed!" cried Seaton, hotly. "What right have you to talk of love, if you let absurd scruples stand in the way of what would make us both happy for life!"

"Take care, Arthur. You don't know what you are saying."

"Indeed, I do. Look here, Nellie, if you like to make a sacrifice of your feelings in order that we may be married in a few months' time, well and good. If not, I think our engagement had better terminate, for in our present circumstances it is only an absurdity."

"I quite agree with you, if we can only remain engaged on the terms you name. Will you kindly see me home?"

They walked back in silence. As they parted Arthur said:

"Take a day or two to think this over, and let me know the result. Remember, I am in earnest. If you refuse Mr. Dobson, we must part."

At the end of a couple of days he received the following note:—

DEAR MR. SEATON,—I have acted on your suggestion, and accepted Mr. Dobson's proposal, but beyond that you need not expect my assistance in your plans. I consider that in asking what you did, you grossly insulted me, and you must now, please, understand that all communication between us must cease henceforth and for ever.—N.G.

The last sentence gave a turn to the letter which he had hardly expected; but Mr. Seaton did not allow himself to be greatly disturbed by his abrupt dismissal.

MINTON'S (Limited). MINTON'S CHINA.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

HOUSE DRAINAGE.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

"That's a settler for Mr. Crafton Deedes, anyhow," he moralised, as he tossed the note into the grate. "As for you, Miss Goodwin, I have no doubt that your temper will have cooled down a little by the time you have put on your weeds."

* * * * *

A few weeks later there was confusion and dismay in the house of Deedes. Old Mr. Dobson, who to the disgust of his host and hostess had been in much better health and spirits lately, went out for a walk with Miss Goodwin, and never came back. He left behind him a letter for his cousin, conveying the painful announcement of his marriage to Miss Goodwin that morning. He added something else scarcely less unpleasant. Having learned from his young bride before his marriage the opinion which his own doctor had formed of his condition, the old gentleman had paid a visit to that medical Pontiff, Sir Phelim Pulce, and Sir Phelim found no trace of the disease which his brother medico had suspected.

It was a crushing blow to Mr. Deedes to see the fruit of his long labours thus destroyed at one blow. However, when the first pang was passed, he accepted the situation with his usual philosophy.

"After all," he said to his wife, "Sir Phelim is not likely to have told him the truth—they never do. And all this excitement is very likely to do the business for the old boy. If he dies intestate, we divide with Mrs. D., and half a loaf is better than no bread. The only thing we need seriously fear is his making a new will in her favour. I must stop that, if I can.

The opportunity of stopping it came more easily than Deedes could have hoped. Mr. Dobson appeared desirous of remaining on friendly terms with his cousin. He called upon him a few weeks after his marriage, and matters were soon smoothed over. But the old gentleman at once explained to Deedes that he must again alter his testamentary intentions, and he gave instructions, accordingly, for a new will to be prepared, under which, of course, the lion's share of his property was to go to his wife, only a paltry legacy of £5,000 being bestowed upon Mr. Deedes. Deedes assented with the best grace he could, and then set to work to delay the execution of this instrument by every artifice known in the trade, and many more specially devised for the occasion. So successful was he that nearly four or five months elapsed and still the new will was unsigned. At this juncture Fate suddenly crowned the solicitor's amiable efforts. After having been for the sixth time frustrated in his attempts to get an appointment for the execution of the will, old Dobson came down to Deedes' office one morning in a towering passion, was suddenly seized with an attack of angina pectoris, and in half-an-hour was dead.

Deedes went home to his wife in a state of exultation which he could hardly conceal beneath the air of woe proper to the sad occasion. To his surprise, Mrs. Deedes by no means appeared to share his satisfaction at the issue of his scheme.

"You are my clever, Crafton, I dare say," she said "I only hope it won't turn out that you have been too clever."

"What do you mean?" asked Deedes, in surprise.

Mrs. Deedes said something in an undertone which caused her husband to start up with an oath.

"You don't mean it, Emily?" he cried. "Nonsense! The thing's impossible!"

"Impossible or not, I have suspected it for some time past. You will very soon see whether I am right."

"If you are right, we are ruined. She and the child will take everything. We shall be worse off than we should have been if he had executed the new will."

Mrs. Deedes was right. There was a child born some three months after Joshua Dobson's death. The father having died in the eye of the law intestate, Mrs. Dobson and the child did take everything. Mr. Crafton Deedes and his wife, consequently, got not a farthing more than young Arthur Seaton, who, after one or two unavailing attempts to induce the widow to reconsider her decision against him, disappeared for ever in the Colonies.

Borwick's Baking Powder. It is the best that money can buy.
Borwick's Baking Powder. Has been awarded Five Gold Medals.
Borwick's Baking Powder. Guaranteed to be free from alum.

MUSIC.

MASCAGNI AT WINDSOR.

YET another Royal performance, designed mainly to introduce Mascagni to the Queen, came off at Windsor Castle on Saturday night, and there is no reason to doubt with as much success as under the circumstances was possible. At any rate, the manager furnished a splendid cast, and mounted the operas with his well-known liberality, and Mascagni, who conducted, had a long audience of her Majesty. Of course, with the best will in the world, Sir A. Harris cannot give at Windsor a representation equal to those at Covent Garden. The Waterloo Chamber is a wretched place for sound, and all sorts of expedients have to be devised in order, on the one hand, that the delicate nuances may be heard at all, and, on the other, lest in forte passages the orchestra should drown the singers. The Covent Garden drummer, were he allowed to enjoy himself after his wont, would easily be able in the Waterloo Gallery to emulate a whole park of artillery; while, as in any case the brass instruments would have been too loud, their sound was muffled by thick carpets placed under the chairs. That this expedient, an idea of Signor Bevignani, should be necessary at all, is sufficient to condemn the Waterloo Gallery for operatic performances. On Saturday afternoon for upwards of an hour, Signor Mascagni had to keep his orchestra at rehearsal in order that they might be accustomed to "play down" to the room. To increase the difficulty the Royal party and the band now sit on a level with the stage, an arrangement which naturally stultifies even the poor acoustic qualities which the Waterloo Chamber can boast. Then again it was found necessary to reduce the chorus to fifteen of each sex, Sir A. Harris was obliged to get fresh scenery painted, and the artists on their dolls-house stage were never altogether at their ease. Happily on Saturday night the weather was moderately fine, but even under the most favourable climatic conditions, the invariable scarf-pin or the inevitable bracelet, is hardly sufficient compensation to tenors and sopranos who rely for their living upon delicate throats, for the risk run in returning home from Windsor by train at one o'clock in the morning. M. Jean de Reszke, whose voice is worth to him something between £150 and £250 a day, according to the country in which he sings, never has tempted fate by taking part in these night performances at Windsor, and the consciousness that Signor de Lucia thus avoided a draughty railway journey must have afforded that eminent tenor some sort of consolation on the illness of his wife, which suddenly on Friday last called him back to Italy. It is a pity that at any rate the leading singers cannot be accommodated in the Castle, and it is a still greater pity that her Majesty prefers the Windsor representations instead of occasionally using the Royal box at the Opera House, where she would witness a performance worthy of Royalty, and where also she would be the genuine prima donna of the evening; a bigger "draw" than the greatest of lyric artists.

The Queen takes great interest in the music of Mascagni, and in conversation with him at Windsor she (according to the composer himself) questioned him closely about his fondness for frequent changes of key. The key-changes are, however, not so frequent as the changes of time and rhythm; and the critics (or, at any rate, the leaders of that body), with whom the Italian musician appears to be not a little vexed, have expressly stated that these alternations, which look so strange on paper, are effective enough at performance. The true causes of the fate of "I Rantzau" lie in the libretto, and in the fact that Mascagni is writing too much. He admits having produced three operas in as many years, while a fourth—to wit, "Ratcliffe"—is now ready, and two more, viz., "Romano" and "Nero"—are on the stocks. If he would only go a little less rapidly he might give us another "Cavalleria Rusticana."

The opera season will end next Tuesday, two extra representations being given to compensate the subscribers for the State performance and the Royal Wedding night, when the house was closed. Even down to date a more brilliant opera season has rarely been held within living memory. On the other hand, the idea to produce four works, three of them entirely new to the English stage, on four successive nights, from Tuesday to Friday this week, has, of course, been abandoned. Such a thing might be a tour de force, it might have been magnificent, but it would not have been sound management. And the use of it all is still less apparent, for to offer at the fag end of the season a solitary representation of a number of novelties is of little service to the composers, the artists, or the house. Nevertheless, it seems that a trial will yet be made. As at present arranged, Mr. Isidore de Lara's "Amy Robsart" has been postponed till Thursday of this week, Wagner's "Siegfried" will be given on Wednesday, and it is said Berlioz' "Damnation de Faust" will be witnessed for the first time on the London stage on Friday, a matter on which a doubt may, perhaps, reasonably be expressed. Indeed, considering that "Faust" is so thoroughly familiar to amateurs in concert form as sung by the splendid choir of the Albert Hall, it would seem almost reckless to produce it hurriedly at the fag end of a season, when the voices of the unfortunate operatic choristers must be thoroughly fatigued. As to "The Veiled Prophet," which it is now said will be presented on an extra night in Goodwood week, Dr. Stanford would be wise to withdraw it till next season. Altogether apart from the fact that at the termination of a harassing season, it would need something like a miracle to give it a fair chance, "The Veiled Prophet" could not possibly be accorded more than a solitary representation, a fate which on July 9, 1884, also befel Dr. Stanford's "Savonarola" at the same theatre.

Whatever may be the results of the Chicago Exhibition, the world's fair is at any rate attracting an enormous number of artists to the United States this autumn. Mr. Lloyd is already in America, and in a few weeks' time Mr. Ben Davies and Mr. Bispham will sail thither to take part in the first performance of Dr. Mackenzie's "Bethlehem," which the composer will go over to conduct. On August 10, too, Madame Mary Davies sails to sing at the Chicago Eisteddfod, in which there will also take part a typical Welsh choir, to defray whose expenses £1,000 has been subscribed by the music lovers of the Principality. Madame Nordica will likewise return to the States, and in mid-September MM. Jean and Edouard de Reszke, M. Lassalle (whose experience of the high charges of hotels is likely to be amplified in Chicago), MM. de Lucia, Vignas, Montariol, Plançon, and Ancona; Mesdames Calvé, Eames, Melba, Arnoldson, Guercia, and Scalchi will sail, to join the Abbey and Grau opera company on October 2. Furthermore, next month Miss McIntyre will go to Italy, to remain there a twelvemonth. Very few artists of the front rank will thus be left in England, and this should give an encouraging chance to many a promising youngster.

The projected revival of "La Grande Duchesse" at the Prince of Wales has, I think wisely, been given up, but that charming little opera, "La Fille de Madame Angot," will be mounted at the Criterion on Saturday, with Miss Decima Moore in the part created in the early seventies by that graceful artist Pauline Luigini. "Jane Annie" will be revived at the Savoy early in September, in order to allow time for the due preparation of the new Sullivan and Gilbert opera.

The following delightfully naïve request was recently sent to Mr. J. W. Sidebotham, M.P. That gentleman, who is a Mus.Bac. Oxon, and is, I believe, the only Member of the House of Commons possessing a University musical degree by examination, forwarded it to Mr. Southgate, editor of the Musical News:—

London Conservatoire of Music, Hyde Park, W.
(Executive Department), June 23, 1893.

The Committee of the Conservatoire present their compliments to Mr. J. W. Sidebotham, and will feel obliged if he will allow his valuable name to be inserted in the Patron's list, also acceptance of a ten guinea season ticket. Two stalls will be reserved for Sir Arthur Sullivan's grand opera, June 29. The stall-keeper's charge, 21s., is the only sum that should be sent to the secretary for securing stalls for twelve months.

I also have, from time to time, received from several correspondents the circulars of this institution, and in particular one dated early in 1892, ominously printed in red ink, and offering a ten guinea season ticket for nothing at all, although "To defray the actual cost of postage and stall keeper's fees one guinea will be the only charge for one year, or ten guineas for a Life Governor's ticket." In a circular from this same London Conservatoire of Music, issued early this year, and now before me, the charge for the fifty guinea "Life Governor's ticket" seems munificently to have been reduced to £5. 5s.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—In reading Mr. Percy Fitzgerald's "Twenty Years at the Lyceum" (1)—as picturesque a presentation of Mr. Henry Irving as that artistic actor has given of any character in his répertoire—I have again and again had the misgiving that the sumptuous manager of the Lyceum has done his beloved art the disservice which the Sabines did Tarpeia. What, for instance, is to be said for the sacrifice of half the text of "Hamlet" to the mounting of that play of plays:—

A price has to be paid for scenic splendours in the shape of the delays that they necessarily occasion. Thanks to the ingenuity of stage carpenters and machinists, these delays at the Lyceum are reduced to a minimum time. "Henry VIII.," being not one of the longest of the plays—though it is one-third longer than "Macbeth"—the text at the Lyceum has been treated with comparative leniency. "Hamlet," on the other hand, which comprises nearly 4,000 lines, cannot, on the modern system of sumptuous mounting, possibly be given in anything approaching to its entirety. As a fact, very nearly one-half the play disappears from the modern acting copies.

Melpomene lost in her ornaments! Like the girl in Ovid:—

> Auferimur cultu et gemmis, auroque teguntur
> Omnia; pars minima est ipsa puella sui.

Laying the stress upon such sumptuous distractions is as unjust to the players as to the play, and is most unjust of all to Mr. Irving himself, who, in my judgment, shows at his best in pieces where he is least dependent upon accessories, and even upon auxiliaries—such as "The Bells" and the "Lyons Mail." Passing, however, prudently by the controversy whether Mr. Irving is not naturally a more adequate interpreter of such a poet, say, as Victor Hugo, than of such a poet as Shakespeare, I come to common ground upon which all Englishmen meet—admiration of the man as distinct from the actor. This admiration Mr. Fitzgerald's book will do much at once to explain and to increase. Could any one grudge a success won with such patient toil and worn with such engaging modesty? I cannot resist quoting for you Mr. Irving's own reminiscence in the days of his success of a significant incident of the days of his struggle. Joe Robins, having in an evil hour quitted his hosier's shop for the boards, was reduced at last to live upon the sale of the hosiery he had reserved from his stock for personal wear:—

So piece by piece, as necessity demanded, his princely supply of haberdashery diminished, and now only a few shirts and underclothes remained to him. Christmas came in very bitter weather. Joe had a part in the Christmas pantomime. He dressed with other poor actors, and he saw how thinly some of

(1) "Henry Irving." A Record of Twenty Years at the Lyceum. By Percy Fitzgerald, M.A., F.S.A. (London: Chapman & Hall, Limited.)
(2) "Mr. Punch's Pocket Ibsen." A Collection of some of the Master's best-known Dramas condensed, revised, and slightly re-arranged for the benefit of the Earnest Student. By F. Anstey. With illustrations by Bernard Partridge. (London: William Heinemann.)
(3) "Something Occurred." By B. L. Farjeon. (London: George Routledge & Sons.)
(4) "Literary Blunders." A Chapter in the "History of Human Error." By Henry B. Wheatley, F.S.A. ("The Book-Lover's Library." Edited by Henry B. Wheatley, F.S.A.) (London: Elliot Stock.)
(5) "Some Legendary Landmarks of Africa." By Mrs. Frank Evans. (London: Cassell & Co., Limited.)
(6) "The Art of Practical Whist." Being a Series of Letters descriptive of every part of the Game, and the best method of becoming a Skilful Player. By Major-General Drayson, late R.A., F.R.A.S. (London: George Routledge & Sons, Limited.)
(7) "Kings of Cricket." Reminiscences and Anecdotes with Hints on the Game. By Richard Daft. With Introduction by Mr. Andrew Lang. Illustrated by Eighty Portraits of Eminent Cricketers, &c. (London: Simpkin, Marshall, & Co. Bristol: J. W. Arrowsmith.)

them were clad when they stripped before him to put on their stage costumes. For one poor fellow in especial his heart ached. In the depth of a very cold winter he was shivering in a suit of very light underclothing, and whenever Joe looked at him, the warm flannel under-garments snugly packed away in an extra trunk weighed heavily on his mind. Joe thought the matter over, and determined to give the actors who dressed with him a Christmas dinner. It was literally a dinner upon underclothing, for most of the shirts and drawers which Joe had cherished so long went to the pawnbrokers or the slop-shop to provide the money for the meal. The guests assembled promptly, for nobody else is ever so hungry as a hungry actor. The dinner was to be served at Joe's lodgings, and before it was placed on the table Joe beckoned his friend with the gauze underclothing into a bedroom, and pointing to a chair, silently withdrew. On that chair hung a suit of underwear which had been Joe's pride—scarlet, thick, warm, heavy, and it fitted the poor actor as if it had been made for him . . . . Proud, happy, warm, and comfortable, he felt little inclination to eat; but sat quietly and thanked Providence and Joe Robins with all his heart. "I seem to enter into that poor actor's feelings very sympathetically," said Mr. Irving. "I have good reason to do so," he added, with his sunshiny smile, "for I was that poor actor!"

While on a theatrical subject I may mention to you that Mr. Anstey's capital parodies upon Ibsen's plays have been republished from Punch, with Mr. Partridge's irresistible illustrations (2). Ibsen gives himself away to the parodist, and Mr. Anstey carves his grim personages into sufficiently grotesque gargoyles. The humour, however, is of a kind appreciable only by those who read Ibsen, i.e., by admirers of that dramatist—a sensitive generation who may possibly resent the profanity. By the way, I wonder if Mr. Farjeon's really delicious "Something Occurred" (3) was suggested by Mr. Anstey's immortal "Vice Versâ"?:—

"Indeed," says Mr. Wottisnot, the Genius of the Utterly Absurd, "I think I can promise you that the something which will occur will be something funny—something to make people laugh." "In that case," said Edwina, in a tone of conviction, "it becomes almost a duty."

An unquestionable duty which Mr. Farjeon has performed to admiration in this charming drollery. It needs a light and whimsical touch to make the exchanges by a bride or bridegroom of heads only (their bodies and respective statures remaining unchanged) credible and most amusing; but this and a dozen other preposterous miracles the Genius of the Utterly Absurd forces us to accept and to enjoy with a helpless and happy abandonment. Only the Genius of the Utterly Absurd, you would say, could have inspired most of the amusing mistakes recorded in "Literary Blunders" (4); but surely there was method in the madness of these two answers?

"What was the character of Queen Mary?" "She was wilful as a girl and cruel as a woman, but what can you expect from any one who had had five stepmothers?"——"What do you know of Sir Walter Raleigh?" "He introduced tobacco into England, and while he was smoking he exclaimed, 'Master Ridley, we have this day lighted such a fire in England as shall never be put out!'"

Most of the best blunders noted are well-known, while many of the remainder are too trivial for record in a volume of the series—The Book-Lover's Library—to which the collection belongs. I hope, however, that such book-lovers—and they are numberless—who are mere lichens of learning, will take to heart the many instances of elephantine pedantry brought to bear upon some petty misprint—like a crow-bar prising up a tin-tack. There is a good deal of waste of power also in Mrs. Frank Evans' fanciful, and sometimes even fantastic, dressing up African savagery into pretty prose idylls.

Perhaps 'tis pretty to force together
Thoughts so all unlike each other.

There can, however, be no question of the prettiness of the workmanship of "Some Legendary Landmarks of Africa" (5). Having advertised you of the appearance of the fifth edition of General Drayson's admirable "The Art of Practical Whist" (6), and of Mr. Richard Daft's "Kings of Cricket," (7) illustrated by eighty portraits of eminent cricketers and favoured by an introduction from the Briarean-handed Mr. Andrew Lang, I think I have fairly done my duty by you to-day.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—You cannot imagine how pleasant the drowsy lull is that has fallen upon the London season. Every one was so tired and worn out with the Wedding week that it was delightful to feel there was nothing to do. We availed ourselves to the fullest of the opportunity of enjoying the dolce far niente, and for two days did nothing but read.

After a couple of days of delicious laziness it was rather jolly to go to Sandown on Friday and find ourselves in the midst of a rampantly-excited crowd, so numerous that lots of people could find no seats either on the benches of the Stand or on the lawn. The excitement over Orme was tremendous, although La Flèche and Medicis found plenty of admirers. Orme was positively mobbed in the paddock, the Duchess of Westminster being among those who went to have a look at the grand animal before the race began. The Duchess, with whom Prince Christian talked for a little while, wore a dress of dark blue crépon, with wide bands of black satin round the skirt—one at the foot, the other half way up. Each band had upon it a narrow line of cream-coloured guipure. Her hat of sunburnt straw had a black brim, and was trimmed with blue flowers. She wore a yellow rose, her husband's racing colour, and so did the Duke himself, in the buttonhole of his grey coat. So did all the ladies of the party. Lady Margaret Grosvenor was in blue bird's-eye surah, and the Marchioness of Ormonde in fawn colour relieved with pale blue.

It was a tremendously exciting race, as was betokened by the extraordinary dead silence that fell upon the bookmakers' enclosure, while the horses kept well together at the end of the course by the railway. Then when Medicis was seen to be gaining on Orme, the roars of the wild men in that enclosure became absolutely deafening. I never in my life heard such an awful din. A minute later, when Orme was seen to have it all his own way, the excitement was more intense than ever. A girl standing beside me on one of the benches in the grand stand jumped three times into the air with a wild whoop each time. Yells of "Orme wins!" "Orme wins!" resounded on every side, and men shouted themselves hoarse in their excitement. It was extraordinary to see so much feeling and devotion expended upon a horse, magnificent creature though he is. When the race was concluded, the Duke of Westminster, sitting in the Jockey Club box, received a perfect ovation. Men turned round and waved their hats to him with cries of "Bravo! Bravo!" Ladies waved their handkerchiefs and made their sunshades gyrate in the direction of the Duke, who received all this tribute with a quiet smile. We made our way as quickly as we possibly could to the back of the Club-house to see the horses return to the paddock. La Flèche did not seem much the worse for the race, but Medicis and Orme were in a lather of white foam where the reins touched their necks. The Duke led the latter by the bridle, the jockey looking rather nervous now that the eventful five minutes were over. Following them came Mr. Arthur Coventry on his business-like grey, the Duke of Cambridge walking by him with his hand on Mr. Coventry's, in earnest conversation.

As to dress, I have never seen anything to equal the

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

COSTUMES FOR SCOTLAND, &c.—Messrs. REDFERN beg to announce that they have designed some very practical Gowns for ladies visiting Scotland, either for Shooting, Travelling, Golfing, &c., to which they invite an inspection.—27, New Bond-street, London, W.

display on this occasion, with the one exception of this year's Ascot. The dull, wet mornings had militated against the show of sunshades, many having taken umbrellas or en tout-cas in the fear of getting their bonnets spoiled; but this very circumstance had increased the variety in costumes, some people actually wearing furs. It seemed odd to see a girl in white muslin with sable round her neck. The threatening weather had not prevented one lady from wearing a white brocaded silk, and another white satin, while several girls appeared in white muslin, that ideal fabric of the poet and the novelist. Its apparent simplicity conceals this season an inner elaboration of costly silk linings, and silk and lace balayeuse, to say nothing of a necessary accompaniment of under-petticoats cut to exactly the same shape as the skirt of the dress and trimmed with deep flounces of fine lace. The white linen costumes may be reckoned among the disappointments of life, so charming are they when their acquaintance is first made, and so rapidly do they deteriorate immediately after. The proverb "Love me little love me long" might be exactly reversed for them. Both coats and skirts look crushed, untidy, and demoralised after once wearing, even when the weather is fine, and a passing shower reduces them to an aspect of hopeless dejection. Some of the holland costumes escape this characteristic, and oddly enough it is the coarser and least expensive makes that do not crush and are not depressed by damp.

One of the freshest and prettiest dresses was white muslin worn over pale pink silk, and made with long lines of Valenciennes insertion from the waist to the hem. Mrs. Langtry's soft cream-coloured muslin was printed with pale flowers, and fastened at the waist and at the neck with bands of heliotrope velvet. She wore a hat of heliotrope chip trimmed with folds of pale green chiffon. Any number of white linen and duck costumes were to be seen, a few fresh and dainty, the rest more or less crushed, and some of them positively unsightly from this cause. We again admired, on the tall girl who wore it at Sandown before, a holland dress beautifully made and fitted with exactitude to her fine figure. It was turned back with a deep square collar of white satin covered with cream-coloured guipure, and was bound in round the waist with a white satin sash. There was no basque to the coat in front, and a real pink rose with its green leaves was fastened into the rippling brown hair under the Tuscan hat with its trimming of black feathers. We rather liked a tan-coloured canvas with black satin collar and belt.

Have you seen any of the Punchinello bonnets? They may possibly suit one face in a thousand, but I have never seen one on any head that it suited. The specimen worn at Sandown was no exception. A wing bonnet worn by a very fat woman was very funny, so ridiculously inadequate did the tiny wings look as compared with the eleven stone or so of solid flesh with which they attempted to suggest the idea of aërial flight. Another very stout individual had added considerably to her already ample width by wearing a pair of huge green velvet sleeves; her bonnet was also rather wing-like.

Lady Londonderry looked extremely handsome in black silk, flowered over with pink, and a black hat with roses. Lady Curzon, on the box-seat of Baron Hirsch's coach, was in the neatest possible fawn-coloured Redfern costume, with a sailor-hat, the crown of which was encircled with a red, white, and blue ribbon. The Duchess of Devonshire wore her usual black, with a little white in the bonnet. Caroline, Duchess of Montrose, sat in the Jockey Club box. I only saw her hat, which was black. We missed her in the paddock, for which I was sorry, as it is so interesting to see her with horses. I am sure she loves them far better than she does human beings, though her friends all declare that she is one of the kindest-hearted women in England. Lady Randolph Churchill, who was accompanied by her husband, wore one of her favourite drab cloth coats, and a black hat with heliotrope flowers. She talked with Mrs. Hwfa Williams, who was looking extremely pretty in a black dress trimmed with cream-coloured lace, and all fluted in frills about her neck. Lady Alwyne Compton, in check tweed, sat in the Jockey Club box next a handsome woman in a bonnet with a very high crown of jet. Lady Alington, looking rather pale, wore her favourite sky blue.

Two thirds of the women present were looking washed out and limp after the tiring rush of the last fortnight. Pale faces and heavy eyes proved that the owners stood greatly in need of a change from crowded London and its dissipations. Those who had crowded on a lot of rouge in the attempt to mend matters were the ones who looked worst, the bright red only serving to show up their haggardness and hectic. At lunch we sat opposite a woman with painted lips, which almost robbed us of our appetite.

One of the prettiest dresses we saw was a soft black grenadine made with three full flounces, each bordered with sparkling jet. A little jet trimmed the bodice, and a few white roses were gracefully disposed in the black hat. Another coveted gown was in grey crêpe de-chine, embroidered with small white sprigs, and trimmed with three bands of white silk round the skirt. The small ruff boa of white ostrich made a becoming finish. A pale, pretty girl looked perfectly charming in a black gauze dress, with bodice of pink silk covered with old point, and made coat-fashion, with cut steel buttons. Her black chip hat was very large and picturesque, with many feathers for trimming. We noticed several hats with the long "Amazon" feathers curling under the brim at the back and resting on the hair.

The excitement made us fearfully tired, and we sauntered slowly enough across the fields to catch the first special. There may possibly be better racecourses than that at Sandown, but there is none that is regarded with so much affection by Londoners.

I have just had another letter on the subject of men's clothes from "A Young Bachelor." He writes:—

DEAR MISS MADGE,—I am glad to see you are interesting yourself in men's attire, for we really want some good advice and suggestions. Very few men know how to dress really well; they are very much behind the opposite sex in original ideas. When a man gets into one way of dressing, he sticks to it until he is literally dragged out of it, and a great many don't mind what the fashion is, and there is a fashion in man's dress which alters seldom and very slowly. The latest thing in man's attire is the sash worn round the waist, instead of a waistcoat. This is, I consider, an unnecessary garment. It looks slovenly. I have for years in London during the summer months always gone without a waistcoat at all, buttoning just the bottom button, or the one next to it, of the coat, which leaves the coat fairly open at the top, and with a nice clean white canvas tie, tied in a sailor knot, pinned neatly down on a well-got-up white shirt, gives a cool appearance, and looks simple, neat, and clean. The latter two things are the main points to be thought of in man's dress. There is nothing at all unseemly in showing so much shirt, but if there is, the fair sex must not accuse us, for they go about themselves in shirts without a coat at all, when we poor men, in order to hide our shyness, have to endure being wrapped up in one this hot weather.

You may remember my telling you some time ago about two ladies who pluckily started together in a florist's business at 33, New Bond-street, trading under the title of Burrell & Co. They have got on capitally, and made a great success last Thursday in decorating Mrs. Arthur Wilson's house in Grosvenor-place for her ball. In the hall were grouped large clusters of tree palms, smaller palms, with lordly lilies, tall hydrangeas, and ferns of the brightest, coolest, and most vivid green. On two tables, one on either side of the hall-door, they erected banks of snow-white flowers and ferns. Half-way up the stairs there is a long window, which they filled in with a bank of roses, yellow, pink, and crimson, a tall arch being fixed above them in the window and covered with roses. In the drawing-room the fireplace was filled with white hydrangeas and lilies, and the place of the fender was a border of pink carnations, ivy geraniums, pink sweet-peas, and asparagus ferns. Enormous trumpet vases were filled with lilies, mounted very high with grasses and ferns. Trails of smilax starred with stephanotis were wound round the vases. The tables in the supper-room had each a centre-piece of flowers, two composed of yellow marguerites, roses, and foliage, two more of white lilies and carnations, two others of pink lilies and carnations, and others with mixed roses. The house looked perfectly lovely, as you may imagine, with such effective and beautiful decorations.

LADIES' TAILOR-MADE SHIRTS, made to measure only, and fitted by cutter. In cambric, saratta, zephyr, and silk. Unshrinkable, and fast colours.—SAMPSON & Co., 270, Oxford-street, W.

The Editor of a ladies' paper recently gave forth to the world a leader expressing the extraordinary doctrine that it is immodest for a woman of mature years to go out in the street without some extra shoulder covering in the shape of mantle, coat, or cape, worn over the dress bodice. Fortunately for the ladies of England who have passed their first youth there is no law on the subject, either sumptuary or social. Had such existed during the last three months of unusual heat much unnecessary suffering would have been the consequence. Were it immodest to appear in the street in a dress bodice, it would be equally immodest to wear it in the home circle unsupplemented by other coverings. At Sandown many ladies were content with the bell-fitting dress bodice, trimmed on the shoulders with lace, and sometimes the sleeves contrasting in tint with the dress itself. The soft grey Irish poplin, bordered with a little frill headed with steel passementerie, was made with a bodice set with a yoke of steel passementerie laid on over white satin which showed through. The upper sleeves consisted of large puffs of white satin, gathered into tightly-fitting fore sleeves of the grey poplin, trimmed with bands of the steel passementerie. A white lace hat was worn with this, trimmed with a few small grey feathers and a yellow rose or two. A beautiful dress of petunia bengaline was filled in front with butter-coloured chiffon, both hat and sunshade being composed of the same aërial material. Among the white dresses was a muslin striped with pink in broad lines, and worn with a pink chiffon sash. A large black Duchess of Devonshire hat was the strongly contrasting head-gear chosen to accompany this.

Here are some nice recipes for you. Let me recommend you to try these fillets of soles:—

Trim the fillets of a medium-sized pair of soles, lay them flat on the board and spread the smooth side of each with whiting forcemeat; roll them tightly, and arrange them on a buttered sauté-pan, with the end so placed, that they will not uncurl in cooking. Cover with a buttered paper, moisten with half a gill of stock, that is made from the boiled fish bones, and bake them in a moderate oven from twenty to thirty minutes, remove them to cool. Then drain them on a cloth to absorb the moisture, place each on a fork and dip them in thick mayonnaise sauce; arrange them in two close rows on a bed of shred luttuce; sprinkle the tops alternately with passed lobster coral and chopped truffle. Put a border of sliced cucumber at the base, with a pinch of coral and truffle, alternately on each slice. The forcemeat is made by pounding the flesh of a fresh whiting to a pulp, then adding half its quantity of bread panada, an ounce of butter and one egg, pass it through a wire sieve, and again work it in a basin with a wooden spoon, adding half a gill of cream, and salt and pepper to taste.

This is another pretty way of serving fillets of soles:—

Trim the fillets of two soles, and divide each in half, lay them on a buttered sauté-pan, with the thin end of each slightly curved, to make them keep their shape in cooking; dust them with salt and pepper, squeeze a few drops of lemon-juice on each, cover with a buttered paper, moisten with half a teacupful of fish-bone stock, and bake them about fifteen minutes, then remove them to cool. Fill a plain indented border-mould with aspic jelly, and when it has set, turn it on to a bed of washed and dried mustard and cress; now dip each fillet in mayonnaise sauce, and decorate them tastefully with picked tarragon leaves, strips of truffle, and passed coral. Arrange the fillets in a close circle on the jelly, garnish the base with chopped aspic, and finish the centre with some salad mixed with mayonnaise sauce.

Lobster strawberries are made thus:—

Pass the coral from a nice hen lobster through a wire sieve on to a plate and place it aside. Pick the meat from the shells of the lobster, pound it thoroughly with 2 oz. of fresh butter, season with salt and pepper, and pass it through a wire sieve. Form the mixture into balls and roll them in the passed coral. Put a few strawberry or raspberry leaves into a sufficient number of small round paper cases, and place a lobster strawberry in each. Arrange them on a dish paper, and garnish with leaves.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

MARIANI WINE

MARIANI WINE is an aid to intellectual exertion, and is indispensable to brain-workers and others who suffer from Weakness, Over-exertion, Mental Depression, Dyspepsia, Sleeplessness, Voice Fatigue, and for Convalescence. Written Testimonials from over 2,000 Physicians. "A powerful rejuvenator and renovator of the vital forces." Sold by Chemists, Grocers, and Stores, or delivered free by Importers, WILCOX & CO. 239, Oxford-st., London, 4s. per bottle, or 45s. doz.

JAY'S
Annual Sale
WILL CONTINUE
THROUGHOUT THE MONTH.
Great Reductions in Mantles, Costumes, Millinery, and Ladies' Underwear.
REGENT STREET. LONDON.

THE MANUFACTURING
GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY
Show Rooms—112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)
Supply the Public Direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving Purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Fine Diamond Half-hoop Rings. from £15 to £200.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £8.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
THE
GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE LTD.
(A. B. Savory & Sons), late of 11 and 12, Cornhill, E.C., is sold to this Company, and the business is transferred to the above address.

Fine Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Ring, £18 10s.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

The Largest and Choicest Stock in the World of Novelties specially prepared for WEDDING & COMPLIMENTARY PRESENTS.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Border Ring £23

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £6.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Bracelet, £35.

REGISTERED DESIGN
Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Diamond Cluster Ring, £25.

CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly.

NO. 1 EAST ROOM CUISINE VERITABLEMENT FINE.
SPECIALLY DEVOTED TO THE SERVICE OF
À LA CARTE DÉJEUNERS AND DINNERS in the most Recherché Style of French Cookery.
CUISINE UNRIVALLED IN ENGLAND. LARGE SELECTION OF CHOICE WINES.
NO. 2 EAST ROOM.
A Special Dinner at 10s. 6d. each Will be served in this Room at Separate Tables, between the hours of 6 and 9 p.m.
COMPOSED OF A SELECTION OF DISHES FROM THE CARTE DU JOUR OF THE EAST ROOMS.

LADIES LEAVING TOWN,

GOING ABROAD, OR INTO THE COUNTRY, SHOULD BUY A BOTTLE OF

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR,

a cooling and emollient preparation for the face and arms during the heat and dust of summer. It prevents the skin becoming red or sunburnt, removes Tan, Freckles, Roughness of the Skin, soothes Irritation and Insect Stings, and produces a fair and delicate skin. Bottles, 4s. 6d. Half bottles, 2s. 3d.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO,

an antiseptic preservative and aromatic dentifrice, which whitens the teeth, prevents and arrests decay, and sweetens the breath. It contains no mineral acids, no gritty matter or injurious astringents, keeps the mouth, gums, and teeth free from the unhealthy action of germs in organic matter between the teeth, and is the most wholesome tooth powder for smokers.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL

prevents the hair falling off or becoming dry during hot weather. Is the best preserver and beautifier of the hair of children and adults; prevents it falling off or turning grey, eradicates scurf and dandruff, and is also the best brilliantine for ladies and everybody's use, and as a little goes a very long way it really is most economical for general use. Is also sold in a golden colour for fair haired ladies and children. It contains no lead or mineral ingredients. Bottles, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. Sold Everywhere.

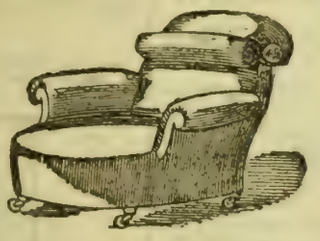
HOWARD & SONS.

PATENTEES OF

ENGLISH-MADE

PARQUET

FOR COVERING OLD FLOORS.
NEVER WEARS OUT.



DIVANS, SOFAS,

AND

EASY CHAIRS.

FURNITURE DESIGNERS & MAKERS. NEW CATALOGUES FREE.

25, 26, & 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.

300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.
ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.
Weavers of Dress Silks,
Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

MORANT & Co.

DECORATORS,

91, NEW BOND STREET (4 doors from Oxford St.)

Makers of Venetian Seats, Henri II. Benches, Louis XIII. Sofas, Louis XV. and XVI. Furniture in great variety, not to be seen elsewhere. Chaises Directoire from old models.

THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS COMPANY,
29 & 31, BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK,
Have Been Appointed our Agents in America for the sale of
"TRUTH."

Single copies can be obtained through any newsdealer in the United States and Canada, or by applying direct to the International News Co., where yearly subscriptions will also be received. Newsdealers throughout the United States and Canada can obtain supplies of TRUTH by applying to the wholesale agents.

THE NEW PATENT
TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE.
NO. 20,778.
For Ladies and Children.

These goods are spliced at the instep, where, in the case of lace-up boots and shoes, stockings first show signs of wear. In the heels and feet there is also a splicing thread more than is found in ordinary goods. Thereby the wearing power is doubled without the slightest clumsiness or discomfort. The improvement is particularly advantageous in the thinnest summer makes of stocking, where the extreme fineness of the yarn makes the ordinary goods very apt to wear out almost immediately.

Made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

See Reg. Trade Mark "MUSA DYE" on each pair.

To be obtained of all first-class Drapers and Hosiers in the United Kingdom, and

Wholesale only of the Patentees:

DEBENHAM & FREEBODY,
FLETCHER GATE, NOTTINGHAM.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN,

GREAT ORMOND STREET, BLOOMSBURY.

PATRON—The QUEEN. PRESIDENT—The DUKE of FIFE, K.T.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS urgently REQUIRED for SUPPORT of the NEW WING.

ADRIAN HOPE, Secretary.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co.'s NEW BOOKS.

PIETRO GHISLERI.

By F. MARION CRAWFORD. 3 vols. Crown 8vo, 31s. 6d.

SPEAKER.—"Mr Crawford is an artist, and a great one, and he has been brilliantly successful in a task in which ninety-nine out of every hundred writers would have failed."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Mr. Crawford's novel has more claims than one to a high place in contemporary fiction. It is admirable in its general handling and grouping of character."

NEW VOLUME OF MESSRS. MACMILLAN'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.

THE THREE FATES.

By F. MARION CRAWFORD. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

THE EVERSLEY SERIES.

Globe 8vo, 5s. each volume.

NEW AND RECENT VOLUMES.

THE LITERARY WORKS of JAMES SMETHAM.

Edited by WILLIAM DAVIES.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"The volume is rich in varied interest . . . The essays and poems combine to stamp a clear and delightful impression of the artist and the man."

LETTERS of JAMES SMETHAM.

With an Introductory Memoir. Edited by SARAH SMETHAM and WILLIAM DAVIES. With a Portrait.

ATHENÆUM.—"These letters are the first sort of record of the man—a noble and inspiring record; and they are, as letters, perhaps among the best ever written."

The MAXIMS and REFLECTIONS of Goethe.

Translated, with Introduction, by T. BAILEY SAUNDERS.

SCIENCE AND A FUTURE LIFE, and other Essays.

By F. W. H. MYERS, M.A.

MACMILLAN & CO., LONDON.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO.'s NEW BOOKS.

1. THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF AN OLD PASSPORT, chiefly relating how we accomplished many Driving Tours with our own English horses over the roads of Western Europe before the time of railways. By the Rev. ALFRED CHARLES SMITH, M.A., Author of "Attractions of the Nile," "A Sporting Tour in Portugal," "A Pilgrimage through Palestine," &c. With numerous Illustrations. Royal 8vo, cloth, 21s. [Just out.

THE NEW NOVEL "READING" AT ALL LIBRARIES.

2. DR. JANET OF HARLEY STREET.

By DR. ARABELLA KENEALY.

THIRD EDITION, Cloth, 6s.

FOURTH EDITION IN THE PRESS.

The Daily Chronicle says: "It is a clever book, and well worth reading. Miss Kenealy has imagined an interesting character, and realised her vividly."

The Pall Mall Gazette says: "Miss Kenealy has a quick sense of humour and a lively faculty of observation, and her style is vivid and effective."

Black and White says: "We recommend everyone to read this work. The really clever study of this female Abernethy."

3. SECOND EDITION OF LIKE A SISTER.

By MADELINE CRICHTON. 3 vols., 31s. 6d.

At Every Circulating Library.

The People (First Review) says:—"We predict for her a prosperous career. She writes good English, and works out her plot with considerable skill."

The Glasgow Herald (Second Review) says:—"The writer possesses the faculty of depicting character with force and consistency. The literary texture is good, and the dialogue throughout is brisk and vivacious."

4. NETTA. The New Novel.

By EDWIN ELLIOTT. 1 vol., 6s. At all Libraries.

The Academy's opinion: "Mr. Elliott is to be welcomed. . . . A quite excellent story. . . . Style so good. . . . Not only is the interest permanently sustained, but passages of dramatic vividness detain the reader."

5. THE BOW AND THE SWORD. A Romance.

By E. C. ADAMS, M.A. With 16 full-page drawings by Matthew Stretch. Pictorial cloth, 3s. 6d. At all Bookstalls, &c. [Just out.

6. THE LAST CRUISE OF THE TEAL.

By LEIGH RAY. With 22 Illustrations. Pictorial cloth, 3s. 6d. At all Bookstalls, &c. [Just out.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO., PUBLISHERS,

18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

Hatchards, Booksellers, 187, Piccadilly, London.

ALL THE NEW AND STANDARD BOOKS.

Post Orders Promptly Executed. Usual Cash Discounts.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NOW READY AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

KINGSMEAD.

By HENRY F. BULLER. 3 vols.

THE FATE OF SISTER JESSICA.

By F. W. ROBINSON, Author of "Grandmother's Money," "The Youngest Miss Green," &c. 3 vols.

THE WINNING OF MAY.

By the Author of "Dr. Edith Romney," "A Woman at the Helm," &c. 3 vols.

SECOND EDITION OF

IN THE BALANCE.

By G. M. ROBINS (Mrs. L. BAILLIE REYNOLDS), Author of "The Ides of March," "The Tree of Knowledge," &c. 3 vols.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED, 13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NOW READY, Cloth, Price 12s. 6d.

AGENTS:—SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, & CO., STATIONERS' HALL COURT, E.C.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

THE NOVEL OF THE SEASON. THE THIRD EDITION IS NOW READY.

E. F. BENSON.—DODO: A Detail of the Day. By E. F. BENSON. 2 vols., crown 8vo, 21s.

"An unusually clever and interesting novel."—Guardian.

"'Dodo' is very good company. The author's matter is original and interesting."—National Observer.

"Clever and well-written. 'Dodo's' lovers are much to be pitied, but her readers may be promised a very pleasant time."—Morning Post.

"A delightfully witty sketch of the smart people of society. The writer is a showman with keen insight and sympathy, and a true artist."—Spectator.

"The story is told with charming grace and much power. The dialogue is a feast of epigram and paradox."—Speaker.

BARING-GOULD.—MRS. CURGENVEN OF CURGENVEN. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of "Mehalah," "In the Roar of the Sea," &c. 3 vols. A Second Edition is in the Press.

"Among his series of brilliant romances, 'Mrs. Curgenven of Curgenven' is one of the best."—Morning Post.

"The swing of the narrative is splendid."—Sussex Daily News.

"A very fine and powerful story."—Bristol Mercury.

GILBERT PARKER.—MRS. FALCHION. By GILBERT PARKER, Author of "Pierre and his People." 2 vols., crown 8vo, 21s.

"The delicate truthfulness of the workmanship is not one whit less noteworthy than its vividness and power."—Daily Chronicle.

"A very striking and admirable novel."—St. James's Gazette.

"A work of original power. It has intellect and imagination in it, finely imagined and well told."—Scotsman.

"A surprise, a revelation almost."—Lady's World.

ANTHONY HOPE.—A CHANGE OF AIR. By ANTHONY HOPE, Author of "Mr. Witt's Widow," &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Humorous in conception, witty in execution. A book to read from beginning to end."—National Observer.

"Fresh in subject, and full of humour and energy."—Literary World.

METHUEN & CO., 18, Bury-street, W.C.

Mr. MURRAY'S LIST.

8vo, 6s.

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW, No. 353,

THIS DAY.

Contents.

I. THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA.
II. VISCOUNT SHERBROOKE.
III. THE BATTLE OF HASTINGS.
IV. NATIONAL LIFE AND CHARACTER.
V. THE PRIVY COUNCIL UNDER THE TUDORS.
VI. LATIN SATIRE.
VII. BOOKBINDING.
VIII. FALL OF THE ANCIENT RÉGIME.
IX. POLITICAL SPELLS.
X. THE UNIONIST CAMPAIGN.

Just out. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

A HISTORY OF MARLBOROUGH

COLLEGE, from its Foundation to the Present Time. By A. G. BRADLEY, A. C. CHAMNEYS, and J. W. BAINES. Numerous Illustrations by Old Marlburians.

Just out. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

OUTLINES OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

By WILLIAM RENTON. Forming a New Volume of the University Extension Series. Edited by Professor KNIGHT.

TWO NEW EDITIONS OF FOREIGN HANDBOOKS.

DENMARK AND ICELAND. Schleswig,

HOLSTEIN, COPENHAGEN, JUTLAND, ICELAND. New Edition, containing numerous Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.

SWITZERLAND AND THE ITALIAN LAKES.

New Edition. In Two Parts. Edited by W. A. B. COOLIDGE, M.A. Containing Nine New Maps, expressly engraved, on a large scale (1,100,000), and based on the Surveys of General Dufour and Colonel Siegfried. 10s.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street, London.

COMMENCEMENT OF A NEW VOLUME.

NOW READY, 318,000 COPIES OF

THE STRAND MAGAZINE

For JULY. EDITED BY GEORGE NEWNES.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

By MARY S. WARREN. Illustrated by Photographs.

Illustrated Interview with Mr. Edmund Yates.

By HARRY HOW.

Stories from the Diary of a Doctor.

I.—"MY FIRST PATIENT."

By the Author of "The Medicine Lady."

The Adventure of the Crooked Man.

By A. CONAN DOYLE.

And other Articles and Stories. With 147 Illustrations.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

ALSO READY.

THE PICTURE MAGAZINE.

JULY—No. 7.

Containing numerous Portraits of Eminent Q.C.'s, and about 200 other Illustrations.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

GEORGE NEWNES, LTD., 8, 9, 10, and 11, Southampton-street, and Exeter-street, Strand, W.C.

Now Ready. Foolscap 4to, Illustrated, Cloth, Gilt edges. 10s. 6d. net.

THE

EARLY DAYS OF MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE;

Or, PUBLIC SCHOOL LIFE BETWEEN FORTY AND FIFTY YEARS AGO.

To which is added

A Glimpse of Old Haileybury; Patna during the Mutiny; A Sketch of the Natural History of the Riviera; and Life in an Oxfordshire Village.

By EDWARD LOCKWOOD, Indian Civil Service (Retired).

Author of "The Natural History of Monghyr."

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT, & CO., Limited.

Price Sixpence.

THE HARROGATE MINERAL WATERS and HOMŒOPATHY. A new Analysis. Reprinted from the Monthly "Homœopathic Review."

Published by E. GOULD & SON. London, and can be purchased at any Booksellers'.

OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO.'S

POPULAR FICTION.

The Crime of Maunsell Grange.

By FREDERIC BRETON.

Three Volumes, crown 8vo, cloth, 31s. 6d.

"A finely-told tale of feminine loyalty and devotion, contrasted with womanly frailty and fickleness. . . . Few recent novels have deserved such praise as may cordially be allotted to 'The Crime of Maunsell Grange.'"—The Daily Telegraph.

"It is undoubtedly a strong and clever novel." Manchester Examiner.

"Remarkable power and finish." The Scotsman.

"No one can question the fact that its writer has talent." The Speaker.

"The book will be widely read, and so closely is the interest kept up that no reader will rest till the end of the third volume is reached."—Manchester Courier.

The Two Lancrofts.

By C. F. KEARY,

Author of "A Mariage de Convenance." Three vols., crown 8vo, cloth, 31s. 6d. [July 25th.

THE FIRST SUPPER, &c. By JONATHAN STURGES. 16mo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. [July 25th.

THE PRIVATE LIFE, &c. By HENRY JAMES. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 5s.

"The page sparkles with epigram; the wit seldom flags."—National Observer.

MEN AND MEN: a Love Story. By V. S. SIMMONS, Author of "Green Tea." Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

AN EXQUISITE FOOL: a Novel. By E. FRANCES POYNTER. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. New Popular Edition.

TALES OF NEW ENGLAND. By SARAH ORNE JEWETT, Author of "Strangers and Wayfarers," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth ornamental, 5s. [July 25th.

THE ODD NUMBER; or, THIRTEEN TALES. By GUY DE MAUPASSANT. With Introduction by Henry James. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; paper, 2s. 6d.

TOPPLETON'S CLIENT By JOHN KENDRICK BANGS. Ornamental boards, 2s.

"A pure extravaganza like 'Toppleton's Client' comes not unrefreshingly in the waste of everyday fiction."—The Athenæum.

JAMES R. OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO., 45, Albemarle-street, London.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free 3s. 8d. London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

SCOTTADIE

THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE

115 & 115A REGENT STREET

LONDON W

For

Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Mauds.
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns

Telegraphic Address—Scott Adie, London

PATRONISED BY H.I.M. THE EMPRESS OF GERMANY.

THE NOTED

"IPSWICH" POTTED MEATS.

Nothing can be better for the Yachting, Fishing, or Picnic Basket.

Sole Maker—R. SEAGER, IPSWICH.

Ask your Grocer.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards. Tennis Lawn.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast." L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 10s. 6d. per day.
According to the position of rooms selected.

BUXTON.—The PEAK THERMAL ESTABLISHMENT. A High-class Hydropathic Hotel. Mineral water and other baths. Resident physician. Electric light. Passenger lift. Magnificent public rooms. Excellent cuisine. Table d'hôte 7 p.m., separate tables. Terms moderate.—Telegrams, "Thermal, Buxton."

CALLANDER & TROSSACHS HYDROPATHIC.—
Splendid Drives. Good Fishing. Lawn Tennis. Golf.
Terms from £2 12s. 6d. per week.
Apply to the MANAGER.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

EDINBURGH.—CLARENDON HOTEL.—The finest site in Princes-street, opposite the Castle. Perfect sanitation. Table d'hôte, separate tables. English management. "The most economical first-class Hotel in Scotland." Strongly recommended. Boarding terms. Apply for tariff.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Leas. Oldest-established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor.
Sanitation Certified.

GAIRLOCH HOTEL, LOCH MAREE, ROSS-SHIRE.—This magnificent hotel is situated amidst the finest Highland scenery in the West coast of Scotland. Accommodation for over 200. Good Fishing. Large posting establishment. Swift steamer from Oban every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 2783.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

MATLOCK BATH.—ROYAL HOTEL.—Hydropathic Baths of every description. Medical Man. Healthful situation; extensive grounds, greatly admired. Large swimming bath. Billiards. Dairy farm. Splendid fishing.—Also NEW BATH HOTEL, with extensive grounds, fishing, &c. &c. Terms very moderate. 'Bus meets all trains.—T. TYACK, Proprietor.

NEWQUAY, Cornwall, The Biarritz of England.—ATLANTIC HOTEL, "the finest Hotel in the county." Splendidly situated. Full view of the Atlantic from Trevose Head to St. Ives. Ocean view from every window. Beaches, caverns, and cliff scenery unrivalled. Bracing climate. Bathing, yachting, fishing. Delightful excursions. Magnificent rooms. Strictly moderate charges.

NORWOOD (UPPER).—The QUEEN'S HOTEL, near the Crystal Palace. Specially adapted Suites of Apartments for families and permanent residents. Winter boarding. Terms from Three Guineas. A limited number of single rooms at 2½ guineas.

PARAMÉ, near St. Malo.
HÔTEL DE LA PLAGE.
Under English Management.

PORTRUSH (Giant's Causeway), co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL. Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing, sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner, from 6 to 8 p.m. French cuisine. Charges very moderate. The HOTEL is UNDER RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.

SALISBURY.—The WHITE HART FAMILY HOTEL, nearly opposite the Cathedral. The largest and principal Hotel in the City. Table d'hôte (two hours each meal) at separate tables daily. Carriages for Stonehenge and other places of interest in the neighbourhood at fixed inclusive charges. Tariff on application to H. T. BOWES, Manager.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hote at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

SEA VIEW.—ISLE OF WIGHT, PIER HOTEL. The most modern and best appointed hotel in the island. All public rooms, private sitting-rooms, and greater number of bed-rooms face the sea and pier. Splendid bathing and boating. Royal I.W. Golf Links, ten minutes' walk.
G. ROWLAND ROBERTS, Proprietor.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—ROYAL KENTISH HOTEL.—Largest, best appointed, facing the Common, close to Chalybeate Springs and Parade. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Inclusive terms, 12s. per day. Tariff of MANAGER.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER, "TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET, QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.
TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.
(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.
THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.
SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.
Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.
NO SUPPERS.
TELEPHONE No. 3,307.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA. SACKVILLE HOTEL. Situated between Eastbourne and St. Leonard. Facing sea. South aspect. moderate tariff. Golf links, tennis courts, attached to the Hotel. Terms on application. Telegrams, "Sackville, Bexhill."

LANGHAM HOTEL,
PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.
Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6 to 8.30.
Under the Management of WALTER GOSDEN.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.
(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).
Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

THE BURLINGTON RESTAURANT,
169, Regent Street, W.
The most recherché 5s. Diner Parisien in London.
Luncheons and Dinners à la carte.

EASTBOURNE. THE CAVENDISH HOTEL stands alone in the centre of the Grand Parade. Pleasant sea and land views. Patronised by many of the Royal families of Europe. Appreciated for its first-class appointments and homely comforts. Elegant public rooms, convenient family suites, &c. Passenger lift. Table d'hôte. Moderate charges.—G. LOWMAN, Manager.

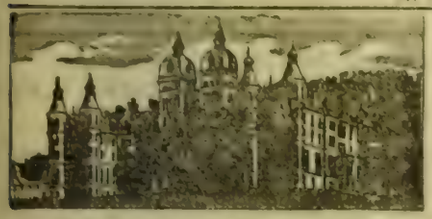
HOTELS, &c.

THE MANAGER, IMPERIAL HOTEL, ABERDEEN operates for the Royal Family, begs to call the attention of Members and Intending visitors to the fact that it is the only hotel of any that their Porters or Boots is not visible on the arrival of the trains but remain the Palace or Station Hotel Company have managed that it shall be their policy within the barriers at the station to the exclusion of those of the other hotels in town.

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

THE PALACE HOTEL.

This large and elegantly appointed high class Hotel contains upwards of 200 rooms. The hotel occupies the finest position in Buxton, and is surrounded by its own grounds of six acres. Ground floor sitting rooms and bed rooms. Magnificent public rooms. American elevator. Table d'hôte at separate tables.
A. CROSS, Manager.



Peebles Hydropathic.

Largest & Finest Hydropathic in Scotland.

Beautifully situated on the River Tweed, 20 miles south of Edinburgh. Over 30 acres of Pleasure Grounds, including Lawn Tennis and Bowling Greens, Golf Course, large Conservatory. Bedrooms are very large and airy. Magnificent scenery. Splendid drives. Terms from £3. 3s. per week. For rooms apply to the MANAGER.

ESTABLISHED IN 1875.

MACDONALD'S

IS THE ORIGINAL AND VERY MUCH THE LARGEST

HYDROPATHIC IN PITLOCHRY, PERTHSHIRE,

Standing in its own Ornamental Grounds of over 35 Acres, and 500 feet above sea level. Every window commands a view of the Most Magnificent Scenery in Scotland. To prevent disappointment Communications should in all cases be addressed to W. MACDONALD, The Athole, Pitlochry. Telegraphic Address—"Athole, Pitlochry."

ALBANY HOTEL (ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.

Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Only Hotel with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.

ON the Esplanade, overlooking St. Aubin's Bay. Finest sea views in Jersey. The Largest and best appointed Hotel in the Channel Islands. Every modern improvement. Magnificent public rooms Private suites. Swimming bath, tennis courts, &c. Terms en pension or à la carte, on application to— SYDNEY RIGGERS, Manager and Secretary.
Telegrams: "Grand, Jersey."

ILFRACOMBE.—The RUNNACLEAVE Private HOTEL. 120 beautifully-appointed rooms. Recreation-hall, to seat 500, with fitted stage; carriage, yacht, tennis, photographic dark room, billiards, and in-door skating rink, free of charge until August. Chef de cuisine. Moderate tariff.

VISITORS to NEW YORK

Seeking COMFORT, QUIET, and an ELEGANT HOME,

WILL FIND THE

Westminster Hotel

SIXTEENTH STREET and IRVING PLACE,

Replete with every Modern Convenience and Comfort. Moderate Tariff.

LOCATION.—One block east of Union-square. Convenience of Broadway, without its noise. Accessible to all Railways, Ferries, the Shopping Centre, and places of Amusement.

NEW YORK.—16th STREET AND IRVING PLACE.
(Cable Address: "Westminster, New York.")

RECOMMENDATION.
A permanent or transient home of quiet elegance, with generous management, and a cuisine of noted excellence.

REPUTATION.
An enviable one among people of taste and discrimination, desiring comfort and luxury, without the confusion and publicity of the larger hotels.

INCLUSIVE TERMS.
$3.50 (about 15s.) per day and upwards, according to location of rooms.

The water used in THE WESTMINSTER is purified by the "Buhring" patent process.
E. N. ANABLE, Proprietor.
W. W. SCHENCK, Manager.

SOUTHPORT. — PALACE HOTEL. — Summer Season. Charming Seaside Family Resort. Extensive grounds. Electric light. Tennis. Golf links. Splendid baths.

ILFRACOMBE. — ILFRACOMBE HOTEL. — Unrivalled sea frontage and open surroundings. Eight lawn-tennis courts. Large swimming bath. New lounge hall. 250 rooms.—Tariff of MANAGER.

AMUSEMENTS.

COVENT GARDEN THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. AUGUSTUS HARRIS. THIS EVENING, GRAND OPERA SEASON, under the sole direction of Sir Augustus Harris. For full particulars see daily papers. Box office open all day.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE.
NO NIGHT (Thursday), FRIDAY, and SATURDAY MORNING and EVENING, July 20, 21, and 22,
AN ENEMY OF THE PEOPLE,
By Henrik Ibsen.
Dr. Stockmann ... Mr. Tree.
MONDAY NEXT, July 24, and EVERY EVENING until further notice,
A WOMAN OF NO IMPORTANCE.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) open 10 to 5 and 8 to 10. Seats may also be booked by letter or telegram. HAYMARKET.

LYCEUM. Mr. HENRY IRVING, Lessee and Manager.—To-night (Thursday), at 8.20, NANCE OLDFIELD and THE BELLS. To-morrow (Friday) Night, and Saturday Night, at 8.20, the Last Night of the Season, BECKET. Box-office (Mr. J. Hurst) open 10 to 5. Seats also booked by letter or telegram.—LYCEUM.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Charles Warner, Mr. Charles Cartwright, Mr. Herbert Flemming, Mr. Rudge Harding, Mr. John Carter, and Mr. Arthur Williams; Miss Elizabeth Robins, Miss Gertrude Kingston, Miss Florence L. Forster, and Miss Fanny Brough. Box plan now open at theatre and all libraries. Telephone No. 2,645. Doors open at 7.30.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester square, under the management of AUGUSTIN DALY.—Every Night, at 8.45, AUGUSTIN DALY'S COMPANY of COMEDIANS in LOVE IN TANDEM (Eccentric Comedy). Miss Ada Rehan, James Lewis, Mrs. Gilbert, George Clarke, Arthur Bourchier, Isabel Irving, &c. At 8.15, LOAN OF A LOVER. Catherine Lewis, William Gilbert, &c. Morning Performance Saturday, July 22, at 2. Season closes July 29. Box-office daily, 9 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8, MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine and Charles Danby; Misses Florence Dysart and Letty Lind. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30. Special Engagement of Miss Loie Fuller. Matinee To-day, Thursday, at 2.30.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.45.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music, and Varieties. At 8.30, the New Grand Romantic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, entitled FIDELIA. At 10.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 35,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Leicester-square.—Grand Programme.—Two Grand Ballets, Second Edition of ROUND THE TOWN and KATRINA. Unqualified success. Unrivalled VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Magnificent Orchestra. Doors open at 7.45. No free list.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—FULL LICENCE.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Prices from 1s. EVERY EVENING at 8.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Lottie Collins, James Fawn, Lillian Alexander, F. H. Celli, Millie Hylton, Herbert Campbell, the Great Athos Troupe, Ada Blanche, Marie Le Blanc, Brothers Griffiths, Ada Reeve, Dutch Daly, La Petite Amoros, Clara Torr, G. W. Hunter, Alice Maydue; Ara, Zebra, and Vora; Eugene Stratton, Fred Harvey, Arthur Rigby.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations. Lighted throughout by electricity. THE LIBERATOR FAILURE.—Portrait Model of Jabez Spencer Balfour. The PANAMA SCANDAL.—Portrait Model of M. Ferdinand de Lesseps. CABINET MINISTERS.—New Portrait Models of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Sir William V. Harcourt, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, and Lord Randolph Churchill, &c., &c. New and graphic Tableaux, A FOOTBALL SCRIMMAGE. Over 400 other Portrait Models in Wax. Historical Tableaux. Grand scenes representing British Sports, Nursery Rhymes, &c. Eminent People "At Home." Music all day. Chamber of Horrors—Lambeth Poisoning Case, Portrait Model of Thomas Neill Cream. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Extra rooms, 6d. Open from 9 to 10.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SPORTS and PASTIMES EXHIBITION. "Those who indulge in outdoor amusements will here find something to interest them in every department, from driving to shooting, and from curling to cricket."—Morning Post. OPEN DAILY. No extra charge. The Poaching Annexe closes at 8.

"SPORTERIES," CRYSTAL PALACE.—POACHING and NATURAL HISTORY ANNEXE.—"Realistic representations of stubble fields, grouse moors, coppice, and keepers. . . . besides specimens of man traps, poachers' bags, drag-nets, gate-nets, rabbit snares, pheasant and partridge hingles or leg ties, spring guns, poachers' rings, and dog spears."—Times.

"SPORTERIES," CRYSTAL PALACE.—POACHING and NATURAL HISTORY ANNEXE.—"Mr. Frederic Sturt's natural history collection is probably unique. . . . Great praise is due to Mr. Charles Thorpe for his collection of deer, buffalo, zebra, wild boar, leopard, and other specimens, but still greater honour is due to him for the admirable group of British wildfowl."—Daily Telegraph.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SPORTS and PASTIMES EXHIBITION.—Carriage Section.—"A capital display of vehicles of almost every pattern used, not only in field sports, but for the road; also by the most eminent makers, both in the Metropolis and the provinces."—Sporting Life.

MADAME ALBANI, Miss Marian Mackenzie, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Andrew Black, Mr. R. Grice, and the Ladies and Gentlemen of the Choir and Orchestra (3,000 performers), have generously given their services for the special performance, on Saturday Afternoon next, at the Crystal Palace, of the GOLDEN LEGEND, in AID of the MANSION HOUSE FUND for the RELIEF of the WIDOWS and ORPHANS of the CREW of H.M.S. VICTORIA. Organist, Mr. A. J. Eyre. Conductor, Mr. August Manns. Popular prices. One Shilling Day. Five Shilling tickets admit to Palace and numbered seat; Unnumbered Seats, 2s. 6d. and 1s. Tickets on sale at Crystal Palace, and the usual City and West-end Ticket Offices.

THE GRAFTON GALLERIES.—Admission 1s., 10 to 6. THIRD EXHIBITION of the SOCIETY of PORTRAIT PAINTERS. Grafton-street, Bond-street, W.

LAWRIE & CO., 15, Old Bond-street.—EXHIBITION of Loan Collection of PICTURES of Barbizon and Early English Schools, Corot, Daubigny, Diaz, Dupré, Millet, Rosseau, Troyon, Constable, Romney, Reynolds, Gainsborough, Velasquez, Turner, &c., &c. Open from 10 to 6. Admission, 1s.

AMUSEMENTS.

MR. E. GOOSSENS and the ROSA OPERA COMPANY.—Mr. E. GOOSSENS intimates that he has SEVERED his CONNECTION with the CARL ROSA OPERA COMPANY, after an engagement of ten years' duration, which has been attended with great success. It is his intention to take up his residence in Liverpool, where, in the autumn, he will enter upon tuition in various branches of music. His dissociation from the Company is solely due to the impossibility of coming to terms with the directorate.

EARL'S COURT EXHIBITION
OF
GARDENING AND FORESTRY.
THE GARDEN OF LONDON.
OPEN DAILY, 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.
ALL ROADS LEAD TO EARL'S COURT.
BANDS of the ROYAL MARINES and HON. ARTILLERY COMPANY, The EXHIBITION BAND, GRAND ORGAN, STRING BAND.
Miss NELLIE CANTHONY'S ENTERTAINMENT.
ILLUMINATIONS.
Fete of Thousands of Electric, Gas, and Vauxhall Lights, arranged with regard to colour.
FERNERIES, FOUNTAINS, WATERFALLS.
ADMISSION ONE SHILLING. SEASON TICKETS (One Guinea), admitting to the Main Building, Exhibition of Gardening and Forestry, Central and Western Gardens.

CAPTAIN BOYTON'S WORLD'S WATER SHOW,
EARL'S COURT.
PHENOMENAL SUCCESS.
COOLEST PLACE OF ENTERTAINMENT IN LONDON.
THE THRILLING SENSATION, SHOOTING THE "CHUTES," and
A HOST OF STARTLING NOVELTIES.
TWO PERFORMANCES DAILY at 3.30 and 8.30.
RAIN OR SHINE.
ADMISSION (with seat) 6d. to 5s.

ROYAL WEDDING FESTIVITIES.
MUSICIANS, CONJURORS, AND 1,000 NOVELTIES.
Call or Send for Illustrated Price List.
THE SOCIETY OF ENTERTAINERS, 44, UPPER BAKER ST. LONDON, N.W.
Mention this Paper. Telephone, 7,119.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.
This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

POST FREE
On Receipt of Remittance.
Blended Tea ... 1/4, 1/8, 2/- per lb.
Indian Tea ... 1/6, 1/10 per lb.
Ceylon Tea ... 1/6, 1/10 per lb.
PURE & FRAGRANT
DICKINS BROS. Tea Blending Warehouses, BEDFORD.
(Quantities of 3 or 6 lb. packed in Drums.)

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

TATTERSALL'S THURSDAYS' SALES.

MESSRS. TATTERSALL beg to give NOTICE that their THURSDAYS' SALES have commenced, and will be continued during the season.
SALES ON MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES. — Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion street), W.

BERKELEY SQUARE.—TO BE SOLD, the long LEASE of a conveniently fitted HOUSE of medium size in this undeniably good position. Extensive stabling.—For further particulars write KAPPA, Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, London, W.

QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS,
ST. JAMES' PARK, S.W.
(OPPOSITE ST. JAMES' PALACE).
A FEW SUITES TO LET AT REDUCED RENTALS.

LOWESTOFT and OULTON BROADS.—TO LET, Furnished, for season, GENTLEMAN'S RESIDENCE, in own grounds. Eleven large bed and sitting rooms; lawn, gardens, stabling; 100 acres mixed shooting, fishing; garden produce. Near town and station. Many others.—TITCOMB & FEW, Lowestoft.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c.—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Particulars as to the best University or Army TUTORS and SCHOOLS for Boys or Girls, at home or abroad, may be obtained (free of charge) by sending a statement of requirements to R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand.

LOWEST SUMMER PRICES.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES; Londonderry Wallsend, 22s.; Pittington Wallsend, 21s.; Primrose, 20s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 19s. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

MILD INDIAN CIGARS. OBTAINABLE EVERYWHERE.
BAHADUR

TRELOAR'S SEAMLESS CARPETS.

CHEVIOT CARPETS

ALL COLOURINGS, ALL WOOL, FRINGED AND BORDERED.

Size.	Price.
9 ft. 0 in. by 7 ft. 6 in.	£1 2 6
10 ft. 0 in. by 7 ft. 6 in.	1 5 0
10 ft. 0 in. by 9 ft. 0 in.	1 10 0
11 ft. 0 in. by 9 ft. 0 in.	1 13 0
12 ft. 0 in. by 9 ft. 0 in.	1 16 0
12 ft. 0 in. by 10 ft. 6 in.	2 2 0
12 ft. 0 in. by 12 ft. 0 in.	2 8 0
13 ft. 6 in. by 10 ft. 6 in.	2 7 0
15 ft. 0 in. by 12 ft. 0 in.	3 0 0

SHETLAND CARPETS

QUITE NEW, CANNOT BE OBTAINED ELSEWHERE, ALL WOOL.

Size.	Price.
9 ft. 0 in. by 7 ft. 6 in.	£1 15 9
9 ft. 0 in. by 9 ft. 0 in.	2 2 9
10 ft. 0 in. by 9 ft. 0 in.	2 7 6
12 ft. 0 in. by 9 ft. 0 in.	2 17 0
12 ft. 0 in. by 10 ft. 6 in.	3 6 6
12 ft. 0 in. by 12 ft. 0 in.	3 16 0
13 ft. 6 in. by 12 ft. 0 in.	4 5 6
15 ft. 0 in. by 12 ft. 0 in.	4 15 0

AXMINSTER, WILTON, BRUSSELS, & SAXONY CARPETS, at REDUCED PRICES.
A CATALOGUE OF ALL THE BEST FLOOR COVERINGS POST FREE.

TRELOAR & SONS
LUDGATE HILL, LONDON.

Royal Amateur Photographers.

THE STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY

H.M. THE QUEEN.

H.R.H. The Princess of Wales

H.R.H. Princess Christian

H.R.H. Princess Louise

H.R.H. Prince Henry of Battenberg

H.R.H. Prince Henry of Battenberg

H.R.H. The Duke of Connaught

H.R.H. Princess Henry of Prussia

H.R.H. The Prince of Naples

H.R.H. Prince Demidoff of Siam

H.R.H. Prince Sanssaucht of Siam

H.R.H. Prince Raff of Siam.

H.R.H. Prince Christian Victor

H.S.H. Princess Catherine Youriewsky.

H.S.H. Prince Boris Czetwertynski.

H.E. The Governor-General of India.

Etc., etc. etc.

AS USED BY H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES

FREE

LESSONS IN PHOTOGRAPHY

ARE GIVEN BY THE

Stereoscopic Company,

106 & 108, Regent-st. W

AND

54, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

PRICES, COMPLETE WITH 2 LENSES AND 3 SLIDES.

To take pictures

	£	s.	d.
5 × 4	15	15	0
6½ × 4¼	25	0	0
7½ × 5	26	12	0
8¼ × 6½	35	0	0

200 p.p. List Free by Post for Seven Stamps.

SPÉCIALITÉ:—THICK LEGS & THIN FEET.

A Want Long Felt, met at Last.

GOLF, SHOOTING, and CYCLING

STOCKINGS!

HOMEKNIT.

Free from all Seams.

Made of pure long staple Scotch Wool, full length, broad ribs, double heels and toes, most comfortable in wear, guaranteed to give satisfaction.

Colours: Navy Blue, Black, Light and Dark Grey, Heathers, and Fancy Mixtures.

ALL SIZES—1/9, 2/3, 3/6.

Spécialité:

THICK LEGS and THIN FEET, 2/6, 3/6.

THE HIGHLAND CHECK,

(As Illustration.)

Hand-Knitted, for Cycling, Golf, or Shooting, 3/6 & 4/6

Thick legs and thin feet 5/6

Postage, 3d. per pair; 2 pairs, 4½d.

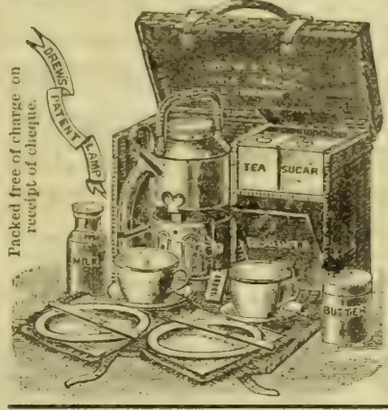
Terms: Strictly Cash with Order

A. W. GAMAGE,

126, 127, 128, 129, HOLBORN, E.C.

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET



Packed free of charge on receipt of cheque.

Two-person size, complete as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5/-, Polished Nickel, 7/6.

G. TANSLEY & CO.,

BALL AND CONCERT FURNISHERS,

16, WIGMORE STREET, CAVENDISH SQ., W.

AND

91, GLOUCESTER ROAD, QUEEN'S GATE, S.W.

SUPPLY ON HIRE

For BALL CONCERTS, GARDEN PARTIES, &c.
TABLES, SEATS, CHINA, PLATE, GLASS, &c.
BALL ROOMS LIGHTED BY ELECTRICITY OR CANDLES.
TEMPORARY ROOMS ERECTED WITH PATENT CEILING AND SPECIAL POLISHED FLOOR.
DOORWAY AWNINGS. STALLS FOR BAZAARS.
ENTERTAINMENTS AND MUSICIANS PROVIDED.

PRICE LISTS SENT FREE ON APPLICATION.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.

PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE

For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1.1s.

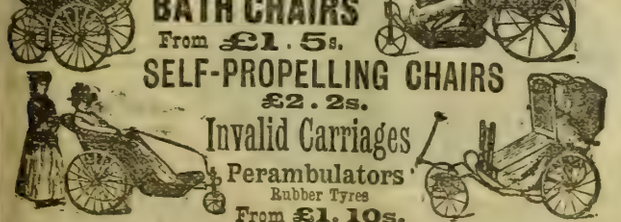
INVALID COMFORTS

Walking Machine for the lame

Adjustable Couches and Beds, £2.
Exercising Chairs £5. 5s.
Reclining Boards £1.1s.
Commodes £1.
Leg Rests 10s. 6d.
Easy Chairs £2. 10s.
Commode Chairs £2. 10s.
Carrying Chairs, £1.
Bed Tables 7s. 6d.
Crutches 10s. 6d.
Folding Couch Chairs 10s.
Bed Rests 10s.

BATH CHAIRS

From £1. 5s.



SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS

£2. 2s.

Invalid Carriages

Perambulators

Rubber Tyres

From £1. 10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.

Telgrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

SURPLICE SHIRT.

MADE TO MEASURE.

MADE ON THE PREMISES.

GENTLEMEN'S Complete OUTFITTERS.

PRICE LISTS ON APPLICATION.

SAMPSON & Co.

268, 270, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

SUMMER SERVICE OF TRAINS TO SCOTLAND BY THE WEST COAST (L. & N. W. & CAL. RYS.) ROYAL MAIL ROUTE.

ADDITIONAL AND ACCELERATED EXPRESS SERVICE FROM LONDON TO ABERDEEN AND THE DEESIDE, THE HIGHLAND RAILWAY, AND THE CALLANDER AND OBAN LINE.

NEW CORRIDOR TRAINS

WITH REFRESHMENT AND DINING CARS ATTACHED BOTH FOR 1st AND 3rd CLASS PASSENGERS BETWEEN LONDON AND GLASGOW.

LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN AND CALEDONIAN RAILWAYS.—The following ADDITIONAL AND ACCELERATED TRAIN SERVICE is now in operation. 1st and 3rd class by all trains:—

WEEK DAYS.

Leave	a.m.	a.m.	a.m.	a.m.	p.m.	p.m.	p.m.	p.m.	p.m.	p.m.	p.m.	A night
London (Euston)	5 15	7 15	10 0	10 30	2 0	7 30	8 0	8 50	9 0	10 0	12 0	0
Arrive
Edinburgh (Pr. St.)	3 55	5 50	6 30	7 40	10 55	See Note.	See Note.	6 30	..	8 55	12 22
Glasgow (Central)	3 45	6 0	6 45	8 15	10 45			..	6 40	9 18	12 27
Greenock	5 38	7 20	7 40	9 52	12 6			..	7 45	10*38	1 40
Gourock	4 50	7 31	7 50	10 2	12 15	..	..	..	7*55	10*47	1 50
Oban	8 48	..	..	..	..	..	9 25	12*15	..	1*50	6§25
Perth	5 45	..	..	8 17	12 20	5 30	5 40	7 55	..	11*10	3 20
Inverness—viâ Dunkeld	..	..	..	..	6 10	10 40	11 5	2†40	..	6* 5	10 5
Dundee	7 15	..	..	9 10	1 5	7 30	7 30	8 55	..	12*10	4 32
Aberdeen	9 5	..	..	10 45	3 5	7 50	7 50	11 40	..	2* 0	6 20
Ballater	..	..	..	..	9 45	9 45	9 45	2*15	..	4*50	..
Inverness—viâ Aberdeen	..	..	..	..	8 10	1 35	1 25	6* 5	..	10* 5	..

The 7.30 p.m. express from Euston to Perth will run from July 18th to August 11th inclusive (Saturday and Sunday nights excepted). The Highland Company will take this train forward specially from Perth in advance of the Mail, so as to reach Inverness at 10.40 a.m.

*On Saturday nights the 8.50, 9.0, and 10.0 p.m. trains from Euston do not convey passengers to stations marked * (Sunday mornings in Scotland).

†Arrives at Inverness at 1.30 p.m. on Sundays. § Saturdays only.

A—The 8.0 p.m. Highland Express and the 12.0 night train will run every night (except Saturdays).

The 8.0 p.m. Express will be run specially on Saturday, August 5th.

On Saturdays passengers by the 10.30 a.m. and 2.0 p.m. trains from London are not conveyed beyond Perth by the Highland Railway, and only as far as Aberdeen by the Caledonian Railway.

Carriages with lavatory accommodation are run on the principal express trains between London and Scotland, without extra charge.

Improved sleeping saloons, accompanied by an attendant, are run on the night trains between London, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Greenock, Stranraer, Perth, and Aberdeen. Extra charge, 5s. for each berth.

A special train will leave Euston (Saturdays and Sundays excepted) at 6.20 p.m. from 10th July to 11th August inclusive for the conveyance of horses and private carriages only to all parts of Scotland. A special carriage for the conveyance of dogs will be attached to this train.

Additional trains from Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester, and other towns will connect with the above trains.

For further particulars see the Companies' time bills.

FRED. HARRISON, General Manager, L. & N. W. Railway.
JAMES THOMPSON, General Manager, Caledonian Railway.

July, 1893.

AUSTRALIA and NEW ZEALAND. — NEW FAST PASSENGER ROUTE, viâ Vancouver, by fastest Atlantic steamers (any line) to Montreal or New York; thence via Canadian Pacific Railway, taking in the grand scenery of the Rockies, only actual trans-continental line running through trains under one management.

Atlantic to Pacific. Many optional routes, including Niagara and Chicago. Break of journey allowed.

New steamships, 5,000 tons each, of New Zealand and Australasian S.s. Co., largest, fastest, and finest running from American Continent to Australasia, leave Vancouver about as follows:—

S.s. MIOWERA .....August 14th,
S.s. WARRIMOO .....September 14th,

monthly thereafter, calling Honolulu, Brisbane, and Sydney. Electric light good cuisine, exceptionally large cabins.

For pamphlets and berths apply to Passenger Department, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, King William-street, London, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISES by the steamships "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, "CHIMBORAZO," 3,847 tons register, and "LUSITANIA," 3,877 tons register, leaving LONDON as under:—

For NORWAY,

2nd August, for 24 days. | 16th August, for 15 days.

Calling at LEITH two days later.

The Steamers will be navigated through the "Inner Lead," i.e. inside the fringe of islands off the coast of Norway, thus securing smooth water, and will visit some of the finest fiords.

For SICILY, GREECE, the LEVANT, and CRIMEA, leaving 2nd September, for 46 days.
For the MEDITERRANEAN, leaving 12th September, for 31 days.
For MADEIRA, TENERIFFE, WEST INDIES, AZORES, &c., leaving 22nd November, for 65 days.

The Steamers are fitted with Electric Light, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Baths, &c.

Managers { F. Green & Co. / Anderson, Anderson, & Co. } Head Offices, Fenchurch-avenue, London.

For passage apply to the latter firm, at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, E.C.; or to the West end Branch Office, 16, Cockspur street, S.W.

NORWEGIAN YACHTING CRUISES (FORTNIGHTLY) FROM NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

Shortest route to Norway. Only one night at sea.

By the ALBION STEAMSHIP CO.'S (Ltd.) Fast and Splendidly-fitted Yachting Steamer

"MIDNIGHT SUN" (Captain NIVISON, R.N.R.), 3,020 tons, 2,860 horse-power.

Fares from 12 Guineas, including a sumptuous table.

NEXT SAILINGS—JUNE 17; JULY 1, 15, 29; AUGUST 12, 26; SEPTEMBER 9.

All applications for Berths to be made to the Yachting Steamer "MIDNIGHT SUN" Passenger Office, 4, Lombard-street (Tel. Add., Tourist), Newcastle-on-Tyne. Write for Itineraries

---

CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

CHEQUE BANK CHEQUES the safest form of Money for Travellers. Cashed by nearly 300 Banks in United States and Canada.—Apply, Cheque Bank, Limited, 4, Whitehall place, S.W., or George yard, E.C.

HEATHMAN'S LADDERS

Are a wonderful convenience. They separate or form steps, or extend to varying heights, just as one's needs vary.

Height (closed).	Extend to	Price.
6 ft. 0 in.	10 ft. 6 in.	16s. 6d.
7 ft. 0 in.	12 ft. 0 in.	19s. 6d.
8 ft. 0 in.	14 ft. 0 in.	22s. 6d.
9 ft. 9 in.	17 ft. 0 in.	26s. 6d.

CARRIAGE PAID.

37, ENDELL STREET, LONDON, W.C.

Write for Prices of this and their 'CONVOLVULUS' Wire Mat to Sole Agents: W. F. DENNIS & Co., 11 Billiter St., London E.C.

CAMEO
CIGARETTES

A PHOTOGRAPH IN EVERY PACKET.

A SEPARATE MOUTHPIECE FOR EACH CIGARETTE.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Pearsall's Washing Linens,

(British Made).

For Dresses, Blouses and Costumes. In Butcher Blues, Pink, Pale Green, &c., all of which will Wash. Sold by leading West-End Drapers. 'Pearsall's' on every yard.

THE MILDEST OF MILD INDIAN CIGARS are

OAKES & Co.'S SUPERS

NO. 3,

THE PAGODA BRAND. QUALITY & FLAVOUR UNEQUALLED.

The Cheapest and Best INDIAN CIGAR in the Market.

SAMPLE BOX of 100 SENT to ANY ADDRESS for FIFTEEN SHILLINGS.

OAKES BROS. & CO., 46, NEW BROAD-STREET, SOLE IMPORTERS.

CARPET CLEANING.

CARPETS and TAPESTRIES Cleansed from dust by PURE AIR.

Impossible to damage the most delicate fabric.

Collection and Delivery free.

Send for Prices and Particulars to your Upholsterer, or

The Compressed Air Carpet & Tapestry Cleaning Co.

Brook Green, W. Office: 94, Victoria-st., Westminster.

N.B.—The Trade and Public are invited to visit our Works, and convince themselves of the bona fides of our process.

"IZAL" is a newly-discovered Non-poisonous Disinfectant for Nursery, Domestic, and Public Sanitation, possessing greater Antiseptic Power than Pure Carbolic Acid, but entirely free from the dangers and objections attending the use of Carbolic Disinfectants.

"IZAL"

"IZAL" instantly destroys Infection in its most dangerous and virulent forms, stops Cholera, Smallpox, Diphtheria, Influenza, Scarlet, Typhus, and Typhoid Fevers, and covers the whole field of Infectious Diseases. Its non-poisonous properties make it safe to use under all conditions. It has the special advantage of being non-caustic, and does not benumb the hands or irritate the skin, and can be used for washing wounds. It is non-corrosive to metals or surgical instruments, and will neither stain nor injure linen, bedding, clothing, carpets, hangings, or furniture. It is a sanitary necessity and protector for the Sick Room, the Nursery, the Household, the Hospital, and for Public use.

LARGE BOTTLES, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.
CAN BE USED WITH GREAT ECONOMY.

SOLE PROPRIETORS AND MANUFACTURERS:
NEWTON, CHAMBERS, & CO., LTD., THORNCLIFFE, SHEFFIELD.
LONDON OFFICES:
19, GREAT GEORGE STREET, WESTMINSTER, and THORNCLIFFE HOUSE, 331, GRAY'S INN ROAD, W.C.
The "IZAL" Pamphlet, containing simple rules for the protection of life and health, should be read by every Parent and Householder in the land. Sent post free.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.
Prepared only by the
ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.
IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.
Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

MAPPIN & WEBB'S PATENT TABLE KNIVES.

SAMPLES & PRICES FREE.

"UNEQUALLED FOR HARD WEAR."

Only London Addresses,
158, OXFORD ST. W.
2, QUEEN VICTORIA ST. E.C.
(FACING THE MANSION HOUSE.)

MANUFACTORY—NORFOLK STREET, SHEFFIELD.

"The Cup of the Prince, the Peer, and the Peasant."
"The most popular and healthful Beverage of the Century."

By Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.

"MERSANO"

The GREAT RESTORER & PRESERVER of HEALTH.

A SPARKLING NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE.

Recommended by all the leading medical faculty as the only perfect and health preserving table drink. The most welcome friend in every sick room, and indispensable on every table.

CERTIFICATE OF HONOUR and GOLD MEDAL have been awarded for the special excellence of "Mersano."

To be had Everywhere at 6d. per Bottle.

Wholesale from Local Agents in all parts of the Kingdom. Any difficulty with local supply, communicate with the Patentees:—

Forbes, Maxwell, & Co., Ltd., Aberdeen

SAMPLE BOTTLE POST FREE NINE STAMPS

ASK FOR

DR. RIDGE'S

The Perfect Food for Children and Invalids.

Patent Cooked

FOOD.

CAUTION. All the Genuine Packets and Canisters are enclosed in White Wrappers, the words DR. RIDGE'S PATENT COOKED FOOD are printed boldly thereon, so that none need be deceived or mistaken.

PREPARED AT THE ROYAL FOOD MILLS, LONDON, AND SOLD RETAIL BY ALL LEADING CHEMISTS AND GROCERS THROUGHOUT THE KINGDOM.

Protection from Chill in every Climate!

JAEGER

TRADE MARK.

PURE WOOL CLOTHING TESTED FOR PURITY, NON-SHRINKING, AND STRENGTH.

(THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST.)

The "JAEGER" Goods are tested for purity in the Company's laboratory, and guaranteed by this Trade Mark, without which none are genuine.

"Dr. Jaeger's HEALTH CULTURE," 188 pp., and Illustrated Jaeger Catalogue free.

LONDON DEPOTS.—3 and 4, Princes-street, Cavendish-square, W., with Tailoring; 30, Piccadilly (next to St. James's Hall); 30, Sloane-street (Knightsbridge end); 456, Strand (close to Trafalgar-square); 85 and 86, Cheapside (close to King-street); 158, Fenchurch-street (close to Lime-street); 42 and 43, Fore-street (close to Moorgate-street Station), with Tailoring.

PUREST IN ENGLAND.

BOURNE TABLE WATERS

SODA, SELTZER, LITHIA, POTASH, LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, ETC.

Supplied in 6 Dozen Cases Carriage Paid by

Analysis, &c., on Application.

R. M. MILLS & CO., BOURNE, LINCOLNSHIRE.

West-End Agent, D. WHEATLEY, 16A, North Audley-st., W.
City Agents, ALEX. D. RAE & CO. (late Hardy & Co.), Chemists, 23, Fenchurch-street, and 6, Railway-place, E.C.;
And of all CHEMISTS, WINE MERCHANTS, &c.

BENGER'S FOOD:

For Infants, Children, and Invalids.

"Humanly speaking, 'Benger's Food' entirely saved baby's life. He could digest nothing until we began the 'Benger.' He is now rosy and fattening rapidly."—Extract from Private Letter.

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED

INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION.

TINS, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s., OF ALL CHEMISTS, &c.

The ONLY Antiseptic Saline.

SALT REGAL

FOR ALL

Bilious and Nervous Disorders,

SUCH AS

Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion,
Disordered Liver.

At all Chemists throughout the world, in bottles, 1/6 and 2/9.

Office: 49, ISLINGTON, LIVERPOOL.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week: acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.

Botanic Medicine Co., 3, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN,

and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, JOHN THOMPSON Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S

WORLD-FAMED

BLOOD MIXTURE

"CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE is entirely free from any poisonous or metallic impregnation, does not contain any injurious ingredient, and is a good, safe, and useful medicine."

ALFRED SWAINE TAYLOR M.D., F.R.S. Lecturer on Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology.

Warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities from WHATEVER cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the blood and bones. Thousands of testimonials. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent for 33 or 132 Stamps, by the Proprietors—THE LINCOLN AND MIDLAND COUNTIES DRUG CO., LINCOLN.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.
No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
(ESTABLISHED 1867.)
ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,
From £30 to £5,000,
To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their
NOTE OF HAND ALONE.
ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.
Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.
NO SURETIES REQUIRED.
Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

WHAT IS BEAUTY?
Fresh, Clear, Firm Complexions, and a Beautiful Figure.

ANNA RUPPERT, the Eminent Lectures, under Royal patronage, can give you all that is required to make you an envied woman. Try RUPPERT'S SKIN TONIC. Harmless, effective, and permanent. Does not require continued use; refreshes and makes any complexion firm and girlish. Nothing magic, but a perfect tonic, used locally.
ARTISTIC MANICURING.—Have your hands and finger nails made beautiful, 4s. 6d.
BEST CHIROPODIST in London; reasonable.
SPECIAL LONG-WAISTED CORSET (perfection), 12s. 6d.
PUREST COMPLEXION SOAP in the world, 1s. (three for 2s. 6d.)
BEAUTIFUL ILLUSTRATED "BOOK OF BEAUTY," contains much valuable information. Sent to any address, 4d. in stamps. All advice upon the subject of Face, Hair, Hands, Feet, and Figure given freely. No charge. Consultation with Mrs. RUPPERT daily between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. All clients' names sacred. All letters in perfect confidence. Special treatment for special cases. Don't suffer with red faces, acne, eczema, oily skins, &c. Write at once, for SKIN TONIC has been subjected to the best doctors in England and pronounced harmless and beneficial, 10s. 6d. per bottle; three bottles (usually necessary), 25s. Call or address, the Complexion Specialist,

ANNA RUPPERT,
89, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.

Also at 124, Western-road, BRIGHTON; 3a, Shandwick-place, EDINBURGH; 74, Grafton-street, DUBLIN; 8, King-street, MANCHESTER; Clarence Chambers, Corporation-street, BIRMINGHAM; 66, Marland-place, SOUTHAMPTON; 17, Rue de la Paix, PARIS; BERLIN, VIENNA, MADRID, BARCELONA, CALCUTTA, SYDNEY, &c.

TAYLOR'S CIMOLITE
Is the only thoroughly harmless SKIN POWDER. Prepared by an experienced Chemist, and constantly prescribed by the most eminent Skin Doctors. Post free. Sent for 14 or 36 penny stamps. MOST INVALUABLE.
J. TAYLOR, Chemist, 13, Baker-street, London, W.

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES OVERCOME
and perfect hearing restored. Permanent, inexpensive and painless. Book of particulars, 2 stamps. The H. A. WALES Co., 63 & 63, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?
PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement and biliousness, it has been pronounced by medical men of high authority as most efficacious.

"I use the Aërated Pitkeathly largely, and value it."—Dr. MATTHEWS DUNCAN.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.
London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.
Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

TOO FAT. Dr. GORDON'S Elegant Pills cure STOUTNESS, rapidly and certainly. State height, weight, and send 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., or 11s. to DR. GORDON, 24, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

ANÆMIA
Or Bloodlessness.
DEEKS' ANÆMIA PILLS.
Blood Producing. Tonic. Non Constipating.
IN BOTTLES OF ALL CHEMISTS. Half course, 4s. 6d.; whole course, 9s.; or send postal order to W. THOS. DEEKS, Chemist, Shanklin, Isle of Wight.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,000,000. Paid up, £200,000. Total funds, £1,600,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited,
No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.
General Accidents | Personal Injuries
Railway Accidents. | Death by Accident
C. HARDING, Manager.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.
EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.
Invested Funds, £16,000,000.
The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES.
LONDON OFFICE: 81, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.
ASSETS OVER .. .. £31,800,000.
SURPLUS EXCEEDS .. .. £6,400,000.
This Society originated the Tontine System of Life Assurance, under which the premiums paid form a lucrative investment, and not an expense, affording provision for old age as well as immediate family provision in the event of death.
ABSOLUTE SECURITY. LOW PREMIUMS. LARGE PROFITS.
Before assuring elsewhere, send for Prospectus and Illustrative Pamphlets.
A. MUNKITTRICK, Manager for Great Britain and Ireland.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.

LONDON, EDINBURGH, and GLASGOW ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited.
AUTHORISED CAPITAL .....£500,000.
CHIEF OFFICE:—Insurance Buildings, Farringdon-street, E.C.

PROGRESS.	Premium Income.	Increase in Three Years.
1882	£7,929
1885	47,971	£40,042
1888	121,502	73,531
1891	248,970	127,468

Claims Paid exceed Half a Million Sterling.
APPLICATIONS FOR AGENCIES ARE INVITED.

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.
HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.
BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.
DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.
FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.
COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.
£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.
NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.
JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000." Tobacconists Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT.

BEAUTIFULLY COOL AND SWEET SMOKING.

Sold only in 1-Ounce Packets, and 2, 4, 8-Ounce, and 1-lb. Tins, which keep the Tobacco in fine Smoking condition.

Ask at all Tobacco Sellers, Stores, &c., and take no other.

SMOKERS ARE CAUTIONED AGAINST IMITATIONS.

The GENUINE bears the Trade Mark—"NOTTINGHAM CASTLE"—on every Packet and Tin.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT CIGARETTES, in Packets containing 12, And Tins of 24, 50, and 100.

By Royal Warrants of Appointment to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN,
H.R.H. The Princess of Wales; H.I.M. The Empress Frederick; H.M. The Queen of Denmark, &c.; and under the Patronage of the Courts of Great Britain, Germany, Russia, Austria, Italy, Denmark, Spain, Sweden and Norway, and Greece, &c.

Egerton Burnett's Royal Serges

And other Pure Wool Fabrics and High-class Washing Materials in the Latest Styles for Ladies, Children, and Gentlemen.
Unsurpassed for Beauty and Novelty of Design, Perfect Finish, and Admirable Wearing Qualities. For Travelling, Tourists, and General Wear, in all Climates and all Seasons. NEW PATTERNS POST FREE. ANY LENGTH SOLD. NO AGENTS.
The ROYAL NAVY BLUE SERGES will not turn a bad colour with Sun, Rain, or Salt Water.
Carriage Paid on Orders of £1 in value to any Railway Station in the United Kingdom. Goods packed for exportation.
SPECIAL RATES for the CONTINENT, INDIA, and the COLONIES. Mention this Paper.

EGERTON BURNETT, Royal Serge Warehouse, Wellington, Somerset, England.

PEARS

·ich· diene·

SOAP MAKERS

BY

Special Appointment

To HER MAJESTY

The Queen

and HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS The

Prince of Wales.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 751.—ANECDOTES RELATING TO CRICKET.

T. O. R. (real name and address will be given next week) £1 1 0
MARS " " " 1 1 0

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 756.

The present season now so near its close has been one of exceptional interest, and, I think, it may well furnish a subject for one of the next weekly competitions. The usual prize of Two Guineas is therefore offered for

THE BEST THREE VERSES, OF EIGHT LINES EACH, OF A TOPICAL CHARACTER, IN THE STYLE AND METRE OF PRAED'S OFTEN-QUOTED LINES "GOOD NIGHT TO THE SEASON."

It may be convenient to some intending competitors if I quote the first eight lines of the poem which is to serve as a model. They run thus:—

Good night to the season! 'Tis over!
Gay dwellings no longer are gay;
The courtier, the gambler, the lover,
Are scattered like swallows away.
There's nobody left to invite one,
Except my good uncle and spouse;
My mistress is bathing at Brighton,
My patron is sailing at Cowes.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 752.

This competition is one about which it is obviously impossible to come to a very quick decision. A judgment so momentous, should above all be deliberate, and I will therefore not attempt for the present to name the prize "Cooling Drink."

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand: whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name and the address of YOKO, winner of Prize No. 749, are Mrs. Rawson, 7, Pen-y-wern-road, S.W.

 The real name and the address of STARLING, winner of a half of Prize No. 750, are Miss Helen F. Burkitt, c/o G. Jackson, Esq., Cherchefelle, Reigate.

DUNDONALD.—The puzzle is not a new one, and has several times been given in TRUTH.

MOB CAP.—Very many thanks for your suggestion.

TYNE BRIDGE.—I am unable to trace your answer.

W. W.-S.—Certainly not less than fifty.

WILLIE.—I will try to answer your question next week.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 753.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

IN MEMORIAM STANZAS, IN RHYMED OR BLANK VERSE, ON THOSE WHO PERISHED IN THE VICTORIA.

Britannia writes in tears her threnody:
Brave heart! not yet, not yet with pen in gall;
Thy sons shall pass away in melody,
The ensign white shall be their stainless pall.
The soft June breeze sings her sad lullaby;
They hear it not beneath the curling wave:
Nil nisi bonum—death's sweet psalmody—
A dirge shall be for England's sleeping brave.
Moonlighter.

God made the grave wherein our brothers lie,
A calm, deep resting-place for mortal slumber;
His sleepless eye will watch it from the sky,
Till He shall bid them rise, and count their number.
For all obedient servants He holds dear;
And they were faithful—"faithful unto death;"
"Doing their duty!" Yet the wave sobs near,
And the full heart of Britain answereth.
Mrs. Buchanan.

Vae victis? Nay; no need to fly
In quest of cypress or of yew;
Cold were the heart that would deny
The English oak which is their due.
Only in mimic warfare's play
Real hearts of oak they fought; and found
In that calm sunlit Syrian bay
A death that makes it holy ground.
Albericus.

N.B.—The initial letters of the above lines form the word Victoria.

Far from the weeping Isle that gave them birth,
Their bones are rocked by Ocean's restless swell;
For them—no churchyard with its hallowed earth—
No solemn chant—no book—no passing bell;
But sacred is the spot where sleep the brave,
In cloistered crypt, or 'neath the tossing tide,
And England, such were these: themselves they gave
For thine and duty's sake—and heroes died.
Collis.

Not by the shattering shock of war's assault,
Not by fell famine, fire, or tempest's roar,
But on blue waves, and 'neath a sunny vault,
The gallant Victory sank to rise no more.
"As near to Heaven by sea as land"—for, mark,
'Twas duty swayed each loyal sailor's soul;
And He—their cynosure—directs their barque,
Whose compass points towards no earthly pole.
Amator Veri.

The nations mourn, and tears of grief are shed
For those above whose head Death's banners wave.
They calmly sleep upon their billowy bed—
The sea their cradle, kingdom, and their grave.
But joy is rainbowed in the storm of tears.
They died like men, and in their fate's sad story
We read the truth which shall outlive the years—
"The path of duty is the way to glory."
Ivanhoe.

A blunder made—none can deny—but no dishonour shown,
The one we mourn as solemn truth, the other proudly own.
Pray gently speak in ages hence of an error once committed,
And ask repose for those perished souls which to Heaven's rest have flitted.
May no harsh words be uttered now in dwelling o'er the past,
Remember how Victoria's chief stuck to his ship till last!
A golden English be writ large on shroud and coffin lid,
That, as expected, "Every man that *day his duty did."
Treeve.

* June 22, 1893.

Beneath the waves ye sleep, fair Albion's sons;
Slain not by hostile foes' relentless guns,
Nor sunk amid the battle's roar and thunder,
But vainly lost—the victims of a blunder!
Yet none the less your names shall surely stand
Among the noblest heroes of our land,
For your example has more clearly taught
That duty done is more than battle fought.
Almaviva.

No pile of sculpture marks their lonely resting place,
Only in lines of silver, on the sad sea wave,
Do pale, pale shimmering moonbeams silent trace
The names belovèd on their watery grave.
Only the weird refrain of the mournful sea,
Chanting a funeral knell o'er the glistening wave.
Calmly they sleep in the wide ocean deep,
Four hundred sons of Britain—true and brave.
Oar Cross.

"There shall be no more sea," O gallant souls!
Ye too have crossed the ocean's bar of Time
And reached the harbour of Eternity; now rolls
From East to West the story, how old England's prime Went from our sight, earth's path of duty trod,
Life's warfare ended. Sleep ye brave ones till
At sound of trumpet-blast, breaking the silence still,
Ye rise, and answer to the call of the Commander, God.
Jo.

Peace to the dead, and honour to the brave,
Who calmly rest beneath the blue sea's wave.
We can but give them tears, they gave their life;
And yet they sank not 'mid the battle's strife
Or tempest's storm—yet they heroic died.
And England's eyes, though dim, still shine with pride.
"They are my heroes," proudly doth she say,
"The dead who died in fair Tripoli's Bay."
Esmeralda.

There stood no foe in front, nor sight nor sound
Presaged impending doom when came the call
Of duty, and they died in answering it.
Heart-searching test a hundred fold more stern
Than theirs, who, at the ladder of the forlorn hope,
Press for a place and court the earliest death.
While hearts like these beat in the Briton's breast
England shall stand against the world in arms!
Baritone.

A moment's errow drew
To swift destruction Admiral and crew.
They died as best beseemed the rulers of the main,
Each at his post, undauntedly, and so not all in vain.
Their requiem shall be
The murmurs and the thunders of the sea.
Full forty fathoms deep
In peace they sleep.
Eboracum.

What bitter herb cull'd on the Muses' hill
Can cure our grief, save to th' Eternal will Submission? As the husband to the tomb
Attends a youthful wife; or, in the bloom
Of infancy, a household darling; thus
Should humbleness and patience walk with us.
Mechanic.

Soft summer seas and southern sun
Mark where they rest, "Her" brave.
What greater fame, or victory won
For England, than their grave?

Not strife's red wine their bosoms steeled,
But duty. Old Rome or Greece
A nobler ending ne'er revealed.
Be theirs the heritage of peace.
Florence.

Shall we deny them bays because they fell
Victims to blunder, not to shot or shell?
Because they died in quietude, not when
Men earn renown by slaying fellow-men?
Nay, she who stands, with streaming eyes, beside
The waves that have her government defied
Will ever honour those who nobly fall,
Be it in peace or war, at duty's call.
Vox.

Weep for the brave,
Who, in the full light of the summer's day,
Ere ten short minutes e'en had sped away,
In Victory found a grave.
Weep for the nation
That mourns its sailor-sons with heaving breast,
And pray that God, who took them to His rest,
Give consolation.
Malignant.

Victoria mourns lost heroes gone to rest.
Immured within a mighty war-ship's breast,
Coffined they sank—in pride of manhood drest:
Tars, gallant tars, of gallant tars the best.
Our hearts may bleed, but let us still with zest
Remember men whom death hath sore oppress't!
In marble carve the epitaph express t,
"All gallant tars, of gallant tars the best."
Gentle.

Once more, alas! must England weep
Brave sons who lie 'mid waters deep.
History echoes her Laureate's word,
"Some one has blundered," again the record.
Noble four hundred! they gallantly died,
Sailor and officer side by side.
No enemy's cannon volleyed and thundered,
But they fell as bravely as did the Six Hundred.
Eytom.

Not in the din of battle nor in storm,
But while around them lay a smiling sea,
The mighty ram of the great Camperdown
Smote the Victoria to her throbbing heart.
Calmly they faced the peril. Each high soul,
From the great Chief to the least Midshipman,
Held firm to duty. But the ship went down,
And England mourns her sons with proud, sad tears.
Quiver

Rest, happy dead,
Sleep all your weariness away.
Ye shall be waked at break of day
From your cold bed.
Avalon.

'Twas not in battle's storm and strife
Our gallant hero gave his life;
'Twas not in defending their country and home
That our sailors sleep 'neath the salt sea foam.
But Nelson's sailors left worthy sons,
Who face what is worse than an enemy's guns;
And England will ever, with sorrow and pride,
Think of those who on the Victoria died.
Comtesse Olga.

Turn sixteen points; change order. Is there room?
Shall we obey? Bring we or find we doom?
Has our great captain blundered? Shall we say?
We sailors owe one duty—to obey.
In war, in peace, Death meets us everywhere;
We must be strong to suffer as to dare.
As it was in the past so still to-day,
We sailors owe this duty—to obey.
Chuckie.

To-day we think with pain and grief
Of Balaclava's Charge.
"Blunder" again marks history's leaf
And stains with tears the marge.
But tho' our hearts are aching sore,
They yet beat high with pride;
England's brave sons as heretofore
Have stood at their posts and died.
Ivy Leaves.

'Mid the storm of raging guns,
'Mid the cannon's glaring light,
Fell many of England's bravest sons—
Admiral, sailor, midshipmite.
Long will live great Nelson's glory,
Shrined in history's noblest story,
By him place our Tryon's name,
Linked with his in equal fame.
Lancastrian.

Not in triumphant battle 'gainst the foe,
Nor in vain conflict with the furious wave,
But 'neath sweet summer skies, where soft winds blow,
Struck to the death by friend, she found her grave.
Ill-starred Victoria! henceforth peaceful lie,
With gallant Tryon and his patriot band,
Who smiled at death, when duty bade them die,
And, dying, shed fresh lustre o'er their land.
Lunatic.

Brave heroes all; lying in the mighty deep,
At morn all life, by eve in dreamless sleep;
Dropped not the blood you thought for us to shed,
But tears from us, for thee, O loved dead.
Brave Tryon! you lie in death, but not alone,
Your grave the ocean, that you called your own;
Your stone, the record of a blameless life,
Your wreath you left behind—a loving wife.
Penguin.

WOOD VERSUS IRON.

She seemed as if she might defy the world:
Collision came—to swift destruction hurl'd
In fifteen minutes—all her power and pride
Engulf'd, three hundred of her warriors died.
Almost a million this death-trap cost;
Britannia, mourning for her brave sons lost,
Thinks of the grand old "wooden walls" which gave,
Ere sinking, time their gallant crews to save!
J. McGrigor Allan.

No fading flowers we lay upon our gallant seamen's grave,
Where they sleep, in dreamless slumber, beneath the calm blue wave;
Our grateful tribute pay we to the dauntless men and true,
Who live in fame, undying—the brave Victoria's crew.

We weep the loved and lost, we mourn the loyal heads laid low,
Yet England's stricken heart, with pride, swells e'en in sorest woe
For her sailor sons who, faithful to death, new glory won,
Fresh lustre on the English flag, by duty nobly done.
Moonshine.

Think no more of gold and gem,
List to the solemn requiem!
Think of the brave who buried sleep
Beneath the waters dark and deep;
List to the sound of the sailor's knell,
And not to the clash of wedding-bell.
Think of England's sons and daughters
Whose fathers lie buried 'neath the waters.
Boiled Rice.

Not in the battle's din or storm's fierce strife,
Excited, fighting for fair fame or life;
But in the summer's hush, near sunny shores,
Engulfed they sank. Britain their loss deplores.
Was there a blunder? Then more keen the grief,
Their courage disciplined the sole relief;
Noble examples in this selfish age,
Their sea-waves' dirge echoing in history's page.
Esperanza.

Britannia's brave beneath the waters blue
Lie in death's sleep;
Not in wild warfare died the noble crew
For whom we weep.
It wrings our hearts—(sad story of the sea!)—
The dear ones sundered.
Talk not of man's mistakes now, it may be Someone has blundered.
Dorothea.

Alas for England's sailors, true and brave,
Whelmed suddenly in the Ægean wave!
Their ship, struck by a comrade's ram, heels o'er,
And gallant hundreds sink to rise no more.
Taught by our "greatest seaman," Duty's call,
In utmost peril, is obeyed by all;
Each at his post remained, and death defied,
The chief upon his bridge, one middy by his side.
Excelsior.

Tryon is dead. An English ship and English seamen lost—
So runs the tale. He was our last and greatest,
And a nation mourns. Aye, mourns, though preachers say,
"Rejoice. He now does God's own greater work,
In God's own greater world." And this
To some poor suffering hearts may stand for comfort.
But to our England he is dead. We cannot make it less,
And more there could not be. God rest his soul.
Veracity.

On the Victoria and her hapless crew,
Britannia's warship and her valiant sons,
Fell swift destruction on the Syrian wave,
Fierce smote by friendly consort's erring blow.
Not theirs for country in the shock of strife
To fall triumphant on the blood-stained deck;
No cry of victory cheered their parting souls,
For Duty only called on them to die.
Mona.

Rest, rest, ye heroes! Your untimely grave
The boundless sea. The moaning of the wave
Your funeral dirge. Your duty ye have done,
And well your deeds the hero's crown have won;
For when the deadly danger threatened most,
Each gallant sailor scorned to leave his post.
No thought of self e'en then his acts could sway,
The ship might sink, but he must still obey.
Stanchion.

Ocean waves! sob o'er the grave
Of the dutiful and brave.
Sudden were they called away
On that bright and calm June day.
Breezes! softly, gently blow
Requiems of music low.
Sun! thy splendour lend, to gem
Jewell'd rays, to strew o'er them.
Snowdrop.

These men have ceased to wield the steel
That Britain's foes were wont to feel;
Their guns have ceased to tell how vain
Is war 'gainst Britain on the main.
Near six times sixty hearts of oak
Have perished by the ram's fell stroke;
Hearts that did well, on seas afar,
Sustain the fame of Britain's war.
Hamlet.

O Theoprosopon,* what mighty hosts
Sleep here, garner'd from all time and race;
Archaic heroes, Champions of the Cross,
Together blent. Pause we to contemplate?
In peaceful evolution, England's fleet
Glides o'er the deep—a shock, and sinks
Her noblest ship with all her cherish'd sons.
So "glory broadens from the plunge of death."
Weston-super-Mare.

* The bluff near Tripoli, called by the Greeks Theoprosopon, or the Face of God.

Verses have also been received from E. W. S. B., One Hand, Inca, Ruby, W. B., Sympathizer, Pylades, Effieron, Senex, T. O. R., Pansy, Ludovic, J. Logue, Felsberg, Hamlet, Luna, Percy Ackland, Euterpe, Lily, Dohtig, Crosspatch, Dora, E. C. L., Abimilech, Agag, E. L. S., A. V., Edouardo, Hope, C. M. P., Firefly, G. S. J., Folkestone, Shlowmow, M. P., Othello, Ariel, Rissole, Home Rule, Teutonic, Yelnats, Butty, Memnon, M. M. D., Burstow, Copper Coin, J. A. F., Tripoli, Resurgam, Nuts, Danbe, Cowper, M. W. P., Collect, Dendy, E. S., W. W. S., T. M. S., Javs, Mutton, Never Despair, Noel, Bognor, M. E. B., B. C., Tennis-Court, Who next? Plumes, Garrick & Co., Melba, Misrac, R. E. B., Lollard, Jim, Hookwood, Tom Sawyer, Mall, Sinner, R. E. H., Anecdotard, Vicar, Camodeln, Capstan, Cani, Heurteloup, Orestes, Bel Demonio, Jap, Gill, and Sol.

TO CONNOISSEURS.

ST. EMILION . . . . CLARET . . . . 18/- per dozen.
MEDOC . . . . . CLARET . . . . 15/6 per dozen.
ST. GEORGE'S . . . CLARET . . . . 13/- per dozen.
Price List of other CHATEAU CLARETS, from 21/- to 74/- per dozen, posted on application. LE MONNIER & CO., JERSEY.
CARRIAGE AND DUTY PAID.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

WORLD'S FAIR route to Chicago.
JAPAN and CHINA.—Fastest, finest, and only twin-screw Royal Mail Steamers on Pacific Ocean leave Vancouver every three weeks.
AROUND the WORLD Trips for £125.
SUMMER TOURS through Canadian Lakes and "Rockies."
FREE FARMS and Cash Bonus for Settlers.
For Tickets and Free Guide Books, apply Passenger Department, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, KING WILLIAM STREET, LONDON, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON

Very agreeable to take.
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,
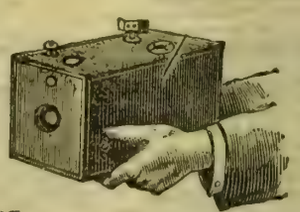
HÆMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.
Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.
E. GRILLON,
69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.

The Camera that takes the World!



THE
KODAK
No previous knowledge of Photography necessary.
"YOU PRESS THE BUTTON, WE DO THE REST,"
(Unless you prefer to do the rest yourself)
AND THE PICTURE IS FINISHED.
Price from £1 6s.
EASTMAN PHOTOGRAPHIC MATERIALS CO. LD., 115-117 OXFORD-ST., LONDON, W.
SEND FOR PRETTY, ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, POST FREE.

DECAY OF THE TEETH
arises from various causes, but principally it may be attributed to early neglect or the indiscriminate use of tooth powders and pastes, which give a momentary whiteness to the teeth while they corrode the enamel. The timely use of that delicate aromatic tooth-wash,
FRAGRANT
SOZODONT
will speedily arrest the progress of decay, harden the gums, and impart a delightful fragrance to the breath. The formula of Sozodont includes only botanic ingredients, and it contains only the purest and most salutary of these.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN said:

"You can fool some people all the time, you can fool all the people some times, you can't fool all the people all the time."

All the people cannot detect alum in baking powder, starch in infant foods, salicylic acid in beer, oleo-margerine in butter, or 30 or 40 per cent. of resin, sugar (not to speak of bad fats used), in soaps. Soapmakers know this, and the one who talks longest and strongest hopes to fool the most people all the time.

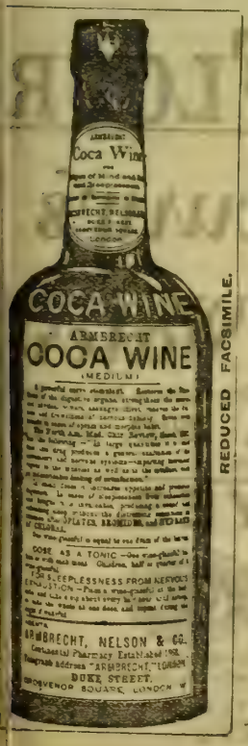
Now there is no going beyond chemical tests. "VINOLIA" SOAP is probably the only one you ever used of which the analysis is published. It is pure, cleansing, and agreeable, but it will not restore the bloom of youth to the skin at 4 o'clock in life's afternoon. It is safe and efficient—that is all. What more do you want?

"Vinolia" Soap. Premier, 4d.; Floral, 6d.; Balsamic, 8d.; Toilet, 10d.; and Vestal, 2s. 6d. "Vinolia" Cream (for Itching, Face Spots, &c.), 1s. 1½d., 1s. 9d. per box. "Vinolia" Powder (for Redness, Roughness, &c.), 1s., 1s. 9d. per box.

COCA WINE

—(ARMBRECHT).—

HE NEW RESTORATIVE NERVE-TONIC OF VOCAL, MENTAL, and PHYSICAL POWERS.



REDUCED FACSIMILE.

ASSUAGES THIRST AND HUNGER, AND PROMOTES DIGESTION.

For Sleeplessness it is superior to Opiates, Chloral, and Bromides, as there is positively no reaction.

Coca Wine Extract
For TRAVELLERS, 3s. 9d. (100 doses), post-free.

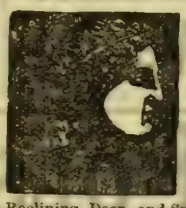
Coca Lozenges,
For Singers and Public Speakers, 1s. 9d., post-free.

Coca Wine,
45s. per dozen, carriage paid. Sample Bottle 4s., post-paid.

From all Stores, Wine Merchants, Chemists, or Grocers, or direct from

ARMBRECHT, NELSON, & CO.
Duke-st., Grosvenor-sq.
—LONDON, W.—

HOT MINERAL BATHS OF BATH.



Daily yield 507,600 gallons F. at 120.

FOUNDED BY THE ROMANS IN THE 1st CENTURY.

ΑΡΙΣΤΟΝ ΜΕΝ ΥΔΩΡ.

BATHERS DURING 1890—97,299.

These Baths are unrivalled in Europe for luxury and extent, and contain all that modern improvements can provide for the comfort and relief of the invalid or the enjoyment of those in health.

Reclining, Deep, and Swimming Baths. Thermal Vapour Baths, for Painful conditions of Joints, &c. Douche, Inhalation, Aspiration, Pulverisation, &c., and Ear, Eye, Throat, &c. The Aix les Bains Massage System and Doucheurs and Doucheuses.

The Medical profession sends patients who suffer from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Dyspepsia, Eczema, and other skin affections.

Letters to the General Manager will receive every attention.

TORPID LIVER. HEADACHE.

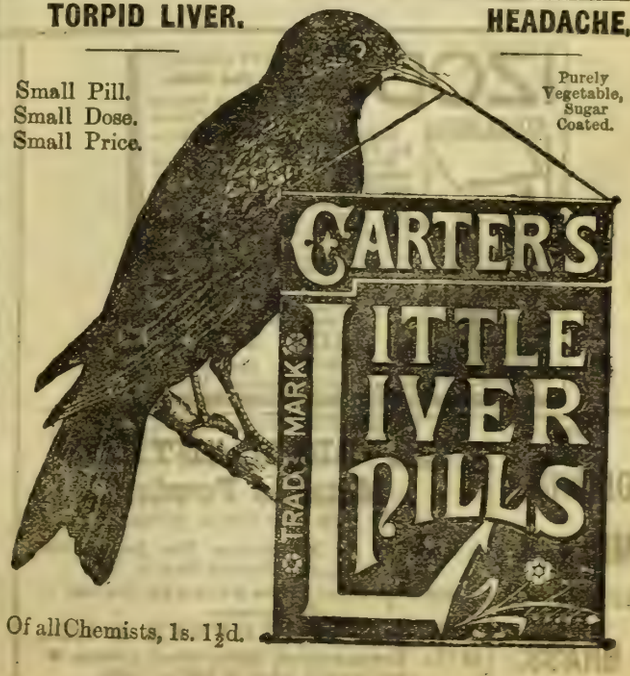
Small Pill.
Small Dose.
Small Price.

Purely Vegetable, Sugar Coated.

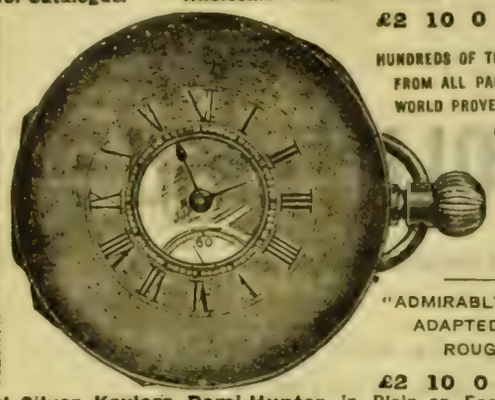


Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d.

Midland Counties Watch Co., Vyse-street, BIRMINGHAM.

Send for Catalogue. Wholesale Prices. Send for Catalogue.

CATALOGUES CONTAINING OVER 1,000 ILLUSTRATIONS POST-FREE UPON APPLICATION TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.



£2 10 0

HUNDREDS OF TESTIMONIALS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD PROVE THE VALUE AND EXCELLENT TIME-KEEPING QUALITIES OF OUR WATCHES.

"ADMIRABLY ADAPTED FOR ROUGH WEAR."

£2 10 0

Gents' Silver Keyless Demi-Hunter, in Plain or Engine-turned Cases, a thoroughly reliable timekeeper, £2 10s. 0d.

Purchase from the Manufacturers at a saving of 25 to 50 per cent.

25s.

LONDON OFFICE AND SHOW ROOM: 15, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. (Near Mansion House.)

"THE CHEAPEST THOROUGHLY RELIABLE SILVER WATCH EVER MADE."

Gents' Silver Watch, finely finished movement, crystal glass, timekeeping qualities guaranteed, 25s. Ladies' ditto, ditto, 25s.

25s.

LONDON OFFICE AND SHOW ROOM: 15, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. (Near Mansion House.)

SEND FOR CATALOGUE CONTAINING HUNDREDS OF TESTIMONIALS OF THIS AND OTHER WATCHES.

Gratis and Post Free to any part of the World.

Cheques and P.O. Orders to be made payable to the Company's Manager, Mr. A. PERCY, Birmingham.

"WORTH A GUINEA A BOX."

BEECHAM'S PILLS.

LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE for all Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as SICK HEADACHE, CONSTIPATION, WEAK STOMACH, IMPAIRED DIGESTION, DISORDERED LIVER, and FOR FEMALE AILMENTS.

Prepared only by the Proprietor, THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helen's, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere, in Boxes 9½d., 1s. 1½d., & 2s. 9d. each. Full directions with each box.

BEECHAM'S TOOTH PASTE.

Will recommend itself; it is efficacious, economical, cleanses the teeth, perfumes the breath, removes tartar, and prevents decay. It is composed of the best known ingredients for neutralising the acids of the mouth, preventing all deleterious deposits upon the teeth, and is a pleasant and reliable dentifrice.

BEECHAM'S TOOTH PASTE is put up in collapsible tubes. Of all Druggists, or from the Proprietor, for ONE SHILLING, postage paid.

PIANOS ON THE THREE YEARS' HIRE SYSTEM.

This system is carried out extensively, liberally, and equitably by CHARLES STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, W.C. The pianoforte becomes the absolute property of the hirer at the expiration of three years, or may be returned at any time, at the option of the hirer. The rates charged are the same as for ordinary hire, and no addition is made to the price. PIANOS, GRAND and UPRIGHT, new and second-hand, by BORD, BECHSTEIN, and other high-class Makers, at from 10s. 6d. to 100s. per month. Lists and all particulars will be forwarded post-free on application to STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, London, W.C.

BROWN & POLSON'S

Has 35 Years' World-wide Reputation.

CORN FLOUR

IZOD'S PATENT CORSETS Are the Best.

Prepared by a New and Special Scientific Process.

Medical opinion recommends them for THE HEALTH.

Public opinion all over the world unanimous that they are unsurpassed for COMFORT, STYLE, AND DURABILITY. Sold all over Europe, and everywhere in India and Colonies. Name and Trade Mark, Anchor, on every pair and box. Ask your Draper or Outfitter for IZOD'S make; take no other, and see you get them, as bad makes are often sold for sake of extra profit. Write for our sheet of Drawings.

E. IZOD & SON,
80, Milk St., London.
Manufactory: LANDPORT, HANTS.

S. Sainsbury's Lavender Water

SOLD THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY. Prices, 1s. to 16s. 6d. &c.

MANUFACTORY: 176 and 177, STRAND, LONDON.

ESTABLISHED 1839.

FOR POLISHING METALS, ESPECIALLY BRASS,

THERE IS NOTHING BETTER THAN

"LA BRILLANTINE" Metallic Powder.

TRY IT, AND CONVINCE YOURSELF.

It is used by the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, the Life, Horse, and Dragoon Guards, &c.

— Sold Everywhere. Boxes 6d. and 1s., post free. —

PROPRIETORS—

J. F. BAUMGARTNER & CO.,
15 (T.), Newman-street, Oxford-street, London, W.
ABSOLUTELY REFUSE IMITATIONS.

OUR EYES.

Mr. JOHN BROWNING'S method of testing the sight in all cases of defective vision ensures spectacles or folders suiting each eye and fitting perfectly. Consultations free.

JOHN BROWNING,
Ophthalmic Optician,
63, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.
(Author of "Our Eyes," now in its 14th Edition),
Sent post-free for 1s.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici.—Cicero."

No. 865. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, July 27, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE frequent changes in the Queen's plans last Thursday nearly drove the Great Western and South-Western Railway officials and the naval authorities at Portsmouth distracted. No sooner had the special train arrived at Windsor from Paddington on Thursday morning than an intimation was received at the station from the Castle that, as the weather seemed likely to be stormy, the Queen's journey would be postponed. It was later on announced that her Majesty would not leave Windsor until Friday, but about one o'clock it was decided to start after luncheon, and, accordingly, the Queen quitted the Castle at three o'clock. Telegrams reporting the state of the weather were constantly passing during the morning between Windsor and Portsmouth, but, as a matter of fact, the sea in the Solent was quite as "rough" when the Queen crossed at half-past five in the Alberta from Gosport to East Cowes as it had been at any time during the previous week. Such elaborate preparations are made for the Queen's journey that a change of plan at the last moment causes an immense amount of trouble and inconvenience, and entirely disorganises the ordinary traffic.

The Royal yacht Osborne, which has undergone an overhaul and refit since she returned to Portsmouth from the Mediterranean, is to be joined on Friday or Saturday next by the Prince of Wales and the Duke and Duchess of York. When the Prince leaves Cowes for Homburg, about August 11, the Osborne is to proceed with the Duke and Duchess of York on a cruise to Norway, after which they will be landed at Copenhagen, where the yacht is then to stay until the Princess of Wales leaves Denmark, when H.R.H. and her party will be conveyed to Aberdeen.

In the course of the shooting-season the Prince of Wales is to be the guest of Lord and Lady Lonsdale at Lowther Castle, Westmoreland, for a few days. Lord Lonsdale will entertain a large party at Lowther for the grouse shooting over his extensive moors on the Cumberland and Westmoreland fells.

The Mayor of Dover was considerably astray last Thursday when he addressed the Prince of Wales with a eulogy of "your illustrious ancestors, Queens Elizabeth and Mary." However, his Worship may console himself with the reflection that the Queen herself once spoke to Macaulay at Windsor of "my poor ancestor James II.," whereupon the historian, regardless of etiquette, exclaimed, "Not your Majesty's ancestor — your Majesty's predecessor."

H.R.H. has sold several Shorthorn bulls from his "Booth" herd at Sandringham, for exportation to Buenos Ayres.

The Duke of Edinburgh, who has been staying at Kissingen during the last fortnight for the benefit of his health, is to leave that place at the end of next week to join the Duchess, who has left Coburg for Rosenau, a picturesque shooting-lodge in the Thuringian Forest, where Prince Albert was born. The Duke and Duchess are to go to Roumania early in the autumn on a visit to Prince and Princess Ferdinand, and they intend to pass next winter at St. Petersburg.

A Portsmouth correspondent writes :—

The official announcement that the Duke of Connaught will retain the command of the Southern District for a further period of two years (until August, 1895) has caused universal and unbounded surprise here.

No secret had been made of the fact that the Duke would vacate his command at the end of next month. Preparations were being made for his departure from Government House, and it was given out that the recent garden-parties were "farewell entertainments."

I am told by a person likely to be well informed that the arrangement proposed by the Court for the Duke's future employment did not meet with the approval of the Government, and that this is the real reason for the sudden change in his plans.

There must be some grave cause for such a boxing of the compass, as the Duchess of Connaught very much dislikes living at Portsmouth, and the climate does not suit her. She has been very little at Government House during the last year, and for several months the Duke resided at Osborne Cottage, and came over to Portsmouth daily to transact official business, an arrangement which did not work well.

The Emperor William is coming to Cowes in his new yacht, which is one of the finest vessels afloat, and splendidly fitted up. His Majesty intends to give a dinner party on board during his stay in the Solent, at which the Prince of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, the Duke and Duchess of York, Prince and Princess Christian, Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry, Prince Hohenlohe, and other personages will be present. The Emperor hopes to receive a visit from the Queen on board his new vessel, and he proposes to entertain her Majesty at afternoon tea.

A singularly ill informed weekly paper states that much inconvenience has been caused to the Royal family because it was only a fortnight ago that the German Emperor announced his intention of visiting Cowes next week. This is a stupid invention, for the Emperor's visit was arranged early in the year, and the fact that he would be at Cowes during the regatta week was announced in TRUTH several months ago. It is quite untrue that the date of the Prince of Wales's visit to Waddesdon Manor was altered on account of the Emperor coming over. The Prince was Baron Ferdinand Rothschild's guest from the 15th until the 17th, which was the date originally fixed for his visit to Waddesdon.

The Queen Regent of Spain has conferred the Order of the Golden Fleece upon the Duke of York, and it is understood that H.R.H. will be formally invested with the gorgeous insignia either by Don Antonio de Mont pensier or by the Spanish Ambassador.

Prince and Princess Christian, and their daughter Princess Victoria, who are among the guests of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon at Goodwood House, will be at Osborne, on a visit to the Queen, during the Emperor William's stay at Cowes.

The King of Saxony, who is staying with his Queen at Scheveningen, will probably pay a short visit to England, in which case his Majesty is to be the guest of the Queen at Osborne and of the Duke of Fife at Braemar.

An evening paper announces that last week Mr. Gladstone "had a conference with Lord Ribblesdale about the Queen's Buckhounds." This is pure fiction, which is probably based upon the fact that Mr. Gladstone paid a Saturday-to-Monday visit to Lord Ribblesdale at his temporary residence near Ascot. The Ministry have no voice in the question of the keeping on or abolishing the Buckhounds, which rests entirely with the Queen, who would be very glad to get rid of the pack, but in certain official quarters there is always a highly obstructive indisposition to reforms of this character.

Yet another new Club in St. James's-street. This time it is to be a Club to which membership is to be limited to Presidents, members of Council, Fellows, and members of the principal Royal and learned Societies, Academies, and institutions. It is to be called the Royal Societies Club, and I gather from a circular which has fallen into my hands that the list of patrons embraces a vast number of men of light and leading.

Brighton has come in for a good deal of criticism of late. I have myself been among the critics. Whatever its shortcomings, however, it would seem from the Brighton Life Table just published by Dr. Newsholme, the Brighton Medical Officer of Health, that Brighton is, of all places in England, literally the best to live in. Dr. Newsholme shows, inter alia, by a series of beautiful curves the probability of living one year, at all ages up to eighty-four, in Brighton, and Manchester, and in the kingdom at large. At any age, except from about seventy-six to eighty-two, there is a better chance of living a year at Brighton than anywhere else. It also seems that the average expectation of life (except for males above seventy-seven) is higher at Brighton at all ages than anywhere else. After this, life assurance offices ought to give specially favourable rates to those who are wise enough to live at Brighton.

The Duke and Duchess of Sutherland arrived last week at Dunrobin Castle from Trentham, and they will reside there until the end of October. It is generally reported about Golspie that the Prince of Wales is to be a guest at Dunrobin Castle towards the end of September for a few days.

Lord and Lady Randolph Churchill are off to Kissingen early next week. Lord Randolph will be among the guests of the Duke of Portland at Welbeck Abbey during Doncaster Races.

Mr. Talbot Clifton has taken Beauly, Lord Lovat's place in Inverness, for the season. Amongst the guests will be Mr. Thaddeus, who is commissioned to paint the portraits of Mr. Clifton and his youngest brother.

The famous Poxwell flock of Dorset horn sheep, the property of Mr. F Sprake, has just been sold off, and the sale was attended by breeders from all parts of the country, and by commissioners from the United States and Canada. Nearly two thousand sheep were sold, and satisfactory prices were realised. Most of the best lots were bought for American breeders, but a few animals were taken for the Queen's flock on the home farm at Osborne.

Lord Tweedmouth's famous herd of polled Aberdeen-Angus cattle, at Guisachan, Inverness-shire, which is one of the finest in the world, is to be sold off on August 9 at Beauly station. There are eighty-six lots in the catalogue.

It has been stated that the Duke of York contemplates breeding Berkshire pigs. I would strongly recommend all to follow his example. I gather from the statements of Mrs. Zierenberg to Mr. Justice Hawkins, that she bought a few pigs, kept them in a yard in London, and derived from the sale of their progeny £80 to £100 per annum. His Royal Highness—unless there be some mistake in Mrs. Zierenberg's estimate of profits—has, therefore, only to buy a sufficient number of pigs to become rich beyond the dreams of avarice. The Zierenberg trial is somewhat a costly one to me, but I shall not regret this if, owing to the publication of the "Lady Superior's" experience in pig-keeping, not only the difficulties in regard to agricultural depression are solved, but poverty should disappear from the land, and every one who can procure enough to buy a gentleman and lady pig should for the rest of his life enjoy a comfortable income.

For the TRUTH HOTEL LIST, see pages 204, 205 in the present issue.
For AMUSEMENTS, see page 203.
For HOSPITALS and APPEALS, see page 198.

The Northern meeting at Inverness, which is the great social function of the Highland autumn, is fixed for September 21 and 22, and balls will be given on each night of the gathering.

The forthcoming shooting season promises to be above the average. Partridges hatched abnormally early, and well on the whole, though in some districts they suffered from drought, there being no dew in June, and the chicks drink from dewdrops when water is not handy. Pheasant broods have done very well, especially those under coops. From the grouse uplands of the North I hear equally good reports of the breeding season, and very little rumour of disease. On the whole, I suspect that the game books of the coming season will show a higher average of bags than any of the last ten years or more.

Nottinghamshire Liberals have sustained a great loss by the death of Mr. Garside, of Worksop, who had been for many years a most energetic and a very popular leader of the party in the Bassetlaw district.

A few days ago the papers announced the death of Mr. Macvey Napier, in his eighty-sixth year. He was the son of Professor Macvey Napier, of Edinburgh, the editor of the "Encyclopædia Britannica," who in 1828 succeeded Jeffrey as editor of the Edinburgh Review, a post which he held until his death in 1847. A very interesting volume of Professor Napier's correspondence was published a few years ago, which contained a large number of most entertaining and highly characteristic letters from Brougham, Macaulay, Stephen, Carlyle, Jeffrey, and other celebrities.

Messrs. Frost & Reed, of Clare-street, Bristol, have just issued an admirable etching of Henry VII.'s Chapel at Westminster Abbey. This important plate has been etched by Mr. Charles Bird, who has overcome with marked success the difficulties of his subject; and I notice that the publishers have very wisely limited the "first state" impressions of the work to fifty. The same firm has also published a reproduction of Mr. Douglas Adams's sporting picture entitled "Rough Shooting," the scene being laid in Ireland, in one of those waste and wild parts of the country where wild duck are to be found.

Mr. FitzPatrick's "Secret Service under Pitt" (Longmans), of which a new and much enriched edition has just appeared, is a most opportune and invaluable revelation of the filthy backstairs of a Government with the stateliest frontage. As you read, your disgust, which at times amounts to absolute nausea, is not merely or chiefly at the crawling creatures, acting only after their kind, who were suborned to treachery by the agents of Pitt. For, after all, your disgust at the sight and scent of an exhumed sewer is nothing to your disgust at the spectacle of a gentleman with a character for irreproachable personal cleanliness, up to his very neck in it, groping for a weapon wherewith to stab his enemy in the back. Are the consciences of statesmen so built in water tight compartments that the most infamous official business in no degree contaminates their private characters? It would be a paradox stranger than Pascal's "Plaisante justice qu'une riviere ou une montagne borne! Verite au deçà Pyrenees, erreur au delà!" Whatever view one takes, however, of the relative iniquity of the suborned and suborners, one must acknowledge the opportuneness and importance of the service which Mr. FitzPatrick has tendered all interested in the question of the hour by revelations which must have cost him years of the dreariest drudgery to dig out.

Far be it from me to disparage the present generation of authors and littérateurs, but I seriously think that the most wonderful books produced in the present day are the directories. I have just received from the publishers Wright's "Australian, India, China, and Japan Trade Directory and Gazetteer." This monumental work purports to contain the names and addresses of everybody engaged in trades and professions in each of the Australasian Colonies, India, the Cape, Canada, Mexico, and Central and South America, and the European element in China, Japan, Siam, and Java, together with the usual Gazetteer information about all these countries, and a voluminous "Buyers' Guide to Great Britain." This book is published by an American (Mr. George Wright, of New York) for Americans. Seeing that it chiefly deals with the British Empire, I cannot help wondering that no similar work has been published by an Englishman for Englishmen.

While Mr. Harry Furniss was "testing" the proprietor of TRUTH and finding him wanting, an Irish critic was testing Mr. Furniss's notions of Irish "brogue," and finding them similarly deficient. The Irishman is good enough to send me the result of his observations; but, of course, the answer to them would be that Mr. Furniss is not a literary man, but a caricaturist. His representations of "brogue" are, I suppose, intentional travesties of the original.

Two or three correspondents have pointed out that Tennyson uses the word "gowned" in "The Gardener's Daughter." That lovely damsel was "gown'd in pure white, that fitted to the shape." My correspondents seem to think that this quotation settles the question. But whilst I am an admirer of the works of the late Laureate, I do not acknowledge his infallibility. On the contrary, I adhere to the opinion I expressed last week regarding the current newspaper use of the word.

The Eton boys are to have an extra week's holiday on account of the Royal Wedding, and a parent writes to me in an indignant strain respecting a report that there is to be a further week on account of the victories of the boys over Harrow and Winchester in the cricket-field, and in their race at Henley. Of the two, I should have thought that the second week had the better raison d'être. I can understand the worshippers of athletics holding that on the strength of their achievements in this line the boys should be rewarded with a further release from their books; but I cannot for the life of me see why schoolmasters should be privileged to throw their pupils on their parents' hands for a week because a Royal Prince has been married.

THE IMPERIAL, EAST CLIFF, BOURNEMOUTH.—Position, appointments, and cuisine unsurpassed. 100 rooms. Luxuriously furnished. Electric light. Private omnibuses meet trains. Telegraphic address, Imperial, Bournemouth.—CHAS. A. REINGPACH, Manager.

C.O.M. WHISKY.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to C.O.M. WHISKY. every Railway Station.—ANDREWS & Co., C.O.M. WHISKY. Dame-st., Dublin. Proprietors C.O.M. brand.

The idea of the schoolmaster decreeing an extension of the holidays is wrong on the face of it. Parents send their children to school on the understanding that they are kept there for a certain time at a certain price, and the Master has no business to alter the terms of the contract without the assent of the other party. Even if the majority of the parents agreed to the holiday, the minority ought to be at liberty to keep their children at school, or else should receive a proportionate reduction of the fees. Apart from the pecuniary aspect of the matter, what limit is to be placed in this discretion to the caprice of Head-masters? The Head-master of Eton, being an athlete himself, gives the school a week's holiday for winning cricket matches and boat-races. Another Head-master, who is a mathematician, has an equal right to give his school a month's holiday for producing a Senior Wrangler. A loyal Tory pedagogue closes his school for a week in celebration of the Royal Wedding. Why should not a Radical and Democratic Master draw a month's pay without work to celebrate the French Revolution or the execution of Charles I.?

We have got rid of religious tests at the Universities. Are we to have athletic or sporting tests smuggled in instead of them? I ask in view of the following question set in a mathematical paper at the London University intermediate examination:—

> How many different sets of ladies' and gentlemen's doubles may be arranged at a lawn-tennis party of three ladies and three gentlemen?

If lawn-tennis, or any other sport, is to be made a subject for examination for a London University degree, let the fact be announced in the usual way. Don't let a man who has got up the prescribed subjects find himself floored because he is not a tennis player. It is lawn tennis to-day; it may be golf or croquet to-morrow. To test the thing, I showed the above question to a well-known mathematical professor. I asked him if he knew what "ladies' doubles" are. The Professor is a somewhat shy and nervous man. He blushed a good deal at the question, and confessed he did not know, but supposed, seeing it was a question on "permutations and combinations," that they were an article of dress. He had no idea, however, how many made up a "set."

The Master of Trinity (Dr. Butler) is to be the special preacher at Westminster Abbey next Sunday evening at the service in the nave. The special evening services will be discontinued after next Sunday, until Advent Sunday, (December 3) when they are to be resumed in the choir.

Pfungst Frères' Extra Quality Champagnes.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. Pfungst & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

Apropos to the appointment of Archdeacon Gore to a stall at Chester, I have heard of the following curious little comedy lately enacted in the new Canon's Archdeaconry. As Vicar of Bowden, Archdeacon Gore was patron of the two adjacent livings of St. George's, Altrincham, and St. Mark's, Dunham Massey. The former is worth about £130 a year more than the latter. The latter has been occupied for some time past by the son-in-law of the Archdeacon. St. George's fell vacant in April last by the death of the Vicar, whereupon the Archdeacon invited the parishioners to meet and submit to him the name of a new Vicar. The parishioners met and agreed on a name. It was not that of the Archdeacon's son-in-law. The Archdeacon could not make up his mind even then, so he placed the appointment in the hands of the Bishop. The Bishop's choice, strange to relate, did fall upon the Archdeacon's son-in-law. This can hardly fail to be highly gratifying to all parties—except, of course, the parishioners, who elected somebody else.

In answer to a query which I put forward in last week's Truth, the Rector of Buckhurst Hill gives the following explanation of the action of his curate. I fully appreciate his reasoning. There seems to be a conflict of evidence in regard to the principal element in the case, but it is hardly a matter for minute discussion, and the clergy seem to have acted for the best:—

> Your reference is to the Rev. H. D. Bridge, one of the assistant curates of this parish, but it is only fair to state that he had my full concurrence in the line adopted. In deference to your desire to arrive at the reason why we considered that it would be best in a case of this kind to read the whole service at the grave-side, I have to state, for the information of all concerned, that the person in question, having frequently been on the sick list, died suddenly from the rupture of a blood vessel on Saturday, July 8, and, the weather being close and thundery, on Tuesday morning, July 11, the wood coffin was obliged to be fastened down. Nevertheless, in disregard of all sanitary considerations, the funeral did not take place till 4 p.m. on Saturday, July 15.
> Verbum sat sapientibus.

The stinginess of Church congregations has frequently been remarked upon in these columns. Never, however, should I have ventured to use such an argument for liberality in almsgiving as that which the Vicar of Beverley puts forward in his Parish Magazine. A collection in the Church having realised £5. 5s., the pastor rebukes his flock for their niggardliness, concluding thus:—

> How can either temporal or spiritual blessing be looked for under such circumstances? "With what measure ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again."

From this it would seem that when the Almighty is invited to "receive these our alms and oblations," it is with a strict eye to benefits to come. Do ut des again, in fact.

The Rev. Isidore Daimpré, Vicar of Colebrooke, near Crediton, last week obtained an order of admission to Exeter Workhouse for himself, his wife, and four children. For a clergyman to be brought to this extremity of destitution is, under any circumstances, far from creditable to Numerous Carriage Accidents in the London season are caused by collision, the falling or bolting of horses, or by being run into by other vehicles. The consequent loss and annoyance can be insured against by the Carriage Insurance Company, Limited, 17, Pall Mall East, London, S.W. Prospectuses post free.

the Church, and the story which Mr. Daimpré related to the Guardians makes his case appear an exceptionally hard one. He got into debt, and his living, worth £260 a year, was sequestrated. In this there was nothing very uncommon, nor is Mr. Daimpré the first parson whose pecuniary difficulties have been vastly increased by dilapidation charges. It is rather in the treatment to which he has been subjected by his Bishop that Mr. Daimpré has been so unfortunate. He asserts that a scheme under which his relatives would have paid off the sequestration fell through in consequence of a letter written by the Bishop declaring that he could never return to his parish. The Bishop vaguely alleges that the Vicar has lost the confidence of the parish, but declines to state in what way he has done so, and makes no definite complaint against him. Mr. Daimpré is thus kept out of his parish, and driven to the workhouse without even knowing the true reason.

An Essex Rector, who advertised his house to let, is one of the latest victims of the irrepressible Stockham. The reverend gentleman frankly confesses that he fell into the man's trap "like an ass," filling up his precious circular without noting its contents. Fortunately for his pocket he communicated with me before paying the £3. 0s. 9d. demanded by Stockham. The fact is, nobody need be alarmed by this fellow's threats of proceedings. If he persists, let them instruct a solicitor to accept service, and write to this office. They may rely upon it that the matter will go no further.

I have been asked to deal with a lengthy and acrimonious correspondence between the Bishop of St. Asaph and Archdeacon Howell in reference to the latter's attitude on the Disestablishment question. In his encounter with a dignitary of his own Church, Bishop Edwards seems to have exhibited as much bitterness and unfairness as in his attacks upon Nonconformist opponents His Lordship's peculiar methods of controversy are, however, sufficiently notorious, and, edifying as the spectacle of these ecclesiastical brethren at loggerheads may be, it is hardly worth while to go into the details of their squabble. Suffice it to say that the Archdeacon got very much the better of the controversy.

The following anecdote of the late head of the firm of Broadwood is related to me by a Worcestershire friend:—

The late Canon Woodgate, formerly Rector of Belbroughton, Worcestershire, used (in the "fifties," and till his death in 1874) to sit in the Lower House of Convocation as one of the "Proctors" for the Diocese of Worcester. The Canon had a fine ear for music, and, especially in the earlier days of his representation of the Diocese, was, in the course of his duties, a more frequent visitor to the Metropolis than the majority of country gentry in that county. Railway science had not then advanced to its present pitch. Accordingly, when good folks in Worcestershire happened to be in want of new pianofortes, Canon Woodgate was constantly requested to oblige by selecting an instrument when next he went up for Convocation. The Canon always pinned his faith to Broadwood, when he had a free hand in selecting the builder on these occasions. One day, when he had been making one of these purchases for some Midland friend, the late Mr. Broadwood happened to meet him, and remarked jocularly, "It is unfortunate for you that you are not in the musical profession, for you could have earned a very handsome sum on commission by now from the number of pianos that you have bought from us." The Canon was puzzled, till Mr. Broadwood explained that it was the custom in the trade to allow a liberal commission to musical instructors and instructresses who introduced business of this nature to a firm, whereupon the Canon said, "It is not too late to take some out of you; will you let me put your name down as a subscriber to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel?" "By all means," replied Mr. Broadwood, and he forthwith contributed a cheque equal in value to the commission which the rector of he had been a professional musician would have received on all these purchases of a decade or more, as recorded in the books of the firm. The donation thus manumerated was supplemented subsequently by an annual subscription from Mr. B. to the Society, and I fancy the same was continued as long as he lived; and long after the Canon had gone to rest.

Archdeacon Boyd's death will be sincerely and widely regretted in the Craven district of Yorkshire, for he was one of the most prominent clergymen in the county, and a universal favourite. Archdeacon Boyd had held the living of Arncliffe for fifty-eight years, and during that period no ecclesiastic in the district did more for the Church than he did. The Archdeacon was not only the pioneer of church restoration in the West Riding, but he was most indefatigable in his parochial work, and was zealous for the improvement of his schools in days when popular education was considerably regarded as a "fad." He was a delightful person in society, and his hospitality was unbounded.

The living of Arncliffe, which is in the gift of University College, Oxford, is a very poor one; but Archdeacon Boyd possessed considerable private means. He resigned the Archdeaconry of Craven three years ago, and his successor has not yet been appointed, for some reason which is best known to the Bishop of Ripon.

Lord Bute has purchased The Priory, St. Andrews, a large house, surrounded by grounds, near the Cathedral, and it is to become a Roman Catholic College in connection with the University of St. Andrews. The existing Roman Catholic College at Blairs, near Aberdeen, has become too small.

A visitor to Buxton writes:—

The Devonshire Hospital here is, no doubt, a useful and well-managed charity, but on one point there is room for improvement. An experience I had last week will show you this. My wife and I were passing the hospital, and, noticing a huge board in front of it which announced that the building was open to visitors between eleven a.m. and five p.m., we went in. When we had got about half-way across the great hall under the dome we were overtaken by a somewhat severe lady who demanded, in what struck me as an unnecessarily peremptory tone, if we had contributed to the funds of the hospital? I admitted we had not. She thereupon told us we had no right to be there until we had done so. We were led back accordingly to a box at the door for "voluntary contributions" into which I dropped a coin. The woman then requested us to come in again, which I declined to do, to the apparent indignation of the lady, who asked angrily why I treated her so. I explained that if admission was by payment that should be expressly stated before one was invited to come in, and that I objected to being induced to come in by a notice saying the hospital was open to visitors, and afterwards being turned out unless I "voluntarily contributed" something. The lady said the notice was that the hospital was open free only to contributors and subscribers. On re-perusing it, I found that below and altogether separated from the announcement that the hospital was open to visitors ran another announcement that admission was free to donors and subscribers. I remembered then that I had observed this before, but had thought it referred to the admission of patients. Don't you think my interpretation was a very natural one, and don't you also think the Hospital Committee, if they must extort contributions from visitors, should give better notice of their intentions? I confess the whole proceeding in my case seemed to me very like getting money by a trick, and it will be a long time before I again "voluntarily contribute" anything to the funds of the Devonshire Hospital.

I have received the following amounts towards Lady Jeune's Poor Children's Holiday Fund:—

Mrs. Frederika Macdonald, her share of the proceeds of the debate between Mrs. Besant and herself upon Theosophy, at St. James's Hall, £20. 1s. 10d.; B. R., £5; T. B., 3s.; A. V. £1. 1s.; A. H. Gower, £1. 1s.; Fred Gorringe, £10; G. W. B., £2; R. M., 2s.; M. S., £2; C. A., £1. 1s.

I must once more inform my friend Tommy Atkins that it is impossible to discuss in TRUTH complaints made by individuals against individuals—except, of course, where such complaints point to grievances generally felt. Every week my feelings are harrowed by stories of how this man or that has been treated by this officer or that, usually accompanied by reflections of a damaging character upon the officer referred to. To my inexpressible sorrow, all these communications have to go into my waste-paper basket, and there, I am afraid, they must continue to go unless Parliament, in its wisdom, should abolish actions for libel. I, therefore, suggest to military correspondents that they should not harrow my feelings in this way to no purpose.

Attention has very properly been called in a Plymouth paper to sundry flagrant abuses of discipline at the expense of an acting-Bombadier R.A., named Weatherall. Stringent orders have lately been issued that no N.C.O.'s should leave the barracks at Mount Wise in dress not conforming to the regulations. In accordance with express instructions from his Sergeant, Weatherall, who was in charge of the Guard, stopped Company-Sergeant-Major Ramsay, who was about to leave barracks in a private cap and boots. The Sergeant-Major's self-importance seems to have been wounded to an uncontrollable degree by this outrage on his dignity, and after some altercation with Weatherall and the Sergeant who had given him the instructions, he placed Weatherall under arrest—a distinctly illegal proceeding. The charge against him seems to have been one of impertinence to his superior officer. An inquiry was subsequently held, and, after being under arrest for twenty days, Weatherall was punished by being transferred to another company, with a consequent loss of 3d. per day.

Few more disgraceful cases than this have ever come before the public. The only person at fault was obviously the Sergeant-Major. He was about to break a regulation which he of all persons was bound to respect. He set an atrociously bad example by losing his temper and engaging in an altercation with his juniors for doing their plain duty. Finally, he vented his wrath by placing the bombardier under arrest, thereby clearly breaking the regulations. The whole of this misconduct is overlooked; the Court never seems to have troubled about it. The only man who is punished is the Sergeant of the Guard, and his offence clearly is that he did his duty, the character of the charge against him being too transparent to deceive any one. Such proceedings prove to demonstration, what I have again and again asserted, that what is conventionally known as "discipline" in the Army is often little more than the right of one man to bully and oppress another, in defiance equally of the true interests of the Service and of common justice. It remains to be seen whether any higher power will think that such a scandal demands interference.

I understand that after some inquiries by the Commanding Officer into the scandal at Exeter Depot, dealt with in TRUTH of the 6th inst., Sergeant-Major Kenyon has once more been allowed to appear in the barracks in uniform. I shall look with some curiosity for the next development of this case. Either the facts found by the Mess Committee in regard to Kenyon are true, or they are not. If they are not, the truth ought to be publicly stated, for a grave injustice has been done to the man by forcing him into retirement. If they are true, his present position at Exeter is a deplorable scandal, and demands further inquiry. The matter cannot be allowed to rest as it stands.

The difficulty about Tommy's laundry arrangements at Gozo continues to furnish me with correspondence. The following detailed narrative of the facts has been supplied to me, and if it is accurate, several irregularities seem to have been perpetrated which are fully deserving of attention:—

On their first arrival the men of the Detachment at Gozo were allowed to give their washing to any of the married women, who were assisted by native women, provided with passes for the purpose signed by the Brigade-Major at Malta. Later on, the wife of an Acting Sergeant-Major was grossly assaulted by a native, and immediately after this (query, propter hoc?) all the native women were excluded from barracks. How the Brigade-Major's passes came to be cancelled is not clear. The wife of a private of eighteen years' service, finding herself unable to do the washing without assistance, sent it out to the natives. For this she was brought up, and deprived for one month of the privilege of doing washing, her husband also losing one of his three good-conduct badges. When the month had expired, the Acting Quartermaster made an order for the same woman to wash for twenty men of his Company. The private replied that his wife was not able to do the washing, and, as it was not compulsory, he objected to her doing it. For this he was confined, and eventually awarded eight days' C.B., and deprived of another of his good-conduct badges for disobeying an order given by his superior officer.

I have carefully searched the Queen's Regulations, but I find nothing which requires the wife of a private to wash for the regiment. If there is nothing, the husband in the above case had the right to object to his wife being ordered to do the washing. In that case, the order was an unlawful order, and the man who gave it is in fault, not the man who disobeyed it.

Some time ago the best results ensued from my having asked Mr. Stanhope to give an eye to the filling of the barrack-room coal-scuttles at certain out-of-the-way stations. This encourages me to ask Mr. Stanhope's successor to cast an eye in the same direction. I understand that it is a common practice to measure the allowance of coal to a room with reference, not to the size of the fireplace, but to the number of men in the room. Thus at Fort George, where there are only five men in each room, each room gets an allowance of 15 lb. of coal a day, which in a bleak and exposed station is obviously insufficient. The matter is not of much consequence in the middle of July, but I mention it now in order to give full opportunity for making the necessary alterations before the cold weather comes.

From the latest information that I have received it would seem that no attempt has yet been made to stop the detention of Colour-Sergeants at Hamilton Depot beyond the limits of their time of service, as fixed by the Queen's Regulations. A military correspondent tells me that the explanation which I recently suggested of this form of irregularity is in most cases the correct one, N.C.O.'s being kept at the Depots in this way by arrangement between the C.O.'s of the Depot and the battalion to which the men should by rights be sent. But are we to take it that the higher authorities recognise it is the proper thing for Commanding Officers to make arrangements setting aside the Queen's Regulations?

STAR & GARTER HOTEL, Richmond Hill, S.W. High, dry, & healthy. Famed for its Guild and Corporation banquets, wedding breakfasts, balls, &c. Unrivalled winter residence.—CHAS. JAMES, Manager.

An order has just been issued by the Commanding Officer of the Cameron Highlanders at Malta enjoining Company Officers to pay their men at some time which will not interfere with their dinner. I take this order to be directly connected with a recent reference to this matter in TRUTH, and I beg to tender my thanks to the C.O. accordingly.

Anent Malta a correspondent draws a curious picture of the hap-hazard manner in which the Telegraph Service of that island is manned. The Staff appears to be drawn entirely from the regiments stationed at the island. This means that the most expert and experienced men are constantly being withdrawn as their regiments leave. Men are also frequently withdrawn by their Commanding Officers for field training, musketry instruction, and so on; while, in the event of an emergency calling all the troops into active service, the island would be left to manage its telegraph service as best it could by itself. Why is this particular corner of the Empire unprovided with a permanent Telegraph Staff?

The following conundrums are submitted to me by a Welsh Militiaman. All are beyond me, but, perhaps, the War Office clerks may be able to do something with them in their spare time:—

Why does a man who has served three months in a Line Regiment, on obtaining the rank of Sergeant in the Militia, get more than double the pay of a man who has served six years in the same Line Regiment and has been Sergeant in the Militia twelve years?

Why is no vacancy on the Permanent Staff given now to Militiamen, whereas twenty years ago such vacancies were always open to Militia Sergeants of good character?

Why are hundreds of Army Reserve men able to join two Militia Regiments, and so get pay from three Corps every year?

The last query has been propounded in TRUTH before. There is no question that fraudulent enlistment in the Militia is practised on a large scale, and I should have thought that it could be easily stopped, or, at any rate, checked. What difficulty is there in occasionally ordering a simultaneous muster of Militia regiments?

An Aldershot correspondent gives me an edifying narrative of the experiences of a sapper in the Royal Engineers, who had the misfortune to come into collision with his superior officers. As it is now impossible to investigate the whole case, I am unable to deal with it; but the following statement as to how the feud originated seems to be authentic, and is decidedly deserving of notice. A few months ago the sapper desired to fill a vacancy at Woolwich, for which purpose he had to extend his term of service to twelve years. He was subsequently accused of making a false statement on this occasion, and returned from Woolwich for the investigation of the charge. In the result he was released, but in consequence of a remark made by the C.O., he demanded a Court martial. The Court martial was refused, and thereupon the C.O. proceeded to order the man seven days' C.B. for the offence of which he had previously acquitted him. The sapper never got back to Woolwich, and he became, as might be expected, a chronic malcontent, with the result that after starting with six years' good character and two good conduct badges, his history ends in a District Court martial and forty-two days' hard labour.

Apropos to Cavalry expenses, an officer tells me that one of the most serious, and at the same time least justifiable, burdens thrown on a young officer comes in the shape of fines. My informant vouches for a case in which one officer had to pay £20 in fines before he got through the Riding School. This, at any rate, is a form of expenditure which might very easily be curtailed. There can be no earthly reason why a youngster should be fleeced to the tune of £5 for the benefit of the Riding Master and the Mess, because he gets a fall in jumping without stirrups, or be compelled to stand champagne to the whole of his comrades for some trifling error or breach of etiquette due to youthful inexperience.

Here are some further reflections of a Cavalry C.O. upon the same subject. From what I can see, however, the Regulations already give a good deal of power to Commanding Officers for the protection of the young and impecunious, and the result hardly seems successful enough to justify any further increase of these powers:—

Upon the Subalterns is thrown the main responsibility of keeping up the social prestige of the regiment. They are expected, as a matter of course, to hunt, play polo, and run a horse in the Regimental Steeplechase. If senior Officers are not expected to do these things, there is no reason why the juniors should be. The cost of the yearly Regimental Dinner is another tax which the younger men might be relieved of, for they can get very little pleasure out of it. Luncheon marquees at race meetings are very properly prohibited by Queen's Regulations (sect. vii., para. 71), but the Regulation is so disregarded that it is a farce to let it appear. Not long ago a Cavalry regiment gave a ball which is said to have cost £1,300. It also cost one Officer his commission. In his case the ball was the last straw.

So far from the Service being benefited by such extravagance, I am sure that the reverse is the case. A remedy might easily be found, and only needs enforcing with a firm hand. A return should be required from every C.O. certifying that no contributions or payments have been demanded from or made by an officer in his regiment, either upon joining or otherwise, except such as are authorised by the Queen's Regulations; and also that no officer is under any moral compulsion to hunt, keep polo ponies, or take part in expensive functions. In order to be of real value this certificate should be countersigned by the G.O. Commanding the District.

If I may trust a Quartermaster who writes to me apropos to recent remarks on the subject in TRUTH, Quartermasters' "perquisites" are now a matter of ancient history. Being anxious not to wrong any man, still less any class of men, I am glad to note this Quartermaster's disclaimer; but, with certain recent facts in my mind, I find a difficulty in believing that, under no circumstances, does a Quartermaster get a chance of making something for himself. How often he avails himself of that chance a civilian has, of course, no means of judging. All that I can say on this point has already been said, with reference to the leaflet lately circulated on Quartermasters' and Ridingmasters' grievances. The present

MAJOR HOWE & CO.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Graeechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

SPA, BELGIUM (10 hours from London and Paris.) Racing, tennis, golf, pigeon-shooting, &c. Splendid Casino, with theatre, &c. Waters unrivalled in cases of anæmia and dyspepsia scale of a Quartermaster's pay and pension is certainly not proportionate to his official responsibilities; and, if he is expected to run scrupulously straight, that ought to be considered in the contract.

The following order has just been issued by the Senior Medical Officer at Shorncliffe:—

Diarrhœa having occurred among the patients, traced to the tea supplied to the wards, the Quartermaster will be good enough to at once make a special inspection of the kitchen boilers and other utensils used in the making of the hospital tea, also the cans used for conveying it to the wards, and furnish a report to this office.

It seems a little incomprehensible how the outbreak can have been traced to the tea if no inspection has been made of the boilers and other utensils; and I should have thought that if an inspection of this kind is considered necessary, the medical authorities would have been much better qualified to conduct it effectually than the Quartermaster.

I referred a fortnight back to the canteen prices of a regiment stationed at Bradford, but I am glad to see from the official price-list, which has been sent to me, of the only regiment at Bradford (the 1st South Staffordshire Regiment) that in two instances the figures originally furnished to me were inaccurate. I am told that the same remark applies to certain of the parallel prices from the town shops given in the same paragraph. At any rate, after looking through the whole list, I should say that the prices, as a rule, leave very little to complain of.

With reference to recent remarks in TRUTH on the failure of the authorities to issue khaki and white clothing to certain battalions in accordance with the Indian Army Order of last year on the subject, some correspondence has been sent to me with the view of showing that this may be due to a bonâ-fide misunderstanding of the Order. I do not think it shows as much as that, but it certainly shows an edifying conflict of opinion respecting the effect of the Order among various authorities concerned. With regard to white clothing, a Commanding Officer inquires of an Assistant-Adjutant-General whether men who were in India before April 1 will be entitled to the specified allowance for such clothing. The A.A.G. replies with a decided negative. The same query is addressed to a Superintendent of Army Clothing, who answers with an equally confident affirmative. Whether the fault lies with the defective wording of the Order or the defective understanding of one or other of the officials mentioned, I have no means of judging. But I should have thought that there could be no difficulty in drawing up an Order which would leave no room for misunderstanding on such an important point.

The naval promotions which have just been announced have given much dissatisfaction in Service circles, which is by no means strange, inasmuch as they may be regarded as typical fruits of the objectionable selection system. The officers selected are sufficiently competent, but men with far stronger claims have been mysteriously passed over. It is to be feared that several of these promotions are simply for increase of pension, which is not a good thing either for the Navy or for the country. Two lieutenants, who have been promoted over the heads of some two hundred officers of the same rank, can only hope to profit in pocket by their good fortune.

The Indian trooping season is to begin on September 7, when the Serapis will leave Portsmouth for Bombay, and she is to be followed by the Malabar on the 14th, the Crocodile on the 23rd, and the Euphrates on the 30th. The Serapis will leave Bombay on her first homeward voyage on October 12. The season will terminate on April 30, when the Euphrates is to arrive at Portsmouth. Each of the troopships makes three voyages out to Bombay and home again.

A few months ago the Admiralty paid £15,000 (or some such sum) for the yacht Lancashire Witch, which was to be at once altered for surveying service. The money might just as well have been shovelled into the Solent, for I am informed that the yacht is still laid up at Portsmouth, and that nothing whatever has yet been done towards adapting her for surveying work. Is the Admiralty waiting for another ironclad to go aground before the very inadequate surveying service is strengthened?

When the next Merchant Shipping Act is passed, it would be a great thing for sailors if provisions were enacted securing to the ship's doctor some measure of authority in his own department independently of the captain. At one time and another I have had many communications, both from sailors and doctors in the Merchant Service, pointing to the need of reform in this direction. On a recent voyage to the Cape, the firemen complained to the doctor of the state of the sanitary fittings, and the doctor reported the matter to the Captain. The Captain's answer was an insulting rebuke, ending, "Don't bring such stories to me again, sir!" In this same ship the forecastle, licensed by the Board of Trade for twenty men, contained during the voyage twenty-two and twenty-three. In the forecastle also, where the men eat, drink, sleep, and smoke, and where their clothes, often reeking with perspiration or sea-water, are hung up to dry, a day's supply of bread was kept. It should be a doctor's business to report on such abominations as these; but in too many cases it is as much as his place is worth to open his mouth.

Among other prophets who claim to have foretold the loss of the Victoria is an Italian astrologer at Loretto. He issues annually a calendar with predictions for each quarter of the moon during the year, and on June 21 he predicts "Scontro di due nave da guerra" ("Collision of two men of war"). I cannot help thinking that the seer must have had an inkling that the British Fleet would be manœuvring about that time. To foresee a collision when any modern Fleet is manœuvring is about as difficult as to predict that on June 21 next there will be a collision between two vehicles in the City.

In preparation for the approaching sporting season, ladies and gentlemen should visit Ulster House, Conduit-street, W., where their orders for every kind of garment will have prompt and careful attention.

BRUSSELS.—The GRAND HOTEL. Magnificent establishment. Central position. Latest English hygienic improvements. Post, telegraph, and ticket offices. Unrivalled cave and cuisine.—DUBONNET, Propr.

Our Naval Manœuvres:
A new setting to an old song.

Ten British men of war
Steaming all in line—
One rammed her sister ship,
And then there were nine.
Nine British men of war,
Finished up to date—
One furred her boiler tubes,
And then there were eight.

One British, two British, three British, four British, five British men-of-war;
Six British, seven British, eight British, nine British, ten British men of war.

Eight British men-of-war
Off the coast of Devon—
One grounded on a shoal,
And then there were seven.
Seven British men-of-war
Trying cunning tricks—
One smashed her starboard screw,
And then there were six.

One British, two British, three British, &c., &c.

Six British men-of-war
Keeping things alive—
One fouled a merchant ship,
And then there were five.
Five British men-of-war
Manœuvring at the Nore—
One cracked her cylinder,
And then there were four.

One British, two British, three British, &c., &c.

Four British men-of-war
Fitted out for sea—
One was towed back to dock,
And then there were three.
Three British men-of-war
Just repaired anew—
One promptly sprung a leak,
And then there were two.

One British, two British, three British, &c., &c.

Two British men-of-war,
On their trial run,
Depended on defective charts,
And then there was one.
One British man-of-war,
With a monster gun,
Fired just a single charge,
And then there was none!

Ten British, nine British, eight British, seven British, six British men-of-war!
Four British, three British, two British, one British, no British man-of-War!

Pulpit references are still being made to the Victoria disaster, and edifying illustrations of the manner in which some preachers improve the occasion continue to reach me. A disgusted "Old Salt" sends the following from a sermon by the Rev. C. Joseph at Lake-road Chapel, Portsmouth:—

> A good deal of sentiment had been talked about the catastrophe, but it was clear that the tragic death of the hundreds of brave fellows could not affect the spiritual salvation of the drowned. There was no difference between the man who died at sea and he (sic) who dropped dead behind the counter of his shop. Nelson's last words were "I thank God I have done my duty." A greater lie was never uttered. He had done his duty as a sailor, but in his private life Nelson was a blackguard.

For true Christian charity commend me to these reverend gentlemen!

I have been asked to say a word in support of the claims of the mail-cart drivers on the Postmaster-General. The matter has already been referred to in Truth, and the men have such a weight of justice on their side that I should hope there is little occasion to say more. The deputation which waited on Mr. Arnold Morley the other day asked for nothing more exorbitant than a minimum wage of 6d. an hour, and a maximum day of twelve hours, and a Government which has undertaken to pose as a "model employer" can hardly deny the right of a man in the responsible post of a mail-cart driver to as good terms as a dock labourer.

Moreover, I would go a good deal beyond Mr. Keir Hardie's deputation. One of the worst grievances of the mail-cart men is that they are forced, under threat of fine and discharge, to do their journeys at such a speed that they are in constant risk of trouble with the police, and of being fined by Magistrates. That ought to be stopped, not only for the sake of the men, but for the sake of the public. I am also concerned, not merely for the drivers, but for the horses, which are some of the most pitiable objects about the streets of London. Many of the carts and vans, especially those in the Parcel Post service, are also disreputably shabby, so much so that it must be humiliating to every adherent of the Monarchy to see a "V.R." emblazoned on such equipages. On the day of the Royal Wedding, when the mail-carts were allowed to pass along the line of route, their appearance excited the derisive cheers of the mob all down Piccadilly.

The moral of all this is very plain. The contractors care for nothing beyond collecting and delivering the mails as agreed, and pocketing the maximum profit obtainable. The remedy is to eliminate the contractor. The tendency in all directions at present is to get rid of the middleman, and all public bodies are seeking as far as possible to employ their own labour and do their own work. The Post Office, the biggest public undertaking in existence, ought to have no difficulty in carrying its own mails. By so doing it should be able to secure to the public the contractors' profits, to abolish the sweating of the drivers and the horses, and to do the whole thing in a style worthy of the State. If it is considered impossible to go this length at one jump (I appreciate the conservative lethargy of St. Martin's-le-Grand), let us go by steps. The first step should be the transfer of the contractors' employés to the service of the Post Office. That done, the carts and the horses will very soon follow.

Poor-law affairs are again attracting considerable attention at Folkestone. The township forms part of the Elham Union, and casuals who apply for relief at Folkestone have to walk to a workhouse six miles away. This is in itself a most monstrous arrangement, and it is alleged that in severe winter weather deaths have been caused or accelerated by the consequent exhaustion and exposure. In addition, however, to being situated so far from the centre of population, the workhouse is described by an Inspector of the Local Government Board as one of the worst in Kent. The accommodation for casuals is said to be so limited that "frequently fifteen and twenty men have to be huddled in a badly-ventilated stable, and no provision is made for the drying of their clothes.

Women are also huddled into the stable and treated in the same manner." Complaints are also made as to the "simply horrible" state of things in the workhouse infirmary, and altogether the public inquiry which is demanded by a local ratepayers' society seems to be urgently needed.

From statistics just published I am sorry to see that the consumption of intoxicants in Lewisham Workhouse is again going up. In the first week of July, 1892, 445 inmates consumed 158 pints of porter; in the corresponding week of the present year 453 inmates consumed 212 pints. During June, 1893, 1,001 pints were consumed, as against 688 in June, 1892, the number of inmates being practically the same in both months. Some two years ago reference was made in TRUTH to the extravagant amount of drink allowed at this workhouse, and a reduction in the figures immediately followed. It is evidently time, therefore, for me to call attention to the matter again.

The report of the Commissioners of Lunacy for the twelve months ending May 31, 1893, shows that there were 89,822 persons of unsound mind in January last, being an increase of 1,974 as compared with the previous year. There are 80,893 pauper lunatics and idiots, 8,200 are in the private class of patients, and there are 729 criminal lunatics.

Last week a meeting of milk-dealers was held at Deal, to organise a combined rise in the price of milk. The meeting was called and presided over by a worthy milkman, whom Lord Halsbury, in his wisdom, elevated to the local Bench. By way, apparently, of giving an air of respectability to the movement, the milk-retailing J.P., who is also a distinguished light of Dissent, urged his fellow-townsmen to drink less beer in order that they might pay the increased price of milk. The local publicans will probably retort by advising them to drink less milk, and spend the difference in beer; and it strikes me that the publicans will have the best of the argument.

A coal strike does more harm than one in any other industry, because so many men are thrown out of other employments by it. As regards the strike now pending, I do not pretend to know whether the pit-owners or the pitmen are in the right. The former, however, propose arbitration, and the latter refuse it. The pitmen by this refusal have put themselves in the wrong. Arbitration means that certain persons should by mutual consent be appointed, who are without any personal interest in the issue, and who decide one way or the other, according to the evidence submitted to them. This is the only reasonable way to settle a dispute, for no man can be a perfectly unbiassed judge in his own case. The principle is sound, whether it be a question between two nations, or between two or more individuals. I therefore deplore the determination of the leaders of the pitmen to refuse arbitration, not only because much misery will be the result of war, but because anything which militates against the application of arbitration to disputes strikes a blow at a principle, the universal adoption of which would be of inestimable value to all.

With a zeal which is assuredly "not according to knowledge," a Unionist journal rants about the "packing" of the magisterial bench "with Radicals and Home Rulers," and mentions the flagrant case of Dumfriesshire, where, "out of thirty-eight magistrates just appointed, no fewer than twenty-seven are Gladstonians." My contemporary will doubtless be surprised and disconcerted to learn that all these new magistrates were appointed, not by any member of the Ministry, but by the Duke of Buccleuch, the Lord-Lieutenant of the county, who is as staunch a Tory as could be found in Great Britain. The Duke, however, is a sensible, fair-dealing man, and when having investigated the state of the Commission of the Peace for the county over which he presides, he found that out of 144 magistrates there were 141 who are Tories and Unionists, he at once recognised the propriety of his taking steps to place matters in a more satisfactory condition, and my contemporary will be horrified to learn that the Duke intends shortly to nominate several more Liberal magistrates.

The Lord Chancellor has been requested to appoint some Liberal Magistrates for West Wilts. The late Lord Radnor, who was for many years Lord-Lieutenant of Wiltshire, appointed only Tories and Churchmen, and his successor, Lord Bath, follows his bad example. In this district of the county, it is stated that out of thirty-nine Magistrates, only five are Liberals, and out of these only two are Nonconformists. In the Melksham Petty Sessional Division there is not a single Liberal Magistrate, although fully 50 per cent. of the population are Liberals. It is further complained that the Liberals are not represented on the Bench in the Warminster, Westbury, and Whorwellsdown Petty Sessional Divisions. Lord Bath is taking the waters at Homburg, and when he returns to Longleat he had better appoint an adequate number of Liberal Magistrates, without further delay, or the matter will be taken out of his hands altogether.

I am told that great injustice was done to Mr. Oswald, Q.C., by the anecdote respecting him given in last week's TRUTH. The anecdote makes it appear that Lord Esher had the last word, which, as a friend of Mr. Oswald's points out, would be a stain on the learned counsel's escutcheon. I hasten, therefore, to remove the stain. The conversation referred to ran thus:—The Lord Justice: "Really, Mr. Oswald, if you intended to rely on these points you should have raised them in the Court below." Mr. Oswald: "So I did, my Lord, but their Lordships stopped me." Lord Esher (eagerly): "They stopped you, did they? Will you tell us how they did it?" Mr. Oswald: "By fraudulently pretending to agree with me, my Lord."

The assize season is always a time of bitter affliction to all liable to serve on juries, but this is largely due to want of reasonable consideration for jurors on the part of legal officials. A Somersetshire gentleman was summoned to Wells to serve as a special juror at 10.30 a.m. on the 20th inst. As it was impossible for him to reach Wells on that day by the appointed hour, he had to go to the expense of travelling overnight, and putting up in the town. When it was too late to get back that night, he discovered that no special jurors would be wanted, and on returning home the next day he found that a letter had arrived on the morning of the 20th officially informing him that he was not wanted. Why, I should like to know, could not the second notice have been sent in time to prevent such unnecessary annoyance and expense?

FIRE PROTECTION OF MANSIONS.—Water Supply to Mansions and all Buildings. Practical pamphlets and designs, free, of MERRYWEATHERS', 63, Long-acre, London.

I should like to know more of the relations between Mr. Charles Solomon Benabo, of Stepney, and the police of that district. From evidence given at the Thames Police-court it seems that Benabo—who is a rent-collector—after accepting a man and his wife as tenants of a house at Blackwall, wrote them a letter threatening to distrain for rent due from another tenant, who had originally sub-let to them. While the wife was at the Police-court asking advice, Benabo carried out his threat, and moved all the tenant's furniture into the streets. The extraordinary thing is that in these proceedings he had the support and assistance of the police, having brought two constables with him. Benabo is well known at the police-court, and the Magistrate punished him for his outrageous proceedings with fines and costs amounting to £4. 3s., or, in default, fourteen days' hard labour. But who is going to punish the policemen who were accessories in the outrage? It is a well-known fact that the police are much readier to protect "rent collectors" of the Benabo type than the poor tenants who suffer at their hands, and Mr. Asquith would do a public service by ascertaining how the assistance of two constables was procured in the above instance.

With reference to the inquest at Crewe, commented upon in TRUTH of the 13th inst., I am given to understand that the police are quite prepared to justify their action in obtaining the exhumation of the body and the holding of an inquest. The fact seems to have been that the certificate, on the strength of which the child was buried, was signed by a doctor who did not see the child till after it was dead, and that the child had not been attended by any qualified medical man, but by an unqualified assistant, who was not even in the employ of the doctor who gave the certificate. Why these facts were not proved at the inquest I am at a loss to understand. It also appears that the coroner had himself signed the order for the exhumation of the body, and when he did this he presumably had some evidence to go upon. The action of everybody officially concerned in this case is inexplicable, and the higher authorities ought to give their attention to it.

THE CLARET of the season, CHATEAU LA MARNIÈRE, vintage 1888 (Blanquefort), 21s. per doz. cash delivered. Sample Bot., 2s. per post. A trial order will convince of its sterling quality & value.—ARNOLD, PERRETT, & Co., LD., 7a, Lower Belgrave-street, London, S.W.

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. I am sorry to have to place Mr. Bowen Rowlands in the list on the occasion of his first appearance as Recorder of Swansea. If the facts are correctly reported, however, it seems to me that he has scarcely succeeded in making the punishment fit the crime in the two cases cited below. I am loth to think that Mr. Rowlands holds the irrational and pernicious view of the property v. person question which afflicts so many judicial authorities; yet a peculiarly brutal assault, in which a man's jaw was fractured, is dealt with as though it were a less serious offence than a raid by youths of fifteen and sixteen on a provision shop. Of the performances of the Great Unpaid which appear in the Pillory, the most remarkable, perhaps, is that of the King's Heath Bench, who impose a small fine on a young man guilty of abominable conduct to a little girl, and send an old man of seventy-six to prison for three months for begging. The cases from Derby are interesting on account of the observation of the Bench in discharging Coulson that the punishment of being locked up in the cells "was, in his case, very severe." Why in his case more than any other? Was this unwonted sympathy of their Worships excited because Coulson happens to be well-connected?—

Swansea Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. Bowen Rowlands, Q.C., Recorder. William Rees, charged with maliciously wounding Daniel Williams. The prosecutor received a compound fracture of the jaw and other injuries to the head and face caused by blows with a stone held in the fist. Found guilty of a common assault. One month.

Swansea Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. Bowen Rowlands, Q.C., Recorder. Edward Evans (16) and James Thomas (15) pleaded guilty to entering a shop and stealing tins of salmon and sardines. Six weeks each.

Edinburgh City Police-court. Before Bailie Macpherson. Andrew Musket, convicted of assaulting John Ryrie, a youth, by throwing a tumbler at his head. Kyrie received a severe wound. Fined £1.

Edinburgh High Court. Before the Lord Justice Clerk. James M'Goggie pleaded guilty to stealing four shirts. Three years' penal servitude, and five years' police supervision.

King's Heath Police-court. Before Messrs. Lane, Barwell, Gilbert, and Lyndon. Percy Vickers, 17, pleaded guilty to a charge of indecent conduct, and of assaulting a little girl, aged 7. Fined 10s. and costs.

King's Heath Police-court. Before the same Bench. Thomas Dillon, 76, charged with begging. Three months.

Swaffham Petty Sessions. Before the Rev. B. Houchen, Colonel Applewhaite, and Mr. Lee Warner. Charles Wheals, charged with assaulting his wife. He did so on two successive days. Fined 2s. 6d. and costs.

Swaffham Petty Sessions. Before the same Bench. Arthur Blanchflower, Thomas Powley, and Arthur Winner, charged under the Poaching Prevention Act. Blanchflower and Winner fined 20s. each, Powley 10s.

Wellingborough Divisional Petty Sessions. Before Mr. H. M. Stockdale, Mr. N. P. Sharman, Mr. E. Sharman, and other Magistrates. Henry Bates, summoned for assaulting his wife. He threw a wooden last at her, struck her in the face, kicked her, and threw her to the ground. Fined 10s. and costs.

Wellingborough Divisional Petty Sessions. Before the same Magistrates. Fanny Tear, charged with stealing a shawl and a skirt. One month. Henry Hutchinson, charged with stealing a waterproof cape. One month.

Bolton County Police-court. Before Messrs. J. W. Crompton, J. Phethean, and G. Caldwell. Peter Hindley, charged with assaulting John W. Jackson. It was stated that defendant knocked complainant down and kicked him. Jackson had to go to a doctor. Ordered to pay the costs and bound over.

Bolton County Police-court. Before the same Bench. William Phethean, charged with sleeping in a brickcroft. Fourteen days.

THE ROYAL MARRIAGE.—RIMMEL'S Bridal Bouquet. A new and delightful Perfume, prepared by EUGENE RIMMEL, Ld., Perfumers by appointment to H.R.H. The Princess of Wales.

Lymington County Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. V. F. Dent, F. Ellis, H. Bowden-Smith, H. C. Ward, D. Jones, and Lieut.-Col. Clinton. Emmanuel H. Peddle, charged with causing a horse to be worked whilst in an unfit state, and Eli Phillips, labourer, charged with working it. The animal was in very poor condition—simply the frame of a horse. There was no shoe on one foot, the outer sole was worn down to the quick, and blood and matter were exuding. Phillips was fined sixpence. Peddle had been previously convicted. The Bench considered the case against him as bad as it could be. Fined £5 and costs.

Lymington County Petty Sessions. Before the same Bench. Edward J. Lawrence, charged with killing a partridge without a licence. Fined 30s.

Chester City Police-court. Before the Mayor, Mr. R. Frost, and Mr. L. Gilbert. Thomas Finn and Edward Finn, charged with sleeping in an outbuilding in Grosvenor Park. Seven days each.

Mansfield Police-court. James Short, convicted of assaulting Mary Connell. Fined 10s. 6d.

Mansfield Police-court. Abraham Wilson, charged with damaging mowing grass. Fined 21s., and 1s. damages.

Burnley Police-court. Isaac Giles, charged with assaulting his paramour, who said he knocked her down and kicked her many times on the head. Fined 20s. and costs.

Burnley Police-court. Sarah Ann Collins, charged with stealing a pair of boots. One month.

Sheffield City Police-court. Before the Stipendiary. William Linford, charged with cruelty to a fowl. Finding that the bird had not "laid," he placed it between the rollers of a wringing-machine and smashed part of its head, but did not kill it. Fined 18s., including costs.

Barnsley Police-court. Thomas Bradley, charged with game trespass. He shot and killed a rabbit. Fined 20s. and costs, or a month.

Wrexham Police-court. Edward Morris, charged with cruelty to four sheep, which he pushed over the top of a cliff, 70 ft. high. One sheep was crushed to death, and another had three legs broken. Fined £1 and costs.

Newtown Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. R. E. Jones and R. Lloyd. Thomas Tudor, charged with taking a rabbit from land belonging to Sir Pryce Pryce-Jones. Fined 2s. and costs.

Brierley Hill Police-court. Before Messrs. S. G. Dudley, S. Hingley, and J. S. Williams. Henry A. Knibbs, charged with assaulting his wife. He struck her several times in the face, and threatened her life, and he had previously ill-used her. Fined 5s. and costs.

Barnsley Police-court. Before Messrs. F. H. Taylor and G. Lancaster. John Wigfield, Herbert Jebson, Samuel Manley, and Charles Rawson, miners, charged with playing at pitch-and-toss. Fined 10s. each and costs.

Derby Borough Court. Before the Mayor (Mr. W. H. Marsden) and other Magistrates. George Martin Coulson charged with using obscene language. A policeman proved that defendant was ejected from the railway-station and used bad language towards two barmaids. The Bench thought the punishment of being locked up in the cells was, in his case, very severe. Discharged with a caution.

Derby Borough Court. Before Mr. John Bailey and Mr. H. Boam. George Cunningham, charged with using obscene language. Fined 10s. and 7s. costs.

Prestatyn Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. W. Wynne and Algernon Potts. John S. Gibbons, farmer, convicted of an aggravated assault on his wife. He threw a cup of hot tea into her face, flung her upon the grate, and tried to put her head up the chimney. He also severely beat her. A separation order granted. Fined £1 and costs.

Mr. H. J. Mirehouse, J.P., of Long Ashton, near Bristol, delivered himself of some singular remarks at the Police-court the other day. Four boys were charged with stealing a quantity of cocoa nuts, and the mother of one of them stated that her son had been at work in Wales, but had come home because the men struck. "This," said Mr. Mirehouse, "comes of striking—mischief for idle hands." The defendants having been in custody for several days the Bench decided to dismiss them; but in announcing the fact Mr. Mirehouse added that "personally he should be inclined to convict in one case, the mother's defence being almost an offence." In other words, this muddy-minded individual would, if he could have his own way, punish a lad merely because he is thrown out of work by a strike! It is really difficult to conceive a more astounding exhibition of magisterial unreason.

Another Magistrate who has been distinguishing himself by his utterances on the Bench is Mr. John Kaye, of Barnsley. In a furious driving case a number of witnesses were examined, but one, a lad named Swift, failed to attend, and his employer, Mr. Dobson, wrote asking that he should be excused on the ground that his absence from work would compel four men also to be idle for the day. Mr. Kaye's polite reply to this reasonable request was:—

> Tell Mr. Dobson that if he does such a thing again we shall cause him all the inconvenience we can; we shall cause him it purposely, for setting us at defiance.

Such are the manners of the Great Unpaid.

For the second time within twelve months the Rev. H. J. Alcock, Vicar of Wellington, has appeared at Shropshire Assizes as defendant in a libel action. The plaintiff on both occasions was one of his parishioners, a shoemaker named Partridge; and both the libels were published in the Parish Magazine. The first action ended in a verdict against Mr. Alcock for £10, and he straightway published an article in which he remarked that "Mr. Partridge first gives every inconvenience and then commits wilful perjury." For this he now has to pay £25. Let us hope that the reverend journalist will profit by these experiences, and turn the Parish Magazine to some better purpose than the dissemination of libels.

The Hadleigh Magistrates are very difficult to satisfy in the matter of evidence. At the Petty Sessions, on Thursday, a woman name Simpson was charged with ill-treating and neglecting her daughter, aged nine. The child herself deposed that she did not receive enough food, that she was constantly thrashed with a walking-stick, and that on one occasion her mother burnt her hands with curling-tongues taken red-hot from the fire. Corroborative evidence was given by the neighbours and other witnesses, and a doctor stated that he found twenty-five bruises on various parts of the child's body. In fact, the case was looked upon as proved up to the hilt, but Messrs. J. F. T. Dipnall, H. Newman, and S. Hardwick, J.P.'s, dismissed it "on the ground of want of sufficient evidence." What more they could possibly require was not explained; and I am not surprised to learn that this extraordinary decision has created great indignation in the district.

A scandalous abuse of Magisterial authority in the supposed interest of the game-preserver occurred at Carmarthen Petty Sessions the other day. David Owen, a shopkeeper and sub-postmaster of Conwil, applied for a game licence, which, if the Bench had done their duty, would have been at once granted. It was bluntly refused, however. The Rev. R. G. Lawrence, the Chairman, happens to be of opinion that such a licence "only encourages poaching." His colleague, Mr. C. W.

Jones, also announced that he was "opposed to granting a game licence in country districts." To my mind it is a monstrous state of things that country districts can be kept without game dealers merely because Magistrates entertain suspicions of this kind.

From a decision given by the St. Neots Bench on Thursday, it is clear that Colonel Montresor and his colleagues regard the evidence of one gamekeeper as more worthy of credence than that of half a dozen other witnesses. Perkins, the gamekeeper in question, charged two labourers named Townsend and Chapman with assault, and there were cross-summonses. Townsend swore that Perkins committed a violent and unprovoked assault upon him, and this was corroborated by his son and by Chapman, whilst a doctor deposed to the severe injuries the man had sustained. Other witnesses were also called for the labourers, and their employers gave them an excellent character. Perkins's statements, on the other hand, were wholly without corroboration; nevertheless, the Magistrates considered that his unsupported word justified them in dismissing all the cases. It is probable that the people of the district would have endeavoured to rectify this miscarriage of justice if five policemen had not kindly escorted Perkins to his home.

Rarely has a Judge spoken out so boldly and so forcibly on the subject of the Game Laws as Mr. Justice Vaughan Williams did at Nottingham Assizes last week. Both in his charge to the Grand Jury and in his summing-up in the Clifton Hall case, he strongly condemned the arming of keepers, and vividly contrasted the measures adopted for the protection of game—"which is, after all," observed his Lordship, "a little doubtful class of property"—with those pursued by the police in guarding human lives and homes. But what if the arming of keepers was absolutely necessary to ensure their safety?

Well, then, it might become a question in the minds of some whether in the interests of the State an alteration ought not to be made in the law to prevent the continuance of a system which necessitated the danger of provoking deeds of violence.

If there were any game-preserving gentry on the Grand Jury, and it is highly probable there were, just imagine the amazement and indignation with which they would hear these revolutionary sentiments from the Bench! To talk of the mere interests of the State as though they were more important than the "sacred birds" would seem to them rank treason.

That to allow keepers to go forth armed with guns, revolvers, and other weapons, and accompanied by savage dogs, is, as the Judge said, a practice eminently calculated to lead to violence and bloodshed, was shown once more by the lamentable case which gave rise to his lordship's remarks. Two keepers equipped in this way made an illegal attempt to arrest two poachers on the high road, and in the struggle which ensued one keeper was killed. The circumstances were such, however, that the jury acquitted Marples, the poacher indicted for murder; and popular approval of the verdict was demonstrated by the enthusiasm with which a crowd, numbering thousands, greeted the man outside the Court, and escorted him as he was carried like a hero to his home. Such a scene would never have taken place but for the existence of an intense public feeling against the infamous system which occasions these tragedies. Mr. Justice Vaughan Williams would have been justified in speaking more positively on this point. That which he cautiously suggested "may become a question in the minds of some" is already the firm conviction of the masses. The Game Laws will have to be mended or ended.

I should be sorry to say a word which would seem to imply approval of the use of bad language in public places. Still, I cannot help feeling a little sympathy for Miss Ann Bearder, "a respectable-looking girl," who was summoned at the Nottingham Police-court last week. Miss Bearder saved her money and bought a new dress, but when she went to put it on found that it had been pawned by her mother and sister, who had spent the proceeds in drink. Thereupon she made certain remarks to her sister for which the Bench fined her 10s. It seems to me that Ann was hardly dealt with. Provocation is considered in mitigation of other offences. Why not of bad language?

Advertisements for "male and female detectives" have lately appeared in a Madras paper. Those who answer them are invited in the first place to state what security they are prepared to deposit, "as the work is responsible." This looks so suspiciously like the modus operandi of Mr. Binet, of the "National Detective Agency," that I would recommend the Madras police to imitate the vigilance shown by the Scotland Yard authorities in dealing with the individual's exploits.

Apropos to what was said in last week's TRUTH respecting the illegality of palmistry, my attention has been called to the advertisements of various professors of the black art of palmistry which are still running in the Morning Post. I would suggest that the attention of the Metropolitan Police should be at once pointed in the same direction. Is it the view of the guardians of the law that it is a crime to "cheat and defraud" her Majesty's subjects of a shilling, but not so to defraud them of a guinea? If not, what has been done by the Sunderland police ought to be done by Scotland Yard.

I am much concerned to learn that a gentleman named Ernest S. Day, of Ash Vale and 21A, Berners-street, has been confounded with the rascal Ernest Day, against whose attempts to swindle people with bogus family portraits I am constantly warning my readers. The fraudulent Ernest Day carries on his nefarious business in the Old Kent-road. He has no earthly connection with Mr. Ernest S. Day above mentioned, nor, so far as I know, with any other Ernest Day—and no doubt there are many to be found.

Particulars have been sent to me of the extraordinary adventures of an English governess at Prague. The young lady, it appears, was engaged in the house of a wealthy and well-known inhabitant, and arrived in

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Pure & wholesome, assists digestion.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Guaranteed to be free from alum.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. It has the largest sale in the world.

Prague on June 15. Her salary was to be 36 florins per month, with board. Two days later she was told that, owing to her knowledge of music being elementary, her salary would be reduced to 20 florins. On June 21 she was informed that she must clear out by July 1. She protested against this strange treatment, and desired to go out to consult a lawyer. When she attempted, a few days later, to leave the house for this purpose, she was rudely seized by her employer and his gardener and driven back. In her terror she jumped through a window on to the lawn and tried to escape over the garden-wall, but fell and sustained a compound fracture of the right ankle. Her kind employer then sent the gardener with her to a hospital, where she was left in the common ward.

The Vienna correspondent who has forwarded the above narrative tells me that the case has excited great indignation amongst English residents. In several instances of late, both in Prague and Vienna, English governesses have been "swindled out of sums of money" by their employers. It has become, in fact, a common trick to get a lady to go out to a situation and then to reduce her salary by 10, 12, or 15 florins a month on some paltry pretext as to incompetency. English governesses will therefore do well to exercise caution in reference to any engagement in Austria-Hungary. The Lady Superintendent and the directors of the Queen Victoria Governesses' Home, Vienna, are, I understand, always ready to supply information as to the suitableness or unsuitableness of a situation.

There are some interesting facts in the third Report of the British Dental Association Committee on school-children's teeth. Some of the most interesting of them relate to what are called "high-class" schools—meaning, as far as I can gather, proprietary middle-class establishments. In one of these, out of 49 boys ranging from eleven years old to nineteen, only 6 per cent. had sound teeth; 61 per cent. are classed as "fair," 29 per cent. as "bad," and 4 per cent. as "very bad." In another similar school the boys are classified thus:—"Sound," 1 per cent.; "fair," 25 per cent.; "bad," 45 per cent.; "very bad," 29 per cent. These figures seem to indicate that middle-class children are in this respect very little better off than the children of paupers—a state of things which implies a very serious reproach to their parents.

An advertisement in one of the theatrical papers signalises a new development of the Church and Stage alliance. It emanates from a young clergyman, "now holding an important curacy," who has resolved to throw aside the surplice for the sock and buskin, and "wishes to meet with leading lady." He delicately insinuates that a leading lady with some capital will be preferred, and does not forget to mention that he is "single." If preachers are to turn players, I suppose we shall next have players turning preachers. This would be a distinct gain to sundry audiences and many congregations.

Mr. J. Bennison, of Tooley-street, has taken the trouble to write and inform me, in order that I may communicate the information to my readers, that, after having been a martyr to rheumatism for many years, and having tried physicians and patent remedies in vain, he has been cured by oil of peppermint. I do not know Mr. Bennison personally, and I am not interested, directly or indirectly, in the oil of peppermint trade. I am therefore in a position to make Mr. Bennison's information public with a clear conscience. Whether it is worth anything is a different matter. As, however, it is the English oil of peppermint which Mr. B. recommends, the publication of his prescription may possibly do something for a humble native industry, if it does not do anything for the rheumatic.

Apropos to the late disturbance in Dominica, I am told that one of the most serious elements in the economic condition of the West Indies is State-aided coolie immigration. This system was commenced some ten or twelve years after the abolition of slavery, when labour was extremely difficult to obtain. At the expiration of another fifteen or twenty years, all necessity for it had passed away. The negro and semi-negro population had enormously increased; the new generation of free coloured people which had grown up were ready and capable of working as free labourers; and, owing to the decay of the sugar industry, the demand for labour was beginning to fall off. The effect of continuing coolie immigration under these circumstances has been the permanent pauperisation of the free labouring class. The ugliest fact about the West Indies is that, while during the last thirty years wages have been steadily rising in all civilised countries, and even to some extent in India, in the West Indies they have steadily fallen. I am told by one who knows Trinidad well, that in this island—reputed to be one of the most prosperous—the fall has been in some cases as much as 30 per cent.

In a self-governing country this state of things would speedily right itself. The free working class would simply insist on the exclusion of the coolie. The West Indies are not self-governing. They are largely governed from Downing-street, and, what adds immeasurably to the mischief of this arrangement, the Downing-street wires are largely pulled by absentee West India landlords. The continued importation of coolie labour, while free native labour is as cheap and abundant as it is, can only be explained by the cupidity and selfishness of the planter element. The planter ideal of "conditions of employment" is said to be a working day of twelve to eighteen hours at one shilling, and in the present state of the labour market this ideal appears by no means distant. It seems, therefore, to be the first condition of the restoration of prosperity and content in the West Indies that the colonies should be governed in the interests of the masses instead of a single class, and that the least deserving.

Some little time back I called attention to the methods by which Colonel N. Holland, C.B., Ruling Councillor of the Nevill Habitation of the Primrose League, was promoting petitions against the Home Rule Bill for the Tunbridge Wells district. I have since heard of various interesting attempts of the gallant Colonel to increase the numbers of his Habitation, quite regardless of the effect his efforts might have upon other Habitations. It is clear that he is not content with merely inducing Tom, Dick, or Harry to write themselves down Tories, but he insists upon their joining his particular Habitation. The glory of the Nevill Habitation, with its reflected glory on the gallant Colonel, is everything. Last week the Nevill Habitation had a fête of the usual character, and the posters, after notifying (why, I do not clearly perceive) that "none but members of the Nevill Habitation will be admitted," wound up by announcing:—

All desirous of becoming members of the Nevill Habitation can sign declaration forms at the entrance gate, and will thereupon be ADMITTED FREE.

Doubtless this generous offer produced a handsome addition to the numbers of the Nevill Habitation. If this is a sample, however, of the manner in which the numbers are kept up, I doubt if the Colonel's forces will be of much value to the Party.

FROM THE FLOOR OF THE HOUSE:
A GROWL FROM A MISOGYNISTIC M.P.
(Picked up near the third Bench below the Ministerial Gangway.)

Thank Fate! the Season's now quite past,
The end has come with Goodwood Races;
Society must fly at last
To Ryde, and Cowes, and such-like places;
Which means that we, too long coerced
By so-called petticoat persuasion,
At length shall see our House set free
From further feminine invasion.

Too long the sex has had its way,
O'er-riding legislative duty;
Too long M.P.'s, day after day,
Have been the slaves of birth and beauty.
Too long have we the Terrace seen
With merry dames and damsels teeming;
Too long giv'n up to claret-cup—
To tea, and strawberry-and-creaming.

Too long have ladies young and old,
For information greatly thirsting,
And by impunity made bold,
Upon our inner life been bursting;
Filling the Lobby with their mirth;
Casting their spells like pretty witches;
And eager, too, to form a queue,
And quiz us from the doorway niches.

Upstairs we cage them up, 'tis true,
Behind a grille whilst we're debating;
But it is useless this to do,
And futile is that gilded grating,
So long as we—'twould seem afraid,
Lest we should anger or aggrieve them—
Downstairs invite their reckless raid,
And there with open arms receive them.

Ere 'tis too late, then, let us end
The fatal course we are pursuing,
Lest woman, coming as a friend,
Remains to work our sure undoing.
Let us draw tight repression's cords,
And see that raised our barricade is,
Or else, to back the House of Lords,
We soon may have a House of Ladies!

When Admiral Tryon ordered the Victoria and the Camperdown to turn within six cables, all thought that there must be a collision. The Admiral's subordinates, however, obeyed orders, deeming that the Admiral possibly knew better than they did, and that there was something within the resources of his mind which would render it certain that the collision would be avoided. This is very much my mental condition in regard to the course of procedure in the House of Commons on the Home Rule Bill. As a Member of Parliament, I obey the signals of Admiral Gladstone; as a journalist, I take the liberty to suggest that the good ship "Radical" will encounter a serious danger of being swamped at the General Election.

There is no use crying over spilt milk. It is self-evident that the Session ought to have commenced in the first week of last January, and that the Bill ought to have passed the Second Reading before Easter. This latter had been intended; but it was found impossible to give effect to the intention. When the Bill went into Committee, it is equally evident that it would have been well to have kept discussion on the generalities of the first clause within reasonable limits, instead of allowing the Unionists to waste days and weeks in vague talk. At the end of June no progress had been made in Committee on the Bill, and it was decided that the clauses should be divided between four compartments, and a week given to the discussion of each compartment. The objection to this was, that discussion would be limited to the first and second clause in each compartment, and consequently that there would be no discussion on the others, although discussion on each clause within proper limits was legitimate. The event has shown that this objection was well founded, and on Thursday of this week the Bill will be reported, with most of its provisions undiscussed.

It often happens that when a Bill is not discussed in Committee, the discussion takes place on Report, which is practically much the same as Committee, except that the Speaker, instead of the Chairman of Committees, presides. But if the Bill is to be passed in August, this can only be done by a second application of the guillotine. Thus the Bill will go up to the House of Lords with its main provisions actually never considered by the House of Commons.

Now, this is playing the game of our opponents. When we come to the General Election, they will ask the electors whether the relations of the two Islands constituting the United Kingdom ought to be altered without the discussion of all provisions? We shall answer that this was the fault of the obstruction of the Unionists. But electors are apt to look to facts, and the fact will remain that the provisions were not discussed.

What, then, do I suggest? That the Bill be carried over to next year, and that the report stage and the third reading be taken next Session. I would begin the Session by passing a few British Bills, then—say in June next year—take up the Home Rule Bill at the point that it has reached this year, and send it up to the Lords, allowing an average of one or even two days for the discussion of each clause. The Bill would thus go up to the Lords after the fullest and amplest discussion of its details by the Commons, and if the Lords threw it out, an immediate appeal to the country would, I think, secure us a victory at the poll. Home Rule is not advanced by one day by passing the Bill this year, for it is not contemplated to appeal at once to the country on its rejection by the Lords.

Midland Third-class Luncheon and Dining Carriages Glasgow (St. Enoch) and London (St. Pancras). 1.30 p.m. in each direction. Table d'Hôte Lunch, 2s.; Dinner, 2s. 6d. Service à la carte. Excellent cuisine. Popular prices. "A Model Restaurant on Wheels."—NOTE:—Midland Railway Company's Hotels at London (St. Pancras), Liverpool, Leeds, Derby, and Bradford. Excellent cooking. Choice wines.

It must be remembered that the Bill does not give immediate Home Rule to Ireland, nor does it for the next six years relieve us from the probability of Irish matters occupying so much time of the Imperial Parliament that we shall not have a free hand to deal with British matters. Taxes, constabulary, and land—the three chief Irish questions that have occupied so much time in all past Sessions—are reserved to the Imperial Parliament. As the Bill stands, Ireland gets a Legislature that may not discuss for six years the questions outside of which there can be no real Home Rule, whilst these will still occupy the time of the Imperial Parliament. The Bill is, in fact, like a bottle labelled brandy, with a good deal more water than brandy in it. All this will somewhat damp enthusiasm for the Bill, and renders it all the more necessary that we should not give our opponents any cause to complain of the manner in which it has passed the Commons.

According to present arrangements, the Bill will be thrown out by the Lords in the first week of September. We shall, I suppose, have to meet in the autumn. If we manage to pass then even one of the Bills of the Newcastle Programme, so much the better; but with the Estimates almost untouched, and the Bills coming from the Grand Committee, this is doubtful. Anyhow, we shall commence the next session with the main items of the Newcastle Programme awaiting us. Are we going to send up the Home Rule Bill again to the Lords? If we do, are we going to re-discuss it, or to suspend the Standing Orders, and to pass it in a night? If the former, British interests will have a right to complain. If the latter, I hardly see the advantage; for the Lords will, of course, throw it out, and we shall not have strengthened our case with the country by turning to the Lords our left cheek, when they have smitten us on the right cheek. The only ground that I have heard suggested for this action is that possibly the Irish will not be here to vote on British measures, if we do not again pass the Home Rule Bill. But Home Rule can only become law by the union of British and Irish Home Rulers. This union involves a certain amount of give and take. We shall have passed Home Rule, and surely we may fairly ask that the Irish should help us to pass some of our Bills once, instead of insisting on our passing their Bill twice.

The more this question of Home Rule is considered, the more convinced am I that the real solution is Home Rule all round. One Parliament cannot grapple with Imperial and local matters. The attempt results in a perpetual legislative deadlock. In Wales there certainly is as strong a feeling for Home Rule as in Ireland. In Scotland there is a Home Rule majority. When faced with the fact that English matters will be decided by Irish votes, the English will soon declare that this constitutes a monstrous state of affairs. When the Irish demanded Home Rule, and when it was clear that we must either grant the demand or rule by perpetual coercion, public opinion declared itself in favour of the former alternative. Now, however, the Home Rule idea has made such headway that I really believe that, if a plan of Home Rule all round were propounded, with an Imperial Chamber popularly elected, in which each component part of the United Kingdom were represented, it would sweep the country.

The House of Commons has evidently not yet entirely emancipated itself from the notion that land has rights that are not applicable to other property. The Irish Parliament is not to be allowed to deal with Irish land for three years, and against this only thirty-nine voted. The Irish themselves supported this restriction on the powers of their own Legislature. Why? Because they hope to get more out of the Imperial Treasury in order to settle the land question to their satisfaction. The Unionists kindly forced us to assume a liability of 30 millions in order to convert Irish tenants into freeholders, and to enable Irish landlords to sell their land. I have no doubt that there will be an attempt to saddle us with further liability in this direction during the three years. But I see no more reason why the Imperial Treasury should aid Irish tenants in becoming freeholders than that it should aid British tenants; or, indeed, that it should place the credit of the State at the disposal of persons engaged in commercial or industrial enterprises unconnected with land.

When I protest against this and other similar provisions in the Home Rule Bill, I am told that there must be some sort of compromise. But I have never discovered what is gained by the compromise. We certainly have not won over the Unionists, and, so far as I can perceive, it is the old story of Radical principle being sacrificed to the views of a dozen or two moderate—very moderate—Liberals, who make their support dependent upon their being allowed to have their own way. If the Radicals protest, they are asked to consider what a moral blow it would be to the Government to be defeated upon any provision in their Bill. So far as I am concerned, this appeal has no effect on me. I was not sent to Parliament to be a hewer of wood and a drawer of water for "moderate Liberals." They have always been a millstone round the neck of Radicals, and we never shall have large, generous, democratic measures, until we manage to free our necks from this millstone.

It has been suggested that the Home Rule Bill should be brought next Session into the House of Lords, and when thrown out there, Parliament should be dissolved and the constituencies should be asked to realise that this action of the Lords has rendered it impossible to go on with all the British Bills then before the Commons. There can be no objection to the Home Rule Bill being brought into the Lords next Session. I fail, however, to see how its being thrown out a second time by that Assembly will interfere with the Bills of the Session before the Commons being proceeded with. Dissolution for dissolution, I would rather have it take place on the Lords throwing out a British Bill sent up to it.

Birds of a feather flock together. The first grey hair will soon have companions, unless their coming is rendered impossible by the use of Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer.

The Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of Ireland has issued a circular denouncing the Home Rule Bill. The Synod opines that the Bill is an "actual establishment of Rome's ascendency — i.e., of anti-Christian ascendency—under which it is inevitable that anti-Christian purposes will be served, and all Christian interests damaged," and that it is "altogether hostile to the claims of Jesus Christ, as King of Nations." All this is in the usual style of the political sectary of Ulster who is prostituting religion to a desire for political domination. But, alas! the Synod, whilst regarding Mr. Gladstone as the Antichrist, "cannot look with any confidence to the Unionist Party, as that Party operates on an anti-Christian basis." Under these lamentable circumstances the Synod advises all members of the Reformed Church to "possess their souls in patience," a recommendation in the wisdom of which I entirely concur.

In the Temps of July 21, it is stated that several French Journals have reproduced an article rempli d'insinuations violentes against M. Decrais, the new Ambassador of France in England, from TRUTH, l'organe attitré de l'aristocratie britannique. The Débats, indeed, devotes an article to a protest against my observations on M. Decrais. As the Temps points out, no such article has appeared in TRUTH, which, "loin d'être l'organe attitré de l'aristocratie britannique, est le représentant dans la presse du radicalisme avancé de son rédacteur en chef." I believe M. Decrais to be an excellent choice as Ambassador. He is an able diplomatist, is not in any sense a party man, and as Ambassador at Vienna he was very popular. The only allusions in TRUTH to M. Decrais that I can find are these :—

> At his last post—Vienna—M. Decrais was extremely popular. He is wealthy and hospitable, and, which is more, together with Madame Decrais, he has the gift of doing things exceedingly well.

This second reference was intended rather to protest against the Roman nobility than to approve of their action in regard to a gentleman who was not noble by birth :—

> Decrais, who was also spoken of, will be kept at Vienna, because Madame Decrais is many times over a millionaire, and wealth is required to make any kind of a figure there. He was the tutor of her son, and she, falling in love with him when she was a widow, married him. They did not get on well with the Roman aristocracy, which thought them bourgeois and found them touchy.

The Yellow-book, published by the French Government, gives interesting information in regard to what has transpired between her Majesty's Government and that of France respecting our occupation of Egypt. On Mr. Gladstone taking office, the position was this :—Mr. Gladstone had stated previous to the General Election that, in his opinion, we are bound in honour to bring our occupation to a speedy end, and this, consequently, was part of the programme on which the Election was gained by the Liberals. Since the Election we have acquired the knowledge, that the Egyptians themselves (a fact which up to then was always denied) desire our withdrawal.

I fully admit that the question is not without difficulty, and I agree with Lord Rosebery that the moment of disturbances occurring in Cairo was not the best to come to a definite settlement. These disturbances are now, however, over, and something ought to be done to give effect to the assurances of Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues when in Opposition.

There are really two questions involved :—(1) Our occupation of Egypt ; (2) our occupation of the Suez Canal. The Egyptians have now an army, and I should think that this army, or this army augmented by a few regiments, might maintain order, and be in a position to defend the southern frontier against Dervish raids. There remains the question of the Canal. It is an artificial strait connecting Western and Eastern seas. Do we hold that we have a right to be the absolute masters of this strait? If so, this right is irrespective of the well or ill government of Egypt, and is not dependent upon temporary considerations. But whence do we derive the right? We did not make the strait; it is not in our territory : if it is on the high road to our Eastern possessions, this may be equally said of France and Russia. I should like, therefore, to see all connected with this strait definitely settled by international law. Under ordinary circumstances all European Powers would be against its being a mare clausum in the exclusive possession of any one of them. That Germany, Italy, and Austria do not take this view is solely due to the rival jealousies between them and France and Russia. But we cannot count on these jealousies for ever, and it would be well that the question should be settled upon broad and honourable lines, with full recognition of the principle which must in the end prevail, that a strait such as this must be deemed an "open sea."

I do, therefore, hope that Lord Rosebery will turn his attention to this question. We are now in a false position, both as regards Egypt and as regards the Canal. He cannot say that the Liberals in Parliament have worried about the matter, but I think that they have a right to count upon some action on his part. What Liberal opinion is in regard to our occupation of Egypt was sufficiently shown when every Liberal who was in the last House of Commons trooped two years ago into the Aye lobby with Mr. John Morley at their head, on a motion being made that the British Army should at once be reduced by the exact number of soldiers that were then in Egypt.

But what an argument is all that is going on abroad for Home Rule all round at home! When we devote ourselves to domestic reforms we lose all hold over foreign affairs. This state of things practically destroys the real control that the House of Commons ought to exercise alike over home and foreign affairs.

I do not regard ourselves as invested with any particular mission to look after the well-being of Asiatics who are not under our rule; and we have no more right to interfere to prevent France laying hands on Siam, than the French had to prevent us from laying hands on Burmah. They, it would seem, demand the cession of all parts of Siam east of the Mekong River. We took one portion of Burmah, then we took what remained of that country, and, having done so, we took a territory to the north belonging to a number of independent chiefs. This last grab brought us to the Mekong River, and somewhat beyond it. If, therefore, the French take all east of that river, their frontier will march with ours. The question, therefore, so far as it regards us, is whether a buffer Asiatic State between two States such as France and England is an advantage or a disadvantage. A good deal may be said for either view, but I am by no means sure that the balance of argument is not against the buffer system. These buffer States lead to quarrels. Each neighbour strives to exercise a paramount influence, and the two find fault with each other for their mutual intrigues, whilst the Sovereign of the buffer State plays one off against the other. That part of Siam which abuts on our territory east of the Mekong is very sparsely inhabited, and the sway of the Siamese Sovereign is very nominal there. The real objection to France having it is that this may interfere with any trade route that we may wish to establish through it connecting Upper Burmah with China. It is, however, exceedingly questionable whether any such trade route would increase our imports into China. Altogether, I greatly doubt whether we should be losers by France acquiring this territory, or that our frontier marching with that of France in this remote part of the world would be of any real injury to us.

SCRUTATOR.

WHERE IS MACLEAN?

I AM glad to be able to report that there is some hope that Mr. Angus Maclean, of the "British and Foreign Association," is contemplating a change of address. For some time past this rascal has been carrying on his game in a manner so reckless that it could only lead to one result, and I should say that he has now found his quarters too hot to hold him. Among recent cases which have come to my notice is that of a German Governess, who advertised for a situation. She received the following reply to her advertisement:—

The British and Foreign Association.
Offices, Victoria Tower Chambers, 6, Millbank-street, Westminster, London, June 6, 1893.

DEAR MADAM,—Referring to your advertisement in to-day's Times, we shall be glad if you will call on us here to-morrow (Wednesday) or Thursday, between 10 and 1, or between 3 and 5.
—Yours truly,
MACLEAN & Co.
(p.p. A. E. H.)

The lady called at 6, Millbank-street, and saw a young man, who explained to her that by paying 10s. 6d., and joining the British and Foreign Association she would obtain all she wanted. He further stated that if at the end of a month the Association did not provide her with a berth, her subscription should be refunded. She desired time to consider the matter, but the young man pressed her to join at once, in order that he might communicate with certain parties who were then inquiring for governesses. On his repeating the assurance that the money would be repaid on July 7 if no engagement was obtained by that time, the lady paid her money and departed. She subsequently received one letter from "Maclean & Co.," asking for an extension of the time, but she did not fall in with this suggestion. With this exception she heard no more of the British and Foreign Association. On July 7 she wrote requesting the return of her money, and enclosing a stamped envelope for the purpose, but she received no reply. The application was repeated, but with no better result.

This is a sample of the game which Maclean seems to have been carrying on systematically for some months past. The victims have mostly been hooked by the process of answering their advertisements, and from what I have seen of them I should say that Maclean has a preference for the advertisements of foreigners. Perhaps it is on this that he bases the title of the "British and Foreign Association." At any rate, all the subscribers, British and Foreign, have now received conclusive evidence that they are only "associated" as dupes of an impudent swindle. Last week a gentleman, whose subscription, according to the promise made to him, was returnable on June 18, called in person at the offices of the "Association." He found it locked, and a notice displayed that it was temporarily closed owing to the absence of Mr. Maclean. While reflecting upon this announcement with mixed feelings, the Associate was joined by three others in the same position as himself. After consultation, three of them adjourned to the nearest police-station, and in consequence of the advice given them there, an application was to be made to the Magistrate at Westminster on Monday afternoon. What the result of it may have been I have not been able to learn at the time of writing, but I sincerely trust that the Magistrate and the police will give all the assistance in their power towards bringing to justice this irrepressible offender.

Maclean is probably not very far off. The last address which he left, so far as I know, was "The Cheshire Cheese," Fleet-street; but inquiry at that hostelry shows that he has not been seen there for the last two or three days. He owes three months' rent for the shabby back room in Millbank-street, which does duty as the "Offices" of the "Association," and he is considerably indebted to the lady whose duty it has been to keep the "offices" clean. For several days past the premises have been beset by the parties who have been defrauded of half-guineas in the manner above described, and among them are many foreigners and young girls, who can ill afford to lose their money. It will be seen from this that the man is a thorough-going and heartless rogue, and anybody who can give a clue to his present whereabouts, or otherwise assist in bringing him to book will be rendering a public service. Perhaps the most extraordinary feature of the case is that up to the last Maclean has been advertising as patrons of his Society nearly all the names to the appearance of which in this connection I have so often called attention. The Earl of Hopetoun, Mr. John Corbett, M.P., Mr. Oswald Crawfurd, Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, and Professor Butcher have been struck out of the list, much to their credit. But the Earl of Hopetoun is succeeded by the Earl of Dysart, and such people as the Dean of Lichfield, Sir Robert Rawlinson, Sir Frederick Pollock, Mr. Edward Terry, Professor Robert Wallace, Dr. Momerie, Lady Florence Dixie, and Mr. W. H. Grenfell are being held out to the last as "Honorary Members" of this impudent and mischievous swindle. If any of them wish to make amends for allowing their names to be used for such questionable purposes, they could not do better than co-operate with their fellow-members who are not "honorary" in bringing Maclean to justice.

TYPHOID AND TARRADIDDLES.

There is no longer any disguising the truth about Worthing. By the aid of special representatives from the London Press, and a question on the subject in Parliament, the facts have been proclaimed to all the world, and, seeing their gravity, it is only right that they should be. Mr. Fowler stated on Thursday that during the present month 548 cases of typhoid fever had occurred. This is in addition to some 250 cases recorded in the first outbreak during May and June. The Town Clerk informs the correspondent of a contemporary that there have been in all 89 deaths—that is to say, more than 10 per cent. of the cases have terminated fatally. It seems generally agreed that the cause of the mischief lies in the water, and on this point one of my Worthing correspondents gives a striking piece of evidence. One person who religiously boiled his water in accordance with the official instructions on the point, is said to have been seized with typhoid after eating a salad which had been washed in unboiled water. I also hear that of two members of the Town Council who, strong in their faith in the Municipal water supply, refused to boil their water, one has lost his wife, while another had four children down with the disease. An official inquiry into the whole circumstances has, however, been ordered by the Local Government Board, and when the result of this is known, it will be possible to speak more confidently respecting the origin of the calamity.

In the meantime, what has happened ought to be a warning to the authorities of other watering-places, as well as to the patrons of these attractive spots. Worthing had in the first instance a comparatively mild visitation. Had the gravity of the symptoms been recognised, and the situation fairly faced, the trouble might have ended there, and no great harm would have been done to the town. The policy of hushing up, however, was adopted. To conceal the fact of the outbreak was impossible. But every attempt was made to extenuate its dimensions, and the efforts of the authorities seem to have been devoted to persuading the public, especially in London, that the outbreak was due to accidental causes, and that the danger had passed away as quickly as it arose. It is now evident that the occurrence was not an accident, but the result of standing sanitary evils. The effect of the mistaken policy adopted has been to extend the mischief, to cause widespread suffering and desolation, and to give the town a bad name which it will not lose for years. I am sorry for the Worthing people, for the error into which they and their rulers have fallen was a natural one. But nevertheless they deserve to suffer, and it is for the interest of the community at large that they should be made an example of. In a fashionable health resort the attempt to hush up and belittle an outbreak of this kind, and to evade tackling the evil at its source, is little less than criminal. To say nothing of the safety of the resident population, it means exposing to the risks of disease and death thousands of unsuspecting strangers, a large proportion of them children, who flock to the place in search of pleasure and health. In the case of a place like Worthing, largely frequented by excursion parties from London and elsewhere, it meant the risk of the disease being carried away and disseminated in all directions. How many visitors have actually taken the disease home with them from Worthing during the last month or two will never be accurately known.

With this "object lesson" in view, it seems desirable to warn all those who during the next month will be flocking to watering-places of one kind or another, upon the need of inquiring carefully into the sanitary conditions of whatever spot they may choose. That Worthing has sinned beyond all the other towns in the Kingdom I should be very sorry to say. There are only too many places where far less attention has been given to sanitation; and the late drought, which is pleaded as an excuse for Worthing, is also likely to bring out the weak points of drainage and water supply in every locality where such weak points exist. Of course, it is the interest of all places which owe their prosperity to their popularity as health resorts to keep themselves in sanitary order. But it is also their interest—or rather they may be unwise enough to think it is—to conceal their shortcomings from the eye of the visitor. One of the oldest and most popular sea-side towns in England had, until two or three years back, no regular system of drainage; but not one visitor in a hundred ever knew it, and the rumours of "diphtheria" and other kindred ailments which occasionally got afloat were always officially denied as soon as they appeared. A very different example has just been set by the authorities of Bexhill, a rising little town near Hastings. A few weeks back, something was found wrong with the Bexhill drainage, and, although to open the sewers up at this time of year was certain to drive people away and to provoke damaging comment, the necessary work was promptly taken in hand. It has now been completed, and Bexhill has a clean bill of health. If Worthing had known two months ago the things which belonged to her peace, she would have acted in the same way.

RATIONAL DOG FEEDING.—Give wholesome and nutritious food (Spratt's Patent Meat Fibrine Dog Cakes). Do not give tit-bits and dainties because your dog, like a spoilt child, prefers what suits his palate. See that the Dog Cakes are stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "x," as cheap and innutritious imitations are often substituted for extra profit. Pamphlet on Canine Diseases post free, SPRATT'S PATENT, Limited, Bermondsey, London.

A ROUGH DYMOND AT DALY'S.

Mr. Augustin Daly has a commodious and well-appointed theatre, a reputation for able stage-work extending over several London seasons, and a leading lady of really remarkable powers. What he now wants is a competent general company and a reasonably good piece. When I think of the players with whom Mr. Irving considers it necessary to surround himself at the Lyceum, or whom Messrs. Hare, Alexander, and Beerbohm-Tree engage for the Garrick, the St. James's, and the Haymarket, I cannot help wondering how Mr. Daly, with his troupe constituted as it is, and with his own knowledge of what constitutes good acting, believes himself to have a chance of holding his own. This troupe may almost be said to begin and end with Miss Ada Rehan, and to represent the "ma femme et quatre poupées" of the legendary theatrical speculator on the cheap. Mr. James Lewis is, no doubt, very amusing as a comic old man; but he is always the same comic old man, and he is often very indistinct. Mrs. G. H. Gilbert, too, is an excellent comic old woman; but after all the scope for comic old women is strictly limited, and the parts affording Mrs. Gilbert an opportunity for distinction can be very few. After this quaint pair, who owe as much to their individuality as to their art, we drop with a run to the modest level of the George Clarkes, the William Gilberts, and the Isabel Irvings, whose painstaking efforts merely succeed in bringing the methods of the provinces across the Metropolitan footlights. As to Mr. Arthur Bourchier, who, longo intervallo, succeeds Mr. John Drew—by far the most finished player whom Mr. Daly has ever introduced to us—that young gentleman is not even up to our provincial standard. He is still an unmistakable amateur in his doings, and I begin to doubt whether he will ever be anything else. He is an extremely pleasant-looking fellow, with a frank manner and a manly presence; and I should think he must have been a good man in his college boat or eleven. But his histrionic gift has yet to assert itself, and at present he tackles his stage-work with more resolution than skill, and more of physical vigour than of either. To set Mr. Bourchier the task of playing into the hands of Miss Rehan in her passages of rapid and dexterous comedy is like sending a sturdy roadster, only just broken to harness, into the haute école of the ring. He cannot be animated without being boisterous; he cannot speak quickly without gabbling; he cannot bustle without getting all over the place. He has, in fact, still to acquire the very A B C of the art possessed, say, by Mr. Charles Wyndham; and it is just this art which is required for a piece such as Mr. Daly's latest production.

But the piece itself, which is an American adaptation from the French, is a prolix and feeble affair—a whimsical comedietta which has outgrown its strength during the process of development into a three-act comedy. "La Vie à Deux" of MM. Bocage and De Courcy was, no doubt, a difficult piece to handle for the English stage. But I can imagine that, compressed into two short acts, and rehearsed and acted as it would have been at the Criterion or the Court, the piece might have been made fairly entertaining in an irresponsible fashion of its own. Even "Love in Tandem," spun out into three acts, and clumsily, for the most part, as it is acted, has its laughter-moving motives and moments. Miss Rehan is certainly delightful in her interpretation of the extravagant moods of Aprilla Dymond, who constitutes herself a kind of matrimonial-agent-in-advance for the husband from whom she is seeking divorce on the ground of incompatibility of temper. Her description of her experiences while testing the eligibility of various possible successors to herself is marked by a rich humour, which is all the actress's own. For the rest Mr. Lewis gives a droll sketch of Aprilla's business-like papa "of Chicago," a gentleman rejoicing in the farcically suggestive name of Skinastone, and occupying himself with some financial transactions the purport of which I could not quite understand. Miss Violet Vanbrugh joins the company to play the part of the handsome music-mistress, whom through a misunderstanding Mr. Dymond supposes to be the second spouse chosen for him by his wife, and whose personal attractions rouse Mrs. Dymond's jealousy. So far as these attractions are concerned Miss Vanbrugh is, of course, a happy selection on the part of the management; but I have seen her to considerably more advantage. Mrs. Gilbert has very little to do, and Mr. Bourchier, who makes of the hero a very rough Dymond, has a great deal. But the efforts of all of them put together fail to drive "Love in Tandem" with the dash and finish demanded for such an experiment.

A MATINÉE OF PROMISE.

To discuss the average matinée production always seems to me about the most useless of tasks, for the work is of its very nature ephemeral, and deservedly dies on the evening after its birth. An exception to this rule was, however, provided the other afternoon at the Strand in "The Adventures of a Night"—a lively and ingenious comedy borrowed by a Mr. Meyrick Milton from a Spanish original well known to our forefathers through its adaptations by Tuke and Hull, respectively in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Mr. Milton's only mistake was in casting himself for one of his principal characters, since he made about the most wooden Don that ever figured in a mediæval intrigue. How much, if any, of his dialogue he may have owed to his predecessors I do not know, but most of it sounded apt and spirited, though I caught here and there the echo of a sham-Elizabethan platitude. The plot represents a sort of game of cross questions and crooked answers—a very elaborate game, but one readily followed by the looker-on. The situations are contrived with an adroitness betraying the hand of a master playwright, who was either Calderon or else one of the closest contemporary imitators of Calderon's comedy method. It would not do to say that, even apart from the English author's unfortunate histrionic contribution, the performance at the Strand was equal to the artistic requirements of the play. But Mr. W. N. Vernon, Miss May Whitty, and one or two of their colleagues, did quite enough with it to show that if handled with due style and finish, "The Adventures of a Night" might prove quite worth trying for a run.

CAUTION.—The Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company, 112, Regent-street, W., beg to state that they have purchased the whole of the business of the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Limited, late of Cornhill. The stock being old and unsuitable for the Company's trade was disposed of to the Public by Auction at Christie's, and any statement to the contrary is inaccurate and misleading. The Company, having also bought the dies of the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Limited, is the only firm in a position to supply the Goldsmiths' Alliance patterns.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

SARCEY SAUCY.

M. SARCEY is more than disappointed at the London theatre-going public not having evinced more enthusiasm for Mdlle. Bartet, whom he holds to be the pearl of accomplished French actresses. On reasoning out the failure of her efforts to lead the Drury Lane spectators into the seventh heaven of delight, he traces it to their imperfect knowledge of the French language. Those who knew it best were rusty. Those who knew it fairly well had to be straining their attention to catch the sense of each phrase, and, on the principle of inhibition, could not follow with a free mind her scenic effects. She did not seek to appeal chiefly to their eyes, and was strictly the character she strove to personate. Sarah Bernhardt in London, and, doubtless, everywhere in partibus infidelium, was simply Sarah Bernhardt, and those who went mad about her understood little of what she actually said, but had a clear idea of what she wanted to convey by means of pantomime and dress. She was in love parts the languishing feline, exquisitely attired and draped. The æsthetic craze being on, her style of draping, carried away all the ladies, and every æsthetic gentleman. She had also the figure of a pre-Raphaelite Saint, and looked a Comyns-Carr-ish, Burne-Jonesy-Rossetti creature. With this the British public had been well indoctrinated by the papers, for the actress, in her early visits to London, had been a rich mine out of which to extract telling copy. Sarcey thinks it, on the whole, to the credit of Mademoiselle Bartet not to have been acclaimed as the transcendental star of the theatrical world when she was in London. It shows that she obeyed the promptings of her artistic conscience, and did not attempt to paint the lily or to gild refined gold.

Sarcey denies that the Comédie Française was coldly received at Drury Lane. He never saw a fuller house than when "Hernani" was on there. Mounet-Sully did not, he owns, fall in with their ideas of a great actor, or rather with the taste they have acquired during twenty years of Irvingism. He was daring in coming before the footlights as Hamlet, the character in which Irving took the town by storm when young to the stage, and has in a great degree continued to hold it. There is, then, no subject on which English criticism is more angular, not to say faddish, than that of "Hamlet." Each playgoer has in his mind's eye a distinct conception of "Hamlet" modified, no doubt, by Irving's effects, but still peculiar to himself. He brings religious feeling, and, perhaps, some fanaticism, into it, and resents any attempt to upset it. Mounet-Sully, of course, was not many-sided enough to produce a Hamlet that would tally with the preconceived ideas of each person who went to see him in the part at Drury Lane.

I met a few days ago a widowed lady of title who was a star once upon a time of the Viennese stage, and is still remarkably fine-looking. She is tall, graceful, sits and walks well, and looks less than her height. Her face is one to tell in a strongly-dramatic character. Nobody has seen better society on the Continent or in England, she having entertained, as her husband's wife, half the Royalties of Europe, and been admitted on that footing into the crème of West-end London. Her diction is charming in German, French, and English. But a slight foreign accent hangs on her tongue in the two latter. She had an engagement in the Burg-Theater when she made a conquest of her late husband, to whom she was a devoted wife, and whose honeymoon was, as he said himself, a perpetual one. She spoke of wishing to go again on the stage, but did not see how the difficulty of the slight foreign accent could be surmounted. Why could not, I suggested, some dramatic author take her up as, say, the mother of some youthful and wronged heir to an English estate and title? As a widow of foreign birth of some Earl or even Baronet, and quite at sea among those wanting to devour her son's fortune, she would be a splendid success.

No end of matrimonial engagements in high life are announced; but it does not follow that we are to have any number of brilliant weddings. The Divorce Court, by rendering marriage soluble, has greatly taken from the splendour in which the nuptials of French couples having wealth and high rank on one or the other or both sides were invested. The rites are maimed, so far as they can be, with regard to getting through the ceremony in a style that will not strike the gossiping newspaper reporters as shabby. A number of the weddings which are announced for this season will come off in the country, where little is required in the way of mise en scène, and those which are to be solemnised in town will take place when nobody but tourists are here. With an eye to possible divorce, the code of manners which the fiancée was bound to follow when marriage was indissoluble has been greatly relaxed. In the ante-divorce times, directly she was engaged she went no more into company, living the life of a conventual novice. The futur called on her every other day with a bonquet or some objet d'art or jewel that he had bought for her use. He met her in a ceremonious manner, the interview being regulated according to traditional etiquette, not the less strict for being unwritten. No romantic conversation was possible. Except at these meetings, the fiancée lived like a recluse. The only interdiction now placed upon her is that of not accepting invitations to balls. It would be ridiculous for her to dance with her futur only, and he and his family might not like to see her languishing in the waltz in the arms of other pschutteux. One so easily falls in waltzing into a languishing attitude. She has full liberty to go to opera-houses or theatres, to déjeuners, dinners, and garden-parties, and there is no objection to her indulging in mild flirtation, provided that she does so under the maternal eye. I think this is an improvement, in the equal-rights direction, on the old way of conducting an engagement.

The stereotyped mode of keeping La Sainte Bastille having fallen into disfavour, it is now a matter of public interest how to turn over a new leaf. Should the date remain a red-letter one, or should it be allowed to die out and a fresh one be adopted for the purpose of national festivity? Though I was not reared on the knees of Mother Church, and am no 'vert, I should like to see her brought as assistant stage-manager into the fêtes of an all-embracing public character. As I said last week, there is a hieratic gravity in processions, which is reposeful, and is certainly picturesque, inasmuch as it contrasts with the fever of every-day life. The Church's "properties" are, still, when used by her, spectacular. She understands thoroughly the operatic part of religion, has fine music, fine voices, and is able to get up cortéges of youths and maidens and of venerable men and women as can no other body. Do you remember Haquette's painting of the clergy of a small port blessing the sea, and Breton's of a Pardon in Brittany? Why not bring in a few Breton processions of this kind, and those delightful South of France Rogation ones in, say, a street cortége representing the different provinces? The memory of old local costumes and customs would be thus kept alive, and the cause of diversity in unity served. I should also like to see the mysteries revived in a modern spirit. There is no reason why there should not be highly-effective theatrical representations in the open air. Current questions, or topics of a nature to stir the public, might be brought into prologues and epilogues, if not into the plays themselves. Why not employ the chorus of the opera, and eke the corps de ballet, on National Fête days, to entertain the public in open-air théatres? I venture to say that such entertainments would infuse new blood into the dramatic art. It would create at once an intensive and a broad style of acting and singing, and force actors to drop small trickery. I do not believe an ordinary street public would stand the lasciviousness and pantomimic smirking (if I may so express myself) which some of her male subscribers to the opera require of the corps de ballet. Models for graceful motion might be furnished by Java, and for speaking gesticulation by Italy. What an effect spectacular fêtes thus got up would have, not on French taste merely, but on that of the whole world!

Within the six months preceding the last 14th of July, 10,000 applications were made for the Cross of the Legion of Honour. It was decided (the Press having been so forward, to exact hush-money from the De Lesseps) to grant on that date no decorations to journalists. But not to inflame them to the point of making them firebrands, it was also decided to withhold decorations from all who were not members of the Civil or Military Service. Wilson's Legion of Honour traffic has only enhanced the value of the red ribbon, he having asked and obtained for it such fearfully high prices. We hear of negotiations with the Court of Portugal, having for their object a change in the colour of the ribbon of Christ of Portugal, when worn by foreigners. I don't believe they will succeed. What gives "Christ of Portugal" such value in French eyes is its ribbon being thread for thread the same as that of the Legion of Honour. This makes it greatly sought after in this country by tradesmen and manufacturers. It is true that it is in France a penal offence to wear the ribbon without the cross. But tiny crosses can be worn, and when they are, means are taken to hide them under the ribbon. The number of Legionaries of the Order founded by Napoleon is not nearly so great as what Mark Twain thought, when he said few Frenchmen escaped being in their ranks. The Court of Portugal would be without groceries and most of the expensive things Paris can offer were the ribbon of Christ of any other colour than an unbroken and lively red. Its value in the French market, because of its certainty (when the cross is tucked away) being mistaken for that of the Legion, is much higher than any title the Crown of Portugal can sell.

Talking of titles, I sat not long ago beside Sir Wilfrid Lawson at dinner, and was asked by him many questions about the conditions under which Frenchmen are decorated. He asked, in the course of the chit-chat, whether I did not think grown-up people very like children in their desire for such distinctions as titles. They are, but there is this difference: the little ones never pretend fondness for things they dislike, but the grown-up ones do. They are often at endless trouble, and endure worry with seeming patience, to appear to be in the same swim as the smart people. Sir Wilfrid intends to move that in future no title be given by the Queen without a detailed account in the Gazette of the services in reward of which it may be granted. He might amend his motion by requiring that no title be granted, unless claimed in writing by the person wanting it in a letter stating the services on which the claim might be based, and that every such letter, if acted on, be also given in full in the Gazette.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

WHEN writing to you last week, dear Lady Betty, I chronicled the death of a valued friend, and in describing his character then I mentioned that he had been "an accomplished man, shrewd, witty, and wise in the ways of the world." This has since suggested to me certain reflections that must have also occurred to others who have had extended experience of London Society. Men of the world—using the expression in the restricted sense, as applied to those who enjoy the advantages of social prominence—of an earlier period than our own, were distinguished by certain qualities which appear to be decreasingly reproduced now in their successors. In the friend whose death I recorded last week there was an instance of a highly-cultured man who had been trained in accordance with the system which till recently prevailed. Possessed of a sound classical education, he was a man of wide reading and accurate memory. The remarkable characters of fiction were as familiar to him as our own particular companions of real life are familiar to us. He had a practical knowledge and a cultivated appreciation of art. He was an expert judge of cooking, wine, and cigars. The same as regards horses. He played an excellent hand at whist, and a brilliant, though not professional, game at billiards. With large experience of the world, he had matured, sound, worldly wisdom, and his judgments upon current topics were always judicious, and generally correct.

Now, that which I am driving at is this. In the best

English Society, a generation or two ago, such men were not the exceptions, but the rule. They were not geniuses, but men reared in the most refined school—well educated, well-trained, experienced, good-all round men of the world. But as I look about I do not perceive that the younger ones are qualifying themselves now in these particulars to replace them. There are those, to be sure, who can play billiards like the professionals, whist like professors; who can shoot with the precision of prizemen, or ride like licensed jockeys. There are innumerable specialists, but the accomplished, intellectual, experienced, all round man of polished Society appears to be becoming rapidly extinct. The majority of the men in the younger generation have wide experience, but it has mostly been acquired in a contemptible school. They are cunning, suspicious, and learned in trade trickery such as used to be associated with citizens and shopkeepers. Their conversation is of people and of pursuits, and seldom of imaginative subjects. Society is to them not the responsible companionship with their fellow club men, but perpetual association with the fifth rate women who run from one ball to another, and from one mediocre entertainment to another still more insignificant. Society is not a training to them, but a happy hunting-ground where they may either secure patronage, assistance, victims to be plucked in the City, or a rich wife to establish them in ease, and perhaps in luxury.

Is this condition of things an improvement?

* * * * *

A book has been brought under my notice which, I feel sure, will be of interest to British readers. The name of it is "Titled Americans: A List of American Ladies who have Married Foreigners of Rank." The publishers are Messrs. Street & Smith, of New York, and the work is annually republished and annually revised. It requires to be delicately reviewed. "Titled Americans" is divided into four parts. The first division deals with the comparative values of titles in the different European States; the second division enumerates the various American ladies who have secured aristocratic husbands; the third supplies a careful list of the eligible men of rank throughout Europe; and the fourth provides the names of some 1,500 persons, who together form the nobility of New York. I was under the impression that there were not so many.

In other words, "Titled Americans" is a species of stud guide to the eligible aristocracy of our continent. This should be very gratifying to the hundred odd young men whose names, characteristics, antecedents, and money qualifications are most fully set forth within its pages. Some perhaps might unreasonably object to note in print that they "have sown their wild oats;" that their families are "very poor;" that they themselves enjoy "a small allowance;" and various other remarks of a similarly private nature, which, according to our effete ideas, are not in accordance with the most admirable taste. They may, moreover, be somewhat nervous henceforth when introduced to the fair adventuresses of the New World upon reflecting that almost each one of these is fortified with her "Titled Americans," and is, therefore, aware of their precise present money value, as also of their prospects in the future. In fact, this original, and I should imagine highly useful, work is a species of catalogue to the desirable young men in the Continental marriage market. It concludes with an interview with Mr. Chauncey M. Depew upon the subject of "Why do American women carry off all the matrimonial prizes in England?"—which, by the way, they do not. I should think that the information supplied by "Titled Americans" must help considerably towards this end. A passage from the interview with Mr. Depew deserves to be quoted:—"The American girl comes along, prettier than her English sister, full of dash and snap, and go sprightly, dazzling, and audacious, and she is a revelation to the Englishman. She gives him more pleasure in 'one hour' at a dinner or ball than he thought the universe could produce in a whole life-time (!) He knows nothing of business, and to support his estate requires an increased income. The American girl whom he gets acquainted with has that income, so in marrying her he goes to Heaven and gets—the earth." Quite correctly; he does get "the earth;" but unfortunately in most cases he fails as much in procuring the "income" as he does in securing "Heaven." Under these circumstances, he might do better in marrying an English girl who is not possessed of "snap" and whose fortune has less "go" about it, once that the marriage ceremony is over.

Lord Aberdeen, who will commence his official duties as Governor-General of Canada in the course of next month, has accepted the Presidency of the Committee of the Self-Help Emigration Society. Ten years ago this Society was founded for the purpose of assisting the deserving poor, who were prepared to help towards their own expenses, to emigrate. In no case is any emigrant despatched without work being first provided for him in the Colony to which he is destined. Out of the five thousand emigrants who have been sent out by the Society since 1884, the largest portion have been established in Canada. From this it will be seen how valuable to the Society is the acceptance by Lord Aberdeen of the office of President.

I mentioned last week that the French Chargé d'Affaires had issued invitations to meet Mr. Gladstone and the Comédie Française. At the party, Mdlle. Reichenberg was introduced to Mr. Gladstone, who asked her whether she knew Mr. John Morley. Feeling that she ought to known him, she replied that she did, and greatly admired him. On this the Premier proceeded to elaborate the theme under various heads, and delivered an essay to the lady on his colleague as a man, as a philosopher, and as a Home Ruler. Mdlle. Reichenberg chimed in with perpetual notes of approval. When, however, Mr. Gladstone left her, she anxiously inquired of a friend at what theatre Mr. Morley performed, and whether he habitually played tragedy or comedy.

It is understood that two of the three Turner pictures belonging to the Cassiobury Collection, which were sold at Christie & Manson's last week, were bought in. The sales here will now be shortly discontinued until November next.

The transfer of Cliveden from the Duke of Westminster to the American millionaire, Mr. Astor, has very nearly collapsed. Mr. Astor, it appears, laid claim to the visitors' book, and as this was a valuable record of the life and friends of the Duke, the latter refused to admit the claim, and went so far as to threaten even to cancel the sale if it were persisted in. Mr. Astor should have no difficulty in establishing for himself in a short space of time an equally interesting list of visitors, particularly if, as Cliveden is a show place, he were to provide free lunches. It is understood that the Duke of Westminster has been allowed to retain the book on payment of £300.

The sun has set upon the London Season for 1893, and the town has emptied with a rapidity which is without precedent. Notwithstanding the impetus of the Royal Marriage, the late Season has been the worst upon record—a circumstance which is not surprising, seeing that money has been scarcer than it ever was before. The principal sufferers from this, of course, are the West-end tradesmen, and the workpeople who are dependent upon them to earn their livelihood. If the present depression continues, the suffering next winter will be terrible, and it is to be hoped that the charitable will devise some means in time to provide against what appears now to be inevitable.—Believe me to be, very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

"TOILET LANOLINE" softens, clears, and preserves the skin, and should be used in every household. "Toilet Lanoline" protects the skin from the effects of exposure, and adds to the natural beauty. In collapsible tubes, 6d.; in small boxes, 3d., from all chemists and druggists. Wholesale depôt, 67, Holborn-viaduct. The genuine bears the trade-mark, "Lanoline."

SPORTING NOTES.

SPECULATORS have been so much occupied with the events of the last week, and the Stewards' Cup has attracted so much attention, that the Leger has been altogether neglected. There has been a further and intensified scare about Isinglass, who has been amiss for some days, but I have reason to believe that he has been merely suffering from a temporary ailment of a very ordinary kind, and he will soon commence his Leger work, and should be in good trim for a strong preparation, as he has been doing nothing beyond easy canters since the Derby. He was never intended to run at Goodwood, and it was very wise policy to sacrifice his Ascot engagements, considering the hard state of the ground at that meeting.

Galloping Dick was tried again at Newmarket last week, and he won in a common canter. This colt was not up to the mark when he made his début at Kempton Park, and his form at Ascot (when Wedding Bell beat him in the New Stakes) must have been all wrong. He is something of a rogue in all probability, and the best policy with him would be to get well away and come right through. Galloping Dick beat St. Florian in last week's gallop. The colt is own brother to Silene, and it has always been expected that he would turn out a flyer.

Mr. Houldsworth has a very bad lot of two-year-olds this season, and I fear that they are not likely to win any of their numerous engagements.

Bushey Park was favourite for the Liverpool Cup throughout, but Simonian was backed for a great deal of money on Friday, and if the start had been much longer delayed there would have been nothing between them in the betting. The finish was confined to the two favourites, and Colonel North's horse won rather easily after a slow-run race, which was all in favour of Simonian, who was also well suited by the soft ground. Simonian has done an enormous deal of work, and his victory was a very creditable performance, all things considered. Roy Neil was a very bad third, but he will no doubt improve on this form in the course of the autumn. The Liverpool meeting suffered seriously by the death of Mr. Jardine, of Dryfeholm, which event caused the scratching of all Sir Robert Jardine's horses, and he had intended to run seven or eight. Marcion walked over for one of the three-year-old stakes, and the other was won in a canter by Royal Harry, on whom odds were lavishly betted. Colonel North was in great form at Liverpool, for he also won the Molyneux Plate with Quickly Wise, for which handicap Quidnunc was a great "pot"; and in the Sefton Plate his Sancho Panza was successful, after a dead heat with Favour Royal, long odds being betted on the loser both in the race and in the deciding heat. Favour Royal cut up a perfect wretch, and he evidently did not fancy running two races in the same afternoon.

Mountain Chief was a great favourite for the Golden Handicap at Gatwick, but he could not stay the course, and when he wins the distance will not exceed six furlongs. The run on this horse last week was stimulated by the good form of Medicis at Sandown Park, and Mountain Chief was said to have been well tried with Amandier. Worcester also discovered himself to be grievously deficient in stamina. Bill is evidently a gross impostor, and his purchase was certainly one of the very worst deals ever made by Captain Machell. A better sold horse never left Ireland. Geheimrath is a rogue, and the ground was too heavy for Workington, while Gantlet had been beaten in her trial. Esmond ran very badly, but, considering that Concrete is not yet in proper racing trim, he ran very well, and he ought to win a good handicap before the season is over. Cabin Boy's performance was an excellent one, and he is a very smart horse over a mile, and runs equally well whether the ground is hard or soft.

Odds were justifiably betted on Arcano for the Crabbet Stakes, and he won very cleverly from Basildon, but it was no great achievement to beat Mr. Rose's horse at even weights. The bookmakers were fielding for Mr. Merry's Letterewe, a filly by Barcaldine, which cost 270 gs. last year at the sale of Lady Stamford's yearlings. Arcano has much improved in appearance. His only engagement next year is the Derby, in which it happens that neither Speed nor Sempronius is engaged, but they are both in the Two Thousand, and Mr. Baird's colt is also in the Newmarket Stakes.

I hear that Baron Rothschild has decided to send Medicis to France, in order that he may run for the Deauville Prize on August 20, an arrangement which will excite the vituperative comments of the colt's backers for the Leger. A race at Deauville will not do Medicis any harm, as his opponents are a very moderate lot, and he has run only twice this season, and last year he was thrown up after Goodwood. If he runs well at Doncaster, then the Champion Stakes will be one of the most interesting events of the Newmarket Second October Meeting, as Baron Rothschild's horse will then meet Sir Hugo and Buccaneer.

The Duke of Portland's three-year-old Kilmarnock has been turned out of training, and he has left Newmarket for Welbeck. Kilmarnock is own brother to Ayrshire, and he began last season with about forty engagements, and, inasmuch as he has never won a race, he must have proved an exceedingly costly animal to his owner. He was never fit last season, but he was expected to achieve great things as a three-year-old, and might possibly have won some races if he had not discovered a habit of breaking blood-vessels. The Duke will no doubt try to sell this horse for the foreign market, but he will not be so quick in getting rid of him as he was in the case of Melanion, his own brother, who has risen prodigiously in value since he was weeded from Welbeck.

There are forty-two entries for the Ebor Handicap, which will be run at York on August 23. Convent is the the best of three-year-olds engaged, and among the older horses the most notable names are those of Tanzmeister, Enniskillen, Llanthony, Newcourt, Dare Devil, Bushey Park, Ragimunde, Gantlet, Shancrotha, Lauriscope, Concrete, and Pilot. There was formerly a lot of betting on the Ebor Handicap during the "Sussex fortnight"; but now, although there is sure to be a harum-scarum list of transactions directly after the weights have been published, yet no rational being would think of investing a farthing until the day of the race. The Ebor has become practically a post betting race, like all the other handicaps of the same class.

Lord Rosebery has decided to reserve the colt by Hampton out of Illuminata for the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster, in which race there are no penalties.

The six lengths victory of Delphos at Sandown Park has created an impression in some ecstatic quarters that he is the best two-year-old of the season. It must not be forgotten that Glare was giving Delphos 16 lb., and it took him a long time to beat her. Delphos has no engagements whatever next year, and he is in only three more races this season, of which the best is the Lancashire Breeders' Stakes of £2,900 at Liverpool, when his 10 lb. penalty is got rid of through a 10 lb. breeding allowance. There is a large entry for this race, but the only notable name is Galloping Dick.

There are 231 entries for the Derby of 1895, as against 234 this year, and 232 for next year. The Duke of Portland is the largest subscriber with seven yearlings, all of which have been bred at Welbeck. This lot includes Troon, own brother to Ayrshire; and Scholastica, half-brother, by Hampton, to Schoolbook. Sir James Miller has five entries, principally consisting of animals purchased at the recent sales. The Duke of Westminster also has five, including Orelio, own brother to Ormonde, and Baddeley, by Sheen out of Farewell. Sir Tatton Sykes has engaged five of the Sledmere yearlings, which will come up for sale at Doncaster, consisting of an own brother to Childwick; colt by Isonomy out of Re-echo; own brother to Mimi; colt by Wisdom out of Bella Agnes; and colt by Barcaldine out of Sadie. Lord Bradford has four entries, including a colt by Chillington out of SANITARY SURVEYS.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

Manœuvre (dam of Sir Hugo), and a colt by Chippendale out of Duvernay, dam of Quicklime. Mr. L. Brassey has engaged four of the yearlings which he purchased at the recent sales, Lord Cadogan has the same number, so has Mr. D. Cooper (including Float, half sister, by Sheen, to Glare), the Duke of Devonshire (including an own brother to Marvel), and Prince Soltykoff (including Sequin, by Gold out of Meg Merriles), while the Duke of Hamilton and Mr. Snarry have five entries each. Of course Mr. Snarry's lot will come up for sale at Doncaster, and among them is Ormiston, colt by Bend Or out of Festive, dam of L'Abbesse de Jouarre; and Walls Court, by Hampton out of Jersey Lily. The Prince of Wales has only one entry, which is Several, colt by St. Simon out of Pinbasket. Of Lord Alington's pair one is Church Parade, colt by Donovan out of Anthem. Mr. Houldsworth also has two, of which one is own brother to Orvieto. Lord Rosebery has a colt by Barcaldine out of Vista, and a filly by Bend Or out of Bonny Jean. Colonel North has five entries, including Prince Saraband, by Saraband out of Burgundy (a colt of which a very high opinion must have always been entertained, as he begins his yearling career with twenty-five engagements), and Galloping Phil, by Galopin out of Philomel. Baron Hirsch is represented only by St. Johann, colt by St. Simon out of Winifred. Of Baron Rothschild's pair, one is Histrion, by Tristan out of Belle Henriette. The Duke of St. Albans has Gallowglass, own brother to Gossamer. Mr. Milner has three, including Le Var, own brother to Seabreeze and Riviera; and Royal Corrie, by Royal Hampton out of Corrie Roy. Mr. Vyner's single entry is Lychnoscope, colt by Hagioscope out of Mintho. Lord Zetland also has only one, which is Seaholme, by Friar's Balsam out of Spiegelschiff. M. E. Blanc has not entered anything, and the only notable new names are those of M. Abeille, Lord Stanley, Mr. Brassey, and Mr. R. Newman.

People are now saying that the Lancashire Plate at Manchester (run September 21) will be the race of the year, but how this is made out I do not understand, for Orme is not engaged, and, unless La Flèche manages to retrieve her reputation, there will not be much interest in her meeting with Isinglass. It is very unlikely that Lord Rosebery will knock the Illuminata colt about by running him in a race which has never yet been won by a two-year-old. If the Duke of Portland is well advised he will keep Raeburn fresh for this race, which is just that horse's distance, whereas he has no pretension to stay the Leger course. Silene is the only other animal of any note that is engaged, the Duke of Westminster being represented only by Joyful and a dark two-year-old. Glare was entered, but she was withdrawn last October.

The Duke of Devonshire's Royal Sovereign, a colt by Minting out of Bendlet, which cost 500 gs. at Doncaster last September, won a trial at Newmarket last week, and he may be expected to run well at Goodwood on Friday for the Findon Stakes. Royal Sovereign was very backward when he made his début at Hurst Park nearly two months ago in a race which was won by Farndale. After the Findon Stakes, the next engagement of Royal Sovereign is the Prince of Wales' Plate at York, in which Galloping Dick is engaged.

At one of the Newmarket sales a yearling was sold for 50 gs. which was sired by a horse whose fee is 150 gs.! It is not only in England that the breeding business has been outrageously and ruinously overdone. A similar state of things prevails in the United States, where the recent sales have been most dismal failures.

Orme is to run at Goodwood to-morrow for the Gordon Stakes, and the race seems a good thing for him, but what a crushing blow for his crack-brained admirers if Buccaneer managed to beat him. Many people would like very much to see another meeting between Orme and La Flèche, who is also engaged in this race.

The entries for the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire will close on Tuesday next, and no doubt both handicaps will be quite as successful as usual, for they are now the only races in which a very large stake can be won. There has already been plenty of betting on both events, although the early backers have failed miserably for several years past in their attempts to pick either winner before the publication of the weights. Among the most fancied horses for the Cesarewitch are Newcourt, Golden Drop, King Charles, Insurance, Paddy, Son of a Gun, Curio, Pilot, Brandy, and Convent. Roy Neil is the nominal favourite for the Cambridgeshire, and the other animals which are in demand are Marcion, La Flèche, Lavalamia, Gangway, Llanthony, Tenconter, and King Charles.

Next week there will be racing at Brighton, Lewes, and Ripon. At the Sussex fixture there are sure to be large fields and heavy betting, but exceedingly little of the sport will be of any general interest, for in the matter of quality both meetings have enormously degenerated of late years. The Brighton Cup did not fill originally, and this event would have a better chance of success if it closed on the Tuesday after Epsom, at the same time as the Goodwood and Jockey Club Cups. The race was reopened, but the entry includes nothing better than Simonian and Workington. Thirty-one two-year-olds have been left in for the Corporation Stakes on Tuesday, one of the withdrawn lot being Vulpecula, who would probably have won if she had been left in. There is nothing better in the entry than Barbary. The Rottingdean Plate and the Cliftonville Plate can only be dealt with after the meeting has commenced. There are a very bad lot in both races.

The Astley Stakes at Lewes, which will be worth about £900, will be the most important race next week. The entry includes Arcano, Melancholy, King Charibert, Clatterfeet, and the colt by Hampton out of Illuminata, of which lot the last will certainly be an absentee. I doubt whether Arcano will be able to give Clatterfeet 10 lb. if the Duke of Portland runs his filly. Sir J. B. Maple, who is often dangerous at the Sussex meetings, has left in Dancing Bells, the 1,000 gs. filly by Minting out of Gloriosa, and The Love, a filly by Royal Hampton out of Loversall, which commenced the season with no fewer than forty-two engagements.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—The markets continue in a very unsettled state, but it may be said that daylight can now be discerned ahead. The sharp spasm which took place on Wednesday ended in a marked recovery, and the feeling of panic had almost completely passed away, when a budget of "Bearish" statements cabled yesterday from New York, and apprehensions that the Siamese difficulty might give rise to serious complications, caused a fresh relapse in American Rails. The movement is altogether unreasonable and uncalled for, especially as, instead of the predicted unsatisfactory New York Bank statement, a much stronger position of the Associated Banks has since been reported.

The Syndicate of Liars.

I stated a week ago that the difficulties of an important house, which had been hanging over the market, had been arranged by timely assistance, and, in spite of all the various rumours which have been put about by the "Syndicate of Liars," I have it on good authority that there is not at present any leading outside financial house or banking institution of any standing in a position of embarrassment. There must be another crop of failures on the Stock Exchange this settlement, as the differences, especially in the American market, have been very heavy, and there is reason to assume that many stocks have been sold out during the panic at bottom prices. In fact, three firms have already declared themselves, the most important of which is a firm of brokers who had 173 stocks open for their clients in the different markets. A large block of Erie Second Mortgage bonds, which have dropped 16½ since the last carrying-over day, appears to be the worst of their liabilities. But an improved state of things may safely be predicted for the next account. Commitments have been greatly reduced. One of the largest brokers told me that on the completion of this settlement his accounts with clients would be smaller than they had been for twenty-five years, and this is only one instance out of many. The new account will comprise the opening of the U.S. Congress on August 7, and, although an immediate solution cannot be looked for, it may be assumed that the efforts which will be made to place the financial and currency position on a sound basis will have a soothing effect upon the general public in the States and in Europe, who are at present subject to nervous attacks on the slightest provocation. That the Siamese trouble will not lead to complications between France and England is to me a foregone conclusion. On the other hand, money is plentiful and cheap here, the position of the Bank of England is a strong one, and the level of prices, with the exception of gilt-edged securities, is remarkably low, and altogether disproportionate to intrinsic merit. These are not times for speculation on a large scale, but I say again that the present is the investors' opportunity, and that in buying on the sudden breaks, which occasionally occur on "Bear" raids, they cannot do wrong. It is manifestly impossible to get in at the bottom, but there is little doubt that we are at present almost at the lowest point likely to be touched. Judicious purchases by those who can afford to pay for the stocks and put them away, offer the promise of excellent returns on the money invested and of a marked improvement in capital value. Any one who bought in this way on my advice on Wednesday morning last, during the temporary panic, Louisville and certain other stocks has probably got in at the lowest quotations which are likely to rule, unless some other great catastrophe should happen, which is improbable. I cannot conclude these introductory remarks without a word of thanks to the numerous correspondents who have, in reply to my protest against a few absurd complaints of persons that unfortunately have suffered from the unexpected severe panic, sent me letters of a most encouraging character, not only exonerating me from any responsibility for losses suffered, but thanking me for advice which has proved beneficial. I have been especially gratified by a communication from Dover, in which the writer states that "he and nearly all his friends, who had followed my advice, had every reason to be most grateful to me." Finally, let me urge upon my readers, should another sudden scare again intervene, not to sacrifice their holdings in a panic. There are better times coming, when investors will regret having thrown away their stocks at prices far below a reasonable level.

THE GREAT EASTERN DIVIDEND.

Dividend announcements have been the feature of the week. The most favourable was undoubtedly that of the Great Eastern, at the rate of ¾ per cent., with £7,584 carried forward, against the same distribution with £4,894 forward for the first half of 1892. Speculators had been so busy of late in creating the impression that the dividend would be passed, that this result caused a pleasant surprise, and a rally in the stock to 80¾, from which it reacted to 80¼. It is true that £15,000 has been taken from the contingent fund but this may be considered as fully justified, as the Company is passing through a period of large extensions which will in due time become remunerative. The working expenses were at the rate of 60·07 per cent., against 60·06 per cent. last year, which must be considered satisfactory, the more so as the traffic receipts showed an increase of £19,618 over 1892. The passenger traffic, more especially, is growing in a remarkable manner, the increase being £39,612, as the report puts it, "due mainly to the further development of the suburban lines and to the continuance of fine weather." It is a special feature of the line that the effects of the agricultural depression, which must affect it severely, are thus counterbalanced by the ever growing suburban and seaside traffic. The latter especially promises to gather strength in the current half year as the bracing climate of the health resorts on the East coast is being more and more appreciated by holiday-makers. It is true that on the basis of the last two half-yearly dividends Great Eastern Ordinary stock yields only £2. 12s. 6d. per annum, but local holders all along the line have so great an opinion of its future and of the ability of the present management that they stick to their stock in the hope of being eventually rewarded by increased dividends and an advance in the prices.

BRIGHTON "A" AND OTHER HOME RAILS.

One of those unreasonable and naturally cantankerous persons who never thank you when they make money by your advice, and are the first to blame you when they make a trifling loss, finds fault with my remark of a fortnight ago that "I could not see any inducement for buying the stocks of the heavy lines just now," and reproaches me with having recommended these in former years. Was there ever a more contrary individual? Am I, then, not to be allowed the privilege to alter my views when circumstances take an adverse turn? Unless a sudden change should come over the scene, a most disastrous coal strike will commence this week, the consequences of which it is difficult to realise. Assuredly this is not the time to buy the stocks of the coal-carrying lines, and, while fully appreciating the substantial character of these stocks, and far from advising their indiscriminate sale, I yet counsel abstention from purchases until it is possible to gauge the extent of this unfortunate trouble, in view of which Midlands, which have been specially affected, have fallen a couple of points. Hull and Barnsley have suffered to the extent of 5, and let me here say that I always have been against the gamble in this stock. The Scotch stocks and North-Eastern have benefited from the strike scare, as the northern coal-miners, wise in their generation, have not joined the strike, and these lines are, therefore, expected to benefit. The North-Eastern dividend, at the rate of 4¾ per cent., compares with only 3 per cent. a year ago, as a result of the Durham coal strike of that period. This is not, of course, as yet a return to the dividends of former years, which were at the rate of 6 per cent. for the first half of 1891 and of 6¾ per cent. for the first half of 1890. On the whole, however, I should not like to take too sombre a view of the "Heavies"—barring the coal strike—as the Board of Trade returns seem to indicate a pause in the movement of depression, which, generally, is the forerunner of an improvement. The South-Western dividend, at the rate of 4¾ per cent., with £25,994 carried forward, against 4¼ per cent., with £15,167 carried forward, in the corresponding half-year of 1892, had been fully discounted, neither did the Metropolitan dividend of 3¼ per cent.—the same as last year—cause any stir. The Chatham dividend of 24s. per cent., against 34s. per cent. last year, on the Preference stock, caused a decline in the latter, while the Ordinary recovered on repurchases by "Bears." The South-Eastern dividend at the rate of 2¼ per cent. against 1¾ per cent. in 1892 was in accordance with my anticipations, and, had it not been for the forced sales caused by the Read failure, this stock would stand at a higher level, and I consider it even now as a good speculative purchase by those who can afford to lock it up. What I like most in the report is the statement concerning the peaceful relations with the Chatham. If these two Companies would only work in amity a great saving could be effected in the expenditure. I am glad to see that Sir Edward Watkin had recovered sufficiently from his severe illness to preside at the Sheffield meeting. This Company is in need of all the assistance his prestige can give it in order to carry out its ambitions project of the extension to London. The Brighton market has been disturbed by the failure of my whilom correspondent the "Little Field-Marshal," who seems to have loved "Berthas" not wisely, but too well. He had not for some time addressed any communication to me, writing instead to a contemporary, but he shares with my Brighton prophet—also a member of the "House"—the honour of having a minute acquaintance with the Brighton figures, and of having at various times elaborated the most accurate forecasts as to net earnings and dividends. Unfortunately, he did not reckon on the general depression which is apt to cause sales of "Berthas" as a hedge, apart from merit altogether; neither did he take into account the possibility of other adverse, if temporary, features, such as the outbreak of typhoid fever in Worthing. Under the circumstance, he was not, therefore, justified in having a "Bull" of £40,000 Brighton "A" open, the more so as his resources had evidently suffered through the bad times. But he is all the same entitled to a little more sympathy than he seems to get in certain quarters. For some time I have discountenanced speculative dealings in Brighton "A," but I strongly recommend the stock for investment. Even the traffic decreases which are looked for during the next few weeks seem to be fully discounted, and with a yield of upwards of 5½ per cent. at the present price, I know of few home investments as tempting to the investor, who is content to disregard intermediate fluctuations.

FIELALBO.—Cleans buff gloves, belts, liveries, girths, shoes, &c. Perfectly white. Guaranteed not to rub off. Supersedes pipeclay.—FIELALBO CO., 31, Francis-street, Woolwich. Sample free.

The Yankee Panic.

No other name fitly applies to the present condition of the American market than that of "panic," and it possesses, moreover, all the unreasoning features of exaggeration and of total disregard for intrinsic value which characterise the state of abject fear and tremor and of hopeless despondency prevailing at present. The heavy losses sustained on both sides of the Atlantic, the endless succession of unfavourable events, culminating in the silver scarce produced by the action of the Indian Council are, of course, responsible for this unfortunate state of things, which has brought us face to face with a condition on the Stock Exchange such as the oldest members do not call to mind. As usual, the New York "Bears" aggravate the position by all manner of lying rumours, and by successive raids upon different stocks, and they did their best again on Saturday in this direction, prophesying, amongst other disasters, a very bad Bank statement. In this they were for once disappointed, as the New York Associated Banks had, on the contrary, an increase of 3,000,000 dols. in the reserve to show. It is, undoubtedly, a favourable point, as a financial breakdown in New York is the one contingency which has been most frequently utilised by the ursine party. Moreover, the meeting of Congress on August 7 is now close at hand, and it would only require a favourable decision on the silver question to release the large sums which are at present being hoarded in the United States. Small gold shipments are being made from this side, but this movement would have to gather greater strength before it can affect the position. Sooner or later, gold will, no doubt, return to New York in large amounts, and it looks almost as if all the favourable events would influence the market at one and the same time, probably not later than in the course of next month. Addison Cammack and his followers have, no doubt, built up a fortune on the losses of the unfortunate "Bulls," but the tide will turn at no distant date, although at present he has had it all his own way, and A. H. Combs, his favourite broker, has won his bet of 500 dols. made a month ago with Isidor Wormser that Milwaukees would sell at 57 this year. And this with gross earnings of 33,975,054 dols. for the fiscal year ended June 30 against 32,283,508 dols. for the preceding period and at the time of the World's Fair! Milwaukees and Louisville at present prices yield over 7 per cent., Atchison "B" bonds nearly 10 per cent. per annum, and there are low-priced stocks to be bought at present at half the price current last year. These are notably Atchison shares, Atlantic Firsts and ditto Deferred Warrants, Central Pacifics, Erie, Missouri, Kansas, and Texas, Norfolk Prefs., Ohio, Ontario, Union Pacific, Wabash Prefs., and Readings. Anyone picking up these stocks and putting them away for three to six months will realise a large profit on them. I say again that the present is the investor's opportunity; and I may state that during the last few days large orders for German and Dutch investors have been received here from Amsterdam and Berlin. Canadian Pacifics have fluctuated sharply, being at one time influentially bright, and at another thrown overboard by speculators. At anything under 70 they are cheap, although I should, on the whole, be inclined to give the preference to the cheap Yankee stocks. Grand Trunks have been depressed with the American list, and even at 16 the First Preferences do not look very cheap, but a recovery seems now on the cards.

Foreigners and South Americans.

There has been little change in inter-bourse securities, and the way in which Spanish and Italians have been pegged up on the Continental bourses is truly wonderful. Greeks have given way on renewed sales, and Turks have also declined, but not to any extent. South and Central American stocks have, on the other hand, again suffered from the general depression, small sales sufficing to put prices down, as the jobbers appear to be disinclined to keep a book. One of these days the upward movement will be equally rapid on the mere appearance of buyers in the market, and there is here also an excellent chance for investors to pick up stocks which will grow into money. Take, for instance, Costa Rica bonds. A remittance for a portion of the January interest has already been received by Messrs. Glyn, Mills, & Co., and there is no doubt that this coupon will be punctually paid. Then again, the August coupon of Uruguay bonds is already advertised for payment, yet the price is as low as 31½. Peruvian Corporation Debentures stand at 56½, although from statements made by those connected with the Company there is no doubt that the interest will be duly paid on these. Chilians are recovering, but are still at a very low level considering the proved honesty of the Republic. Brazilians are being kept down by the continuation of fighting in Rio Grande do Sul, concerning which official advices are most unreliable, some very big lies having been told in the past. Argentine Government bonds are above the lowest point recently touched, but there have been sales of Funding bonds issued to holders of Buenos Ayres Waterworks Preference shares in lieu of arrears of interest. Cedulas have been bought for account of the Buenos Ayres Government, especially the depreciated series P at about 7¼, this being apparently considered the easiest way out of the difficulty. Mexican Sixes are still affected by the silver question, and are apparently incapable of a sustained recovery. No further advices have come to hand about the Argentine Railway guarantees. Whenever some decisive step concerning these is taken, a smart recovery may be looked for in this market.

The Kaffir Circus.

In no department has the recent scare perhaps been less justified than in the South African market. Notwithstanding excellent crushings of the Witwatersrand Gold Mines, prices of some of the shares in some of the best of these have been knocked down from ¼ to ¾, and are only now slowly recovering. This applies specially to New Primrose, City and Suburban, Jubilee, Rietfontein, &c. From the Glencairn Mine a fortnightly crushing is expected at the end of the present month, and I understand that crushing with the reconstructed battery is proceeding at the rate of 5 tons per stamp per day. A new issue is proposed of the Geldenhuis Estate and Gold Mining Company, it being intended to increase the share capital by 25,000 £1 shares to be issued at 4, against the present price of 4⅜. Although the money is to be used for the erection of forty more stamps and for the more extensive working of the Mine generally, it must not be forgotten that these new issues of Randt Companies generally lead to a temporary relapse in the price. A correspondent of the Mining World states that "several hundred alluvial claims have been taken up in the Klerksdorp district, from whence fine samples of coarse nuggety ore have recently been obtained." This tends to confirm my favourable opinion of the property of the Afrikander Company. The small preliminary crushings on this Mine have yielded during April, 255 oz.; May, 277 oz.; June, 290 oz.; and, as the ore gets richer as they get lower, a further increase is expected for July. This, however, is the result of crushing with a few stamps only, of which twenty-five will soon be erected, when the output will be largely increased. As I have already stated, the fifty-four reef claims acquired by the Company are a most valuable asset. A very high price is put on these by those well acquainted with the property, and the present price of the shares of 1¼-⅜ may be considered very cheap. The Buffelsdoorn Mine is also situate in the Klerksdorp district, and all those who are conversant with the position agree that when the battery and the cyanide plant are at work in September an excellent monthly output may be expected. The news from Mashonaland has, of course, knocked down the shares of the British Chartered Company of South Africa, which touched 21s. at one time—a movement which illustrates my observation of a week ago as to what would happen with these shares should some day Lobengula go to work in earnest The scare will probably pass away again now, and even if it did not, there seems no valid reason why the shares of Gold Mines and Land Companies in the Transvaal should be affected by it. Thus the decline in Oceana shares is altogether without rhyme or reason, and those who can afford to do so ought to avail themselves of the opportunity to average. The recent weakness in these shares is now shown to have been due to the forced closing of a large account. As this has now come to an end, a marked recovery should come about during the next account, the more so as advices from the Transvaal properties of the Company are most favourable. Not only will the throwing open of the farms Sedan and Tours as proclaimed goldfields prove most beneficial to the Oceana Company, but the Silati Railway will traverse Tours. In the Waterberg district three farms owned by the Company are situate close to the farm Welgevonden, on which gold-reefs have been discovered which run through these Oceana farms, and coal has also been discovered on the Northern farms of the Company. Some of the Oceana Development farms are reported as diamondiferous, and the news from the new Coal Company's property is most promising. It will be remembered that a large portion of these shares are to be distributed amongst the Oceana and Oceana Development shareholders as a bonus. Under all these circumstances it is evident that as soon as the shares which have been thrown upon the market are absorbed, a much higher value of prices will obtain. Amongst other Land shares, Transvaal Gold are again being quietly picked up. The Cyanide Works were started on the 10th inst., and an important addition to the monthly returns may now be expected. Diamond shares have fluctuated rather wildly on forced selling, quotations of both De Beers and Jagersfontein having suffered. My friends will probably save themselves from loss if they do not apply for shares in the Newlands West Griqualand Diamond Mines, the prospectus of which has recently been issued.

Herefordshire Cider & Perry, six distinct varieties. Gold Medal, Paris, 1888. The Bishop of Ely writes, 1892, "Your Cider & Perry are excellent." List from H. P. BULMER & Co., Rylands, Hereford.

The Caratal Gold Mine.

At the request of numerous correspondents who do not appear to have noticed my remarks of June 8, I herewith give a résumé of my former reports on this Company, together with some further particulars which have just come to hand. The Caratal Mining Company is a reconstruction of the Yuruari Company, which was in its earlier stage the Chili Gold Mining Company. According to official returns the Mine has produced during the last ten years bullion of the value of upwards of £500,000, and in the years 1890 and 1891 as much as £50,000 has been expended upon developments and machinery. A new feature has, however, cropped up, which is of the utmost importance to the shareholders, viz., the fact that, according to the circular issued by the liquidator of the old Company, Mr. Alfred Good, there is a large quantity of tailings at the Mine, estimated at no less than 100,000 tons, which has, on assay, given results of 1 oz. 3 dwts. and 1 oz. 10 dwts. of fine gold per ton, worth from £3 to £4 per oz. It has also been ascertained that these tailings could be treated by the Cyanide process, which has done so much to assist the gold mining industry in the Witwatersrand Mines. 83·33 per cent. of this fine gold could be obtained by that process. It is estimated by Mr. Good that 50,000 tons would give a net produce of 50s. per ton, or £125,000, so that 100,000 tons would work out to £250,000, a sum amounting to nearly four times the present capital value of the Caratal shares. Mr. Bull, one of the Directors of the Company, accompanied by competent engineers, has arrived on the property in order to arrange for the working of the Mine and the treatment of the tailings, and very important news may at any time come to hand to raise the price of the shares. These are shares of 2s. 6d. each, with 2s. 4d. credited as paid, and can be bought at 9d., at which they are one of the most promising purchases amongst cheap speculative shares in the Mining Market, and are likely to double or triple their value on the receipt of any favourable news.

The Stanley Syndicate.

It would almost appear as if Mr. J. C. Scott, Stock and Share Broker, of 4, Copthall-chambers, had discovered the philosopher's stone. While people are losing money right and left, prices of securities are falling by five and ten points at a time, and even the sharpest jobbers on the Stock Exchange are unable to make money, the Stanley Syndicate, which is being run by this gentleman, according to his circulars and letters, ever prospers. I find from a circular now before me that "the Stanley Syndicate was founded by Mr. J. C. Scott (the Controller of the Edith Syndicate, established in 1879) for the purpose of enabling all classes to participate in the enormous profits made by judicious speculation on the London Stock Exchange without trouble or risk," and again, "the Stanley Syndicate buys for the rise and sells for the fall—British, Foreign, and Colonial Government stocks and Railways, shares in Gas, Water, Dock, Canal, Steamship, Electric Light, Telegraph, Telephone, Lead, Iron, and other Companies; also Gold, Silver, Lead, Tin, and Copper Mine shares." The following letter has been addressed by Mr. J. C. Scott to a lady reader of Truth, whom he has been bothering for some time to take shares in his precious Syndicate:—

> You have had the chance of getting Stanley Syndicate shares at £1, £1. 2s. 6d., £1. 5s., £1. 7s. 6d., and £1. 10s., and now you can secure some at £2. Will you be sharp enough to seize a few at this low price? Of course, it would have been better if you had got them at £1, and had a whole year's dividend at 50 per cent. per annum, but as you would not take my advice a year ago, you had better make up your lost opportunity now. The shares I now offer you at £2 will be £10 in a few weeks.

Will it be believed that my lady correspondent has not been "sharp enough to seize" a few Stanley Syndicate shares? She apparently does not wish to rob others of the "chance" of obtaining a return of 50 per cent. per annum offered by this philanthropist. It is a pity that Mr. J. C. Scott will not publish the secret of his extraordinary success. The dealers on the Stock Exchange, who are generally considered exceedingly sharp, have evidently much to learn from the founder of the Stanley Syndicate.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Subscriber, Torquay. I have great faith in the honesty of Chili, and as this country has great resources, I make no doubt that interest will be paid regularly. The answer to questions Nos. 1 and 2 is Yes, and to No. 3, that you may safely average if you can get in lower, as a recovery is certain. 4. Do not sell under any circumstances. C. H. W.—No municipal loans were included in the Argentine settlement made by the Rothschild Committee, but the matter is in the hands of Messrs. Baring. The Six per Cent. Debentures are quoted 36-38, the Four and a-Half per Cent. bonds, with regard to which a settlement has been come to, at 55-57. You should hold. The Buenos Ayres Waterworks Prefs. are to be exchanged into Argentine Government bonds, carrying 4 per cent. cash interest, and the arrears of interest for one year are now being paid in Six per Cent. Funding bonds, worth about 64. You should apply for your proportion to the Company. A. H. B.—Many thanks. Canadian Pacific Three-and-a-Half per Cent. Land Grant bonds (1) are an excellent investment. No reason to sell Nos. 2 and 3 now. Hold also Nos. 4 and 5. The security is best class. I suppose the best thing is to keep the Debentures No. 6 now in the hope that the reconstruction may be successful. J. F. I., Jersey.—I think you had better keep your Greeks of 1881 for the present. Silver, Matlock.—1. Hold your Chilians, they will recover. 2. Yes, the interest is quite safe.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer. Restores the colour. Renews the growth. Arrests the fall. Cleanses the scalp.

BANKS, TRUSTS, AND FINANCIAL.

P. While the general fall in securities has undoubtedly had a bad effect upon all Trust stocks, I cannot really advise you to sell out at the present panic price. Workmen.—The Trust Companies A and B have, of course, suffered by the depression, but I should say that you had better hold after the heavy fall. No fresh information respecting C. Honesty.—1. Very shady outside brokers. 2. Only suitable for very experienced operators. 3. Leave him alone, and deal with a member of the Stock Exchange. X².—These Hamburg lotteries are genuine enough, but you cannot trust all the intermediaries, and I do not recommend this gambling.

HOME RAILS.

Ludgate Hill.—I think you will find a better opportunity for selling your Great Western stock than the present. Hold! J. B., Rochdale.—Your remarks are absurd. The coal strike which has now come about proves, however, that my view concerning the Heavy lines was judicious.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN RAILS.

A. P. K.—The low price of Atchison "B" Second Mortgage bonds is entirely due to the prevailing panic. These bonds have full foreclosure power, and all the statements made by the officials point to the interest being regularly paid, while the line is earning large traffic increases. Pertinax.—1. I do not care much for the Brazilian Railway stock referred to. 2. For the investment of £8,000 in Yankee and South American Rails you might select in the first instance as thoroughly safe investments Manhattan Consolidated Four per Cent. Mortgage bonds, St. Paul and Minneapolis and Manitoba Consolidated Four and a-Half per Cent. Mortgage bonds, Wilmar and Sioux Falls First Mortgage Five per Cent. bonds, guaranteed by the St. Paul and Manitoba and Great Northern Railroads, and New York, Ontario, and Western Refunding Five per Cent. First Mortgage bonds, which will yield from 4½ to 4¾ per cent., and mix with them Louisville and Nashville and Milwaukee shares, which yield at present prices over 7 per cent. per annum, Atchison Income "A" and "B" Second Mortgage bonds, which yield up to 10 per cent. Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds, 1925, at 106 are a sound investment, and, as speculative purchases of stock likely to pay dividends again shortly, Central Argentine at 54 and Buenos Ayres and Rosario at 53½ may be recommended. I do not advise Canadians at present. Aaron.—Your only course is to hold. These stocks have been depressed by the panic, but are intrinsically worth as much as before. Nos. 1 and 2 are doing well, Nos. 3-8 will pay their interest regularly and recover in time. This also applies to Nos. 9-11, and No. 12 is exceptionally depressed. In two or three months' time a very different range of values will prevail. Medicus.—Thanks for your remark. Nos. 1-4 should be held for an improvement. No. 5 I do not know much about, but do not think advisable to sell now. Certainly hold New Primrose. R., Dundee.—I have never recommended Mexican National "A" bonds, but should certainly advise their being held for a recovery from the present price. F. A. R.—Certainly hold Araucos, they will recover again when the Chilian exchange improves. Apex.—Guinness Five per Cent. Debentures will give you the desired yield with every safety. By holding your American Railroad bonds you will do well. H. R.—Before the recent heavy fall of Canadian Pacifics I expressed the view that they had better be sold. I should not sell at the present panic price, but only after a substantial recovery, which will no doubt come about in sympathy with any improvement in Yankee Rails. Atchison, Manchester.—I am very sorry to hear that you have gone in so heavily; you ought to have kept within limits. The prolonged panic and the repeated "Bear" raids alone are responsible for the decline, which is not justified by the position. If you can hold you will retrieve the loss. Bess.—You should not sell these Mexican stocks after the heavy fall. A. B. C.—Yes, I think you may safely buy, as you propose, Norfolk Prefs., Ohio, Union Pacifics, Ontario, and Missouri, Kansas, and Texas during the next account, as you can pay for them. Do not select one stock, but spread the purchase over the five. Depressed One. Yes, if you can take the shares up, do so; they will recover again when the scare is over. Ralise.—Yes, I think you might average further as proposed, and I have no doubt that it will come right in the time mentioned. C. A. R.—I cannot reply by telegraph or letter. The Denver Preference dividend has been passed. As you want dividend-paying stocks you might select Louisville and Milwaukee (both of which pay 4 per cent) and Atchison "B" Second Mortgage Bonds, which also receives 4 per cent. All are greatly depreciated.

MINING SHARES.

Niello.—The present are exceptional times, and there is no option but to hold all sound shares for a recovery when the scare has passed off. Hold New Primrose, the mine is doing well. Also hold Kimberley Roodepoort. Scot.—I am glad to see that you have benefited by my advice to sell Montana. I do not advise you to join the Yankee Girl reconstruction. Silver mines are under a cloud. I have been against this property from the outset. C. T., Brighton.—I do not approve of this private marketing of shares, and I consider that too little is known of the property of the Black Horse Extended Proprietary Syndicate or its promoters to render the investment advisable. T. G.—The shares in the Croydon Mines to which you refer are exceptionally depressed, partly owing to the Australian crisis, but if you hold them, they will come right, as all are good properties. Jabez.—The sole reason for the fall of Oceanas is the general depression. It is a good time to average. The difficulties in Mashonaland have no bearing on the Oceana Company, whose properties are situate in the Transvaal. E. H.—No option but to hold the Mining shares Nos. 1-4; they will improve with the general market. G. H., Manchester.—These Queensland Mining shares should be held; more favourable advices are expected shortly. Rio.—Yes, Caratal are a promising cheap Mining share, and should be bought at 9d. as a speculation. J. M.—I stated last week in reply to a correspondent that the Balaghat lode has pinched out. Everything depends upon its widening again. I should risk holding for a month or two. It is difficult to judge of the position of the Broken Hill Proprietary Mine in view of the fall in silver, but it is understood that it still pays at present price. G. R., Glasgow.—What you require has been forwarded. Nemo, Bury.—1. The delay in the delivery of the shares was excessive. 2. I am sorry I shall not be able to comply with your request to give the nominal amount of all the shares mentioned. 3. Certainly not equal to membership of the Stock Exchange. If you hold the shares, you will see a good profit. J. A.—Yes; all the shares mentioned have limited liability. I do not care for Allsopps'. The cheapest and most promising are Holcombe Valley and Caratal. The former are now fully paid, the latter are 2s. 6d. shares, with 2s. 4d. credited as paid. J. W. B.—As requested, I give fresh particulars of the Caratal Mine in to-day's letter. A. P., Birmingham, and H. M., Newcastle.—I have endeavoured to obtain some information concerning Kimberley Roodepoorts, but the last advices, although favourable as regards the development work, do not state the time when crushing will commence. I will, however, endeavour to get the particulars you wish for, and I fully agree that the directors ought to furnish more information.

INDUSTRIAL COMPANIES.

M. S.—1. It is very difficult to advise upon Industrial Companies of this kind, and I really cannot take the responsibility. The Company is, of course, more or less speculative. 2. Sell the Harrison Barber shares under the circumstances. F. P. H.—1. I am afraid that the Anglo-Austrian Printing Company's liquidation is a hopeless case for the shareholders. I expressed a very unfavourable view on its formation. 2. I do not like the New Imperial Investment Company. The Preferred stock is quoted 52-7, the Deferred 15-25, but there is little market for it. E. M.—I am afraid that it is rather a long shot until this Electric Company will pay Ordinary dividends, but in the end it should do well. I do not advise you to have anything to do with the outside brokers in question.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

C. McG., Middlesbrough.—For the purposes of your investment you might divide the £1,100 over Brighton "A" stock, at about 150, Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds, 1925, at 106, and St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Manitoba Four per Cent. Sterling bonds (Pacific Extension) at 89. Mac.—1. I see no reason for selling the five stocks mentioned. 2. I am afraid there is little chance of these three stocks improving for the present. Sell and invest the money in some of the depreciated American Railway stocks, such as Atchison Second Mortgage Four per Cent. "B" bonds at about 42, which yield nearly 10 per cent. interest on present price. 3. You should eventually reduce your holding in the four Banks named, on account of the large liability, but they are first-class, and I should not sell at present prices. 4. I cannot advise on the solvency of stock-brokers. The charge was too heavy. 5. The dividend has not yet been paid, but it is declared. Galloway.—It is difficult to express an opinion of No. 1, this being a Scotch undertaking, but I do not think much of it, or of No. 2. The interim dividend of the Asbestos Company has not been paid, but the Company seems to be doing a fair business. For the investment in question you might buy Brighton "A," yielding over 5 per cent., or American Railroad bonds, yielding 4½-5 per cent. A Young Beginner.—1. For the investment of your £4,000 you cannot choose speculative investments, which are those most depreciated, if you want absolute safety. In that case you must be satisfied with, say, 3½-4 per cent. in Colonial Government stocks, or 4 to 4½ per cent. in gilt-edged American Railroad bonds, or you might mix with them Brighton "A," which yield over 5 per cent. You can, of course, get up to 7 per cent in certain American Railroad shares, such as Louisville or Milwaukees, or up to 10 per cent. in South American Government stocks, but in these cases there is a proportionate element of risk. 2. The Australian Bank in question is a good one, and you might put a small amount into the shares; not too much, as a fresh scare is not at all improbable. Mansfield.—Guinness Debentures will give you the desired return with every safety. E. R.—Your inquiry for twenty securities to invest about £28,000 is rather a large order. The bulk of this sum should be placed into high class securities, such as American Railroad bonds, yielding from 4 to 4½ per cent., say New York Central and Hudson River Four per Cent. Gold bonds, Manhattan Consolidated Four per Cent. Mortgage bonds, St. Paul Minneapolis Consolidated Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Mortgage bonds, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis (Cincinnati, Wabash, and Michigan Division) Four per Cent. bonds; Canadian Four per Cent. Stock, Natal Four per Cent. Inscribed stock yielding about 3½ per cent., Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds, 1925, yielding about 4½ per cent., Guinness Five per Cent. Debentures, Canadian Pacific Three-and-Half per Cent. Lands Grant bonds, guaranteed by the Dominion of Canada, &c Then you might make a selection of good second-class stocks, placing, however, only small sums in each, such as Brighton "A," yielding over 5 per cent., South-Eastern Deferred as very cheap and now very progressive, Louisville and Nashville shares and Milwaukee shares yielding over 7 per cent., Chilians, of 1892, yielding nearly 6 per cent., and, finally, you might, if so inclined, place a certain amount, not much in any case, in speculative stocks, such as Argentine Funding bonds, Costa Rica "B" bonds, Guatemala Internal, Mexican Central Four per Cent Gold bonds, Peruvian Corporation Debentures. But this must depend upon the amount of risk you care to run.

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one-half West-end price.—PHILLIPS & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate-street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to latest fashion.

VARIOUS INVESTMENTS.

Silver has declined 1¼d. during the week, the metal being offered down in the United States. The India Council has been very unsuccessful with its remittances, hardly any tenders being made. This is partly owing to the opposition of the Eastern Banks, which have been badly treated over the silver question. It would also appear that Rupee paper is at present prices used for making remittances to the East. Mexican Rails have suffered a further fall, partly owing to the decline in silver. The Second Prefs. at 38 are evidently being "pegged" by Mr. Mackusick and his friends; but they are clearly far too dear in proportion with the First Prefs. at 55½, and if no relief comes there will one of these days be a disastrous break in them. The dividends of the large London Banks having now been declared, show to be nearly in all cases up to the distribution for the first half of 1892, the London and Westminster alone having reduced its dividend by 1 per cent. Compared with 1891 there is, of course, a reduction at the rate of from 1 to 3 per cent. Australian Government bonds have been fairly supported, and there has also been an absence of further decline in the shares of the leading Australian Banks, whilst the shares of the Eastern Banks have been somewhat unsettled. There has been some slight improvement in the demand for the shares of Nitrate-producing Companies, and Nitrate Rails are steadier after the recent decline, the last fortnightly traffic return showing an increase of £2,362.—Your affectionate uncle,

MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

THE GREAT GOODWOOD SWEEPSTAKE.

THE Second Battalion of the Third Riding Prince Frederick's Own Loyal Royal Yorkshire Bayoneteers—known in that County and in the Service as the "Tha-Knaws"—was stationed at Ballynoggin.

It was a distinguished regiment, and proud in the fact that it was composed of genuine "tykes"—with the exception of those who were Irish. It was a singular circumstance that the majority of the officers of the Second Battalion were also Irish.

"Yes, dash it!" growled Major Murphison—Old Murphy, as he was called by the soldiers amongst themselves—"We're a workhouse combined with an infant-school, bedad!" He alluded to the comparative poverty of the older officers and to the youthfulness of the subalterns. With the exception of the Chaplain they were, to a man, either widowers or bachelors, and sincerely addicted to sport. The last weakness ran right through the Battalion, every male in which—down to the slimmest bugler or plumpest drummer—knew all about every race-horse and meeting in the three kingdoms. Football, cricket, pugilism, and other arts and pastimes were minor idols; horsiness was the supreme cult.

It was, therefore, an especially exciting event that young Montfarren O'Greaves, the new Assistant-Surgeon, should have drawn the favourite in the Great Goodwood Sweep—10,000 guineas for an outlay of only 21s.! Barring the unforeseen, it was undoubtedly considered that that substantial sum was as good as if it were already in his sieve-like pocket. O'Greaves himself did not know very much of such matters; in fact, he thought it a joke rather than a conspicuous piece of good fortune. He was a laughing, blundering, sentimental fellow—too careless even to hope steadily.

"Bad luck to the bad luck of it!" said Major Murphison, who had, of course, drawn a blank. "Here's a smooth-faced bhoy—a mere sucking neophyte, and he gets the favourite right away! His very first go in racing, too, and had to be persuaded to put down his guinea! And here am I, grown grey and desperate at it; and I want the money, too, bedad! Oh, dhivil fly away with the want of sinse and dacency of it all."

Mr. O'Greaves, as usual in such cases, received numerous offers by post and telegraph for his chance, but he refused them all—even the Regimental pool or syndicate which was suggested for the purpose of buying it.

He would give no reason—only laughed and blushed; and the Major cursed him by six or seven Irish saints and over two dozen Hindoo gods, besides a number of miscellaneous infernalties.

"Me bhoy," said he to him, confidentially, in his own room, "it's meself is glad to see that it's an ould hid ye've got on your shoulders. You did well, sorr—very well, not to share your luck with a parcel of fellows that scarcely look the way you're going at any other time. And I'll go bail that dhivil a one of them ever asked you if you'd had a mouth on you before this. See to that, now. They look down on the medical profession—dash their consait! But I've always stood up for them, and always shall, begorra!"

O'Greaves said he was very greatly obliged.

"Not a bit, my son—and it's a fatherly interest I've taken in you, my lad, from the day you joined us—as, indade, I ought to do, being, in a kind of way, in loco parentis, regimentally spaking. Besides, as I was saying, being a blood relation——"

"Oh, I didn't know that, Major!" interposed O'Greaves.

"What! Not know that the Murphisons and the O'Greaves are related as thick as eels in a mill-pond! Do you mane that sariously now? Ha! I haven't wurrds to express my surprise. Oh, the shallowness of modern education, and the crim'nel neglect of what's thruly worth learning, of this hollow and flashy generation! Yes, me bhoy; and the Montfarrens as well. I'll tell you all about it another time. Now, listen while I spake to you. I'll stand by you, and in with you, in this matter. It's a duty I owe you under the circumstances, for you are young and inexperienced. Do you think that I'm the man to sit still and see you fling your luck away on schaming and unsympathising strangers, who'd only laugh at your greenness behind your back when your face was turned? No, no. It's my duty, I tell you; and I'm not going to desert it, or desert you—is it likely, now?"

The Major glared around fiercely, as if awaiting a challenge; then he replenished the glasses, and lowered his voice.

"This is what we'll do. We'll hedge—hedge. Do you see? Make sure of the big half of it, whatever happens. That's it. Here now, I'll just write a telegram—for the joint account. You needn't throuble at all, me bhoy—it's all arranged. Not a whisper to a sowl, now. I'll see you through this business, never fear. You have my wurrd—Major Murphison's wurrd—and never a Murphison, or an O'Greaves, was a thraitor to that. So that's all settled now."

O'Greaves would, beyond a doubt, have been helplessly enmeshed, and rushed off his balance, had it remained in his power to deal with the matter in hand. As it was, he could only stammer out that nothing would have given him greater pleasure, and he was truly grateful—but it was too late.

A Fair Beautiful Skin.—By washing with Sulpholine Soap the natural tint and peach-like bloom of a perfect complexion is ensured.

The Major felt furious, and would have broken loose, but for the shy and half-ashamed look on the young fellow's face. He at once suspected that somebody else had already taken the trick. That nefarious conspirator who had anticipated him must be discovered and upset.

A little bantering pressure, and a few glasses more, produced O'Greaves' confession that he had given the chance to Miss Geraldine Byrne in payment of some trifling flirtation wager.

The Major's face grew more deeply purple, as he gnawed at the ends of his wiry red moustache, whilst his eyes took on an introspective studiousness. He knew the Byrnes—Mrs. Byrne, widow of a Madras Colonel, and her daughters—very well.

When, however, he heard further that Miss Geraldine—being inexperienced, generous, and, like all girls, short and chary of pocket-money—had given the chance to her mother, in lieu of her contribution to some local charity for poor women in which she was interested, his brow cleared as if by magic. He promptly resumed his habitual tone and manner, and—very abruptly, as O'Greaves thought—dismissed that young gentleman to his duties.

Within an hour the Major had proposed to Mrs. Byrne and been accepted by her, and had laid against the favourite to the extent of £5,000, double-locking both secrets in his impenetrable bosom.

"Make sure of £5,000, anyway," he soliloquised, "besides a cosy home, a tidy income of her own, and a deuced fine woman of forty-four, who doesn't look a day oulder than a good many years under that; thanks to that young fool, who may go to the dhivil now, for all I care. Blood relations, indade! Ha, ha!"

The young fool meantime reflected in this wise:—

"Hedge. That's what he said—hedge. Now, if that means anything at all, it must mean this—back some other horse against the favourite. That's it, of course. But which? I don't like asking the fellows—I should perhaps be dragged into talking of Geraldine to them. I'm sorry I did to the Major; but he's a blood relation—so he says. I don't understand these things; he was right enough there. I'm not very bright, at best; in fact, if I have a thought in my head, it's unbeknown to myself. Let me see, now."

He referred to a newspaper and read the latest betting.

"Here's my plan," he resumed to himself. "Here's Flybiter, the favourite, at the top of the list, at 5 to 1; and here's Nephew to Kreutzer, at the other end of it, at 200 to 1. That is, I take it, that the one will win and the other won't. Ah! it's not so difficult as I imagined; indeed, it's as easy as drinking. What an artful old card the Major is to pretend that I wanted guiding and instructing. I know all about hedging now—just as if this were my fiftieth operation on the Turf, instead of my first. I've simply got to back the horse at the very bottom of the list."

So he went to the telegraph-office and backed the Nephew for £100.

"There," he said, when he wrote confirming his telegram, "that's not only the mathematics of betting, but it's the logic as well. If Geraldine's horse—I mean her mother's—wins, she gets ten thousand guineas; if not, mine wins, and I get twice as many pounds. How very simple it is, after all!"

The Major had, naturally, said nothing to Mrs. Byrne about Goodwood; so he remained unaware that she had put a guinea of her own into the charity and given the chance to her eldest daughter.

Later in the day, Captain McTerrup dropped in. He had a sedate but well-restrained liking for Miss Byrne. His allusion to O'Greaves' singular good fortune in drawing the favourite naturally led to Mrs. Byrne's lightly remarking, with a smile proportioned to the insignificance of the subject, that the chance had been transmitted to Miranda.

The Captain immediately grew very grave, an expression of countenance which was succeeded by one betokening a severe internal struggle, and that, in turn, gave way to an air of desperate resoluteness. He found, or made, an opportunity to whisper something to Miss Byrne, and the pair sauntered together into the garden.

She re-entered the house soon afterwards, radiant with happiness, for he had asked her to be his wife, and she had consented.

He made his rapid way to the telegraph office, and laid against the favourite. "Half certain is better than the whole merely possible," muttered he, as he assumed a bearing of utter indifference, and determined to breathe never a word about his engagement or bet to mortal creature.

Miss Byrne was as shrewd as she was beautiful, and as quick-tempered as she was both. She remembered the Captain's serious and almost tragic look when the favourite was irreverently mentioned, and she reflected with a pang that she had probably been indiscreet in giving the chance to Fanny, her one-third of a maid, in settlement of some accumulated items and matters.

When, therefore, Sergeant Ostlethorpe—a handsome, dashing young fellow of respectable family, who had been a lawyer's clerk before he got into trouble—found Fanny in tears that evening, he soon elicited that it was all because of Miss Byrne's dreadful goings-on about that chance which she had given her, and now most unreasonably, and even violently, wanted her to restore.

"You didn't give it back, did you, Fan?" anxiously asked the Sergeant, as his gold-lace chevrons stole round her yielding waist.

"No, John," she said, "that I didn't; for even if I——"

He arrested her further reply by the abrupt administration of a volley of unwontedly fervent kisses; and she, not without some alacrity, promised to be Mrs. Ostlethorpe so soon as her quarter was up, or sooner.

He hurried away under the pretence of duty, but, in reality, to be in time to telegraph to a bookmaker whom he knew to lay against the Favourite to the utmost extent of his means or credit.

"A cool thou is better than nothing, and will buy a decent public-house," he cogitated, "if Fly-biter loses. If he wins, I shan't grudge the stakes. But I'll say naught to anybody."

When Fanny came to review the striking event which had so precipitately happened, she could not help thinking of the preposterous intrusion into the proceedings of so trumpery and incongruous a thing as a mere race-horse. She laughed to herself, as who would not?

"And to think," said she, after she had disposed of her young ladies, "that after all, I gave that chance away to Bessie for that unmade silk dress she's had so long! And a good bargain too."

Next morning an officer's servant observed to some of his fellows that there must be something wrong with the favourite, for he had had a chat with the Telegraph Clerk, who informed him that several officers, including the Major, had wired to lay heavily against him.

This intelligence ran like wild-fire through the battalion, and was quickly carried to the officers' quarters, by the usual barrack channels. A shoal of telegrams, redolent of doubt in Fly-biter, was the result.

"It's a sure thing, th' knaws, th' favourite's not gaun to win," passed from mouth to mouth; and, so soon as parade was over, there was a wild rush to the local bookmakers, and to the Post Office with letters containing money orders.

The Doctor had quite a scene with the Major for not giving him the tip. The Major protested that he knew nothing, and that it was a mere "hedge." The Doctor treated that explanation with derision, and went and laid substantially against the favourite. Being a good, though highly irascible fellow, and attached in his way to the Chaplain and his large family, he put a little on for him.

"If it comes right, a thousand will be very handy for him, I know. If not—why, let it go with the rest, for it will about finish me."

The subject was the all-engrossing one at mess; and the shout of laughter which rolled into the night when O'Greaves diffidently admitted that he had backed Nephew to Kreature to win, startled the thirstiest noses out of their tankards in the canteen.

HOUSE DRAINAGE.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

There was one man—he must have been the only one in the battalion of whom it could be said—who had not made a bet one way or the other. This was Ted Daly, the Major's servant.

"Botheration!" said he, "and it's just my luck, sorr. I shtood to win a hape of money on that same animal, bad cess to't—saving your honour's presence."

"What's that?" asked the Major, sharply.

Daly recounted that Bessie, Mrs. Byrne's cook, had presented him with the chance, which she had received from Fanny, who got it from one of the young ladies.

He had never witnessed such an access of fury, polyglot swearing, tramplings, smashings, tearings, flingings, and other demonstrations of demoniacal possession as suddenly assailed the Major. It was only when, thoroughly frightened, he started screaming for a saint or two, and some secular help, that his master began to pull himself together a little.

"It's all right, Daly—a bit reminder of a sunstroke I once had in the East. Violent sunshine sometimes brings it back, but it doesn't last, as you see."

"Glory be to God!" said Daly, implicitly. It was raining hard just then, but he never doubted the explanation.

"Don't dare to say a wurrd of this, mind. I'll take a pill, and that will put me all right."

"Yess, sorr," said Daly.

"Ha! h'm! Just so. By the way, what was that you were saying about the favourite?" asked the Major, with a yawn.

Daly repeated his story, and lamented his ill-luck.

"Does any one know that you have that horse?"

"Dhivil a sowl, sorr, except Bessie, and she has neither rading, knowledge, nor mim'ry, no more than a hin, sorr."

"H'm! Opinion seems to be dead against his winning."

"It is that same, sorr, begorra! Why couldn't they lave him alone?"

"Look here, Daly, didn't you tell me that you belonged to these parts?"

"I did, sorr."

"Ah, so I thought," mused the Major. "Pity, and hard lines on you, too, my man, to have to march away and to turn your back on your own country and your own people, and, what's her name—Bessie. Dashed hard, I should say." He seemed to be talking to himself, as he repeated, "Dashed hard."

Daly had never had presented to him such a vivid picture of his hitherto unfelt trials. He was, therefore, deeply affected by the sense of his unhappy lot, which came upon him suddenly and on the authority of so great an officer as the Major; and he put the end of a dirty forefinger into the corner of his eye, where there was an unexpected tear.

"Ah!" remarked the Major gently, "Sorry I spoke. Never mind, my good fellow. Your time will expire—when does it expire?"

"Three mortial long years from now, sorr," sighed Daly.

"Oh, bother it, that's bad, bad. And you in your own part of the country, and the next station, perhaps, Ceylon or the Cape; and Bessie married to somebody else before you come back. Such is a soldier's life, dhivil take it."

After a distressful pause he brought his fist down on the table and said:

"Look here, now Daly. You've been a good soldier and a good servant, and maybe I'll be after settling down in time hereabouts myself. Thank God I'm an Irishman, too. Yes, and I'm proud of it, Daly, my man. You shall have your discharge."

"Lord in hiv'n bless your honner!" gasped Daly.

"Yes, to-day, this very day; and a ten-pun note besides."

Daly dropped on his knees and poured out a torrent of pathetically eloquent gratitude.

"There, there, that will do. And you can marry Bessie, eh? And—a—by-the-way, you will give me that thing about the horse—of your own free will, of course. I wouldn't touch it else with the end of a flagstaff—no, not if you prayed yourself black in the face for me to take it otherwise. Mind that now."

"Yes, sorr, an' willing, wid all the heart of me, God knows, sorr," answered Daly earnestly.

"I'll have your papers made out at once, before my mind changes. You needn't go back to quarters. You can rummage for some civilian coats and things that I've about done with, and take them. And—and, I won't be afther doing things by halves, nor yet by quarters either, bedad. If that miserable and discredited horse does happen to win, though I don't believe a wurrd about him, or the contrary, I'll make Bessie a present of another ten-pun note. The chance only cost a beggarly starved guinea to begin with, and it may be dear at the odd shilling when all's said and done."

"Yes, sorr, indade it might," said Daly.

"Very well. That's settled. Now, remember, not a wurrd to anyone—not even to Bessie—about this till I give you lave. If you as much as make a sign of it in your slape, I'll go back on all I've promised, and make it dashed uncomfortable for you, besides. Mark that, now." A fierce look drove home the last expression.

"Never fear, sorr," smiled Daly; and then a touch of native shrewdness and gentlemanliness imparted a comical yet touching dignity to his voice and bearing as he added—

"I wouldn't be afther doing a thing, sorr, as others might take in a wrong light, or lay up agin your honner, not if—if I was to be hanged for it. Nor, if that horse should happen to win, and if it was twenty times as much gowld on his hid that you'd be getting, would I grudge a grudge, or have a ha'porth of grief or sorra the sorry that I'd asked your honner's acceptance of it. It's glad I'd be, and proud—maybe gladder than you, sorr. An' I shall be a civilian when I hand it over to you—though it's on the mantel-shelf now I put it, for safety, inside your cigar-case; and thanks to your kindness to a poor counthryman. And, begorra, it's through fire and water I'd go for your honner, let alone a discrate silence, sorr, that costs nothing, except the not spaking, bedad."

Major Murphison heard this passionate address with mingled feelings.

"Dash it all!" he said to himself, "he's more of a gentleman than I am. But what was I to do?"

On the momentous day the barracks were in a ferment. Never did the Tha-Knaws so scamp their dinner or feel so intense an excitement as the hour approached for the result of the race to be known.

They formed a chain of men from the telegraph-office to the barracks.

The whole town seemed to be given up to the soldiers, who, however, were too intent on the expected intelligence to have eyes or ears for anything else; and their throats seemed to get the drier for drinking.

At length the news came, and produced the wildest elation. The favourite was beaten!

Ballynoggin had never before heard such cheering as was that afternoon re-echoed by the hills behind the town.

Montfarren O'Greaves was acclaimed the greatest and most practical hero in the annals of the Tha-Knaws. He was the primary cause of all the luck. What is the gallantry of a fellow who lets out the blood compared to the canniness of him who lets in the money?

Then the battalion—which, in the sweet and simple Yorkshire phrase, was "stiff wi' brass"—settled down to one of the most unremitting, unanimous, and unreserved drinkings ever recorded in the history of the British or any other Army.

Soon afterwards the Tha-Knaws were put, out of their turn, on the roster for foreign service, and were ordered—"banished," said the Major—to Halifax, U.S.

There was scarcely an unbroken head, heart, or window in Ballynoggin as the battalion marched away.

The resources of Ulster House, Conduit-street, enable Messrs. BENJAMIN, in cases of need, to execute orders in 24 hours.

ART NOTES.

MR. ALFRED PARSONS, like Mr. Alfred East, Mr. Mortimer Menpes, and numerous other painters, has been to Japan, and he has come back bringing his artistic sheaves with him. The latter are garnered just now at the Fine Art Society's Gallery in New Bond-street, where a hundred or two drawings are on view, representing some months' work in the land of the Lotus and of Sir Edwin Arnold. Unquestionably Japan as a happy hunting-ground for artists is being somewhat overdone. Mount Fujisan is becoming as familiar to us as Vesuvius; and the Torii of Komori Temple are seen almost as often as the Lions of St. Mark. We are growing as tired of Oji as we used to be of the Rialto, and Lake Chusenji is probably painted as frequently as Maggiore—which is saying a great deal. Mr. Parsons, however, went to Japan more especially to paint its flowers, and his drawings constitute a kind of illustrated horticultural guide to the flora of the country. Masses of peach-blossom, plum-bloom, cherry flowers, wistaria, iris, tree-peonies, azaleas, white lotus, and auratum lilies are depicted with the artist's well-known botanical precision, and an unsparing use of the strong and at time almost crude colour in which he delights. He almost surfeits the eye with bright tints, in fact; and the way his drawings are framed, without mounts in all cases, makes their polychromatic realism all the more trying. As a rule, Mr. Parsons fails in getting air into his drawings; there is a lack of atmosphere in many of them, so to speak; and the brilliant actuality of his details is too seldom informed and inspired by imagination. But the Exhibition is decidedly interesting; and of its success from a financial point of view there can be little doubt. Before the drawings were hung sixty-six out of the hundred and two had already been disposed of.

In another room at 148, New Bond-street, may be seen a collection of drawings in pen-and-ink by Mr. Hugh Thomson, a young draughtsman, upon whose shoulders a portion, at any rate, of the mantle of the late Mr. Randolph Caldecott has fallen. The forty-three drawings he exhibits were made in illustration of Mr. Austin Dobson's "Ballad of Beau Brocade," and other vers de société dealing with life in the eighteenth century, and are many of them characterised by quaint humour as well as considerable artistic skill. Mr. Thomson won his spurs, it will be remembered, by his illustrations to the "Vicar of Wakefield," and it would now be interesting to see him riding a-tilt at some subjects more up to date than those he has hitherto attacked.

I gather from one of the newspapers that Mr. Alfred Gilbert has expressed his readiness "to stand or fall" by the memorial drinking fountain of his which has been recently set up in Shaftesbury-circus. It would never do to ask him to literally carry out his intention, for standing by the fountain involves a gratuitous shower-bath, whilst falling by it would imply a thorough wetting in the perennial puddle which surrounds its base. These results, however, point to mechanical rather than artistic shortcomings in our popular sculptor's latest work; and they will doubtless be remedied in due course. Meanwhile, although as a drinking fountain it cannot be considered a success, what about it as a work of art? For my own part, I find it in this respect, too, just a little disappointing. Of course, it would be unfair to blame Mr. Gilbert for the false note struck by the presence of the late Lord Shaftesbury's bust on the pediment. The Committee insisted, I understand, on having it placed there, in spite of the sculptor's very natural remonstrances. But already I am glad to notice that the bust has disappeared—let it be hoped for ever. In the design for the fountain itself, however, Mr. Gilbert was allowed to carry out his own ideas without let or hindrance, and the result, as I have said, does not seem to me entirely satisfactory. For one thing, the design of the fountain, we are assured, is purely symbolic, and is, in fact, intended to be typical of Charity. But the question is, in what way does the winged aluminium figure standing on tiptoe on the top of the fountain typify Charity? To the Man in the Street this statue rather suggests a mischievous Mercury taking shots at the people on the Piccadilly 'buses with a bow and arrow; and I am certainly so far in sympathy with the Man in the Street that I fail to see how the flight of an arrow can be considered suggestive of charity. This is a piece of the new symbolism, I suppose, which we must be educated up to before we can accept it. The fact that when looked at from the side, or from behind, the winged figure seems to have a club-foot, is likewise unfortunate. The upper basin of the fountain seems to me, also, to be unnecessarily heavy and massive. But I should be, indeed, churlish and ungrateful if I did not add that, with all its faults, Mr. Gilbert's Shaftesbury fountain marks a notable advance in the process of ornamenting the open spaces of the Metropolis. It does even more than this; it impels one to emphatically repeat the question, How much longer must Hyde Park-corner wait?

MUSIC.

ALTHOUGH the opera season has been extended by six nights, the production of all the belated novelties has, as was anticipated, proved impracticable. The impossibility of presenting within less than a week at the fag-end of the season three such works as Mr. de Lara's "Amy Robsart," Dr. Stanford's "Veiled Prophet," and Berlioz' "Damnation de Faust," was indeed obvious from the first. Berlioz' "operatorio" has therefore wisely been postponed altogether, and it would have been better for its own sake if Dr. Stanford's setting of Moore's poem had been similarly treated, instead of being placed on the stage on Wednesday in Goodwood week, a day after the subscription season was over. Wednesday is never a particularly crowded evening at the opera, and what possible good purpose Dr. Stanford, or his publishers, or whoever is responsible, can expect to be served in presenting a new work of this importance on the offest of "off" nights, cannot be imagined. The cause of the postponement from Saturday was the unpreparedness of the chorus, who, poor people, have been greatly overworked this summer. Indeed, it is one of the great lessons taught by the present season that, if performances are to be given six nights a week, a complete double company is absolutely necessary. The manager already has a double troupe of artists, and two orchestras, but without two choirs none but the simplest novelties can be attempted while representations take place nightly. Day after day have these unfortunate singers been rehearsing the greater portion of the mornings and afternoons, besides performing almost every evening. The human voice cannot stand the wear and tear of eight or ten hours of this species of work per diem, and, so far from deserving complaints when their singing has plainly shown the results of fatigue, the choristers merit hearty praise for the plucky manner in which they have undertaken such exhausting work.

The production of Mr. Isidore de Lara's "Amy Robsart" can, I assume, best be explained by that generous feeling towards operatic neophytes which led to the performance of Herr Bach's "Irmengarda" at the same theatre. The intelligent foreigner may, perhaps, marvel at the managerial judgment shown in splendidly mounting and casting works which the most friendly disposed critic must admit have the word "inexperience" written bold upon them; when not a solitary example of the music of Sir Arthur Sullivan, Mackenzie, Cowen, and other representative British musicians is in the repertory of our only opera house. In no other country in the world would the operas of its leading men be year after year thus ignored. In regard to "Amy Robsart" there has already been some straight speaking, and I need, therefore, not deal with the matter at length. We can all, doubtless, admire the ambition which has prompted Mr. de Lara to relinquish the drawing-room songs, thanks to which he first came prominently into notice. But something more than a desire to attain at a bound to the highest things is necessary to compose a successful opera. The schoolboy out for a row in a skiff may have the ambition to sail a yacht, but without the necessary skill and experience he must come to grief. Indeed, altogether apart from orchestral or other crudities, Mr. de Lara does not yet appear to have an operatic style of his own, and, doubtless, unconsciously he has assimilated that of others. He is at his best in two love duets, and, in fact, there are signs that in lighter and less pretentious music he would succeed far better.

SCARLET FEVER PRECAUTIONS.—Infection of the most dangerous and virulent character can be instantly destroyed with Izal, the new non-poisonous Disinfectant. "Izal" stops Cholera, Smallpox, Diphtheria, Influenza, Scarlet, Typhus, and Typhoid Fevers, and is a sanitary necessity and protector for the sick-room, nursery, household, hospital, and in public. Its disinfecting properties are enormous, and as a destroyer of disease germs it possesses antiseptic power greater than pure Carbolic Acid. It can be used for all disinfecting purposes the same as with the old-fashioned Disinfectants. Being non-poisonous it is safe under all conditions. Being non-caustic it will not benumb the hands or irritate the skin, and is invaluable for washing wounds and in surgical dressings. Being non-corrosive it neither stains nor injures linen, bedding, clothing, carpets, hangings, furniture, metals, or surgical instruments. Izal can be obtained from Chemists and others in large bottles, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., or sample bottle sent, carriage free in the United Kingdom, for postal order. Sole Proprietors and Manufacturers, NEWTON, CHAMBERS, & Co., Limited, Thorncliffe, Sheffield. London Offices: 19, Great George-street, S.W., and Thorncliffe House, 331, Gray's Inn-road, W.C. The Izal Pamphlet, containing simple rules for the protection of life and health, sent post free.

It is curious that no one has yet been able to furnish a really good libretto out of Scott's "Kenilworth." Scribe tried his hand on it for the opera which Auber produced just seventy years ago, but it is one of the worst of the efforts of the great librettist. Another opera on the same subject, written by the late Signor Schira, has, I believe, never yet been produced. The weak point of the libretto of Harris and Milliet is its first act. In the endeavour to make the story intelligible, the authors have presented the composer with an act which is musically impossible. It is made up almost entirely of duets, five or six of them, relieved only by an inconsequential baritone soliloquy for Richard Varney, and a very brief soprano prayer which separates a thirteen minutes' duet between Amy and Leicester from a nine minutes' duet between the same young lady and Varney. Very funny, too, is the close of the act, where Tressilian rouses the lady from her swoon, and she, with nothing but a light cloak over her ball dress, starts in her satin slippers from Cumnor to Kenilworth. She is apparently determined to walk it. The second act, which includes the revels at Kenilworth, is far better arranged, although the situation again becomes comical when Varney "takes the flure" to deliver a lengthy and Verdi-like soliloquy on "Ambition," as a sort of "aside," surrounded by a wide circle of courtiers, who display not the smallest interest in his eccentricities. Hither, too, comes Amy—her satin shoes and light silk train not a whit the worse for her long tramp through Oxfordshire and Warwickshire—to sing a long solo of her wrongs, which would have bored a less impatient lady than Queen Elizabeth, and which the audience would probably have liked better had it been more in the style of "The Garden of Sleep." The last act, though hopelessly innocent of Scott, is dramatically the best of all. The first scene is a long and passionate tenor soliloquy for Leicester, plus another long duet between that chicken spirited individual and Amy in a room at Kenilworth. Leicester's character, however, is duly whitewashed, for he has resolved to tell Elizabeth the whole truth, when Amy, hearing his voice, rushes forward and falls down the trap. A far feebler opera might have been excused by the very beautiful impersonation of the hapless Amy Robsart by Madame Calvé, who this season has certainly shown herself the greatest and most versatile prima donna Sir A. Harris has yet engaged.

A lady giving an address at Milan advertises in one of the London papers, describing herself as "reputed Italian prima donna." She probably means prima donna of repute, but it is rare that a singer is quite so candid.

Another advertisement offers an "A.L. Mus. T.C.L. gown and hood, cost £5—price £2." There is something deeply pathetic about this cast-off clothing business. That a gentleman with so many capital letters after his name should be selling off at less than half price his musical millinery may, however, only indicate an awakening to common sense.

The concert season has ended this week, the last of the regular concerts being that given by the Royal Academy students on Tuesday. As a matter of fact concerts have practically been abandoned ever since the Royal Wedding, and for some weeks past the leading concert agents have strongly recommended a postponement of their visits to foreign performers who proposed to come here. Arrangements are, however, now being made for the late autumn, which promises to be an exceptionally busy time.

The Bohemian Opera Troupe, from Prague, who have recently been performing Smetana's "Sold Bride" at Berlin, have wisely decided not to attempt a London season, which, indeed, in early August, would be a palpable absurdity. They will therefore merely pass through England en route for Chicago.

"La Fille de Madame Angot," which was revived at the Criterion on Saturday, is, probably, not intended for a lengthy run, at any rate, if it be true that Miss Decima Moore, the Clairette of the opera, is engaged for the new piece at the Prince of Wales's Theatre towards the end of next month. "Mère Angot" is, indeed, now more or less out of date, and out of the last revival at Drury Lane in 1880, when a ballet based upon the revolutionary tune "Ça ira" was interpolated, I do not imagine a large fortune was made. Mr. Cotsford Dick, who on Saturday made his stage début as Pomponnet, showed that a popular song writer is not necessarily a great singer and actor; but Mr. Pounds made a very good Ange Pitou, Miss Decima Moore, despite a small voice, was the prettiest of Clairettes, while Miss Augarde sang well, although it needs a French actress to properly play Mdlle. Lange. As to Mr. Blakeley and Mr. Sydney Valentine, they had little to do, for Mr. Blakeley's part in the quintet had, of course, to be assigned to a bonâ-fide vocalist. The Directoire dresses were curiously intermingled with modern costumes, but for an undoubted experiment it would have been absurd to go to any special expense.

Why, by the way, does not somebody try a revival of "Orphée aux Enfers" or "Belle Hélène"? Offenbach, the founder of his school, was head and shoulders taller than Lecocq, and especially now that "Orfeo" has been so thoroughly popularised by Mdlle. Giulia Ravogli, this happy parody of Gluck's music ought to be understood and appreciated by everybody.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—M. Francisque Sarcey's "Recollections of Middle Life" (1), which Miss Luther Cary has competently translated, is little more than a series of lectures upon the art of lecturing, but they are absolutely admirable lectures. Having myself both endured and inflicted lectures not a few, I can speak with the confidence of an expert at least of the unerring precision with which M. Sarcey puts an unfailing finger on the defects of the ordinary lecturer of commerce. But he seems to me no less sagacious, and much more interesting and instructive, in the really invaluable advice he gives upon the proper mode of preparation and of delivery of a lecture, upon the choice and treatment of a sympathetic subject, and, above all, perhaps, upon the need and upon the art of getting en rapport with your audience. Here unquestionably the weakness of your brilliant lecturer is precisely what he himself holds to be

(1) "Recollections of Middle Life." By Francisque Sarcey. Translated from the French by Elizabeth Luther Cary. (London: William Heinemann.)
(2) "Questions at Issue." By Edmund Gosse. (London: William Heinemann.)
(3) "A Phantom from the East." By Pierre Loti. Translated by J. E. Gordon. The Independent Novel Series. (London: T. Fisher Unwin.)
(4) "Essays in London." By Henry James. (London: James R. Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.)
(5) "Selections from the Writings of John Ruskin, D.C., LL.D." First series, 1843–1860. With a portrait. (London: George Allen.)
(6) "Selections from the Writings of John Ruskin, D.C.L., LL.D." Second series. 1860–1888. With a portrait. (London: George Allen.)
(7) "A Comprehensive Scheme for Street Improvements in London." Accompanied by maps and sketches. By Arthur Cawston, A.R.I.B.A. (London: Edward Stanford.)

his special strength—his brilliancy! M. Sarcey adjures you by all your hopes of success as a lecturer to put your brilliant ideas prudently in your pocket:—

Get this primordial truth well into your head, you who aspire to the honour of instructing or amusing your contemporaries. With lectures people can only be taught that which they know; they can be persuaded only of the things of which they already desire to be convinced.

It is all expressed in that fine image, I believe of Mr Gladstone's: "The popular orator rolls back upon his audience in a torrent what he had received from them in a mist." M Sarcey puts it even more baldly, but not less truly:—

I cannot insist too much on this point. In the lecture the commonplace must not be discarded. I do not know who it is has said that the commonplace is the body and soul of eloquence. That is a great truth; but it is necessary to rethink the commonplace for one's self—to recast it in some way in the image of one's own mind.

As lectures promise to become as popular and powerful a mode of instruction in this country as they have long been in America, I think this excellent and exhaustive treatise on the art—for these "Recollections" are really and only that—is as opportune as it is masterly. Why democracies should prefer to take in their mental food through the ear rather than through the eye is a problem which I have solved to my own satisfaction. You must have noticed that those who have taste and time for reading detest to be read to; whereas those to whom reading is an unaccustomed, and therefore laborious, effort prefer to have ideas conveyed to them through the more used, and therefore more facile, channel of the ear. But how will the reign of democracy affect literature itself? This is a question which Mr. Edmund Gosse sets himself to answer in one of the essays of his interesting, if not very brilliant, "Questions at Issue" (2). On the whole, he is hopeful of "the ultimate survival and continuance of literature," though he cannot conceal from himself or you that the popularity of "Edna Lyall"—a continually recurring perplexity to him—is of the gloomiest augury for the future of letters. On the other hand, he sings rapturously the praises of Rudyard Kipling, whom he compares, not, I think, very happily, with Pierre Loti. Certainly anything less like Mr. Kipling's stories than Pierre Loti's "A Phantom from the East" (3), a translation of which I have just been reading, I cannot imagine. It is a mere rainbow painted on a cloud, exquisitely irridescent hues on the faintest field of substance. It is far from fulfilling all the expectations aroused by Mr. Henry James's ingenious paper on this novelist in his "Essays in London" (4). Whence this inane title, by the way, of a collection of essays on French novelists, &c.? Mr. James, perhaps, might give as pertinent an answer as Captain Shandon gave Wagg's inquiry, "Why Pall Mall Gazette?" "Because the editor was born in Dublin, the sub-editor in Cork, because the proprietor lives in Paternoster-row, and the paper is published in Catherine-street, Strand." But what answer can Mr. James give to the charge of reversing the tritest of all literary traditions? "To write as Goldsmith talked, like an angel, that surely is to wear the amulet to some purpose." It's an odd slip to suppose that Garrick in his jingling epitaph charged Goldsmith with talking like an angel, but writing like poor Poll. It is interesting to compare Mr. Henry James's daring and even desperate attempt to find something æsthetically exquisite in London besides its parks, with Mr. Ruskin's denial even of the possibility of making anything of such a centre of commerce. Mr. James, after making the admission that the "tremendous chapter of accidents on the banks of the Thames consists of miles upon miles of the dreariest, stodgiest commonness," claims for London the distinctive glory of fine parks, of a brown, rich, dim, vague atmosphere, producing magnificent mystifications, and of a certain general greatness. Hear, however, Mr. Ruskin, in a fine passage which I cannot resist quoting from the second of two admirably selected volumes from the writings of the master (5) 1843-1860 and (6) 1860-1888:—

All lovely architecture was designed for cities in cloudless air; for cities in which piazzas and gardens opened in bright populous-ness and peace; cities built that men might live happily in them, and take delight daily in each other's presence and powers. But our cities, built in black air which by its accumulated foulness first renders all ornament invisible in distance, and then chokes its interstices with soot; cities which are mere crowded masses of store, and warehouse, and counter, and are therefore to the rest of the world what the larder and cellar are to a private house; cities in which the object of men is not life, but labour; cities in which the streets are not the avenues for the passing and procession of a happy people, but the drains for the discharge of a tormented mob, in which the only object in reaching any spot is to be transferred to another; in which existence becomes mere transition, and every creature is only one atom in a drift of human dust, and current of interchanging particles, circulating here by tunnels underground, and there by tubes in the air; for a city or cities such as this no architecture is possible—nay, no desire of it is possible to their inhabitants.

But what, again, does Mr. Arthur Cawston say in his invidious and tantalising, but painstaking and most suggestive, "Comprehensive Scheme for Street Improvements in London" (7)?

London is often described as ugly, but it is not past redemption. Though ill-proportioned and shapeless, it has a noble river, unrivalled parks, a few fine buildings, and it may be possible to evolve out of the chaos of its streets a city which will be a worthy capital of the world.

The very chaos is, however, due to its being the commercial capital of the world, to its incoherent and incomprehensible (in the original sense of that word) immensity. Let us hope with Mr. Cawston that the projected scheme for the legislative union of this random conglomerate of cities called "London" may falsify the forlorn croakings of Mr. Ruskin.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely, DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—If you were in town, I am sure you would plunge wildly at the cheap sales. I never saw such bargains as there are this season. In fact, it is very depressing to see serge skirts, made up and lined, selling at fourteen and fifteen shillings each, and to revolve in one's inner consciousness the question of how much the poor women were paid who made them. Lots of things are wickedly cheap just now. If the history of the sewing-machine were intelligently written, it would shed a curious illumination upon the great labour question. If one had not to think of such things, it would be pleasant enough to go about at the sales just now, and buy a gown for less than the price one would have to pay one's dressmaker for making it. But then one's thoughts will wander to the miserable sempstresses in attics and garrets at the East-end, who ply the needle for sixteen hours a day, and with the wage they earn have seldom, if ever, enough to eat, and never any pleasure in their lives. I looked at the stitches in one of those serge skirts the other day, and wondered what sort of weary face and tired eyes had hung over it when it was being made.

As to shirts and blouses, and frilled fronts, the West-end shop-windows are positively overflowing with them. There must be millions and millions of them, most of them selling at something three-farthings. As to capes, they may be said to be simply given away, and country-cousins are eagerly snapping them up. Perhaps they will not be utterly out of fashion in the provinces for a few months.

Do you ever experience a revulsion of feeling from your own real taste, and want to break out into something quite different, in which your friends would hardly recognise you? We have had something of the kind come over us of late, and have gone in for a big check or two, and Maud has actually invested in a tartan, of which she will probably be very sick before she has half worn it out. But, then, we shall appreciate our quiet greys and browns all the more afterwards.

LADIES' TAILOR MADE SHIRTS, made to measure only, and fitted by cutter. In cambric, saratta, zephyr, and silk. Unshrinkable. and fast colours.—SAMPSON & Co., 270, Oxford-street, W.

I see that a new Club has been started at 30a, Sackville-street, Piccadilly, for the accommodation of ladies of limited means or who are earning their livelihood in the multifarious occupations now open to women of education. The chief object of the promoters of the Club is to provide plain but substantial and well-served meals at the lowest possible price, and served in comfortable rooms. The charges are certainly surprisingly low, dinner or lunch, consisting of two courses, with bread and cheese, costing one shilling only. The charges for other meals, bedrooms, &c., are in proportion, and the scheme seems as practical as it is kindly to the working gentlewomen who at present can only obtain their meals at third or fourth-rate restaurants. The subscription is a guinea a year, and even this can be paid in monthly instalments, if desired.

You asked me where the Lady's Safety Companion invented by Lady Isabel Margesson can be bought, so I inquired for you. It is obtainable at Thornhill's, Barrett's, Aldis's, and all other good shops of the sort in the West-end.

Charlie asked us to go down to Bisley one day last week, and, though I felt much too limp and lazy for the expedition, Maud made me go with them, and I was rewarded by spending a very enjoyable afternoon. There was a garden party going on, and the scene was delightfully gay and festive, and the officers' quarters, as usual, were gay with flowers.

We watched a shooting match with revolvers, won by Mr. Walter Winans, who must be clever in several directions, for he has invented a safety side-saddle for ladies, which prevents their being dragged in case of accident. We rather coveted his portable bungalow, where Mrs. Winans dispensed the hospitality of tea, surrounded by an improvised garden of brilliant flowers. I am not sure that we did not like Bisley better than Wimbledon, after all, and the air there is perfectly superb. It made us surprisingly sleepy, as well as hungry, the latter being quite a novel sensation, for London has been so close and hot of late that it is quite difficult to eat enough to sustain nature.

From every one we meet we hear the same question, "Where are you going?" The unanimous desire to rush away from town was never more ardent or eager than it is this season, after all these long weeks of dust and heat. It is refreshing even to read some of the advertisements of country cottages and rural diversions in the papers. I suppose every one has a roaming fit at least twice a year, once in spring and once at the end of summer, to be followed punctually, if not too promptly, by the desire to settle down again quietly among one's household gods. After Goodwood, society ceases to cohere. The atoms fly apart with a revulsionary movement, to meet again in smaller groups of ever-varying units. How tired we should all get of each other if the London season lasted all the year round. Should we not? But as things are, we all come back with fresh ideas to exchange, and become, in a sense, new people.

I have noticed during the last few weeks a sort of general irritability that I never have observed before. I am sure this is owing to the peculiar climatic conditions, for the season is all wrong, you know. Things have got thoroughly mixed up. In July we have enjoyed the fruits and vegetables of August, and next month we shall be in mid-autumn so far as vegetation is concerned. The conditions that affect vegetable life so strongly cannot be without result upon human beings. As I told you, I have seen more cross faces and heard more disagreeable tones of voice during my walks abroad of late than I ever remember before. I wish some doctor would explain these things to us.

We are meditating a little run to Scheveningen next week. Father says there is a new route open by the Hook of Holland, which saves the long hour and a-half in the steamer up the Maas to Rotterdam. Trains await the boat at the Hook, and we can be at Scheveningen for breakfast, leaving Liverpool-street at eight o'clock on the previous evening. We may go on to Amsterdam if we feel inclined. It seems as though it would give us new life to get a good whiff of the German Ocean.

Laurel is at Chicago. I have just had a long letter from her, part of which I copy for you here. She says:—

> You know how I detest exhibitions, Madge, and this one forms no exception to the rule. But I do like the Midway Plaisance, and so, I think, would you. Mr. Chauncey M. Depew has said of it that it is worth running in debt to see. It is the place where families of different nationalities are grouped, the most numerous being those of Oriental races. Arabs in soiled burnous, Turks with sedan chairs, Samoans, Algerians, Zulus, Kurds, Brazilians, Soudanese, Chinese, and Japanese, are all here to be studied in their habit as they live. The languages are, as you may imagine, of every sort and size. There are more Arabs than individuals of any other race, and they are masterful beings. They have made a great discovery over here. They have found —beer, and they like it extremely, and become excessively lively, and sometimes even dangerous, under its influence, so much so that an additional supply of Columbian Guards has been placed in the Plaisance since the Arabs began to frequent the Beer Tunnel, a long, low, narrow room in the Vienna Bakery, set out with small tables, where people may drink and smoke. Near it is the village of the Samoans, splendid animals, and with very little in the way of clothing to hide their fine physical development. The muscles on the arms of the men stand out in great knots. There is a magnificent Samoan woman in the group. They are all placid, quiet, easily governed, and though they look muscular, are not particularly strong. They are a gentle race. There is a theatre, with scenery painted from Samoan landscapes, villages, &c., with high mountains and luxuriant vegetation. The singing and dancing are monotonous, and the voices are shrill and unmusical. Their brightly-tinted feather head-dresses and brown skins are rather effective against the background of tropical vegetation.
>
> I perfectly delight in the Javanese village, the inhabitants of which are in strong contrast with the big and burly Samoans. They are very small and the men are effeminate looking. They are full of curiosity about everything, and enjoy staring out at the crowd. They built their village themselves, but they are a weak-chested race, and some of them have died of consumption since their arrival. A baby was born here, and died in less than a week. The poor mother crouched down in her bamboo hut and would listen to no word of comfort. She lay quite still with her face in her hands and did not even moan. She would not eat and on the fourth day she died. Poor little mother!
>
> Chicago is really very interesting just now by reason of the various nationalities assembled here. It is a good study in languages, and, as to dress, you never saw so much variety in that line anywhere. There are always plenty of uniforms which do so much to brighten up a scene. We have been here three weeks, and shall have had quite enough of the noise and crowd at the end of our month's stay.

I went on Thursday night to see the first production of "Amy Robsart," Mr. Isidore de Lara's new opera. There was a large and fashionable audience, the boxes and stalls being alike crowded. Doubtless, however, you have seen from the daily papers that the enthusiasm for the work was not great. Sir Augustus Harris did all in his power to make the trial a success, and had provided magnificent costumes and charming scenery, in addition to a most efficient caste. Madame Calvé looked both picturesque and sweet in the love scenes with Leicester. She has, I consider, the most expressive eyes of any artiste on the operatic stage. In Act II., where the Lady of the Lake glides in on her floating island to pay homage to Elizabeth, the effect was particularly beautiful—the Lady of the Lake and her retinue of nymphs being all pretty graceful girls, clad in soft diaphanous draperies. A lot of well-known faces occupied the boxes, although several of the regular subscribers were absent. Mrs. Leopold Rothschild, in black satin and lace, was in her usual place and looking as bright and young as on the day I saw her married. Lady de Grey came later and nodded round the house in her usual genial manner. She was dressed in white, with pale green velvet, and a few diamonds. Lady Sykes wore white satin brocade, made with a round

COSTUMES FOR SCOTLAND, &c.—Messrs. REDFERN beg to announce that they have designed some very practical Gowns for ladies visiting Scotland, either for Shooting, Travelling, Golfing, &c., to which they invite an inspection.—27, New Bond-street, W.

CHINA AND GLASS.—Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

Court bodice and simple soft lace sleeves. Miss Rothschild, who sat with Mr. "Alfred," wore two shades of delicate mauve and heliotrope velvet. I should imagine, however, that the "Covent Garden drummer" must prove rather a noisy neighbour at times to the occupants of that particular box.

What a lesson we all ought to learn from the present condition of Worthing! The authorities, instead of making excuses when the fever first made its appearance, would have done well to have at once commenced putting "their house in order." The present horrible state of things might then have been avoided. Knowing as I do your propensity for rambling about from place to place, I beg of you to be careful, wherever you may be, to see that all water and milk you drink is boiled before you indulge in it either directly or indirectly. Fancy, a poor man was stricken with fever at Worthing through simply eating some cress that had been washed in impure water! The pater wishes me to add also that the fact of mixing water with spirits does not do away with its contamination.

Clare sends me the following from Dublin :—

DEAREST MADGE,—I am fast approaching that time of life when one's pride in a superior education would be found, if critically examined, to consist largely of pride in the fact of having had a good deal more to forget than the majority of one's contemporaries ever sought to remember. What a slippery traitor memory is, or at best an uncertain friend, with a distinct leaning to sudden freaks and caprices. Mean, too. For what can be meaner than to desert old age? Yet memory does it in the most unblushing and systematic way, though, to be sure, she has the grace to prepare us in some degree for the desertion by a gradual falling off—a kind of humane or slowly depriving system. Think of all those text books, the contents of which we had at our fingers' ends such a short time ago—so, at least, it seems! Could we stand examination in them now with any chance of success? For my part, I freely but confidentially own that I should shirk competing with the most average girl of fifteen. There are few days, no doubt, in which one does not learn something new; but, alas! there are still fewer, as one descends even the first gentle slopes of the vale of life, in which one does not forget a good deal more. Once upon a time I should have fearlessly met Lord Macaulay's schoolboy; now with what a holy horror I would avoid any such meeting. This subject the incessant discussions on the unfortunate Victoria affair have brought prominently to my mind, when I have listened in discreet silence to the citation of the numerous great mistakes in history which have variously resulted in lamentable loss or glorious gain. Apropos of such discussions, what a colossal amount of naval genius seems to be lost to the country, and "blushing unseen" in the possession of mere landsmen. I suppose there are numbered amongst every one's circle of acquaintances these dogmatists, who lay down with absolute confidence everything that both the Admirals and all the officers of the Fleet ought to have done on that sad day in the Levant.

We are by the seaside now, enjoying the full benefits supposed to come from the "salt water." Sea-bathing as a health restorative is not a very old idea in these countries. For the last ten or twelve years one could only understand it as an acquired taste; but this season one has felt as natural an inclination to revel in the sea as if one were a South Sea Islander. If only sea-bathing were not so unbecoming! Even the prettiest of maidens loses an appreciable amount of her prettiness in the sea. No greater proof of the divine beauty of Venus can be given than the fact that she rose beautiful from the sea. A mere human woman could not have done it. Besides the business of getting our health from the sea, we have been getting our amusements also. I suppose a regatta is classed under that head.

We attended the Kingstown Regatta several days last week. I conscientiously marked the name of each winner on my programme according as I heard it, and remained for several hours in the club-house on a nice breezy balcony listening to a military band. It must honestly be confessed that so far as I know no racing yacht came within our view, but the harbour looked very gay with flags, and there was the great American ship Chicago to look at also. We saw the Queen's Cup, a huge silver bowl, which the Satanita won, beating the Prince of Wales's Britannia. The latter had her revenge next day—but not a Queen's Cup—when she beat the Satanita. The Britannia was in command of Mr. W. Jameson. Two other leading yachts were also raced by Jamesons, which shows how kindred tastes seem to run in kindred. The fireworks on the evening of the last day were a pretty sight, the reflections in the water giving them such effect. Serge suits, sailor hats, and tan boots were alike worn by both sexes. What a season of sailor hats this has been—meaning affluence, I suppose, for some lucky manufacturers. All sorts and conditions of men, irrespective of age, have taken to them, showing that the sense within the head is giving more guidance than usual with regard to what to wear on it, for the phenomenal summer has certainly demanded lightness and shade in head gear.

Lord Houghton did not appear at the Regatta, but left during the week for London. He stayed for a week or so at the Viceregal Lodge on returning from his Irish tour, a period of recovery, by all accounts, being needed, from the distresses and fatigues of the progress round Ireland. Lord Charlemont deserted the ship before the end, but not before a very bitter experience off the south west coast. Yachting life is, indeed, all ups and downs, and how sorely the fact is usually brought home to us. Lady Aberdeen has also been going around our country. I suppose she does good, and, of course, she means to do nothing else, and spares herself in no way; nevertheless, whoever can teach my country people that the real help they want is self help, and can uproot their habit of looking to benefactors in every need, will have done more for them than the most zealous efforts of philanthrophy can do, or ever yet have done. I am sure you will agree that every one has a real benefactor within himself if he only rouses himself to sufficient effort. Yours ever, CLARE.

P.S.—We are looking forward to seeing something of the manœuvring fleets in Dublin Bay. Some torpedo boats have already appeared, but they disappeared as quickly as they came.

We went to Verity's in Regent street to see the cooking by electricity that is conducted there every afternoon, the operator being a young lady who evidently performs her task con amore. The perfect cleanliness of the cookery done by electricity is its great recommendation. The irons are, of course, absolutely free from soil of any kind, and keep the heat all the time, which must be most delightful. An electric cigar-lighter, suspended to the wall, will be one of the luxuries of the modern smoking-room. The small hot-plates struck me as very practical and pleasant. Miss Cousins was cooking on some of them most tempting-looking little tea-cakes. There was also coffee made in an electrically-heated cafetière. An oven, of which the back, sides, and top are all made radiating surfaces, is provided with switches by means of which the heat can be regulated. This oven can be brought up to a temperature of 500 degs., which means rapid cookery, as you may imagine. You would have rejoiced in a pair of electric curling-tongs, in the heating of which, again, the most perfect cleanliness is a delightful circumstance. Shaving-pots and foot-warmers, as well as stewpans, kettles, and frying-pans, are all shown in working order, and it is a most interesting exhibition, showing what the cookery of the future will be.

There are some pretty ideas for table decoration given in The Table, contributed from a country-house, where they have been composed. One is in green, a deep tray being placed in the centre of the table full of water, with a piece of green turf in the middle to form an island, and a cluster of water-flags placed in the turf as if growing, with four clusters of the same at the corners of the tray to match the centre. Round the tray dark green silk is puffed up, with sprays of large green moss laid in the puffs, and the silk edged with variegated elm leaves. In the tray are a few very small goldfish. The candles should have dark green shades, and be tied up with green ribbon. Another is in green and white. A piece of pale green silk is put over the centre of the table, and a tray in the centre, with a fountain playing, the water to be scented with lavender. The tray is edged with white roses and maidenhair fern. The silk should be puffed up round the tray with different kinds of roses laid in the puffs, and the silk edged with ordinary fern, with smilax coming from the bottom of the four-corner candlesticks, and all joining over the centre of the table, supported by one piece running up to the ceiling. The candles ought to have pale green shades.

This is a recipe for a lovely chicken-pie :—

Cut up a couple of young chickens and season them with pepper, mace, and nutmeg. Put them into a stewing-pan with a ¼ lb. of butter and water enough to cover. Stew gently for half an hour; take them out and set aside to cool. Pour off the gravy, and reserve to be served up separately. In the meantime

MINTON'S (Limited). MINTON'S CHINA.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is, 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

make a batter, as if for a Yorkshire pudding:—1 lb. of sifted flour stirred gradually into 1 quart of milk, 6 eggs well beaten and added by degrees to the mixture with a little salt. Well butter a deep dish, and then place a layer of chicken in the dish and pour over some of the batter, then another layer of chicken and pour over some more batter, until the dish is full, having a cover of the batter for the top. Bake till it is brown. Take the gravy you set aside and put in the yolk of 1 egg, half a dozen mushrooms; boil it for five minutes and send to table in a sauce-boat to be eaten with the pie.

Before peas go quite out, try this dish of ducklings:—

Order a couple of ducklings dressed as for roasting, trussed with the legs in the body. Split the birds down the back, spread them open on the table, remove each thigh bone, and beat the duck with a rolling-pin till quite flat. Mix together a little pepper, salt, powdered mace, and grated nutmeg, with this season the birds, and over them scatter some finely-crushed dried leaves of sage. Place a pound of veal and half a pound of bacon cut into slices, in a shallow stewpan, large enough to hold the ducks. Cover the pan closely, and set it over a slow fire. When the meat begins to adhere to the pan, dust it with a little flour, stirring it about till it begins to brown, then pour in about a pint of good stock. In this lay the birds, add a whole skinned onion, cover the pan closely, and let all simmer for half an hour. Then take them out, and lay on a gridiron over a clear fire, so that the insides may be browned. Brush the birds over with the beaten yolk of an egg, screen with bread crumbs, and lay the ducks before a brisk fire. Baste them well with butter, and when they are brown lay them on a hot dish breast downwards, and fill the bodies with a well-made apple-sauce. Strain the gravy in which the birds were stewed, skim off all fat, thicken with a lump of butter rolled in cornflour, and pour it round (not over) the birds. Have ready about a quart of boiled green peas, heat them in a saucepan containing an ounce of butter, and season with pepper, salt, and a dash of nutmeg. Arrange the peas in little hillocks round the dish. Serve very hot, with a plate of cut lemons.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

P.S. At one of this week's weddings the happy pair were pelted with white rose-leaves instead of rice. At the Leslie-Crawshay wedding the flowers were perfectly lovely. It was at St. Mark's, North Audley-street. Tall palms were arranged all the way up the aisle from the vestibule to the chancel, the latter being one mass of lilies. The pillars were festooned with greenery, and medallions of flowers were hung in front of the galleries. It was quite the most elaborate church decoration of the season.—M.

MARIANI WINE

This inimitable COCA WINE is an aid to intellectual exertion, and is indispensable to brain-workers and others who suffer from Debility, Exhaustion, Mental Depression, Dyspepsia, Sleeplessness, Voice Fatigue; also to promote Convalescence. Written Testimonials from over 2,000 Physicians. "A powerful rejuvenator and renovator of the vital forces." Sold by Chemists, Grocers, and Stores, or delivered free by Importers, WILCOX & CO. 239, Oxford-st., London. 4s. per bottle, or 45s. doz.

JAY'S
Annual Sale
WILL CONTINUE
THROUGHOUT THE MONTH.
Great Reductions in Mantles, Costumes, Millinery, and Ladies' Underwear.
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

JOHN EXSHAW and CO.'S BRANDIES

The great reputation No. 1 Brandy has obtained in India has induced J. EXSHAW & CO. to now supply direct to the English Public.

No. 1	66/- per doz.	Very Old Liqueur	140/- per doz.
Liqueur	84/- ,,	Magnificent Old do.	175/- ,,
Fine Liqueur	96/- ,,	Grand Champagne	200/- ,,

SAMPLES FORWARDED.

CHAMPAGNES.

Jules Champion & Co.'s 1889 (in Bottles only)	68/- per doz.
Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1884 (in Bottles only)	105/- ,,
Ditto ditto ditto 1889 (in all sizes)	84/- ,,
Lebeau & Co. (in Magnums and Bottles only)	54/- ,,

CLARETS.

Ch. La Croute 1889	24/- per doz.
Ch. Brane Cantenac 1889	36/- ,,

(Bottled at the Chateau).

SOLE AGENTS for the United Kingdom—
POWELL, TURNER, & CO.
28, King-street, St. James's, S.W. & 23, Finch-lane, City.
TASTERS TO H.M.'s WAR OFFICE
And GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.
Telegraphic Address: "PEREIRE, London." Telephone No. 3,575.

WINDERMERE HOUSE, BARNES, S.W.
Head Master . . MERVYN E. VOULES, M.A.
PREPARATORY SCHOOL FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS, ARMY, NAVY, &C.
The School is within three minutes' walk of the station. Convenient trains from the West end. Small classes and individual attention. Good cricket ground. Organised games. Day boarders have dinner and tea at the school, and prepare their work under the superintendence of a Master. No home lessons. Limited number of boarders received.
For further particulars apply to the HEAD MASTER.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.
300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.
ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.
Weavers of Dress Silks,
Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN,
GREAT ORMOND STREET, BLOOMSBURY.
PATRON: The QUEEN. PRESIDENT: The DUKE of FIFE, K.T.
NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS urgently REQUIRED for SUPPORT of the NEW WING.
ADRIAN HOPE, Secretary.

CRITERION RESTAURANT,
Piccadilly.
NO. 1 EAST ROOM—CUISINE VERITABLEMENT FINE.
SPECIALLY DEVOTED TO THE SERVICE OF
À LA CARTE DÉJEUNERS AND DINNERS in the most Recherché Style of French Cookery.
CUISINE UNRIVALLED IN ENGLAND. LARGE SELECTION OF CHOICE WINES.
NO. 2 EAST ROOM.
A Special Dinner at 10s. 6d. each Will be served in this Room at Separate Tables, between the hours of 6 and 9 p.m.
COMPOSED OF A SELECTION OF DISHES FROM THE CARTE DU JOUR OF THE EAST ROOMS.

A VISIT TO A SUCCESSFUL INSTITUTE.

A visit to the Medical Battery Company's Institute, 52, Oxford-street, London, W., established in 1870, and now the most successful electro medical establishment in the world, should be made by all sufferers from nervous and organic disease. Mr. Harness' world famed Curative Electropathic Belt appliances may be seen scientifically tested, and thousands of original convincing testimonials may be personally inspected. Sufferers from any obstinate, nervous, rheumatic, or organic disorder are specially invited to call and avail themselves of a free personal consultation. Special department for the scientific treatment of Rupture, Varicocele, Hydrocele, and kindred ailments. A visit to the Electropathic and Zander Institute will give all the corroborative proof which is needed that Electricity is not only a valuable restorative, but is the only therapeutic agent that may be relied upon to succeed. Those of our readers who reside at a distance, or who are otherwise unable to call and avail themselves of a free personal consultation, should preserve this notice, and write without delay for descriptive illustrated pamphlet and book of testimonials. The latter contains copies of hundreds of letters, received from all parts of the country, and from all classes of society, whom they have relieved of various nervous, muscular, and organic affections, including the following: Nervous Exhaustion, Physical Debility, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness, Brain Fag, Hysteria, Epilepsy, Melancholia, Lumbago, Defective Circulation, Poorness of Blood, Indigestion, Diarrhœa, Liver Complaints, Kidney Disorders, Ladies' Ailments, Internal Weakness, Tropical Diseases, Impaired Vitality, Pains in the Back, Weak and Languid Feelings, Chest Complaints, Corpulence, Rupture, &c. We wish to impress upon our readers that the Company's only London address is the ELECTROPATHIC and ZANDER INSTITUTE, 52, OXFORD STREET, London, W. (at the corner of Rathbone place).

THE PRESIDENT,
MEDICAL BATTERY CO., LTD.

LADIES' HOSIERY.

Ladies requiring stockings for comfort, elasticity, and wear-resisting qualities should ask for the Patent TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE, which are undoubtedly the best produced. They are made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

Each pair is stamped with the Registered trade mark, "MUSA DYE," and "PATENT TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE, No. 20,778" on sole of foot.

To be obtained of all first-class Drapers and Hosiers in the United Kingdom.

Ladies experiencing any difficulty in obtaining these goods are requested to write to the patentees, who will forward them the address of the nearest vendor. This will ensure their having the genuine article.

Wholesale only of the Patentees:

DEBENHAM & FREEBODY,
Fletcher Gate, Nottingham.

Now Ready. Foolscap 4to, Illustrated, Cloth, Gilt edges. 10s. 6d. net.

THE
EARLY DAYS OF MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE;
OR, PUBLIC SCHOOL LIFE BETWEEN FORTY AND FIFTY YEARS AGO.

To which is added
A Glimpse of Old Haileybury; Patna during the Mutiny;
A Sketch of the Natural History of the Riviera; and Life in an Oxfordshire Village.

By EDWARD LOCKWOOD, Indian Civil Service (Retired).
Author of "The Natural History of Monghyr."
SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT, & CO., Limited.

MELLIN'S FOOD
For Infants and Invalids.

"48, LOUISE-ROAD,
"WATER LANE, STRATFORD, E.
"February 1.

"DEAR SIR,—I enclose you a photo of our baby girl, Dorothy Gentle, she having been fed on your Food for the last twelve months. Being obliged to resort to the feeding-bottle, I was recommended your food by a friend of mine. The photo was taken when she was six months old, and I think you will see by the condition of the child it will speak well for its excellency. I have always persuaded my friends to use it, as I am sure it cannot be too highly recommended for infants.—Yours faithfully,
"AUGUSTUS GENTLE."

MELLIN'S FOOD BISCUITS.
(Manufactured by Carr & Co., Carlisle, especially for G. Mellin.)

DIGESTIVE. NOURISHING. SUSTAINING.

For Children after Weaning, the Aged, Dyspeptic, and for all who require a Simple, Nutritious, and Sustaining Food.

Price 2s. and 3s. 6d. per Tin.

AN ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET ON THE FEEDING AND REARING OF INFANTS.

A Practical and Simple Treatise for Mothers, containing a large number of Portraits of Healthy and Beautiful Children, together with facsimiles of original testimonials which are of the greatest interest to all mothers, to be had, with samples, free by post on application to

MELLIN'S FOOD WORKS, PECKHAM, S.E.

(The Original Firm Established 1810.)

Mappin Brothers

"Queen's" Cutlery.

By Her Majesty's Special Warrant.

Queen's Cutlery is the finest in the World. Has stood the test of over 80 years, Supplied to the public by the actual Manufacturers direct from QUEEN'S WORKS, SHEFFIELD.

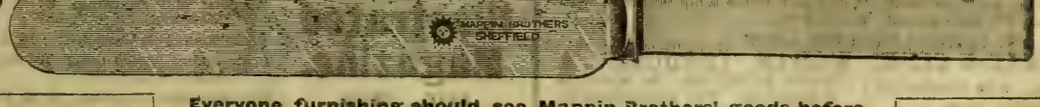
Mappin Corporate is on all in Queen's Queen's

Brothers Trade Mark Manufactures Plate and Cutlery.

Only London Show Rooms: 220, REGENT ST., W.; & 66, CHEAPSIDE, E.C. (Next Sir John Bennett's.)

'Queen's' Plate.



SPOONS AND FORKS.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST-FREE to any part of the World.

Everyone furnishing should see Mappin Brothers' goods before deciding elsewhere.

Inspection invited at the London Show-Rooms.

SELECTIONS of Goods forwarded to the Country on APPROVAL.

THREE NEW NOVELS.

NOW READY.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "A SPLENDID COUSIN."

Mrs. FINCH-BRASSEY. By Mrs. ANDREW DEAN, Author of "Isaac Eller's Money." In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "MRS. SEVERN."

Mrs. ELPHINSTONE of DRUM. By Mrs. STEVENSON, Author of "Juliet," &c. In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

WHO WINS—LOSES. By Sophia MARY LOCKE. In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

Now Ready (Sixpence), New Series, No. 122.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE FOR AUGUST, containing "WITH EDGED TOOLS," Chaps. 5 to 8—"NIGHT LIFE"—"CHARACTER NOTE: THE SOLDIER-SERVANT"—"SOME EARLY MEETING-HOUSES"—"A FLORIDA GIRL"—"HOME-COMING"—"SOME PORTUGUESE SKETCHES"—"A WIDOW'S TALE," by Mrs. OLIPHANT, Chaps. 5 to 7.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

NEW VOLUME OF SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S POPULAR 2s. and 2s. 6d. SERIES.

Now Ready, POPULAR EDITION, fcap. 8vo, boards, pictorial cover, 2s.; or, limp red cloth, 2s. 6d.

THE NEW RECTOR. By STANLEY J. WEYMAN, Author of "The House of the Wolf," &c.

LONDON: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, WATERLOO PLACE.

NEW VOLUME EDITED BY VAL C. PRINSEP, A.R.A.

Ready this day, crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

THE STORY OF ABIBAL THE TSOURIAN. Translated from the Phœnician by EDWARD LOVEL LESTER. Preceded by an Account of the Finding of the Manuscript by EMILY WATSON. Edited by VAL C. PRINSEP, A.R.A., Author of "Virginie."

LONDON: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, WATERLOO PLACE.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

AT THE LIBRARIES.

AS A MAN IS ABLE.

By DOROTHY LEIGHTON.

In 3 vols.

"We have nothing but praise for the originality of her story. . . . She has a bright pen and an advanced mind; she is in no rut, and seems to suffer from the restraint of few musty trammels."—Daily Chronicle.

SECOND THOUSAND.

THE LAST SENTENCE.

By MAXWELL GRAY,

Author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland." 3 vols.

"'The Last Sentence' is a remarkable story; it abounds with dramatic situations, the interest never for a moment flags, and the characters are well drawn and consistent."—Standard.

THIRD THOUSAND.

THE HEAVENLY TWINS.

By SARAH GRAND,

Author of "Ideala." In 3 vols.

"It is so full of interest that one feels inclined to give oneself up to unreserved enjoyment of it. The twins are among the most delightful and amusing in fiction."—Athenæum.

TWO NEW AMERICAN BOOKS.

DONALD MARCY. By ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS, Author of "The Gates Ajar," &c. 3s. 6d.

PERCHANCE TO DREAM, and other Stories. By MARGARET S. BRISCOE. 3s. 6d.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS AND BOOKSTALLS.

FROM WISDOM COURT. By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN and STEPHEN GRAHAM TALLENTYRE. With 30 Illustrations by R. CUBBON. 3s. 6d.

"It is the book to take upon a punt, to carry to the hills, to dream over on a hammock; a holiday book par excellence, of a sort which is not forgotten with the return to work."—"The Optimist" in The Sun.

UNIFORM WITH THE ABOVE.

THE OLD MAIDS' CLUB. By I. ZANGWILL. With Illustrations by F. H. TOWNSEND. 3s. 6d.

WOMAN—THROUGH A MAN'S EYEGLASS. By MALCOLM C. SALAMAN. With Illustrations by DUDLEY HARDY. 3s. 6d.

LONDON: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, BEDFORD STREET, W.C.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

Now ready at all Libraries.

The LIFE of Sir RICHARD FRANCIS BURTON, K.C.M.G., &c. By his Wife, ISABEL BURTON. With numerous Portraits, Coloured and other Illustrations, and Maps, 2 vols., demy 8vo, 42s.

"It is a long time since a work so replete with varied and thrilling interest has been produced.... The book is not only a valuable contribution to the history of the Victorian age, but a noble tribute of affection, reverence, and admiration to the memory of a dead hero by a woman in every way worthy of association with his astounding life achievements and unique intellectual powers ....a product of rare and highly cultivated intelligence."—Daily Telegraph.

"The two volumes are full of multifarious interest..... The book presents a striking and faithful portrait of a very remarkable man, and a stirring record of a very romantic career."—Times.

"Richard Burton was so fascinating a man, his virility was so gigantic, his intellectual powers so remarkable, his activity so ceaseless, his courage so splendid, his adventures so numerous and so thrilling, that his 'Life' cannot fail to partake of these qualities."—Daily Chronicle.

NEW BOOK by W. H. HUDSON.

BIRDS in a VILLAGE. By W. H. Hudson, Author of "The Naturalist in La Plata," "Idle Days in Patagonia," &c. Square crown 8vo, buckram, 7s. 6d. [Next week.

PERCY FITZGERALD, M.A., F.S.A.

HENRY IRVING: a Record of Twenty Years at the Lyceum. By PERCY FITZGERALD, M.A., F.S.A. With Portrait, demy 8vo, 14s.

The Graphic says:—"To the playgoing public Mr. Percy Fitzgerald's new volume is one of considerable interest, as it is an elaborate history of the Lyceum management for the past twenty years.... The record is a brilliant one, and, as fully told by the writer, will be valuable in years to come."

ASHMORE RUSSAN and FREDERICK BOYLE.

The ORCHID SEEKERS: a Story of Adventure in Borneo. By ASHMORE RUSSAN and FREDERICK BOYLE. Illustrated by Alfred Hartley. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

The Saturday Review says:—"A capital story of adventure, such as would delight most boys and gratify many of their elders.....The book is written with great spirit, and the authors are to be congratulated on producing a story full of thrilling incident without violating probabilities."

General DON BARTOLOME MITRE.

The EMANCIPATION of SOUTH AMERICA. Being a Condensed Translation, by WILLIAM PILLING, of "The History of San Martin." By General DON BARTOLOME MITRE, First Constitutional President of the Argentine Republic. Demy 8vo, with Maps, 12s.

The Liverpool Mercury says:—"Is full of life, is rich in incidents of flood and field, and deserves to be a favourite with all persons interested in national movements towards freedom. It is indispensable to the student of South American history."

CHAPMAN & HALL, Limited, London.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

ROUND THE BLACK MAN'S GARDEN.

By ZÉLIE COLVILE, F.R.G.S.

With 2 Maps and 52 Illustrations from drawings by the Author and from Photographs. Demy 8vo, 16s.

"The great charm of Mrs. Colvile's book lies in its freshness and utter absence of affectation....One of the cleverest as well as most informing books of its class."—St James's Budget.

"It is excellent reading and free from cant and gush of all kinds; moreover, she has a story to tell, and can observe and describe with vigour and humour. ....A charming volume."—National Observer.

"Many full-page and text illustrations heighten the interest of this decidedly piquant and unconventional book of travel."—Speaker.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

NEW NOVEL AT ALL LIBRARIES.

BALMORAL:

A ROMANCE OF THE QUEEN'S COUNTRY. By ALEXANDER ALLARDYCE, Author of "The City of Sunshine," "Life of Lord Keith," "Scotland and Scotsmen in the Eighteenth Century," "Charles Kirkpatrick Sharpe," &c. 3 vols., crown 8vo, 25s. 6d.

"No one who wishes to read a really first-rate novel should miss reading 'Balmoral.'"—Observer.

"A stirring tale of love and adventure."—Black and White.

"The whole book, full as it is of adventure and incident, is well worth perusal."—Speaker.

"The work is exceptionally clever."—Liverpool Mercury.

"A delightful romance."—Birmingham Gazette.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 934.—AUGUST, 1893.—2s. 6d.

CONTENTS:—AT THE GREEN DRAGON, by Beatrice Harraden.—THE STORY OF THE AMERICA CUP; INTERNATIONAL YACHT RACING, by R. Jope-Slade.—RUSSIAN PROGRESS IN MANCHURIA.—A FRENCH STUDY OF BURNS.—IN ORCADIA.—EARLSCOURT. Chaps. XXVIII.-XXXI.—AMONG FRENCH CATHEDRALS, by the Hon. Lady Stafford Northcote. Fontinalis IN SCOTLAND, by C. Stein.—PRIEST-RIDDEN IRELAND.—NEW BOOKS.—THE INDIAN CURRENCY COMMISSION.—The Coup d'État.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

6d. English Illustrated Magazine.

AUG., 1893.

Nearly 100 Illustrations.

Some Ruskin Letters. By GEORGE STRONACH.
Lou and Liz. By GEORGE GISSING.
Poachers and Poaching. By A SON OF THE MARSHES.
Yacht Racing on the Solent. By A. E. PAYNE.
Is Slumming Played Out? By Hon. and Rev. JAMES ADDERLEY.
Hartmann the Anarchist. By E. D. FAWCETT.
Quillets from the Law Courts.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, W.C.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

THE NOVEL OF THE SEASON. THE THIRD EDITION IS NOW READY.

E. F. BENSON. DODO: A Detail of the Day. By E. F. BENSON. 2 vols., crown 8vo, 21s.

"An unusually clever and interesting novel."—Guardian.

"'Dodo' is very good company. The author's matter is original and interesting."—National Observer.

"Clever and well-written. 'Dodo's' lovers are much to be pitied, but her readers may be promised a very pleasant time."—Morning Post.

"A delightfully witty sketch of the smart people of society. The writer is a showman with keen insight and sympathy, and a true artist."—Spectator.

"The story is told with charming grace and much power. The dialogue is a feast of epigram and paradox."—Speaker.

SECOND EDITION READY.

BARING-GOULD. — MRS. CURGENVEN OF CURGENVEN. By S. BARING GOULD, Author of "Mehalah," "In the Roar of the Sea," &c. 3 vols.

"Among his series of brilliant romances, 'Mrs. Curgenven of Curgenven' is one of the best."—Morning Post.

"The swing of the narrative is splendid."—Sussex Daily News.

"A very fine and powerful story."—Bristol Mercury.

GILBERT PARKER. — MRS. FALCHION. By GILBERT PARKER, Author of "Pierre and his People." 2 vols., crown 8vo, 21s.

"A very striking and admirable novel."—St. James's Gazette.

"A work of original power. It has intellect and imagination in it, finely imagined and well told."—Scotsman.

"A surprise, a revelation almost."—Lady's World.

"A splendid study of character: a book of remarkable power."—Athenæum.

ANTHONY HOPE. — A CHANGE OF AIR. By ANTHONY HOPE, Author of "Mr. Witt's Widow," &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Humorous in conception, witty in execution. A book to read from beginning to end."—National Observer.

"A graceful, vivacious comedy, true to human nature. The characters are sketched with a masterly hand, and the dialogue is neat and pointed."—Times.

HOSKEN.—VERSES BY THE WAY.—By J. D. HOSKEN. Printed on laid paper, cloth, gilt top, 5s. Also a Large-Paper Edition on Hand-made Paper, limited to 75 copies, 12s. 6d. net.

Lyrics and Sonnets by J. D. Hosken, the Postman Poet, of Helston, Cornwall, whose interesting career is now more or less well known to the literary public. "Q.", Author of "The Splendid Spur," &c., has written a critical and biographical introduction.

METHUEN & CO., 18, Bury-street, W.C.

Price Sixpence.

THE HARROGATE MINERAL WATERS and HOMŒOPATHY. A new Analysis. Reprinted from the Monthly "Homœopathic Review."

Published by E. GOULD & SON, London, and can be purchased at any Booksellers'.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

The Two Lancrofts.

By C. F. KEARY,

Author of "A Marriage de Convenance." Three vols., crown 8vo, cloth, 31s. 6d.

The Crime of Maunsell Grange.

By FREDERIC BRETON.

Three Volumes, crown 8vo, cloth, 31s. 6d.

"A finely told tale of feminine loyalty and devotion, contrasted with womanly frailty and fickleness. . . . Few recent novels have deserved such praise as may cordially be allotted to 'The Crime of Maunsell Grange.'"—The Daily Telegraph.

"It is undoubtedly a strong and clever novel."—Manchester Examiner.

"Remarkable power and finish."—The Scotsman.

JAMES R. OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO., 45, Albemarle-street, London.

LONDON LIBRARY.

ST. JAMES'S SQUARE, S.W.

PRESIDENT ..... LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

The Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE, M.P. | The Very Rev. the DEAN of LLANDAFF.
Sir E. H. BUNBURY, Bart. | Sir HENRY BARKLY, K.C.B.

TRUSTEES.

Right Hon. Sir M. GRANT DUFF. | Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart.
Right Hon. Earl of ROSEBERY.

The Library contains 130,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various languages.

Subscription £3 a year. Life Membership according to Age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-room open from Ten to Half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo, price 21s.; to Members, 16s.

C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

THE PALL MALL MAGAZINE.

AUGUST NUMBER.

NOW READY. CONTENTS. ONE SHILLING.

"WHEN BERRIES RIPEN." Coloured Frontispiece.
PENNARBY MINE. A Poem. By A. CONAN DOYLE. Illustrated by ENOCH WARD.
OUR HIGHWAY TO INDIA. No. 1.—GIBRALTAR
THE DULMINSTER DYNAMITER. By Miss M. E. BRADDON. Illustrated by T. H. ROBINSON.
"A RETROSPECT." From an Original Drawing by G. L. SEYMOUR, engraved by R. TAYLOR.
THE FOLLIES OF FASHION. Part II. By Mrs. PARR. With Illustrations.
THE SNOWBALL. By STANLEY E. WEYMAN. Illustrated by A. LUDOVICI.
IN TOW. By REGINALD BLUNT. Illustrated by A. P. BLUNT.
A FAIR PURITAN. By E. LESTER ARNOLD. Illustrated by SIDNEY COWELL.
HOW WEALTH IS DISTRIBUTING ITSELF. By W. H. MALLOCK. With Diagrams by S. NATION.
OUR HIGHWAY TO INDIA. No. 2.—MALTA.
A DARWINIAN SCHOONER. By W. L. ALDEN. Illustrated by SYDNEY ADAMSON.
A CANDIDATE FOR MARTYRDOM. By W. E. NORRIS. Illustrated by CHARLES E. FRIPP.
STRANGE CITIES OF THE FAR EAST. No. 2.—HUÉ By Hon. GEORGE CURZON, M.P. With full-page and other Illustrations from Photographs taken by the Author.
PEOPLE WE HAVE MET. No. 2—The Pessimist. Full-page Illustration by "RAB."
SOCIETY: A RETROSPECT. By "A Woman of the World."
DAY DAWN. A Poem. By LEWIS MORRIS. Illustrated by Miss ADA BOWLEY.
THE FORTUNE OF WAR. By F. GRIBBLE. Illustrated by HAL HURST.
WITHOUT PREJUDICE. By I. ZANGWILL. With Thumb-Nail Sketches by L. BAUMER.
WILD LOVE ON THE SEA. A Poem. By Hon. RODEN NOEL. Illustrated by SYDNEY ADAMSON.
VEXED QUESTIONS:—
England's Position in the Mediterranean. (1) Right Hon. Sir CHARLES DILKE, Bart., M.P. (2) Vice-Admiral P. COLOMB.
PALL MALL MAGAZINE DRAWING COMPETITION (No. II.). "A NEWLY MARRIED ENGLISH COUPLE ON THEIR HONEYMOON TOUR." (1) As Depicted by French Artists. (2) As we are glad to say they sometimes are. (3) As, alas! they often are. By Mr. L. B. HUGO.
"THROUGH OTHERS' GLASSES."—(Continued.)

An Interesting and Original PRIZE DRAWING COMPETITION. For full particulars see the current number.

Copies on sale at all Booksellers, Newsagents, and Railway Bookstalls in Great Britain and Ireland. Editorial Offices: 18, Charing Cross-road, W.C.; Publishing Offices—London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Limited, Broadway, Ludgate Hill, E.C.; Manchester: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Limited, 16, Jackson's-row; New York: The International News Company; Toronto: The Toronto News Company; Montreal: The Montreal News Company.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED.

FOUNDED IN 1842.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE (either New or Second-hand) of the BEST ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from One Guinea per annum. LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for books exchangeable by the Library Messengers) from Two Guineas per annum. COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from Two Guineas per annum. N.B.—Two or three friends may unite in One Subscription, and thus lessen the cost of carriage. LIBRARY BOXES GRATIS.

TOWN AND VILLAGE CLUBS SUPPLIED ON LIBERAL TERMS.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books Gratis and post free.

SALE DEPARTMENT.

All the Leading Books of Past Seasons are on Sale, second-hand, at greatly Reduced Prices. LISTS GRATIS AND POST FREE.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

30 to 34, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON;

241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; and 48, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Mansion House End).

DIGBY, LONG, & CO.'s NEW BOOKS.

1. THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF AN OLD PASSPORT. Chiefly relating how we accomplished many Driving Tours with our own English horses over the roads of Western Europe before the time of railways. By the Rev. ALFRED CHARLES SMITH, M.A., Author of "Attractions of the Nile," "A Spring Tour in Portugal," "A Pilgrimage through Palestine," &c. With numerous Illustrations. Royal 8vo, cloth extra, 21s. [Just out.

THE NEW NOVEL "READING" AT ALL LIBRARIES.

2. DR. JANET OF HARLEY STREET.
By Dr. ARABELLA KENEALY.
THIS DAY, THIRD EDITION, Cloth, 6s.

The Daily Chronicle says: "It is a clever book, and well worth reading. Miss Kenealy has imagined an interesting character, and realised her vividly."
The Pall Mall Gazette says: "Miss Kenealy has a quick sense of humour and a lively faculty of observation, and her style is vivid and effective."
Black and White says: "We recommend everyone to read this work. The really clever study of this female Abernethy."

3. Second Edition of LIKE A SISTER.
By MADELINE CRICHTON. 3 vols., 31s. 6d.
At Every Circulating Library.

The People (First Review) says:—"We predict for her a prosperous career. She writes good English, and works out her plot with considerable skill."
The Court Journal (Second Review) says:—"The writer possesses the faculty of depicting character with force and consistency. The literary texture is good, and the dialogue throughout is brisk and vivacious."

By J. M. COLLES.

4. A DAUGHTER OF ROME. A Romance from the German of Louisa Richter. By J. M. COLLES. Cloth, 3s. 6d. [Just out.

5. THE BOW AND THE SWORD. A Romance. By E. C. ADAMS, M.A. With 16 full-page drawings by Matthew Stretch. Pictorial cloth, 3s. 6d. [Just out.

6. THE LAST CRUISE OF THE TEAL. By LEIGH RAY. With 22 Illustrations. Pictorial cloth, 3s. 6d. [Just out.

DIGBY, LONG, & CO., PUBLISHERS,
18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free 3s. 8d. London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

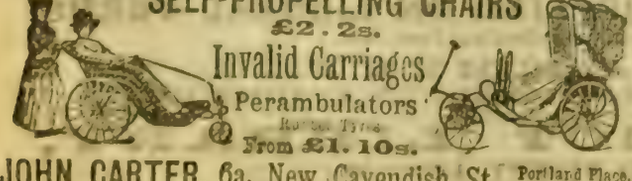
ESTABLISHED 1818.
Ten Prize Medals.
PETER F. HEERING'S
COPENHAGEN
CHERRY BRANDY.
Sold by all Wine Merchants, and at all Bars and Hotels.

CARTER ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE.
6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.,
PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE
For holding lamp, meals, &c., in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1.1s.

INVALID COMFORTS
Walking Machine for the lame
Adjustable Couches and Beds, £2.
Exercising Chairs £5. 5s.
Reclining Boards £1.1s.
Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d.
Easy Chairs £2. 10s.
Commode Chairs £2. 10s.
Carrying Chairs, £1.
Bed Tables 7s. 6d.
Crutches 10s. 6d.
Folding Couch Chairs 10s.
Bed Rests 10s.

BATH CHAIRS
From £1. 6s.



SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS
£2. 2s.
Invalid Carriages
Perambulators
Rubber Tyres
From £1. 10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.
Telegrams—BATHCHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

TUESDAY NEXT.
STREATHAM COMMON.—The choice Freehold Residential Property, well known as Coventry Hall, a compact and finely-appointed mansion, with noble hall, billiard-room, conservatory, five reception-rooms, two bath-rooms, 14 bed and dressing-rooms, and a boudoir. Delightful and well-timbered grounds with grand cedars, vineries and other glasshouses, ornamental grass land, stabling, entrance lodge, cottages for coachman and gardener, and every appurtenance of a gentleman's establishment, the area being about five acres, and forming a singularly beautiful and secluded abode, with many rural charms perhaps unequalled, within about six miles' drive of the City and West-end, and close to a station. Also the adjoining exceedingly attractive Residence, The Chimes, with secluded ground of an acre and a-half, entrance lodge, and capital stabling. In two lots; the first with possession, the other subject to present tenancy.
MESSRS. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, FARMER, & BRIDGEWATER will SELL at the MART, on TUESDAY, August 1st, at TWO, the above valuable PROPERTY, equally worthy the attention of gentlemen requiring to occupy a superior residence in admittedly one of the best and healthiest situations south of London, and of the investor, the two places forming a most compact estate of about 64 acres, immediately facing this lovely common and the high road from London to Croydon, to which and to Polworth-road it possesses the extensive and important frontages of over 1,400 feet. May only be viewed by orders. Particulars and plan of Messrs. FITZHUGH, WOOLLEY, & CO., Solicitors, 3, Pavilion-parade, Brighton; and (with orders to view) of Messrs. HERRING, SON, & DAW, Estate Agents, Brixton Hill, and 62, Coleman-street, E.C.; and of the Auctioneers, 80, Cheapside.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES.—Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

ALDRIDGE'S.—Regimental Teams.—On WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 2, will be SOLD, 16 HORSES, the regimental teams belonging to the Grenadier, Coldstream, and Scots Guards, that have been regularly working in the above couches during the past season. On view Monday, July 31, and until Sale.—W. & S. FREEMAN.

QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS,
ST. JAMES' PARK, S.W.
(OPPOSITE ST. JAMES' PALACE).
A FEW SUITES TO LET AT REDUCED RENTALS.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c.—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Particulars as to the best University or Army TUTORS and SCHOOLS for Boys or Girls, at home or abroad, may be obtained (free of charge) by sending a statement of requirements to R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand.

COALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES: Londonderry Wallsend, 25s.; Pittington Wallsend, 24s.; Primrose, 23s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 22s. per ton. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms lane, Vauxhall.

CAMEO
CIGARETTES
A PHOTOGRAPH IN EVERY PACKET.
A SEPARATE MOUTHPIECE FOR EACH CIGARETTE.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.

CARPET CLEANING.

CARPETS and TAPESTRIES Cleansed from dust by PURE AIR.
Impossible to damage the most delicate fabric.
Collection and Delivery free.
Send for Prices and Particulars to your Upholsterer, or
The Compressed Air Carpet & Tapestry Cleaning Co.
Brook Green, W. Office: 94, Victoria-st., Westminster.
N.B.—The Trade and Public are invited to visit our Works, and convince themselves of the beneficial effects of our process.

QUICK CHEAP ROUTE to DENMARK, SWEDEN, and NORWAY, via HARWICH and ESBJERG.—The United Steamship Co.'s of Copenhagen Steamers sail from Harwich (Parkeston Quay) for Esbjerg every Monday, Thursday and Saturday, after arrival of the Special Express leaving Liverpool-street Station at 8.45 p.m. every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Also every Monday at 9 a.m. train from Cannon-street. Direct Express to Copenhagen in 20½ hrs. The service will be performed by Twin-Screw and other Steamers (limited by the Steamships Act, 1891), and has been specially arranged to afford Tourists the best accommodation for passengers and their luggage. For further particulars address HENRY PRICE, & CO., 17, Fenchurch-st., London; or the Continental Manager, Liverpool-st. Station, E.C.

CHEAPEST CONTINENTAL HOLIDAY. Brussels and back 20/-, the Ardennes, 25/-, Switzerland, 70/-, Antwerp and Harwich and Antwerp, 30/- (at Eastern Railway Co.'s steamers every week day).
NEW SERVICE to the HOOK of HOLLAND daily (Sundays included).
Through carriages from Liverpool-street Station at 4 p.m.; Birmingham (New-street), 1 p.m.; Manchester (London-rd.), 3 p.m.; York, 5.45 p.m. (in connection with express trains from the Midlands, the North, and Scotland) direct to Harwich. Dining Car from York. Hamburg from Harwich by G.S.N. Co.'s steamers Wednesdays and Saturdays.
Combination tickets and cheap tours to all parts of the Continent. Read "Walks in the Ardennes," price 6d. at all Bookstalls. Particulars at 61, Regent-st., W.; or of the Continental Traffic Manager, Liverpool-st. Station, E.C.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISES by the steamships "CHIMBORAZO," 3,847 tons register, and "GARONNE," 3,876 tons register, leaving LONDON as under
For NORWAY.
2nd August, for 24 days. 16th August, for 15 days.
Calling at LEITH two days later.
The Steamers will be navigated through the "Inner Lead," i.e. inside the range of islands off the coast of Norway, thus securing smooth water, and will visit some of the finest fiords.
For SICILY, GREECE, the LEVANT, and CRIMEA,
leaving 2nd September, for 43 days.
For the MEDITERRANEAN,
leaving 12th September, for 31 days.
For MADEIRA, TENERIFFE, WEST INDIES, AZORES, &c.,
leaving 22nd November, for 65 days.
The Steamers are fitted with Electric Light, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Baths, &c.
Managers { F. Green & Co. / Anderson, Anderson, & Co. } Head Offices, Fenchurch-avenue, London.
For passage apply to the latter firm, at 5, Fenchurch-avenue, E.C.; or to the West-end Branch Office, 16, Cockspur street, S.W.

AUSTRALIA and NEW ZEALAND.—NEW FAST PASSENGER ROUTE, viâ Vancouver, by fastest Atlantic steamers (any line) to Montreal or New York; thence viâ Canadian Pacific Railway, taking in the grand scenery of the Rockies, only actual trans-continental line running through trains under one management.
Atlantic to Pacific. Many optional routes, including Niagara and Chicago. Break of journey allowed.
New steamships, 5,000 tons each, of New Zealand and Australasian S.s. Co., largest, fastest, and finest running from American Continent to Australasia, leave Vancouver about as follows:—
S.s. MIOWERA ..... August 14th,
S.s. WARRIMOO ..... September 14th, monthly thereafter, calling Honolulu, Brisbane, and Sydney. Electric light and cuisine, exceptionally large cabins.
For pamphlets and berths apply to Passenger Department, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, King William-street, London, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 103, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

NORWEGIAN YACHTING CRUISES
(FORTNIGHTLY) FROM NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.
Shortest route to Norway. Only one night at sea.
By the ALBION STEAMSHIP CO.'S (Ltd.) Fast and Splendidly-fitted Yachting Steamer
"MIDNIGHT SUN" (Captain NIVISON, R.N.R.), 3,020 tons, 2,860 horse-power.
Fares from 12 Guineas, including a sumptuous table.
NEXT SAILINGS—JUNE 17; JULY 1, 15, 29; AUGUST 12, 26; SEPTEMBER 9.
All applications for Berths to be made to the Yachting Steamer "MIDNIGHT SUN" Passenger Office, 4, Lombard-street (Tel. Add., Tourist), Newcastle-on-Tyne. Write for Itineraries.

WOODS' PATENT GALVANISED
STEEL WIRE MATTRESSES & BEDSTEADS.
Carriage Paid, and Liberal Cash Discount allowed.
Guaranteed for Five Years.

EXHIBITED CARRYING ONE TON
At LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and other EXHIBITIONS.
SHOW ROOMS:
128, BOLD ST., LIVERPOOL.
Catalogues and Prices free on application to the
LONGFORD WIRE, IRON & STEEL CO., LTD.
WARRINGTON.
Please mention this Paper.

THREE GOLD MEDALS.
The Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam Corset
Exquisite Model. Perfect Comfort. Guaranteed Wear.
Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil; also in the New Sanitary Woollen Cloth. 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.
CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped "Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam No. 116," in oval on the lining.
Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager, Mr. [illegible]
EVERY EVENING, A
A WOMAN OF NO IMPORTANCE,
by Mr. OSCAR WILDE.
Doors open, 8. Carriages, 11. Box-office (Mr. Reversbach) open 10 to 5 and 8 to 10. Seats may also be booked by letter or telegram. HAYMARKET.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—A New Version of Real Life, by Henry PETTIT, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8 o'clock. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, Rudge Harding, John Carter, and Arthur Williams; Misses Elizabeth Robins, Gertrude Kingston, F. L. Lester, and Fanny Brough. Box plan at theatre. Telephone 2,015. Open at 7.30.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square.—Every Night, at 8.15, AUGUSTIN DALY'S COMPANY in the New Locomotive Comedy in Three Acts, LOVE IN TANDEM. "An immediate success." Laughter unrestrained." Miss Ada Rehan, Mrs. Gilbert, James Lewis, George Clarke, Arthur Bourchier, &c. LAST SATURDAY MATINÉE July 29, at 2. The success of the new Comedy constrains Mr. Daly to extend the present season until Friday, Aug. 4, when it must positively close. An extra Matinée will be given Wednesday, August 2. Box-office daily, 10 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8, MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine and Charles Danby; Misses Florence Dysart and Letty Lind. Box office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30. Special Engagement of Miss Loie Fuller. Matinée To-day, Thursday, at 2.30.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.45.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music, and Varieties. At 8.30, the New Grand Romantic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, entitled FIDELIA. At 10.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 35,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Leicester square.—Grand Programme.—Two Grand Ballets, Second Edition of ROUND THE TOWN and KATRINA. Unqualified success. Unrivalled VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Magnificent Orchestra. Doors open at 7.45. No free list.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Lottie Collins, Jenny Hill, James Fawn, Lillian Alexander, F. H. Celli, Millie Hylton, Herbert Campbell, the Great Athos Troupe, Ada Blanche, Marie Le Blanc, Brothers Griffiths, Ada Reeve, Dutch Daly, La Petite Amoros, Clara Torr, G. W. Hunter, Alice Maydue; Ara, Zebra, and Vora; Eugene Stratton, Fred Harvey, Arthur Rigby.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—FULL LICENCE.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Prices from 6d. EVERY EVENING at 8.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations. Lighted throughout by electricity. THE LIBERATOR FAILURE.—Portrait Model of Jabez Spencer Balfour. The PANAMA SCANDAL.—Portrait Model of M. Ferdinand de Lesseps. CABINET MINISTERS.—New Portrait Models of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Sir William V. Harcourt, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, and Lord Randolph Churchill, &c., &c. New and graphic Tableaux, A FOOTBALL SCRIMMAGE. Over 400 other Portrait Models in Wax. Historical Tableaux. Grand scenes representing British Sports, Nursery Rhymes, &c. Eminent People "At Home." Music all day. Chamber of Horrors—Lambeth Poisoning Case, Portrait Model of Thomas Neill Cream. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Extra rooms, 6d. Open from 9 to 10.

EARL'S COURT EXHIBITION
OF
GARDENING AND FORESTRY.
THE GARDEN OF LONDON.
OPEN DAILY, 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.
ALL ROADS LEAD TO EARL'S COURT.
BANDS of H.M. SCOTS GUARDS and the EXHIBITION BAND, GRAND ORGAN, STRING BAND.
Miss NELLIE GANTHONY'S ENTERTAINMENT.
ILLUMINATIONS.
Tens of Thousands of Electric, Gas, and Vauxhall Lights, arranged with regard to colour.
FERNERIES, FOUNTAINS, WATERFALLS.
ADMISSION ONE SHILLING. SEASON TICKETS (One Guinea), admitting to the Main Building, Exhibition of Gardening and Forestry, FLOWER SHOW on 26th and 27th inst., Central and Western Gardens.

CAPTAIN BOYTON'S WORLD'S WATER SHOW,
EARL'S COURT.
PHENOMENAL SUCCESS.
COOLEST PLACE OF ENTERTAINMENT IN LONDON.
THE THRILLING SENSATION, SHOOTING THE "CHUTES," and
A HOST OF STARTLING NOVELTIES.
TWO PERFORMANCES DAILY at 3.30 and 8.30.
RAIN OR SHINE.
ADMISSION, 1s to 5s. (2,000 Free Seats.)

LAWRIE & CO., 15, Old Bond-street.—EXHIBITION of Loan Collection of PICTURES of Barbizon and Early English Schools, Corot, Daubigny, Diaz, Dupré, Millet, Rosseau, Troyon, Constable, Romney, Reynolds, Gainsborough, Velasquez, Turner, &c., &c. Open from 10 to 6. Admission, 1s.

ROYAL WEDDING FESTIVITIES.
MUSICIANS, CONJURORS, AND 1,000 NOVELTIES.
Call or Send for Illustrated Price List.
THE SOCIETY OF ENTERTAINERS, 44, UPPER BAKER ST. LONDON, N.W.
Mention this Paper. Telephone, 7,119

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 10s. 6d. per day.
According to the position of rooms selected.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. BECKFORD, Manager.

BUXTON.—The PEAK THERMAL ESTABLISHMENT. A High-class Hydropathic Hotel. Mineral water and other baths. Resident physician. Electric light. Passenger lift. Magnificent public rooms. Excellent cuisine. Table d'hôte 7 p.m., separate tables. Terms moderate.—Telegrams, "Thermal, Buxton."

CALLANDER & TROSSACHS HYDROPATHIC.—
Splendid Drives. Good Fishing. Lawn Tennis. Golf.
Terms from £2 12s. 6d. per week.
Apply to the MANAGER.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor.
Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

GAIRLOCH HOTEL, LOCH MAREE, ROSS-SHIRE.—This magnificent hotel is situated amidst the finest Highland scenery in the West coast of Scotland. Accommodation for over 200. Good Fishing. Large posting establishment. Swift steamer from Oban every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden. Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 2789.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

MATLOCK BATH.—ROYAL HOTEL.—Hydropathic Baths of every description. Medical Man. Healthful situation; extensive grounds, greatly admired. Large swimming bath. Billiards. Dairy farm. Splendid fishing.—Also NEW BATH HOTEL, with extensive grounds, fishing, &c. &c. Terms very moderate. 'Bus meets all trains.—T. TYACK, Proprietor.

NEWQUAY, Cornwall, The Biarritz of England.—ATLANTIC HOTEL, "the finest Hotel in the county." Splendidly situated. Full view of the Atlantic from Trevose Head to St. Ives. Ocean view from every window. Beaches, caverns, and cliff scenery unrivalled. Bracing climate. Bathing, yachting, fishing. Delightful excursions. Magnificent rooms. Strictly moderate charges.

NORWOOD (UPPER).—The QUEEN'S HOTEL, near the Crystal Palace. Specially adapted Suites of Apartments for families and permanent residents. Winter boarding. Terms from Three Guineas. A limited number of single rooms at 2½ guineas.

PARAMÉ, near St. Malo.
HÔTEL DE LA PLAGE.
Under English Management.

PORTRUSH (Giant's Causeway), co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL. Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing, sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner, from 6 to 8 p.m. French cuisine. Charges very moderate. The HOTEL is UNDER RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.

SALISBURY.—The WHITE HART FAMILY HOTEL, nearly opposite the Cathedral. The largest and principal Hotel in the City. Table d'hôte (two hours each meal) at separate tables daily. Carriages for Stonehenge and other places of interest in the neighbourhood at fixed inclusive charges. Tariff on application to H. T. BOWES, Manager.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hôte at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

SEA VIEW.—ISLE OF WIGHT, PIER HOTEL. The most modern and best appointed hotel in the island. All public rooms, private sitting-rooms, and greater number of bed-rooms face the sea and pier. Splendid bathing and boating. Royal I.W. Golf Links, ten minutes' walk.
G. ROWLAND ROBERTS, Proprietor.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—ROYAL KENTISH HOTEL.—Largest, best appointed, facing the Common, close to Chalybeate Spring and Parade. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Inclusive terms, 12s. per day. Tariff of MANAGER.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the
ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.
TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.
(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.
THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.
SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.
Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.
NO SUPPERS.
TELEPHONE No. 3,597.

THE BURLINGTON RESTAURANT,
169, Regent Street, W.
The most recherché 5s. Diner Parisien in London.
Luncheons and Dinners à la carte.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS
(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).
Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

ALBANY HOTEL
(ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.
Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Only Hotel with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance.
C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

ESTABLISHED IN 1875.
MACDONALD'S
IS THE ORIGINAL AND VERY MUCH THE LARGEST
HYDROPATHIC IN PITLOCHRY, PERTHSHIRE,
Standing in its own Ornamental Grounds of over 35 Acres, and 500 feet above sea level. Every window commands a view of the Most Magnificent Scenery in Scotland. To prevent disappointment Communications should in all cases be addressed to W. MACDONALD, The Athole, Pitlochry. Telegraphic Address—"Athole, Pitlochry."

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.
THE PALACE HOTEL
This large and elegantly-appointed high-class Hotel contains upwards of 200 rooms. The hotel occupies the finest position in Buxton, and is surrounded by its own grounds of six acres. Ground-floor sitting-rooms and bed-rooms. Magnificent public rooms. American elevator. Table d'hôte at separate tables.
A. CROSS, Manager.

HOTELS, &c.

EASTBOURNE. THE CAVENDISH HOTEL stands alone in the centre of the Grand Parade. Pleasant sea and land views. Patronised by many of the Royal families of Europe. Appreciated for its first class appointments and homely comforts. Elegant public rooms, convenient family suites, &c. Passenger lift. Table d'hote. Moderate charges.—J. LOWMAN, Manager.

BEXHILL-ON-SEA. SACKVILLE HOTEL. Situated between Eastbourne and St. Leonard's. Facing sea. South aspect. Moderate tariff. Golf links, tennis courts, attached to the Hotel. Terms on application. Telegrams, "Sackville, Bexhill."

THE MANAGER, IMPERIAL HOTEL, ABERDEEN (patronised by the Royal Family), begs to call the attention of old customers and intending visitors to the fact that it is through no fault of his that their Porter or Boots is not visible on the arrival of the trains, but because the Palace or Station Hotel Company have monopolised the right to have their porters within the barriers at the station to the exclusion of those of the other hotels in town.

GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.

ON the Esplanade, overlooking St. Aubin's Bay. Finest sea views in Jersey. The Largest and best appointed Hotel in the Channel Islands. Every modern improvement. Magnificent public rooms. Private suites. Swimming bath, tennis courts, &c. Terms en pension or à la carte, on application to— SYDNEY ROGERS, Manager and Secretary. Telegrams, "Grand, Jersey."

ILFRACOMBE.—The RUNNACLEAVE Private HOTEL. 120 beautifully-appointed rooms. Recreation-hall, to seat 500, with fitted stage; carriage, yacht, tennis, photographic dark room, billiards, and in-door skating rink, free of charge until August. Chef de cuisine. Moderate tariff.

VISITORS to NEW YORK

Seeking COMFORT, QUIET, and an ELEGANT HOME, WILL FIND THE

Westminster Hotel

SIXTEENTH STREET and IRVING PLACE,

Replete with every Modern Convenience and Comfort. Moderate Tariff.

LOCATION.—One block east of Union-square. Convenience of Broadway, without its noise. Accessible to all Railways, Ferries, the Shopping Centre, and places of Amusement.

NEW YORK.—16th STREET AND IRVING PLACE. (Cable Address: "Westminster, New York.")

RECOMMENDATION. A permanent or transient home of quiet elegance, with generous management, and a cuisine of noted excellence.

REPUTATION. An enviable one among people of taste and discrimination, desiring comfort and luxury, without the confusion and publicity of the larger hotels.

INCLUSIVE TERMS. $3.50 (about 15s.) per day and upwards, according to location of rooms.

The water used in THE WESTMINSTER is purified by the "Buhring" patent process.

E. N. ANABLE, Proprietor.
W. W. SCHENCK, Manager.

SOUTHPORT. — PALACE HOTEL. — Summer Season. Charming Seaside Family Resort. Extensive grounds. Electric light. Tennis. Golf links. Splendid baths.

ILFRACOMBE. — ILFRACOMBE HOTEL. — Unrivalled sea frontage and open surroundings. Eight lawn-tennis courts. Large swimming bath. New lounge hall. 250 rooms.—Tariff of MANAGER.

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET

Packed free of charge on receipt of cheque.

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5/-, Polished Nickel, 7/6.

Trade "OPTIMUS" Mark.

Photographic PRIZES £105 Competition.

Details post free on application.

The Largest Selection of PHOTOGRAPHIC APPARATUS in the World. The Best Value. Before buying Opera or Field Glasses, Microscopes, or other Optical Instruments, write for CATALOGUE, which is sent POST FREE.

"OPTIMUS" PHOTOGRAPHIC OUTFITS.

Rayment's Wide Angle, Long Focus, Rack Camera, Three Double Dark Slides, "Optimus" Rapid Rectilinear Lens, Instantaneous Shutter, Tripod, and best Waterproof Case.

For Plates 4¼ by 3¼ £10
For Plates 6½ by 4¾ £12
For Plates 8½ by 6½ £15

CATALOGUE POST FREE.

PERKEN, SON, & RAYMENT, 99, HATTON GARDEN, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON.

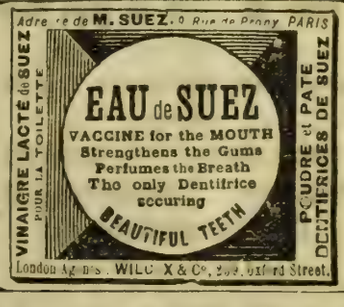
SCOTTADIE

THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE

115 & 115A REGENT STREET
LONDON W.

For —
Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Mauds.
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns.

Telegraphic Address—Scott Adie, London.



HILDITCH'S

GREAT REDUCTIONS.
PATTERNS FORWARDED.

SUMMER SILK SALE.

11 & 12, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.

FARADAYS'
FITTINGS

Electric Light Works

3 BERNERS ST. W

AN ALWAYS ACCEPTABLE PRESENT.
An Original Case of MÜLHENS'

CASE OF SIX BOTTLES 12/6

GENUINE NO. 4711 BRAND OF

EAU DE COLOGNE.

THE PUREST & STRONGEST, YET MOST DELICATE EVER PRODUCED.

THE WORLD says: "Anyone desirous of getting a thoroughly genuine Cologne, cannot do better than send for a bottle of the '4711' Double Extract. Once having used it, repetition is a foregone conclusion."

Large selection of Choicest Perfumes, Toilet Soaps, &c. Quintuple Concentrated Extracts, made from Fresh Flowers gathered at Grasse.

Of All dealers in Perfumes, or at the
LONDON BRANCH:
62, NEW BOND ST., W.
(ONE DOOR FROM BROOK STREET.)
Price Lists on application to Mr. C. REUTER, Manager. And at
COLOGNE, NEW YORK, VIENNA, RIGA, and ODESSA.

The ONLY Antiseptic Saline.

SALT REGAL

FOR ALL
Bilious and Nervous Disorders,
SUCH AS
Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Disordered Liver.

At all Chemists throughout the world, in bottles, 1/6 and 2/9.

Office: 49, ISLINGTON, LIVERPOOL.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They remain all agreeable herbs, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

CANCIA'S PURE ITALIAN WINES

Vino da Tavola ... ... 14s. per dozen.
Chianti Melini ... ... 18s. and 24s. „
Capri White Scala ... ... 24s. „

CANCIA'S PURE ITALIAN WINES

Castel Ricaidone (Italian Burgundy) ... 18s. per dozen.
Sparkling Asti ... ... 30s. „

CANCIA'S PURE ITALIAN WINES

Vermouth Cinzano (Tonic). In litre bottles 30s. per dozen.
Samples free on application.

R. CANCIA & CO., LIMITED.

GENERAL DEPÔT:—
55, CASTLE STREET EAST, OXFORD STREET, W.

THE MILDEST OF MILD INDIAN CIGARS are

OAKES & Co.'S SUPERS

NO. 3,
THE PAGODA BRAND. QUALITY & FLAVOUR UNEQUALLED.
The Cheapest and Best INDIAN CIGAR in the Market.
SAMPLE BOX of 100 SENT to ANY ADDRESS for FIFTEEN SHILLINGS.
OAKES BROS. & CO., 46, NEW BROAD-STREET, SOLE IMPORTERS.

MILD INDIAN CIGARS. OBTAINABLE EVERYWHERE.

BAHADUR

The Burglar Bewildered.

HOW?

THROUGH THE

HOMACOUSTIC

WHAT IS THE HOMACOUSTIC?

The HOMACOUSTIC is a contrivance connected with Speaking Tubes, which entirely supersedes, for indoor purposes, not only the Telephone, but all other existing arrangements for indoor inter-communication.

HOW WAS THE BURGLAR BEWILDERED?

The owner of the house fortunately had a Homacoustic commutator fixed in his bedroom. This commutator placed him in direct communication, not only with his butler's room, but with seven other rooms in the house.

Directly he heard the Burglars he explained the state of affairs through the Homacoustic to his butler, and to the occupants of the other rooms; arranged what should be done, and they were thus all enabled to pounce on the Burglars together, and catch them red-handed, without their being even aware that their presence was so much as suspected. There was no ringing of electric bells, no creeping about the house to warn the inmates, NO PERSONAL DANGER.

The Homacoustic is far more dreaded by Burglars than any existing arrangement of "Protection from Burglary," for whereas when an electric bell rings, though it may probably arouse the inmates, it also acts as a warning to the Burglars themselves to be off.

NO HOUSE IS REALLY SAFE — WITHOUT THE —

HOMACOUSTIC

Independent of its protective advantages, the Homacoustic is invaluable in all private houses for everyday use, and in all properly arranged business premises it is an absolute necessity.

The Homacoustic is automatic, not mechanical. Once fixed, always in working order. Its first cost is its last cost.

With the Homacoustic there is no blowing into pipes. The automatic whistle is always in position. One speaks and listens at the same time. The tube is closed when not in actual use. Ordinary speaking tubes can be utilised.

The HOMACOUSTIC SAVES TIME, TEMPER, & TROUBLE.

HOMACOUSTIC SPEAKING TUBE COMPANY,
22, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.

"JAP" CARPETS

We have just received a shipment of Carpets and Rugs of Japanese Manufacture from our Agents in Hiogo, and as we are able to sell them at a very low price, we offer them to our Customers in preference to submitting them to the Wholesale Trade. They are novel and artistic in design and colouring, and of thick pile.

CARPETS.				RUGS.
8 feet long	by 6 feet wide	... ...	28/- each.	3 feet long	by 1 ft. 6 in. wide	...	2 6 each.
10 „	9 „	... ...	50/- „	4 „	2 feet wide	... ...	5/- „
12 „	9 „	... ...	63/- „	6 „	3 „	... ...	8 6 „

A FEW MIRZAPORE CARPETS, 9 ft. by 6 ft. ... 27/6 each.
KURD RUGS, 5 ft. by 3 ft. ... 5/9 „
BANGALORE RUGS, 6 ft. by 3ft. ... 5/- each.
KURD CARPETS, 9 ft. by 4 ft. 6 in. ... 21/- „

Catalogues of all the best Floor Coverings free.

TRELOAR & SONS

LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

Marza Wine.

The Latest, Most Palatable & Scientific IRON AND COCA WINE.

SPECIAL REPORT IN THE "LANCET," July 1st, 1893.

"The Marza Wine is agreeable to the palate, and is valuable not merely as a stimulant but also as a Tonic, from the presence of a considerable quantity of Iron, also the principles of the Coca Leaf, Phosphorus, and Pepsine. The formula of Marza Wine is a commendable one and thoughtfully planned."

MARZA WINE
IS INVALUABLE FOR CONVALESCENTS,
ESPECIALLY AFTER
ACCOUCHEMENT, INFLUENZA, &c.
FOR DEBILITATED MEN, DELICATE WOMEN, GROWING CHILDREN, AND ALL FEELING BELOW PAR.

Marza Wine.

AWARDED THE GOLD MEDAL
—FOR—
PURITY, PALATABILITY AND EXCELLENCE.

RECOMMENDED BY EMINENT PHYSICIANS FOR ANÆMIA,
INSOMNIA,
NERVOUS DEBILITY,
BRAIN FAG,
INDIGESTION,
MENTAL DEPRESSION,
EXHAUSTION,
VOCAL FATIGUE,
NEURALGIA, &c.

MARZA WINE makes rich red blood and gives tone and vigour to all the vital organs.

Price 3/9 per Large Bottle, 42/- per doz. Everywhere, or Carriage Paid of THE MARZA CO. Ltd., 19, Wilson Street, London, E.C.

Cravenette

Is the name given to all goods Waterproofed by the Cravenette Co., Ltd.

It is no malodorous air-tight material like rubber-coated Cloths, giving one a Turkish bath with one's own vapours. Nor is it a fabric covered with a thin fragile scale of water-repelling chemicals which crack and crumble with wear, giving the cloth a dusty look, and destroying its waterproofing qualities.

Cravenette Waterproofed Coatings, Cloakings, Silks, and all Dress Fabrics are unlike any Waterproof Cloths ever before placed on the market. They are indistinguishable in appearance or odour from the same goods not waterproofed.

They are perfectly porous and consequently hygienic.

They never change in appearance nor in rain-repelling quality.

They may be had in all the newest fabrics both in heavy and light weights. The latter serve also as Dust Protectors, and are cool and indispensable for summer wear.

Always see to it that goods purchased for Cravenette are so stamped. Absence of the stamp may be taken as evidence that the goods are not genuine.

THE CRAVENETTE CO., LIMITED, BRADFORD.

TRADE MARK (REGD.)

The YŌST Typewriter

HAS NO RIBBON.

Awarded FOUR GOLD MEDALS

(Highest Award Wherever Shown)

PARIS, MONACO, KIMBERLEY, and LAUNCESTON.

Writes three times as fast as the Pen; makes several copies at one operation.

THE YOST IS BEING UNIVERSALLY ADOPTED. USED BY

HER MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT.
THE EMPEROR OF GERMANY.
THE INDIAN and COLONIAL GOVTS.
THE KING OF WURTEMBURG.
THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE.
THE EARL OF SEFTON.
THE EARL OF DYSART.
VISCOUNT EMLYN.
THE LATE LORD MAYOR.
THE BARONESS DE WORMS.
MR. RIDER HAGGARD.
DR. NANSEN.

AND THOUSANDS OF COMMERCIAL AND PROFESSIONAL MEN.

THE YOST TYPEWRITER Co., Ltd., 40, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

And at PARIS, MANCHESTER, BIRMINGHAM, LEEDS, LIVERPOOL, GLASGOW, and BELFAST.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,

Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

ARTISTIC HOMES.

"ABOUT OUR HOMES."

MAPLE & CO. "ABOUT OUR HOMES." (Hazell, 1s.). Maple & Co. will be happy to SEND a COPY of this little BOOK, which contains much interesting information upon DECORATION and other matters in connection with modern furnishing, free of charge, upon application.

BEDROOM SUITES

1,000 BEDROOM SUITES

1,000 BEDROOM SUITES at from 7gs. to £99, forming a selection without parallel in the world, in every conceivable variety of style and design, and every description of woods at prices ranging from £3 10s. to £250, thus readily suiting every class of residence. Every one about to furnish should visit the Exhibition of Bedroom Furniture.

MAPLE & CO LTD

TOTTENHAM COURT RD. LONDON

The Largest and most Convenient

FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT

IN THE WORLD

EASY CHAIRS

FIVE HUNDRED TO SELECT FROM

MAPLE & CO. have always on show an immense assortment of their world-famous, luxuriously comfortable Easy Chairs, Lounges, and Settees, in various shapes and coverings, all ready for immediate delivery, and at most moderate prices. A Comfortable Easy Chair is always an acceptable present.

TURKEY CARPETS

FINE QUALITIES

MAPLE & CO wish to direct special attention to some very choice Turkey Carpets now on show, remarkable both for their exceptionally fine quality and purity of colouring—many being exact reproductions of the most beautiful specimens of XVII. century art.

NEZOOM CARPETS

NEZOOM CARPETS

MAPLE & CO.'s NEZOOM CARPETS (Registered) are now on show, in all the new patterns and colourings. These carpets, being of the finest quality, and made entirely without seam or join, will wear admirably, and all waste in matching is avoided. List of Sizes post-free

Royal Amateur Photographers.

THE STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY

H.M. THE QUEEN.

H.R.H. The Princess of Wales

H.R.H. Princess Henry of Battenberg

H.R.H. Prince Henry of Battenberg

H.R.H. The Duke of Connaught

H.R.H. Princess Henry of Prussia

H.R.H. The Prince of Naples

H.R.H. Prince Damrong of Siam.

H.R.H. Prince Sanpasadi of Siam

H.R.H. Prince Rabi of Siam.

H.H.H. Prince Christian Victor.

H.S.H. Princess Catherine Yourievsky.

H.S.H. Prince Boris Czetwertynski.

H.E. The Governor-General of India.

Etc., etc., etc.

AS USED BY H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES

PRICES, COMPLETE WITH 2 LENSES AND 3 SLIDES.

To take pictures

	£ s. d.
5 × 4 ...	15 15 0
6½ × 4¼	25 0 0
7½ × 5	26 12 0
8½ × 6½	35 0 0

FREE LESSONS IN PHOTOGRAPHY

ARE GIVEN BY THE

Stereoscopic Company,

106 & 108, Regent-st. W

AND

54 CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

200 p.p. List Free by Post for Seven Stamps.

PURE IRISH

LINEN SHIRTS

Tailor-Made Direct from Ireland.

Save 30 per Cent.

Made of the most durable Long Cloth, and fitted with the finest Linen Ireland can produce.

MADE TO MEASURE.

FIT AND STYLE GUARANTEED IN THE LATEST FASHION.

Half-a-dozen Pure Irish bespoke Shirts, securely packed, delivered free to any address in the Kingdom for 33/-, 39/-, or 45/-. Foreign Postage Extra.

Sample Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 5/6, 6/6, or 7/6.

Dress Shirts with fine Irish Linen Fittings, Six for 39/-, delivered free. A Sample Dress Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 6/6.

Old Shirts re-fitted with New Irish Linen Fronts, Cuffs, and Neck-bands for 2/3 and 2/9 each. Returned Carriage Free. Coloured Shirts, best quality. French Cambric 30/-, Oxford Cloth 33/- per half-dozen. Patterns Free. Four-fold Irish Linen Collars, best quality, 7/6 per dozen. General Catalogue post free.

For Measure, send size of Collar, Chest, and Height, or an old shirt.

TAAFFE & COLDWELL,

Army Shirt Tailors, 81, Grafton St., Dublin.

Pearsall's Washing Linens,

(British Made).

For Dresses, Blouses and Costumes. In Butcher Blues, Pink, Pale Green, &c., all of which will Wash. Sold by leading West-End Drapers. 'Pearsall's' on every yard.

TO CONNOISSEURS.

ST. EMILION - - - - CLARET - - - - 18/- per dozen.
MEDOC - - - - - - CLARET - - - - 15/6 per dozen.
ST. GEORGE'S - - - CLARET - - - - 13/- per dozen.
Price List of other CHATEAU CLARETS, from 21/- to 74/- per dozen posted on application. LE MONNIER & CO., JERSEY.
CARRIAGE AND DUTY PAID.

LADIES AND CHILDREN

Should never wear anything next to the skin but

BARKER & MOODY'S UNSHRINKABLE FLANNELS.

Unrivalled for Shirts, Pyjamas, Costumes, Undervests, Combinations, Night-dresses, and all Children's Garments. Of all Drapers, or write to the Proprietors, BARKER & MOODY, PERSEVERANCE MILLS, LEEDS, for name of nearest agent. CAUTION. The initials B & M. are printed on every 5 yds.

SPECIALITÉ:—THICK LEGS & THIN FEET.

A Want Long Felt, met at Last.

GOLF, SHOOTING, and CYCLING

STOCKINGS!

HOMEKNIT.
Free from all Seams.

Made of pure long staple Scotch Wool, full length, broad ribs, double heels and toes, most comfortable in wear, guaranteed to give satisfaction.

Colours: Navy Blue, Black, Light and Dark Grey, Heathers, and Fancy Mixtures.

ALL SIZES—1/9, 2/3, 3/6.

Specialité:

THICK LEGS and THIN FEET, 2/6, 3/6.

THE HIGHLAND CHECK,
(As Illustration.)

Hand-Knitted, for Cycling, Golf, or Shooting, 3/6 & 4/6
Thick legs and thin feet 5/6
Postage, 3d. per pair; 2 pairs, 4½d.

Terms: Strictly Cash with Order

A. W. GAMAGE,

126, 127, 128, 129, HOLBORN, E.C.

REAL GERMAN HOLLOW GROUND

KROPP RAZOR

NEVER REQUIRE GRINDING.

Black Handle .. 5/6 | A Pair, Ivory Handles, in Rus. Leather Case, 21/- | Duplex Strop 7/6
Ivory Handle .. 7/6 | | Kropp's Strop Paste, 6d.

From all Dealers.—Wholesale: OSBORNE, GARRETT, & CO., LONDON, W.

£30,000 of the Capital has been already subscribed in Paris.

The List will be opened at 10 o'clock a.m. on TUESDAY, JULY 25th, 1893, and close on THURSDAY, 27th, at or before 3 o'clock p.m. for Town or Country, and the undermentioned Bankers are authorised to receive Subscriptions.

THE DISTRICT MESSENGER COMPANY OF PARIS, LIMITED.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890.

CAPITAL, 200,000, divided into 112,000 Seven per cent. Preference Shares of £1 each, taking precedence as to Revenue and Capital; 80,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each; and 400 Founders' Shares of £20 each.

Out of the profits of each year, there will first be paid a dividend of 7 per cent. on the Preference Shares, and next a divident of 7 per cent. on the Ordinary Shares. Such profits will next be applied in payment of a further dividend of 3 per cent. on the Preference and Ordinary Shares pari passu. Subject thereto, and to the provisions with regard to a Reserve Fund mentioned below, the remainder of the profits of each year will belong as to one-fourth to the holders of the Preference Shares, as to three-fourth to the holders of the Ordinary Shares, and as to the remaining one-half to the holders of the Founders' Shares.

The Founders' Shares will not therefore participate in the profits of any year until a dividend of 10 per cent. per annum has been paid on the amounts paid up on the Preference and Ordinary Shares for the time being issued, and until, moreover, such appropriation as the Directors think fit, but not exceeding 20 per cent. of the available net profits of the year, has been made to the Reserve Fund. Subject to these provisions, the Founders' Shares will be entitled to one-half the surplus profits. The whole of the Founders' Shares will be issued to the Vendor as fully paid up in part payment of the purchase consideration.

Subscriptions are now invited for £112,000 in 112,000 Seven per cent. Preference Shares of £1 each, and £40,000 in 40,000 Ordinary Shares of £1 each, and also (on account of the Vendor) 200 Founders' Shares of £20 each. The Preference and Ordinary Shares are payable 2s. 6d. per Share on Application; 5s. per Share on Allotment; 5s. the 31st of August, 1893; and the Balance as required, in Calls not exceeding 2s. 6d. per Share, with at least One Month's interval between each Call. The Founders' Shares are payable as follows:—£2 10s. per Share on Application, £7 10s. on Allotment, and the balance on the 31st August, 1893. Each Applicant for a Founder's Share must apply for 200 Preference or Ordinary Shares, or the Founder's Share will not be allotted.

DIRECTORS.

George Bush, Esq. (Director District Messenger Service and News Company, Limited).
Monsieur Cicero Brown (Messieurs C. Brown, Corblet, & Co., Bankers, Havre).
Aubrey Coventry, Esq., 8, Walton-street, London, S.W.
Campbell Praed, Esq. (Director District Messenger Service and News Company, Limited).
Herbert Sartoris, Esq., J.P., Kettering.
Joseph D. Crawford, Esq., M.D., F.R.C.S., Liverpool.
George Espec J. Manners, Esq. (Director District Messenger Service and News Company, Limited).
Charles T. Russell, Esq. (General Manager of the District Messenger Service and News Company, Limited), Managing Director.

BANKERS:—Lloyds Bank, Limited, 189, Fleet-street, London, and their Agents The Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Co., Limited, Liverpool and Manchester, and The National Bank of Scotland, Glasgow and Edinburgh; Messrs. Munroe & Co., 7, Rue Scribe, Paris; Messrs. Cicero, Brown, Corblet, & Co., Havre.

BROKERS:—Messrs. Bourke, Sandys, & Co., 7, Austin Friars, London; Messrs. Mocatta & Browne, 17, Sweeting-street, Liverpool.

SOLICITORS—Messrs. Ashurst, Morris, Crisp, & Co., London; Messrs. Simpson, North, & Co., Liverpool.

AUDITORS—Messrs. Turquand, Youngs, Weise, & Clarke.

SECRETARY (pro tem.)—Mr. George Macmuldrow.

OFFICES—East India Chambers, 23, Leadenhall-street, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

For twenty years in the large cities of the United States, and for the past two years in London, there have been established District Messenger Companies for furnishing to the public, as they may be required, uniformed and responsible messengers, ready to perform any business errand, or service of dispatch, at a printed tariff rate; the messengers being summoned to the house, club, hotel, or business establishment by means of Electric Call-Boxes connected by wire with the nearest District Office of the Company. The same Electric Call-Box also enables the subscriber to instantly notify the District Office if the assistance of the police or fire-brigade is required, or send for his physician in case of need. The facilities and advantages offered by these Companies are so great, and so highly appreciated by the public, that, the Directors believe, they become prosperous financially wherever fully established, and earn handsome profits on the capital invested.

It is now proposed to introduce this system into France by organizing a Parent Company, which will establish the system fully in Paris, and thereafter extend the system to other towns by organizing Subsidiary Companies. In all parts of Paris there are a large number of people who would be glad, for a small annual payment, to know that they can have a messenger at their door at five minutes' notice, day or night, or can have the police or fire departments, or their doctor instantly notified if required. It is the Company's intention to follow the same general system as in New York and London, and to that end it will acquire the whole of the shares (except 90 shares held by the Directors as their qualification) in a French Société Anonyme, which has been formed for the purpose of introducing the system into Paris. The Company will also acquire the Letters Patent for France for the Electrical Messenger Call-Box granted to Charles Tweed Russell on the 9th July, 1892.

The success of District Messenger Companies in the United States, where the system has long been in use, is fully corroborated by the rapid progress and success achieved by the District Messenger Company of London, which has been in active operation about two years, and now working 27 offices. The Directors, on account of the rapid extension of the business, have credited all the earnings to December 31st, 1892, to Construction Account. Twelve offices of the London Company, with an average of 692 Call-Boxes (each office being capable of working 2,500 Boxes), show earnings sufficient to pay the entire working expenses of the Company, including Debenture Interest, and the returns show that when the remaining 15 offices which are now opened and working an average of 200 Boxes, are equipped to 600 Boxes each, the Company will pay and maintain large dividends, as the Company is already earning good profits. From data obtained from the treasurer of a single Company in the United States for the years of 1887, 1888, 1889, an average annual net profit for three years is shown of over 34 per cent. as per the following table:—

Year.	Revenue.	Expenses.	Net Profits.	% on Capital.
	$ £	$ £	$ £
1887	202,256·28 = 52,451	169,303.45 = 33,861	92,952·83 = 18,590	30·98
1888	281,734·20 = 56,347	178,529.13 = 35,706	103,295·07 = 20,641	34·30
1889	305,632·80 = 61,126	189,054·81 = 37,811	116,577·99 = 23,315	38·85

From information received, from a reliable source, the profits of this Company have steadily increased since 1889.

The great majority of the leading Cafés, Hotels, Clubs, Theatres, and a large number of prominent business houses have signified their intention to have Call-Boxes installed as soon as the Company can supply them.

For the important post of Managing Director the Company have secured for two years the valuable services of Mr. Chas. T. Russell, who, as General Manager, has so successfully developed the business of District Messenger Service and News Company in London. The Directors have unanimously agreed to waive all fees (except £500 a year amongst them) till a dividend has been paid to the Shareholders of at least Seven per cent. on the Preference and Ordinary Shares.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained at the Offices of the Company or of the Bankers, Brokers, and Solicitors.

LONDON, July 24th, 1893.

ANNA RUPPERT'S

COMPLETE Establishment for Natural Beauty includes MOST ARTISTIC MANICURING, 4s. 6d. SKILFUL CHIROPODY. Full line of Toilet Articles and Manicure Cases complete. New American LONG WAISTED CORSET, 12s. 6d. None better sold. RUPPERT'S DYSPEPSIA CURE and LIVER REGULATOR. Best article ever sold, Vegetable, 4s. 6d.; and the only RELIABLE SKIN TONIC on the market. Does not bleach or whitewash, tones, cleanses, and invigorates. Don't forget, there is only one CELEBRATED LECTURESS, one ANNA RUPPERT, who has given her life to this branch. Send 4d. for her new and Illustrated Book of Beauty—valuable hints. SKIN TONIC, perfectly harmless. Price, 10s. 6d.; three bottles, 25s. Sent all over the world. All matters sacred. Correspondence cheerfully solicited. No charge for advice, either in person or by letter. Don't forget THE ONLY

MRS. ANNA RUPPERT,

Celebrated American Lecturess and Complexion Specialist, in person at

89, Regent Street, London, W.

Branches where all goods are sold and advice freely given:—124, Western-road, BRIGHTON; 33, Shandwick place, EDINBURGH; 74, Grafton-street, DUBLIN; 5, Exchange-street, MANCHESTER; Clarence Chambers, Corporation-street, BIRMINGHAM; 66, Marland-place, SOUTHAMPTON; 17, Rue de la Paix, PARIS, BERLIN, VIENNA, MADRID, BARCELONA, CALCUTTA, SYDNEY, &c.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?

PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangements and bad blood, it has been pronounced by medical men of high authority as most efficacious.

"I use the Aerated Pitkeathly largely, and value it."—Dr. MATTHEWS DUNCAN.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

TOO FAT. Dr. GORDON'S Elegant Pills cure STOUTNESS, rapidly and certainly. State height, weight, and send 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., or 11s. to DR. GORDON, 24, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to

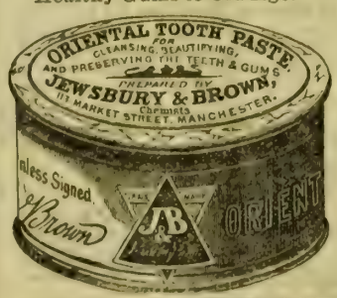
FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

JEWSBURY & BROWN'S

White, Sound Teeth,
Healthy Gums to Old Age.

Oriental Tooth Paste.



CAUTION.—The only genuine is JEWSBURY & BROWN'S.

Pots 1/6 and 2/6. All Chemists.

60 YEARS IN USE.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week: acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.

Botanic Medicine Co., 3, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

ANÆMIA

Or Bloodlessness.

DEEKS' ANÆMIA PILLS.

Blood Producing. Tonic. Non Constipating.

IN BOTTLES OF ALL CHEMISTS. Half course, 4s. 6d.; whole course, 9s.; or send postal order to W. THOS. DEEKS, Chemist, Shanklin, Isle of Wight.

LONDON, EDINBURGH, AND GLASGOW ASSURANCE COMPANY, LTD.

CHIEF OFFICE:
INSURANCE BUILDINGS, FARRINGDON ST., LONDON, E.C.

Abstract of Twelfth Annual Report.

THE Directors now submit their Report, together with the Accounts and Balance Sheet, for the year ending 31st December, 1892.

CAPITAL.

During the year the Subscribed Capital has been increased from £375,755 to £395,113, and the Uncalled Capital from £167,996 to £182,353.

NEW BUSINESS.

The number of new Ordinary Life Proposals received was 1,787, for the Assurance of £170,433, of which 117 Proposals for £14,800 were declined, and 1,204 Policies, assuring £125,363 were issued. The remaining Proposals were either not proceeded with or were under consideration at the close of the year.

In the Industrial Department 232,830 new Policies were issued during the year.

In the Accident Department 1,178 new Policies were issued.

PREMIUM INCOME.

The Premium Income for the year amounted to £232,724 3s. 10½d.

The restrictions imposed on the acquisition of new business of a certain class, and in certain districts ascertained to be unprofitable, and the maturing of a considerable number of Endowments during the past two years, the premiums on which consequently ceased, have necessarily resulted in a reduction in the gross premium income. Notwithstanding this, and excluding Endowments, the net cash receipts in respect of premiums and the gross profit on the entire business of the Company have been fully maintained.

CLAIMS.

The Company has, during 1892, paid Claims and Grants to the amount of £120,269 4s. 11d.

This brings up the total amount of Claims and Grants paid by the Company to £625,318 4s. 4½d.

ASSURANCE FUNDS.

The Assurance Funds on 31st December last were as follows:

Life Assurance Fund–Participating		£37,734	8	10
Ditto Non-Participating		33,597	10	3½
		£71,331	19	1½
Accident Assurance Fund		5,297	4	0
Health ditto		1,640	18	9½
		£78,270	1	11

The Actuary reports that, having regard to the very large reduction of the Endowment liabilities—£33,233 6s. 10d.—during the last two years, he is satisfied that the Assurance Funds—£78,270 1s. 11d.—are an adequate reserve for the Policy liabilities of the Company.

GENERAL.

Attention is called to the fact that a very considerable reduction—£15,354 16s. 10½d.—in the expenditure was effected during the year.

The net addition to the capitalised expenditure of the Company has been steadily reduced each successive year for the last three years, the reduction in the amount added during 1892 being the largest on record.

The Directors are glad to be able to report that, notwithstanding the adverse circumstances through which the Company has had to pass during the last ten months, the estimate of income and expenditure prepared by the Actuary in September last has been fully justified by the actual results.

INSURANCE BUILDINGS, FARRINGDON-STREET, E.C., LONDON,
4th July, 1893.

Directors and Officers.

Board of Directors.

S. BARCLAY HEWARD, Esq., Chairman, 96, Ashley-gardens, S.W.
WILLIAM ABRAHAM, Esq., M.P. (Rhondda), Pentre, near Pontypridd.
MAJOR-GENERAL ERNEST A. BERGER, 61, Gordon-road, Ealing, W.
SAMUEL HARRIS BOOTH, D.D., 57, St. John's-park, N.
WILFRED A. BOWSER, Esq., "Haslemere," Stamford Hill, N.
FREDERICK G. CASH, Esq., 9, Northolme-road, Highbury Park, N.
SIR JOHN NEILSON CUTHBERTSON, 29, Bath-street, and 25, Blythswood-square, Glasgow.
JOHN H. DICKSON OF CORSTORPHINE, Esq., Dabton, Thornhill, N.B.
ROBERT M. MOIR, Esq., 1, St. Swithin's-lane, E.C.
C. WEEDING SKINNER, Esq., Theydon Bois, Essex.

Manager of Industrial Branch.—THOS. NEILL.
Secretary.—T. V. COWLING.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL LIVE FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803. HEAD OFFICE: 1, Old Broad-street, E.C. Fire Premiums, £1,000,000. Capital, £1,000,000. Life Premiums, £200,000. Life Funds, £1,000,000. Bonuses Paid, £1,000,000. Claims Paid, £1,000,000. Chairman, The Right Hon. LORD ROTHSCHILD. Deputy-Chairman, SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart., M.P. Manager, H. E. MORLAND. Secretary, F. B. MARTIN.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, 64, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C. General Accidents. Railway Accidents. Personal Injuries. Death by Accident. CHARLES SEE, Manager.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
ESTABLISHED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.
(FIRE.)

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.
EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.
Invested Funds, £16,000,000.
The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

ACCIDENTS OF TRAVEL
AND ALL OTHER ACCIDENTS INSURED AGAINST BY
The Railway Passengers' Assurance Company,
THE OLDEST AND LARGEST COMPANY PROVIDING FOR
ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. W. D. MASSY, A. VIAN, } Secs.

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.
HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.
BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.
DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.
FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.
COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.
£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.
NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.
JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.
No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
[ESTABLISHED 1867.]
ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,
From £30 to £5,000,
To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their NOTE OF HAND ALONE.
ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.
Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.
NO SURETIES REQUIRED.
Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

MILLIONS DRINK IT DAILY!!

LIPTON'S DELICIOUS TEA.

LARGEST SALE IN THE WORLD.

DIRECT FROM THE TEA GARDENS TO THE TEAPOT.

NO MIDDLEMEN'S PROFITS TO PAY.

WHY PAY 2/- to 3/6 per lb. for TEA, when at LIPTON'S you can buy

THE FINEST THE WORLD PRODUCES

No Higher Price. At 1/7 per lb. No Higher Price.

RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT.

These Teas have a more exquisite aroma and delicious Flavour than any Tea ever introduced into Britain.

1/- and 1/4 per lb.

They have undoubtedly reached a pinnacle of success never before attained by any Tea in the World.

OVER ONE MILLION PACKETS SOLD WEEKLY IN GREAT BRITAIN ALONE, AND THE SALE INCREASING BY LEAPS AND BOUNDS ALL THE TIME.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Delivered carriage paid for an extra 1d. per lb. to any address in Great Britain on orders of 5 lbs. and upwards.

Samples sent free on application. A GUARANTEE.—Money returned in full if Tea does not give perfect satisfaction in every way.

LIPTON, Tea and Coffee Planter, CEYLON. The Largest Tea, Coffee, and Provision Dealer in the World.

Sole Proprietor of the following celebrated Tea and Coffee Estates in Ceylon:—Dambatenne, Laymastotte, Moncrakande, Mahadambatenne, Mousakelle, Pooprassie, Hanagalla, and Gigrancella, which cover Thousands of Acres of the best TEA and COFFEE LAND in CEYLON.

Ceylon Tea and Coffee Shipping Warehouses:—Maddema Mills, Cinnamon Gardens, Colombo. Ceylon Offices:—Upper Chatham-street, Colombo.
Indian Tea Shipping Warehouses and Export Stores:—Hare-street, Strand, Calcutta. Indian Offices:—Dalhousie-square, Calcutta.

GENERAL OFFICES: BATH STREET, CITY ROAD, LONDON, E.C. Branches and Agencies throughout the World.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN said:—

"You can fool some people all the time, you can fool all the people some times, you can't fool all the people all the time."

All the people cannot detect alum in baking powder, starch in infant foods, salicylic acid in beer, oleo-margarine in butter, or 30 to 40 per cent. of resin, sugar (not to speak of bad fats used) &c., in soaps. Soapmakers know this, and the one who talks longest and strongest hopes to fool the most people all the time.

Now there is no going beyond chemical tests. "VINOLIA" SOAP is probably the only one you ever used of which the analysis is published. It is pure, cleansing, and agreeable, but it will not restore the bloom of youth to the skin at four o'clock in life's afternoon. It is safe and efficient—that is all. What more do you want?

"Vinolia" Soap—(for Delicate, Sensitive Skins)—Premier 4d., Floral 6d., Balsamic 8d., Toilet 10d., and Vestal 2/6 per tablet.

"Vinolia" Cream—(for Itching, Face Spots, &c.)—1/1½, 1/9 per box.

"Vinolia" Powder—(for Redness, Roughness, &c.)—1/-, 1/9 per box.

BLONDEAU ET CIE., RYLAND ROAD, LONDON, N.W.

OUR PUZZLES.

RULES.

1. The sum of £2. 2s. will be given every week for the best EPIGRAM, CONUNDRUM, LIPOGRAM, BOUTS RIMÉS, or whatever the announced subject of the competition for the week may be.

2. The Puzzle Editor reserves the right, however, of dividing the above sum between two or more competitors, or of withholding the prize, should exceptional circumstances render such a course desirable.

3. The decision and award of the Puzzle Editor must be considered final and irrevocable, and, for obvious reasons, no appeal from his critical judgments can be entertained.

4. In every instance the prize will be given in money, subject to no condition whatever, except the publication of the winner's real name and address in this journal.

5. Competitors will be allowed eleven days for the composition and despatch of their efforts; but all such communications must, at the latest, be received at the TRUTH OFFICE by the first post on the morning of the second Monday succeeding the publication of the subject for competition.

6. Not more than one Prize will be given a Quarter to the same competitor.

7. ALL NEW CONTRIBUTORS ARE REQUIRED TO FORWARD WITH THEIR FIRST ANSWERS THEIR REAL NAMES AND ADDRESSES FOR REGISTRATION; such names and addresses will not be published except in the case of Prize-winners.

8. The nom-de-plume chosen by competitors should not exceed 12, and must under no circumstances consist of more than 14, letters.

9. COMPETITORS MUST ON NO ACCOUNT CHANGE THE NOMS-DE-PLUME THEY HAVE ONCE ASSUMED.

10. On the announcement of the Prize-winner's nom-de-plume, the successful competitor must write and make formal application for the Prize, stating the address to which the cheque must be sent. Any competitor failing to do so within three months of winning the Prize will forfeit all claim to the same.

11. No communications can be received on post-cards, by telegraph, or by hand. They must all be sent by the time named above. All post letters addressed—

PUZZLE EDITOR OF "TRUTH," CARTERET-STREET, QUEEN ANNE'S-GATE, S.W.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 757.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for

THE BEST PROSE PARODY, NOT TO EXCEED THIRTY LINES IN LENGTH, OF THE STYLE OF MR. RUDYARD KIPLING.

For the purposes of calculation competitors may reckon that each of the lines used by them is to consist on an average of eight words. Thus, in case thirty lines are used, the total number of words must not exceed 240. It is not necessary that the parody should be of any particular sketch or story by Mr. Kipling—competitors are required rather to as far as possible parody the general style of his well-known compositions. They are at liberty, also, to compose their parodies as though they were fragmentary parts of some superstitious tale by the author of "Soldiers Three." All parodies must reach me by the morning of Monday, August 7.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 753.

The Prize for the best In Memoriam Stanza, in rhymed or blank verse, on those who perished in the Victoria has been awarded to IVANHOE, whose lines are printed below:—

PRIZE STANZA.

The nation mourns, and tears of grief are shed
For those above whose head Death's banners wave,
They calmly sleep upon their billowy bed—
The sea their cradle, kingdom, and their grave.

But joy is rainbowed in the storm of tears;
They died like men, and in their fate's sad story
We read the truth which shall outlive the years—
"The path of duty is the way to glory."

Ivanhoe.

I have also selected for special commendation the verses sent by Mrs. Buchanan, Collis, Stanchion, Moonlighter, Albericus, Almaviva, Lunatic, Jo, Baritone, Vox, Capitan, and Amator Veri.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name and the address of T. O. R., winner of a half of Prize No. 751, are Herbert E. Tayler, Esq., the College, Winchester.

 The real name and the address of MARS, winner of a half of Prize No. 751, are T. Ward, Esq., 463, Coldharbour-lane, Brixton, S.W.

MERRY THOUGHT.—By all means.

J. W. T.—I hardly see how your suggestion can be turned to practical account. Many thanks for it, however, all the same.

RUGELEY and E. M. C.—Your Epigraphs arrived too late to be printed with the rest.

HOPE.—I am sorry to say that your verses also came to hand too late for publication.

MRS. E. CULVERHOUSE.—Many thanks for your ingeniously-arranged lawn tennis Dialogue. It is most interesting, and I only regret that I have been unable to spare space to publish it.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 754.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

QUOTATIONS TENDING TO SHOW THAT SHAKESPEARE HAD AN ANTICIPATORY KNOWLEDGE OF LAWN-TENNIS.

To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand is necessary. A Winter's Tale, act iv., sc. 3.—Hopetoun.

I have lost my teeth in your service. As You Like It, act i., sc. 1.—Gradatim.

Best men are moulded out of faults. Measure for Measure, act v., sc. 1.—E. C. L.

They are beaten, sir, and our "advantage" serves for a fair victory Antony and Cleopatra, act iv., sc. 7.—C. A. Gladstone, Bonaccord, Scotland Yard.

Ay, so you serve us, till we serve you. All's Well that Ends Well, act iv., sc. 2.—Sprats.

My hand will "serve" the turn. Titus Andronicus, act 3, sc. 1. Our sport shall be to take what they mistake. Midsummer-Night's Dream, act v., sc. 1.—Shlowmow.

Sir, I think you have heard of my poor services. Winter's Tale, act iv., sc. 3.—Ken.

Every one's fault seeming monstrous, till his fellow fault came to match it. As You Like It, act iii,, sc. 2.—Heurteloup.

And all the men and women merely players. As You Like It.—Noel.

Love will creep in service where it cannot go. Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iv., sc. 2.—Merle.

THE COMPLAINT OF A TENNIS-BALL.

You spurn me hence, and he will spurn me hither:
If I last in this service, you must case me in leather.
Comedy of Errors, act ii., sc. 4.—Gentle.

Thy fault's thus manifested, which, though thou would'st deny, denies thee vantage. Measure for Measure, act v., sc. 1.—Boiled Rice.

Where is the great Alcides of the field,
. . . . . .
. . . . . .
Lord Cromwell of Wingfield?
1 Henry VI., act iv., sc. 7.
—Bobus.

Look, when I serve him so, he takes it ill. Comedy of Errors, act ii., sc. 1, line 12.

Please your highness, posts,*
. . . . . are come
An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion,
. . . . . are both .
Hasting to the court.
Winter's Tale, near the end of act ii.—Lunatic.
* Probably Cyprus lawn-tennis poles.

1. The next advantage will we take throughly. The Tempest, act iii., sc. 3. 2. This maid will not serve your turn, sir. This maid will serve my turn, sir. Love's Labours Lost, act i., sc. 1. 3. Some falls are means the happier to arise. Cymbeline, act iv., sc. 2. 4. Things out of hope are compassed oft by venturing. Venus and Adonis, line 567.—Bluebell.

The Queen o' the sky . . . . Bids thee leave these; and with her sovereign grace, Here on this grass plot, in this very place To come and sport. The Tempest, act iv., sc. 1. He knows the game; how true he keeps the wind! 3 Henry VI., act iii., sc. 4.—Nodding Violet.

1. Mόy shall not serve; I will have forty. Henry V., act iv., sc. 4. 2. You great fellow, stand close up. Henry VIII., act v., sc. 3. 3. I have enough to serve mine own turn; serve your turn, sir. Love's Labours Lost, act i., sc. 1. 4. He hath refused it in the open court. Merchant of Venice, act iv., sc. 1.—C. F. Reid.

All men make faults. Sonnet 35.—Ada.

1. I'll follow him to serve my turn upon him. Othello, act i., sc. 1. 2. Thou might'st have sooner got another service. Timon of Athens, act iv., sc. 3. 3. What do you prate of service? Coriolanus, act iii., sc. 3. 4. What faults he made before the last. Coriolanus, act v., sc. 5.—Cani.

We cannot fight for love as men may do. Midsummer-Night's Dream, act ii., sc. 2.—Janet.

Clown: Sir, I have not much skill in grass. Lafen: Whither dost thou profess thyself—a knave or a fool? Clown: A fool, sir, at a woman's service. All's Well, act iv., sc. 5. To thee a woman's services are due. King Lear, act iv., sc. 2.—Whig.

Then angels, thy fault's thus manifested; which, though thou would'st deny, denies thee vantage. Measure for Measure, act v., sc. 1.—Stanchion.

And, oftentimes, excusing of a fault doth make the fault worse by the excuse. King John, act iv., sc. 2. To win this easy match, played for a crown, and shall I now give o'er the yielded set? King John, act v., sc. 2.—Cani.

Well bandied both: a set of wit well played. Love's Labours Lost, act v., sc. 2.—Mayson.

Our court you know, Love's Labour Lost, act i., sc. 1: You shall have forty, sir. Henry IV., part 2, act iii., sc. 2: forty let it be. Henry IV., part 1, act iv., sc. 1: Let it be thy first service. Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 5: I'll serve, Twelfth Night, act i., sc. 2: This service is not service. Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 3: He had some feeling of the sport. He knew the service, Measure for Measure, act iii., sc. 2: It is not in the court As You Like It, act iii., sc. 1: A beastly fault and then another fault, Merry Wives of Windsor, act v., sc. 5: So he served the second and so the third, As You Like It, act. i., sc. 2: I have made no fault. Antony and Cleopatra, act ii., sc. 5: The game Romeo and Juliet, act i., sc. 4: A fine volley. Two Gentlemen of Verona, act ii., sc. 3: Quick blows, Timon of Athens, act i., sc. 1: I must serve my turn. Timon of Athens, act ii., sc. 1: Play, Twelfth Night, act i., sc. 1: Let there be the same net. Much Ado about Nothing, act ii., sc. 3: So you serve us till we serve you. All's Well that Ends Well, act iv., sc. 1: I will have forty, Henry V., act iv., sc. 4: You are too hard for me. Love's Labour Lost, act ii., sc. 1: With two pitch balls, Love's Labour Lost, act iii., sc. 1: That's for advantage, All's Well that Ends Well, act i., sc. 1: His service done, Timon of Athens, act iii., sc. 5: Advantage to yourself, Measure for Measure, act iv., sc. 1: He brags his service as if he were of note, Cymbeline, act iv., sc. 3: Thou canst not hit it, my good man, Love's Labour Lost, act iv., sc. 1: 'Tis a good form, Timon of Athens, act i., sc. 1: In, in, Coriolanus, act iv., sc. 5: Some single vantages you took, Timon of Athens, act ii., sc. 2: Which is the side I must go? King John, act iii., sc. 1: Strong sides can volley. Antony and Cleopatra, act ii., sc. 7: Thirty, All's Well that Ends Well, act iv., sc. 1: Deuce, Love's Labour Lost, act i., sc. 2: Margaret must learn to serve, 3 Henry VI., act iii., sc. 3: Two faults, Madonna, Twelfth Night, act i., sc. 5: I do think she's thirty. Antony and Cleopatra, act iii., sc. 3: Why these balls bound, All's Well that Ends Well, act ii., sc. 3: The faith they have in tennis and tall stockings, Henry VIII., act i., sc. 3: You must have but four, Henry IV., part 2, act iii., sc. 2: Out of the court, Winter's Tale, act iv., sc. 3: If our betters play at that game we must not dare imitate them, Timon of Athens, act i., sc. 2: I thought it was a fault, Measure for Measure, act v., sc. 1: Is it not well served in? Romeo and Juliet, act ii., sc. 4: Love set, Merry Wives of Windsor, act v., sc. 3: Incessant services, King Henry V., act ii., sc. 2: Make a swift return, Measure for Measure, act iv., sc. 3: Won the set, Titus Andronicus, act v., sc. 1: Set all, The Tempest, act i., sc. 2: We four, Love's Labour Lost, act v., sc. 2: Wilt thou serve, Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 5: Your last service, The Tempest, act iv., sc. 1: A double set, Othello, act ii., sc. 3: That is a fault, Othello, act iii., sc. 4: That the tennis-court keeper knows, Henry IV., part 2, act ii., sc. 2: Thou keepest the racket here, Henry IV., part 2, act ii., sc. 2: Serve not for his vantage, Antony and Cleopatra, act iii., sc. 7: There falling out at tennis, Hamlet, act ii., sc. 1: I do not like your faults, Julius Cæsar, act iv., sc. 3: Players that offer service, Taming of the Shrew, induction, sc. 1: 'Tis a fault, As You Like It, act iii., sc. 2: Then had you indeed a cut, Antony and Cleopatra, act i., sc. 2: Out, alas! Winter's Tale, act iv., sc. 4: Here on the grass in this very place to come and sport, The Tempest, act iv., sc. 1: This short grassed-green, The Tempest, act iv., sc. 1: That I may know the let, King Henry V., act v., sc. 2: Tennis balls, Much Ado about Nothing, act iii., sc. 2: And cuts, Much Ado about Nothing, act iii., sc. 4: Ready, Coriolanus, act iii., sc. 1: Say I play Coriolanus, act iii., sc. 2: On fair ground I could beat, Coriolanus, act iii., sc. 1: On which side, Coriolanus, act i., sc. 6: Partner, Coriolanus, act v., sc. 6: Your vantage, Coriolanus, act v., sc. 6: The game is up, Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 3: Their game, Love's Labour Lost, act iv., sc. 2: And set, Coriolanus, act iv., sc. 5.—Dora.

I'll have grounds More relative than this: the play's the thing. Hamlet (end of), act ii. sc. 2. That sets us all at odds . . . If you come slack of former services You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer. King Lear, act i., sc. 3.—Bushranger.

Falling out at tennis. Hamlet, act ii., sc. 2. The match is made. Taming of the Shrew, act iv., sc. 4. Lay our service freely at your feet. Hamlet, act ii., sc. 2. We must stand and play. Love's Labour Lost, act iv., sc. 1. The next advantage will we take. The Tempest, act iii., sc. 3. And the old ornament of his cheeks hath already stuffed tennis balls. Much Ado about Nothing, act iii., sc. 3. But that the tennis-court keeper knows better than I; for it is a low ebb with thee when thou keepest not racket there. Second part of King Henry IV., act ii., sc. 2.—Pickwick.

A man whom both the waters and the wind, In that vast tennis court, have made the ball For them to play upon. Pericles, act ii. sc. 1.—Babee Fox, E. Culverhouse.

Hot-spur: Forty let it be; My father and Glendower being both away. The powers of us may serve so great a day. 2 Henry IV., act iv., sc 3.—Thyrza.

If you come slack of former services You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer. King Lear, act i., sc. 3. Alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions (the lawn-tennis champion). Cymbeline, act iv., sc. 1. A summer's day will seem an hour but short Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport. Venus and Adonis.—Newnham.

Match with her that brings no 'vantages. Second part Henry VI., act ii., sc. 1. King: Welcome to the court. Princess: The roof of this court is too high to be yours. Love's Labour Lost, act ii., sc. 1.—Esperanza.

The difficulty in finding a true anticipation of lawn-tennis in Shakespeare's writings is that the poet was well acquainted with tennis, and frequently refers to it. When, however, in King Lear, act iv., sc. 2, he writes:—"To thee a woman's services are due," he must clearly intend a reference to the game in its later and more womanly form.—Chuckie.

Cry out for service, try many, all good, serve truly. Cymbeline, act iv., sc. 3. A beastly fault! and then another fault. Merry Wives, act v., sc. 5. Two faults, madonna. Twelfth Night, act i., sc. 5. Renouncing clean the faith they have in tennis and tall stockings. Henry VIII., act i., sc. 3. A man whom both the waters and the wind, In that vast tennis court hath made the ball for them to play upon. Pericles, act ii., sc. 1.—Lismore.

Love all. All's Well, act i., sc. 1, line 73. I would allow him odds. Richard II., act i., sc. 1, line 62. Tennis-balls, my liege. Henry V., act i. sc. 2, line 258. Upon his good returns. Timon of Athens, act iii., sc. 5, line 82. Services are all but accidents unpurposed. Antony and Cleopatra, act iv., sc. 14, line 83. Would I knew that stroke. Othello, act iv., sc. 1. Did you but know the art of the court. Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 4, line 45.—Malignant.

Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it, Thou canst not hit it, my good man. An I cannot, cannot, cannot, An I cannot, another can. Love's Labours Lost, act iv., sc. 1. I prithee, remember I have done thee worthy service. Tempest, act i., sc. 2. While idly I stood looking on, I found the effect of love in idleness. Taming of the Shrew, act i., sc. 1.—Henry.

Yet all shall be forgot, But he'll remember, with advantages What feats he did that day. King Henry V., act iv., sc. 3.—Almaviva.

I follow him to serve my turn. Othello, act i., sc. 2. With his next 'vantage. Cymbeline, act i., sc. 4.—Bramble.

King Henry: Tell him, he hath made a match with such a wrangler, That all the courts of France will be disturb'd With chaces. Henry V., act i., sc. 2.—Enigma, Tiger Jess.

King Henry: What treasure, uncle? Exe: Tennis-balls, my liege. King Henry: When we have matched our rackets to these balls, We will, in France, by God's grace, play . . . . . a set, That all the courts in France shall be disturbed. King Henry V., act i., sc. 2.—Caledonia, Pickwick, Influenza, Chancellor, Psittacus, Dido, Pluto, Bush-ranger, Bonaccord, Idler, Patent Tyres, Claudio, Max Murphy, JEM, Celia, La Flèche, M. E. W., Margit, Rusticus, Betty, Georges Lisle, Felsberg, The Ghost, Dora.

Shakespeare knew far more about lawn-tennis than Milton, for he even names the ex-champion in the following extract:—O place! O form! How often (dost thou) with thy case, thy habit Wrench awe (Renshaw). Measure for Measure, act ii., sc. 4. Shall I now give o'er the yielded set? King John, act v., sc. 2. Outside . . . . I will not return. Ibid. The inward service . . . . grows wide withal. Hamlet, act i., sc. 3. She will score your fault. Comedy of Errors, act i., sc. 2. She that would alter services with thee. Twelfth Night, act ii., sc. 5.—Ye Owle.

Bolingbroke: So far be mine, my most redoubted lord, As my true service shall deserve your love. King Richard: Well you deserve:—They well deserve to have That know the strong'st and surest way to get. Richard II., act iii., sc. 3.—Thyrza.

He bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs. King Henry V., act iii., sc. 7. (A note says this alludes to the bounding of tennis-balls stuffed with hair.)—Lovell.

There be some sports are painful, and their labour Delight in them sets off. The Tempest, act iii., sc. 1, lines 1 and 2.—Major.

Let it presage the ruin of your love, And be my vantage to exclaim on you. Merchant of Venice, act iii., sc. 2.—Bonita.

"Tennis-balls, my liege," in reply to King Henry's question, "What treasure, uncle?" King Henry V., ct i., sc. 2.—Aged Sixteen.

Was it Pim or Baddeley Shakespeare had in his mind's eye when he wrote:—As sure a card as ever won the set. Titus Andronicus, act v., sc. 1. Or, was he thinking of a tennis-ball when he makes Dromio of Ephesus say:—If I last in this service, you must case me in leather. Comedy of Errors, act iii., sc. 1. Or, of the interested onlooker at a game of tennis, for Iago's words are not to be trusted:—He'll watch the horologe a double set. Othello, act ii., sc. 3. What does Shakespeare mean by the following sentences? Surely they allude in a prophetic way to lawn-tennis:—Maidens call it love-in-idleness. Midsummer-Night's Dream, act ii., sc. 1. You know that love will creep in service. Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iv., sc. 2. All his faults observed, Set in a note-book. Julius Cæsar, act iv., sc. 3. (He evidently means a scoring-book.) The poorest service is repaid with thanks. Taming of Shrew, act iv., sc. 3. (Here he is ironical, of course.) For then he goes on to say à la Ignatius Donnelly:—This service is not service. Cymbeline, act iii., sc. 3. It is a fault that springeth from your eye. Comedy of Errors, act iii., sc. 2. The merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer. All's Well, act iii., sc. 6. She is served as I would serve a rat. Cymbeline, act v., scene 5. Lastly:—Nor sweeten talk, Nor play at subtle games. (Such as lawn-tennis, of course.)—Moonlighter.

Shakespeare evidently knew all about double cracks (Macbeth, act i., sc. 2) and champions (Richard II., act i., sc. 3) at tournaments (Two Gentleman of Verona, act i., sc. 3), where the lines (Cymbeline, act iv., sc. 1) of the tennis-court (2 Henry IV., act ii., sc. 2) are chalked forth (Tempest, act v., sc. 1) on this grass-plot (Tempest, act iv., sc. 1); and had heard the order given to draw up the net (Pericles, act ii., sc. 1) when the conspirators enter (Twelfth Night, act iv., sc. 2), bringing their rackets (Henry V., act i., sc. 2) and tennis-balls (Much Ado about Nothing, act ii., sc. 3). They remarked, then shall we have a match (All's Well that Ends Well, act v., sc. 3), a double set (Othello, act ii., sc. 3), I and my partner (Much Ado about Nothing, act iv., sc. 2); while one said, I must scratch (Midsummer-Night's Dream, act iii., sc. 2), and another, let me be umpire (1 Henry VI., act iv., sc. 1), and be the players ready? (Hamlet, act iii., sc. 2), then proceeded to score (Tempest, act v., sc. 1), love all (All's Well that Ends Well, act i., sc. 1), play (Twelfth Night, act i., sc. 1), fifteen (Taming of the Shrew, act ii., ind.), fault (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act iv., sc. 4), two faults (Twelfth Night, act i., sc. 5), thirty (Othello, act i., sc. 3), let (Henry V., act v., sc. 2), forty (Coriolanus, act i., sc. 3), outside (Timon of Athens, act i., sc. 1), deuce (Love's Labours Lost, act i., sc. 2), your vantage (Coriolanus, act v., sc. 5), game (Merry Wives of Windsor, act ii., sc. 3), love set (Merry Wives of Windsor, act v., sc. 5), one all (Measure for Measure, act v., sc. 1), one, two (Merry Wives of Windsor, act ii., sc. 3), two, three (Cymbeline, act ii., sc. 2). The spectators (Cymbeline, act v., sc. 4) at intervals were heard to say:—I thought it was a fault (Measure for Measure, act v., sc. 1), a fine volley (Two Gentlemen of Verona, act ii., sc. 4), lob (Midsummer-Night's Dream, act ii., sc. 1), good service (2 Henry IV., act i., sc. 2), well played (Love's Labours Lost, act v., sc. 2), a swift return (Measure for Measure, act iv., sc. 3), you'll win (Antony and Cleopatra, act ii., sc. 4).—Leaf Rule.

The faith they have in tennis. Henry VIII., sc. 3.—Jasper.

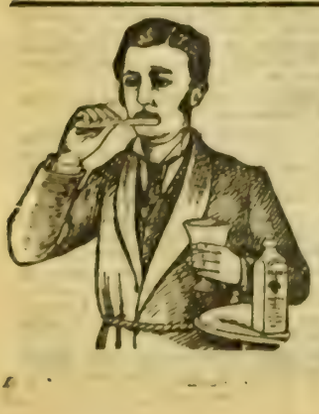
I have also received quotations for which I have been unable to find room, and which in many instances are similar to some of those published above, from Ivy Leaves, Mrs. E. Culverhouse, Caledonia, Helen G. Burton, Simla, Infelix, Patent Tyres, Bon Accord, Cestrian, Idler, Anceps, Felsberg, Ellart, Melton, Grafton, E. Bickerton, Spoons, Clara, Mrs. V. W., Mercy, and Throgmorton-street. It may prevent misunderstanding if I add that the answer published above which contain more than four lines, are only printed because it is thought they will be found interesting by many readers of TRUTH. The prize, it is obvious, from the conditions laid down in giving the puzzle, can only be awarded for some quotation what does not exceed the limit then stated. The P. E.

TAYLOR'S CIMOLITE

Is the only thoroughly harmless SKIN POWDER. Prepared by an experienced Chemist, and constantly prescribed by the most eminent Skin Doctors. Post free. Sent for 14 or 36 penny stamps. MOST INVALUABLE.

J. TAYLOR, Chemist, 13, Baker-street, London, W.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000." Tobacconists Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1860



AN AROMATIC FRAGRANCE

is imparted to the mouth by the use of Sozodont. It is beyond doubt the cleanest, purest, and best tooth wash ever offered to the public. No lady ever used Sozodont without approving of its cleansing and purifying properties, and the flattering testimonials that have been bestowed upon it by eminent Dentists speak volumes of praise for its merits.

SOZODONT

though efficient and powerful is absolutely harmless, for it contains neither mineral nor acid; it is wholly vegetable in its origin.

COCA WINE

—(ARMBRECHT.)—

THE NEW RESTORATIVE NERVE-TONIC of VOCAL, MENTAL, and PHYSICAL POWERS.

Assuages Thirst and Hunger and Promotes Digestion.

COCA.

"The Remedy, par excellence, against worry."—CORNING.

COCA.

"The tensor, par excellence, of the vocal chord."—Dr. FARIVAL.

COCA.

"Relieves the depression resulting from the deprival of stimulants."—WAUGH.

COCA.

"A powerful nervine tonic."—Lancet.

COCA.

"A mild tonic stimulant and restorative in muscular exhaustion, convalescence, or debility. It has been recommended to assist the victims of alcohol or morphia."—PROSSER JAMES.

For Sleeplessness it is superior to Opiates, Chloral, and Bromides, as there is positively no reaction.

COCA.

"Valuable remedy in sick headache."—(MIGRAINE.)

COCA.

"Useful in Phthisis and Wasting Diseases generally, and also in convalescence from acute maladies."—PROSSER JAMES.

COCA.

"It is a stimulant to the muscular and nervous systems."—BOUCHARDAT.

It prevents a too rapid waste of tissue, and it enables the consumer to go a long time without food.

COCA.

Dr. CHRISTISON says:—"Coca not only removes extreme fatigue, but also prevents it. Hunger and thirst are suspended, but eventually appetite and digestion are unaffected; further, that he found it had no effect upon the mental faculties except liberating them from the dulness and drowsiness of great bodily fatigue."

COCA WINE EXTRACT

For Travellers, 3/9 (100 doses), post-free.

COCA LOZENGES,

For Singers and Public Speakers, 1/9 post-free.

COCA WINE,

45/- per doz., carriage paid. Single Bottle, 4/- post-paid.

From all Stores, Wine Merchants, Chemists, or Grocers, or direct from

ARMBRECHT, NELSON, & CO., DUKE STREET, GROSVENOR SQUARE, LONDON, W.

PATRONISED BY H.I.M. THE EMPRESS OF GERMANY.

THE NOTED

"IPSWICH" POTTED MEATS.

Nothing can be better for the Yachting, Fishing, or Picnic Basket.

Sole Maker—R. SEAGER, IPSWICH.

Ask your Grocer.

Perfection! Regd. PRESS PIPE. Keble's Patent.

The Press Pipe. Charms of smoking without its evils. The pernicious nicotine, generated during combustion, Deposits on a Flat Nickel Pin. The smoke, purified, is dry, free, and fragrant to end. Withdrawal of mouthpiece to wipe Pin automatically clears the stem of foulness, and choking bottom of bowl with burnt wet tobacco is impossible.

Public and Private Testimonials unanimous in unqualified praise. If not at Tobacconists, Retail price 16

Mr. KEBLE, Gazette, Margate, will forward sample

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.

Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

HEATHMAN'S LADDERS

Are a wonderful convenience. They separate or form steps, or extend to varying heights, just as one's needs vary.

Height (closed).	Extend to	Price.
6 ft. 0 in.	10 ft. 6 in.	16s. 6d.
7 ft. 0 in.	12 ft. 0 in.	19s. 6d.
8 ft. 0 in.	14 ft. 0 in.	22s. 6d.
9 ft. 9 in.	17 ft. 0 in.	26s. 6d.

CARRIAGE PAID.

37, ENDELL STREET, LONDON, W.C.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON

Very agreeable to take.

A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR

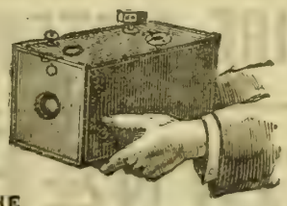
CONSTIPATION,

HÆMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.

Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.

E. GRILLON,
69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.

The Camera that takes the World!



THE

KODAK

No previous knowledge of Photography necessary.

"YOU PRESS THE BUTTON, WE DO THE REST,"

(Unless you prefer to do the rest yourself)

AND THE PICTURE IS FINISHED.

Price from £1 6s.

EASTMAN PHOTOGRAPHIC MATERIALS CO. LD., 115-117 OXFORD-ST., LONDON, W.

SEND FOR PRETTY, ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, POST FREE.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

WORLD'S FAIR route to Chicago.
JAPAN and CHINA.—Fastest, finest, and only twin-screw Royal Mail Steamers on Pacific Ocean leave Vancouver every three weeks.
AROUND the WORLD Trips for £125.
SUMMER TOURS through Canadian Lakes and "Rockies."
FREE FARMS and Cash Bonus for Settlers.

For Tickets and Free Guide Books, apply Passenger Department, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, KING WILLIAM STREET, LONDON, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow

The ÆOLIAN

is conceded by the WORLD'S BEST MUSICIANS to be without question

THE GREATEST MUSICAL INVENTION OF MODERN TIMES.

THIS Unique and Wonderful Instrument is not only adapted to the wants of the Trained Musician, but can also be played by Anyone AFTER A FEW DAYS' PRACTICE; so that every home can have, by means of the "ÆOLIAN," any piece of music ever written—from the simple Psalm to the most intricate Opera, Waltz, March, or Dance. The Musical Expression, or Tone Colour, can be varied entirely at the will of the player, the "ÆOLIAN" responding as promptly to any change of tempo, or degree of power, as a well-drilled Orchestra.

Testimonials have been received from the following Eminent Artists and Musicians, viz.:—

Mons. Jean de Reszke; Mons. J. Lassalle; Mons. Edouard de Reszke; Signor Luigi Arditi; Senor Pablo Sarasate; Mons. A. Vianesi; C. W. Pearce, Mus. Doc. Cantab.; Madame Berthe Marx; Herr Anton Seidl; and many other prominent members of the Musical Profession.

A VISIT TO OUR SHOW ROOMS WILL BE ESTEEMED A FAVOUR.

Price from £25 to £104.

GEORGE WHIGHT & Co.

225, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.

(Sole Licencees for England).

"IS STILL THE BEST COCOA."

SCHWEITZER'S NOURISHING, STRENGTHENING.

Cocoatina

Reduced Prices: ¼ lbs., 11d.; ½ lbs., 1/9; 1 lbs., 3/4.

PIANOS ON THE THREE YEARS' HIRE SYSTEM.

This system is carried out extensively, liberally, and equitably by CHARLES STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, W.C. The pianoforte becomes the absolute property of the hirer at the expiration of three years, or may be returned at any time, at the option of the hirer. The rates charged are the same as for ordinary hire, and no addition is made to the price. PIANOS, GRAND and UPRIGHT, new and second-hand, by BORD, BECHSTEIN, and other high-class Makers, at from 10s. 6d. to 100s. per month. Lists and all particulars will be forwarded post-free on application to STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, London, W.C.

BROWN & POLSON'S

Has 35 Years' World-wide Reputation.

CORN FLOUR

ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE.

INCORPORATED A.D. 1720.

Funds, £4,000,000. Claims Paid, £36,000,000.

LIFE. FIRE. SEA. ANNUITIES.

For the Latest Developments of Life Assurance, consult the Prospectus of the Corporation.

Full particulars on application to

Chief Office—ROYAL EXCHANGE, E.C.

OR TO

29, PALL MALL, S.W.

TANN'S

£5 5s.

SAFES.

LISTS FREE.

NEWGATE ST.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. B[illegible]. "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st., Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici.—Cicero."

No. 866. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, August 3, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

EXIT Goodwood; enter the Truth Dolls! That is to say, the season being at end, it is now time to commence preparations for the Truth Christmas Show. The dolls—some thousands of them—have been already ordered, and I hope that the ladies who propose to take part in dressing them will communicate their intentions to me as soon as they conveniently can. As usual, the dolls will be supplied in three sizes—large, medium, and small.

There is no foundation for the report that the Queen has been unwell since the Royal Wedding, for her Majesty has been in the best possible health. The Queen spends the whole morning out of doors at Osborne when the weather is fine, and does her work either in the pavilion in the grounds, or else in a tent on the lawn. It seems to be supposed that the Queen must be unwell at Osborne if she does not drive out, as she does at Windsor and at Balmoral, but in the Isle of Wight her Majesty can take a drive of eight miles without leaving her own private domain; and considering the variety of the scenery which the park affords, it is no wonder that the Queen prefers to drive there, instead of going along the dusty roads, which, at this season, are often inconveniently crowded with all kinds of vehicles.

The Queen is to hold a large Investiture of the Bath, St. Michael and St. George, and the Indian Orders in the Council Chamber at Osborne on the afternoon of Friday, the 11th, on which occasion several individuals are to be tapped on the shoulder to confirm their Knighthood.

Lord Derby is to have an audience of the Queen at Osborne next week, in order that he may deliver up his late brother's insignia of the Garter. The vacancy has not yet been filled up, and I hear that the Court desire that the Duke of Fife should get the blue ribbon, but it may be hoped that the Prime Minister will insist upon giving it to one of his own supporters. It might be well if it were given to a Commoner, as it is really too absurd in these democratic days to confine any Order, which is supposed to be a distinction, to Peers.

The Queen has placed Abergeldie Castle at the disposal of the Empress Eugénie until the last week in September, when the Duke and Duchess of Connaught are to arrive there, and stay until October 30.

With regard to the precedence of the Prime Minister in right of his office as Lord Privy Seal, it is true enough that the official "General Table" states that Lord Privy Seal "enjoys the place here assigned to him, provided he be of the degree of a Baron or above it," and the same rule applies to the case of the Lord President of the Council. Lord Privy Seal comes next to the Lord President, and before the Lord Great Chamberlain, the Earl Marshal, the Lord Steward, and the Lord Chamberlain, next to whom are placed the Dukes and Duchesses. The Queen has given Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone the precedence hitherto belonging to the office of Lord Privy Seal, and after the Royal Wedding the Prime Minister signed the register of the marriage at Buckingham Palace directly after the Lord Chancellor, and before the Lord Steward,

---

I hear that the Dowager Duchess of Athole will shortly resign her appointment as Lady-in-Waiting on the Queen, which she has held for nearly forty years. It is probable that the next wait of the Duchess will be her last. The Dowager Duchess of Athole was Mistress of the Robes in 1852, during Lord Derby's first Administration, and she now holds that office jointly with the Dowager Duchess of Roxburghe, who has done any duty that has been required during the last few months.

The papers have all been announcing that the Empress Frederick is to arrive at Homburg this week, and that the Prince of Wales is to be her guest there. The Empress, who is in Greece, is not likely to return to Germany for the next three weeks, and then she is going to settle at Cronberg for the autumn. The Prince of Wales always hires an apartment when he is at Homburg, and his usual quarters are engaged from the 12th. It is understood that H.R.H. will return to England on September 4, and that he is to be the guest of the Duke of Portland at Welbeck Abbey during Doncaster Races, after which he is going to Scotland for about a month, most of which will be spent at Braemar with the Duke and Duchess of Fife.

Prince Henry of Battenberg is to leave Cowes early next week on a cruise to Norway in his schooner, the Sheila, and he will be accompanied by his brother, Prince Joseph. Prince Henry is to rejoin the Court at Balmoral about September 4.

Prince and Princess Frederick Charles of Hesse are to come to England about the middle of next month on a visit to the Queen at Balmoral. Prince Frederick Charles has been under treatment at Wiesbaden for an affection of the eyes, which causes much anxiety.

Among other places where money was collected for public celebrations on the occasion of the Duke of York's marriage was Dorchester, where £210 was subscribed. After expending a portion of this money in feasting, decorations, and similar objects, the Committee have calmly proceeded to vote £10 out of it for the purchase of a piece of plate in recognition of the services of the gentleman who has been held out as the "honorary" secretary of the fund. Such a proceeding is a gross misappropriation of the money subscribed, and the subscribers have every right to protest against it. It appears that the gentleman in question, Mr. E. Burnett, filled a similar position on the occasions of the Prince of Wales's marriage and the Jubilee, and there are few people who would not mind becoming "honorary" secretaries any number of times on similar terms. A "paid" secretary is not usually so well rewarded.

A correspondent, writing from Dublin, says:—

Lord Houghton's departure for England was put off at the last moment, owing to indisposition, which kept him confined to his room last week at the Viceregal Lodge. A party of visitors is expected to stay with the Lord Lieutenant during the Horse Show week, though such arrangements are necessarily uncertain, if members of either Houses are concerned in them. There has been no relaxation of the social boycotting of Lord Houghton in Ireland.

It is to be hoped that at some future period Lord Houghton—having literary proclivities—will publish the "Experiences of a Boycotted Viceroy," which would be an interesting variety amongst the somewhat common-place Viceregal reminiscences of which the public lately have so frequently received the benefit. Not the least interesting part of such a work would be a chapter giving the explanation of why Lord Houghton reappointed to his household all the former officials of the households of Lords Londonderry and Zetland, strong Conservatives and anti-Home Rulers all of them—at least, during the Viceroyalties of their Tory chiefs.

When will a Lord Lieutenant arise strong enough to cope with the jobbery of Dublin Castle? The Augean stable has long been awaiting cleansing, but the strong man to do the work has not appeared. It is in the hands of each Lord Lieutenant at the beginning of his tenure of office to show the good and wholesome example of cleansing out his department at least. And yet the work remains to be done.

Lord Houghton was prevented by illness from joining the house party at Goodwood. He will entertain a party at Frystone Hall, his place near Pontefract, during Doncaster races, and the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire and Lord and Lady Londonderry are to be among his guests there.

The Duke of Richmond, as usual, had a full house at Goodwood for the races, and large parties were entertained by Lord and Lady Leconfield at Petworth House, by Lord and Lady Egmont at Cowdray Park, by the Duke of Beaufort at Drove House, and by Mr. and Mrs. Somerset at Castle Goring. Most of the houses about Chichester were taken for the week, and Singleton was quite full. The Duke and Duchess of Westminster were at Halnaker for the meeting, and Lord and Lady Downshire had a party at Burton Rough, which they rented for the week.

Large parties will be entertained during the Redcar and the Stockton race meetings by Lord and Lady Londonderry at Wynyard Park; by Lord and Lady Zetland at Upleatham Hall; and by Mr. James Lowther at Wilton Castle.

Lord Salisbury is settled at Hatfield until the beginning of September, when he is going to Puys, near Dieppe, for a month, and then to the Riviera, returning to England about the middle of November. Lady Salisbury goes abroad in a few days.

The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire are to spend next week at Buxton, and will go on Saturday, the 12th, to Bolton Abbey, Yorkshire, where they are to entertain a party for grouse shooting. The Prince of Wales will probably be the guest of the Duke and Duchess at Chatsworth in November for Derby races.

Lord and Lady Aberdeen gave a farewell garden party to their tenants at Haddo House, Aberdeenshire, on Thursday afternoon, at which about 4,000 persons were present. Lord Aberdeen announced that during his absence in Canada the family estates (which extend over 63,000 acres) will be managed just the same as if he were residing at Haddo. He stated that the expenditure for improvements on the property for last year and this year amounts to £20,000. Lord Aberdeen intimated his intention of maintaining the crofts (i.e., small holdings) on the estates.

Dr. Rae, who died last week, was one of the most daring of Arctic explorers, and he will be long remembered, not only for his adventures, but also as the discoverer of the remains of Franklin's expedition, an achievement which brought him a reward of £10,000.

A traveller who desired to go to the Imperial Hotel, Aberdeen, complains that, seeing only one hotel porter on the railway platform, he gave his bag to that functionary, and was forthwith hustled off to the Station Hotel, in spite of all he could do to get his baggage handed over to the representative of the other hostelry. This is an old grievance, which I was in hopes had been remedied. The Railway Company, owning the Station Hotel, exclude all the porters of all the other hotels from the platform, and endeavour to "rush" customers in the manner above described. It is a flagrant case of "undue preference," and as inconvenient to the public as it is unjust to the other hotel proprietors. It is astonishing that the municipal authorities have not taken steps to stop the practice.

For the Truth Hotel List, see pages 256, 257 in the present issue.

For Amusements, see page 255.

The Highland and Agricultural Society's Show at Edinburgh proved a great success in all respects, and it was an excellent exhibition. It is curious that most of the prizes in the Shorthorn and Aberdeen Angus cattle came to English breeders through animals of Scotch blood. Lord Feversham, the Queen, Mr. Harrison, and Mr. Thompson, of Inglewood, showed the best Shorthorns, and the most successful exhibitors of the Aberdeen-Angus breed were Mr. Bolden and Mr. Egginton. Mr. Balfour took prizes with his Leicester sheep and also with his Oxford Downs, and Lord Rosebery was successful with his large white pigs from Dalmeny.

Stag hunting on Exmoor is to begin next Tuesday, when the Devon and Somerset Staghounds will meet at Cloutsham. The pack will go out twice a week (Tuesdays and Fridays), and there ought to be abundant sport, as there are now an enormous number of red deer in all parts of the country.

I have received a serious complaint from a gentleman who went to Lord's last week to see the Australia v. Middlesex match. He had a cup of tea and bread and butter, and the waiter charged him eightpence. Too late, he discovered that the regular price of his modest refection was sixpence. I can only suggest that my correspondent should put himself in communication with the committee. Doubtless they will institute a strict inquiry respecting this shameful extortion.

This year's session of the British Archæological Society is to be held at Winchester, under the Presidency of Lord Northbrook, who will entertain a large party at Stratton Park during the week.

The appointment of Mr. J. P. Heseltine to be a trustee of the National Gallery is a most excellent one. Mr. Heseltine is not only a first-rate judge of pictures, and a genuine connoisseur, but he is a most discriminating collector, and he has always been very generous in lending his art possessions to the Old Masters Exhibitions. Mr. Heseltine's gallery is particularly rich in Dutch and Italian pictures and in works of the Norwich School, and he possesses a rare and splendid collection of drawings by Old Masters, notably of those by Rembrandt.

"Two Noble Lives" will be the title of the short biographies of Lady Canning and Louisa Lady Waterford, which have been edited for publication by Mr. Augustus Hare. The accomplishments and virtues of Lady Waterford are matters of sufficient notoriety, but more than thirty years have elapsed since her sister's death, so that comparatively few people are aware that Lady Canning was one of the most brilliant and delightful women of her generation, and that she was the ornament and charm of the society in which she mixed. The Indian Mutiny was a terrible ordeal for Lady Canning, but it was well said by one of her friends that to a heart of feminine softness she united a mind of masculine strength. It may be hoped that Mr. Hare's book will include some of Lady Canning's letters during the Mutiny, and any extracts from her journal would be most interesting and valuable.

A paragraph has been going the round of the papers in which it is stated that the fact has transpired that Miss Braddon has realised a hundred thousand pounds by her novels. The fact certainly never transpired from any statement of Miss Braddon, for she would be the last to boast of the amount of money that her novels have brought in. I should imagine that it had its source in the fertile brain of the author of the paragraph. What Miss Braddon has gained in cash from her novels I do not know, but judging from the continuous sale of them, I should be inclined to think that they have brought in a good deal more than the sum stated.

Bishop Hadfield (the Primate of New Zealand) has resigned the See of Wellington, to which he was appointed in 1870. The new bishop is to be selected by the Archbishop of York and the Bishop of Durham, the Synod of the diocese having stipulated that no clergyman is eligible who has held a cure in New Zealand. If the clergy of the Colony are to be ipso facto disqualified from being promoted to bishoprics, I should fancy that they may justifiably feel much disgusted by such an arrangement, which is certainly not calculated to stimulate their zeal.

The death of the Rev. Charles Edward Moberly will be widely regretted. He was for nearly a quarter of a century one of the most popular and most successful of the Rugby Assistant-Masters, at first under his brother-in-law, the Bishop of London, and afterwards under the present Dean of Wells. Mr. Moberly, who was elected to a scholarship at Balliol in 1838 (Lord Coleridge being his colleague), held the living of Beeston, Yorkshire, for some years before he went to Rugby. He was a brilliant scholar, and was the author of several excellent works—notably "Stories from Herodotus," "The Early Tudors," and an admirable little treatise on Logic. Mr. Moberly, who passed the closing years of his life at Oxford, was a nephew of the late Bishop of Salisbury.

The Bishop of London still remains obdurate to the request to grant a licence for the celebration of marriages in St. George's Chapel, Albemarle-street, on the sole ground, so far as I can perceive, that this will diminish the gains, licit and illicit, of the Rector of St. George's, Hanover-square. Again and again I have pointed out that this is preferring the interests of Rectors to the interests of the Church. In the interests of the latter, facilities to marry in churches and chapels should be increased rather than restricted, and the marriage ceremony should be permitted in every place licensed for the services of the Church of England.

There is another question in connection with marriages which needs consideration. A person can only be married according to the rites of the Church of England before 3 p.m., unless a special licence be obtained. Why? What, too, is the exact price of a special licence, and to whom does the money go? The charge varies according to the Proctor, or whatever the functionary be called, to whom application is made. Sometimes it is £30, sometimes it is £29. Either these special licences ought to be abolished, as well as the 3 p.m. limit, or they ought not to cost above £1.

BOURNEMOUTH.—ROYAL BATH HOTEL. The only hotel on the East Cliff. Grounds of Five Acres. 1,000 feet sea-frontage. South aspect. Moderate charges. Tariff on application. Comparison invited.

The Temple Church is to be closed for the Long Vacation after next Sunday, when Dean Vaughan will preach at the morning service. The church is to be reopened on Sunday, October 1.

I have received the following letter from Canon Gore. If the Bishop had nothing to do with the appointment in question, the comic element is, I freely admit, eliminated. But it is to be regretted that, while writing on the subject, the Canon did not himself make it clear precisely how far the rest of the story is founded on fact. What I suppose to be the foundation is that the Canon invited the parishioners to submit names to him, and that although his son-in-law's name was not submitted, the son-in-law got the living. If this is not fact, the Canon might surely have taken this opportunity of correcting it:—

Sir,—In reference to a paragraph in your last issue, regarding the recent appointment to the Vicarage of St. George's, Altrincham, you will of your courtesy permit me to say that the Bishop of Chester had nothing to do with it. I, and I only, am responsible for it.

As for the rest of the paragraph, those practically concerned, including the parishioners, will be the best judges as to how far your "curious little comedy" is founded on fact.—Yours obediently, Arthur Gore.

Bowdon, Cheshire, July 28, 1893.

A fortnight ago I alluded to the action of the Board of Management of the Hospital of St. Cross, Rugby, in resolving that no Roman Catholic nurse or servant should be engaged or allowed to remain in the establishment. I am glad to find that this astounding manifestation of sectarian bigotry has been unanimously condemned at a special meeting of the subscribers to the hospital. The Board were called upon to rescind the obnoxious resolution, and the meeting also expressed the opinion that there was no evidence to justify the charges of proselytizing which have been made against the Roman Catholic community in connection with the hospital.

For the information and assistance of all who are interested in brightening the lives of poor children, I have much pleasure in publishing the following letter. The firm from which it comes modestly keep their name to themselves, but I can answer for the bona fides of the offer. Should it induce any other owners of horses to follow suit, I shall be very happy to hear from them, and shall not have any objection to give them the advantage of the fullest publicity as a reward for their generosity:—

Sir,—As most of our customers have now left town, we propose to utilise some of our horses during the next two months for the purpose of taking poor children drives into the country. We have a brake that will hold about twelve, and we shall be pleased to receive applications for it from any one working amongst our pale-faced little cockneys. We do not give our name for obvious reasons, but letters addressed "C. C., care of Gastrell's Theatrical Booking Office, Sussex-place, S.W.," will be attended to at once. Yours faithfully, Jobmaster.

I have received the following amounts towards Lady Jeune's Holiday Fund for poor and sickly children:—Ruth and Robert Whyte, £2; Content, 10s.; Bombay, £2; F. C. H., £2; Sympathy, £20; T. P., £5.

If Mr. Campbell-Bannerman desires to allay the chronic discontent in the Army Medical Department, I believe that he could not start with a more popular step than that of installing a Medical Officer in Victoria-street as Secretary to the Director-General. There is no subject of more frequent complaint among Army Doctors than that when they visit Headquarters to make inquiries on any matter connected with the roster, exchanges, probable destination on foreign service, and so on, they are confronted with a War Office clerk, who, though he has nothing in common with the medical branch of the Service, has all the appearance of ruling the roost. I had almost said, in view of a certain recent scandal, ruling the roster. There is no doubt that the position of the official in question causes a great deal of friction, if it has not worse drawbacks. The Director-General has a professional assistant, but his services appear to be confined to office work which any clerk could perform. What is required is a professional assistant who will be the medium of communication between the Director General and the profession.

Last week the Scots Guards' annual regimental sports were held at Beggar's Bush Barracks, the attendance being principally military. The Regiment leaves during the month for England, to be succeeded by another battalion of the Guards. The Scots Greys have already left Marlborough Barracks, the Assistance taking away the last division of the Regiment during the week.

Most of the daily papers published the other day a very graphic account of some manœuvres at Aldershot which had been ordered by Sir Evelyn Wood, and which it was stated had been admirably carried out by the officers under his command. It was true that these manœuvres had been ordered, but, at the last moment, they were countermanded!

The latest irregularity reported to me from Hamilton is that an N.C.O., reported to the Commanding Officer for some trifling offence, had his leave stopped, and was ordered to attend "tattoo parade" daily till further orders. This is, I take it, directly contrary to the paragraph in the Queen's Regulations (Sect. vi., para. 49) which provides that N.C.O.s are not to be subjected to summary or minor punishments. On this ground, when the Inspection came off, the N.C.O. made a complaint on the subject to the General Officer commanding the district. His complaint was dismissed, and the General upheld the C.O. How can it be contended, in the face of such an incident as this, that there is any chance of justice for a soldier against a superior officer?

I am glad to hear, however, that at last there is a probability of the three historical Colour-Sergeants, who have been for so long retained at Hamilton after the expiration of their time, being dealt with in accordance with the Regulations. My readers will, no doubt, be equally glad to hear it. I understand that two of them are to go back to their Battalions, and one of them is to have—though at great injustice to certain of his comrades—a vacancy on the permanent staff. It has only been done by dint of references in TRUTH at the rate of about once a fortnight for over six months, but it is done at last. Even when the most stiff-necked officials are concerned, I find that everything comes to him who can wait—provided he sticks to his point.

C.O.M. Whisky.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—Andrews & Co., Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand.

It seems that while the Army Service Corps is so overstocked with clerks that at Aldershot they are regularly employed as day labourers, at Woolwich there is a serious deficiency of bakers. The A.S.C. bakery at Woolwich was started two years ago with a staff, first of seventeen, and then of twenty-three men. The number has now been allowed to drop to sixteen. Twenty-three being the proper number for the work, it follows that the present staff are considerably overworked. There are at present seven men in the bakehouses, where in proportion to the average day's baking there should be ten.

I understand that when cavalry are billeted on private citizens the regulation allowance for a horse is 1s. 9d. per day. Whatever this may have been once, it has not been a fair allowance for some time past, and, with hay at the present famine prices, the loss to the man who has to put up a horse at this figure must be very considerable. The War Office ought to have a sliding scale of allowances proportionate to the current prices of forage, and no other system is fair. I suppose that the interests of the horses are looked after by the troopers; but if that is not very closely done the chances are that the horses will also suffer by the present arrangement.

There is another ground for complaint in this connection in the fact that officers' polo ponies and private nags are also billeted at the same rate. This is adding insult to injury. A man who finds himself out of pocket by putting up cavalry chargers might find a fragment of consolation in the reflection that he was suffering in the country's cause; but even that is denied him if it is merely an officer's private pocket that he is saving.

An Army Riding-Master, writing to me from Aldershot, denies with much warmth that it is his practice, or the practice of Riding-Masters at large, to charge "fees and fines" to young officers. This disclaimer has reference to a paragraph in last week's TRUTH anent Cavalry expenses; but I cannot see that what was said was precisely what my friend the Riding-Master denies, and the remark was certainly not intended to reflect on Riding-Masters as a class. I said that a Cavalry Officer vouched to me for a case in which fines to the amount of £20 had been paid by a subaltern before he got through the Riding School. But I did not suggest that the Riding-Master had anything to do with these fines. My impression about the matter is that they are imposed by the lex non scripta of the Officers' Mess. When the fining took the form of standing champagne, I understand the Riding-Master to have participated in the champagne. But no one will blame him for that.

MESSRS. THOS. COOK & SON beg to announce that their Branch Office, No. 13, Cockspur-street, is now open for business. Tickets issued to all parts of the world.

Reference was made in TRUTH of July 20 to the case of a Quartermaster Sergeant at Bodmin Depot, who had been remanded from a District Court-martial on July 12. The treatment which this man has been undergoing for some months past, and is still undergoing, is of such an extraordinary character that I desire to call the attention of the War Office authorities to the case. As regards the merits of the original charges against the man, I refrain from saying anything pending his trial; but what does call for immediate notice in the case is the monstrous delay in bringing him to trial, and the treatment to which he has been subjected in the meantime. On July 12 he was placed under close arrest, and confined in a small room about 12 ft. square with an N.C.O. in charge, who read all his letters going out and coming in. He was allowed no exercise, till on the fifth day he appealed to the Medical Officer. He has not been allowed the opportunities of preparing his defence and collecting his evidence, to which the rules of procedure entitle him, and he has not been able to obtain, as the same rules entitle him to do, a copy of the proceedings of a Court of Inquiry held last March, which form a material element in his case. On July 21, after he had appealed to the General Officer Commanding the District, and after a reference to his case had appeared in TRUTH, he was placed in open arrest; but up to Monday last his friends had heard nothing as to any arrangement for trying him. The man ought to be tried at once or he ought to be released. His case, as might be supposed, is only one episode in a long narrative of Depot irregularities and malpractices, and what ought now to take place is not a Court-martial on this unfortunate man, but an independent inquiry into all that has been going on at this Depot for the last two or three years.

The following communication from an Indian C.O. explains a problem which exercised me somewhat two or three months back:—

About the year 1887 the Horse Guards became alarmed at the swollen state of the Colonels' List, and contended that officers were thus forced forward for promotion to Major-General who were unfit for the increased responsibility of the higher rank. To rectify this, the rule previously in force promoting Lieut.-Colonels to Colonel after five years' service in the lower rank, was cancelled, and no such promotion allowed unless an Officer held certain Staff appointments, or was appointed to the charge of a Regimental District after his period in command of a regiment had expired. The Indian Service had to follow suit. Accordingly all Lieut.-Colonels promoted since December 31, 1886, have little chance of further advancement, unless they succeed to certain Staff appointments, which in many instances they have held earlier in this service, so that they are expected to "progress backwards." Those who are hit the hardest by the new rule are Commandants of Regiments, whose responsible and arduous duties afford them no claim to promotion. As there are no Regimental Districts in India, they have no opportunity of getting their promotion like the Lieutenant-Colonels of the British Service, but have to retire, or are "permitted to reside in Europe," as the phrase is, along with the loafers, bad hats, and hard bargains, who have never come near commanding a Regiment. . . . .

Our hopes were buoyed up for some time by a promise of some promotions by supplementary selection, but even for the Lieut.-Colonels selected last year there were no vacancies on the Colonels' list, and this year the list is so much further congested that it has not been thought worth while to make any selections at all. The state of things thus resulting is very disheartening and humiliating, and strikes at the root of all efficiency.

The foregoing letter not only explains the anomaly to

Midland Third-class Luncheon and Dining Carriages Glasgow (St. Enoch) and London (St. Pancras). 1.30 p.m. in each direction. Table d'Hôte Lunch, 2s.; Dinner, 2s. 6d. Service à la carte. Excellent cuisine. Popular prices. "A Model Restaurant on Wheels."—NOTE:—Midland Railway Company's Hotels at London (St. Pancras), Liverpool, Leeds, Derby, and Bradford. Excellent cooking. Choice wines, which I have previously referred, but many other cases in which officers have, apparently, moved backwards preparatory to a step forward over the heads of their own seniors. If the truth really is that the new rules are due to the War Office finding that men were coming forward for the rank of Major-General who were not properly qualified for it, it seems to me that the proper remedy would have been to institute a system of selection which would insure that only the competent should be promoted. That would, at any rate, have looked fair. The present arrangement, as evidenced by numerous cases, neither looks fair nor works fairly.

One of my military readers has been going into the value of Tommy Atkins's brass buttons. He arrives at the conclusion that if these buttons could be transferred from one suit to another, the country would save £12,000 per annum on every 100,000 men. I feel confident that this calculation will receive immediate attention at headquarters, for the economy suggested is just one of those in which our military administrators delight. I do not suppose, however, that the country will get the benefit of the £12,000 a year. What I expect is, that the brass buttons will be saved, and that the £12,000 a year will disappear somewhere in the direction of Whitehall or Pall Mall.

The brass button question, however, should not be lost sight of. Not long back I suggested that if the buttons were cut off the old uniforms before they were disposed of, the indignation of our fighting men at seeing their garments on the backs of civilians might be appeased. This was before I had discovered the value of the buttons in bulk. There are, I believe, several ways of attaching buttons to clothes so that they are removable at will, and a War Office mind will probably decide without difficulty that one set of buttons ought to last a man from beginning to end of his service with the colours. This will be a bad day for me, however, for I shall forthwith have Tommy agitating for an increased allowance of buttons, and bewailing the hardship which he suffers from having to replace the buttons which he loses. Taking one consideration with another, therefore, I cannot feel much enthusiasm about this reform.

A year or two ago, before the name of the School of Musketry had become as familiar to my readers as it has since, I pointed out the anomaly that an officer who took his furniture with him to Hythe, when proceeding thither for musketry instruction, received an allowance for the carriage of it; whereas if he hired the furniture there (through the kind instrumentality of Captain Moore Murphy) no allowance was made to him. I am glad to find that this little seed really fell upon good ground, though it has been some time in sprouting. In the course of the general clear-up that has taken place at Hythe this little matter has been put right. I hope that this improvement may be accompanied by a reduction in the outrageous prices that have been paid for furniture hire.

It will be remembered that certain statements in respect to the action of the City Police anent the Terry-Couper sales and purchases of Army cloth, were made in TRUTH, Lord Mayor Knill, when the matter was raised in the Court of Aldermen, denied the facts, and said that the statements deserved to be treated with contempt. I am glad to hear that, thanks to Mr. Morton, M.P., the question is to be investigated by the City Police Committee. It is asserted, I believe, by the City Police Commissioner that this Committee has no power to investigate the action of the City Police. If this be so, it is not easy to see the use of the Committee; but, should the contention be correct, it can only result in the investigation being undertaken by the Home Office.

The Naval Manœuvres have, as usual, inflicted a great deal of injustice on officers and men just returned from foreign service—e.g., in the Warspite and Undaunted—who, in order that the Navy may cut a big figure on paper, are forthwith bundled off to sea again and denied the leave to which they are legitimately entitled. In a case of national emergency all ranks would cheerfully submit to inconvenience of this kind, but in time of peace, and for an occasion which has become a matter of annual routine, such sacrifices ought not to be demanded; or, if they are demanded, they ought to be paid for.

Of course, demands of this kind press most severely upon the Engineers. The record of one officer of this class shows that just as he had started on his foreign service leave after reaching home in ship A, he was appointed to ship B, and sent out to Ferrol. Ship B returned home, and the officer again started on his leave, but he had barely reached home when he was recalled to take part in the manœuvres in ship C. By the time he returns it will be close on a year since he first became entitled to his leave, and whether he will ever get it at all is now problematical. A return showing the number of cases in which officers enjoy the whole amount of leave to which they are lawfully entitled, side by side with the number of cases in which they do not, would be in the highest degree instructive.

It is fortunate that events in Siam are not likely to lead to any sudden demand for the services of H.M.S. Boadicea in that quarter. Two months back the Boadicea left with three other ships of the East India Squadron for a cruise. At the end of three days her engines broke down, and she was towed 1,200 miles by the Marathon, while the engine-room staff were making good the defects. When she was last commissioned, in September, 1891, the Boadicea, which was built nearly twenty years ago, had just been repaired to last another eighteen months, and the dockyard officials at Malta did not expect her to last

---

HEALTHY HASTINGS. It is interesting to notice the healthy condition of Hastings, as shown by the official mortality returns for the past three months, issued by the Medical Officer of Health. The death-rate for the period covered by these statistics was only 12·85, as against 14·99 for the corresponding quarter of 1892, and 17·14 for the corresponding period of 1891. The zymotic death-rate for the quarter just ended is equally satisfactory, being 1·16, as compared with 1·26 and 1·37 for June quarters of 1892 and 1891 respectively.

All health seekers should call, if possible, and avail themselves of a free personal consultation at the MEDICAL BATTERY COMPANY'S INSTITUTE, 52, Oxford-street, London, W., where the Curative Appliances can be seen scientifically tested. Pamphlets gratis.

beyond that time. They seem to have been about right. It is an extraordinary thing, after spending annually £15,000,000 or £16,000,000 on our Navy, no better vessel than this can be found to do duty as flagship in an important station.

Admiral Sir Anthony Hoskins will be retired from the Service in the course of this month by operation of the age clause, and he is to be succeeded as First Sea Lord at the Admiralty by Admiral Sir Frederick Richards. It is probable that Vice-Admiral Erskine will replace Sir Frederick Richards as Second Sea Lord at Whitehall.

Portsmouth is greatly agitated about a threatened municipal scandal. The Chief Constable has just resigned, and it is asserted that before he formally did so a majority of the Watch Committee pledged themselves to bestow the berth—worth £350 a year—upon Commander Bamber, a member of their own body and a Borough Magistrate. Finding that there was a strong feeling against this charming arrangement, the Committee considered it prudent not to fill up the vacancy at once, as they originally intended. They have resolved instead to make a temporary appointment, which will become permanent at the end of six months if the gentleman selected is found to be qualified for the post. The adoption of such an exceptional course in the interests of the Commander really gives a worse aspect to the affair. It is preposterous to suppose that a retired naval officer, totally destitute of police training or experience, is the best man for the Chief Constableship, and if the Portsmouth Watch Committee persist in their determination to appoint Commander Bamber, they will stand convicted of a most discreditable act of jobbery.

If we are to stop Government sweating—and I hope we are—let us begin with the Post Office clerks; I refer more particularly to the lady clerks. One of these unfortunate girls tells me that at one office she was on duty daily from 5 a.m. to 8 p.m., with five hours on Sunday—ninety-five hours per week. At another the hours were a little longer, bringing the total up to one hundred per week. The pay for this was board and lodging and £10 a year in the first case, and £14 a year in the second. The lowest drudge of a maid-of-all-work could hardly be got to work such hours on such terms. After thirteen years' experience, and with the highest recommendations, this same damsel now earns 11s. per week by thirteen hours' labour per diem, and has to board, lodge, and clothe herself out of that sum, besides making good any deficiencies in her cash should she make an error against herself. So far as I can learn, there is nothing in any way exceptional about this case.

No one can question that this is a very black spot on our social economy. The young woman whose case is described above tells me that after three years at ninety five and a hundred hours per week, her health broke down and she had to take a rest. It would be strange if her health were not permanently injured. To keep young girls cooped up in boxes for twelve, fourteen, or fifteen hours a day, and for five hours on Sunday, without any regular holiday from year's end to year's end, is sheer brutality. The brutality of it is aggravated when, as in this case, the girl is paid only a few pence a day beyond her keep. Yet these are fairly well educated girls, who have to pass examinations in order to be admitted to this privileged existence. As long as we continue collectively to wring by such methods as these some three millions of profit per annum out of the Post Office service, in order to relieve ourselves of taxation to that amount, so long all our wrath and indignation against the private sweater must be regarded as a very barren kind of sentiment.

A resident at Anerley took possession of his house at Lady Day. Within a few weeks he found that he had been assessed to Poor Rate at a higher figure than the rent of his house, and he applied to the Croydon Union Assessment Committee for a reduction. The Committee required the production of a receipt as evidence of the rent, and as, from the nature of the case, this was impossible, they took no action. As soon as he had paid his first quarter's rent and obtained a receipt, the householder renewed his application. He was then informed that he was too late, and left to appeal against the next rate. This is a monstrous state of things. There is no law which makes a receipt the only evidence of the rent payable or the value of the house, and the Assessment Committee have no business to make rules which result in householders having to pay rates which are not lawfully due from them.

The Elham Guardians have sent a letter to the Local Government Board in reference to the complaints mentioned in last week's TRUTH. Anything more feeble than the so-called answer to the allegations of the Folkestone Municipal Reform League it would be difficult to conceive. It was asserted that the Workhouse at Elham is situated six miles from the centre of population at Folkestone. The reply of the Guardians is that the precise distance is five miles and eighty yards "from the Town Hall." They say nothing as to the distance from other points farther away, including, I believe the Relieving Officer's house. It is stated that the overflow from the casual ward is now accommodated in the stable on platforms covered with mattresses. I am curious to know whether the Local Government Board consider this proper accommodation, especially as I am informed that the stable in question is a lean-to shed with a pig-stye adjoining. As to the journey from Folkestone to Elham, it seems to be admitted that all paupers have to walk except those who are "aged and infirm" or "very ill;" and the reply to the charge that deaths have been caused or accelerated by the consequent exhaustion and exposure is far from satisfactory. The Municipal Reform League, I am pleased to learn, intend to persist in their demand for a public inquiry into the doings of the Elham Bumbles.

The administration of the poor-law is not the only matter requiring investigation at Folkestone. If one may judge from the disclosures made at the Police-court on Saturday, an inquiry respecting the insanitary property in the town might also yield interesting results. Mr. William Salter was summoned for letting cottages unfit for human habitation, and it was stated that he had treated with contempt notices which were served upon him in March last. Mr. Salter is a Town Councillor, is a member of the Sanitary Committee, and—so it is said—one of the greatest opponents of the adoption of the Artisans' Dwellings Act in Folkestone. Clearly, therefore, the case was one which should have been dealt with in an exemplary fashion. But the Bench contented themselves with making an order for the closing of the cottages, imposing no fine or costs. I am told that this is not the first occasion on which Councillors owning slum property have been let off in this lenient manner.

PFUNGST FRÈRES' EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNES.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. PFUNGST & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

A few years ago there was a Bill in respect to Limited Liability Companies. An attempt was then made to make Directors really responsible for the action of the Boards on which they sat. This was met by Director after Director insisting that, if the responsibility were made real, men of position would not go on Boards; and so powerful were they in the House of Commons that the attempt failed. As it is, Directors are usually the dummies of some astute Companymonger. He gives them their qualification, and owns them. They shut their eyes to every species of roguery, pocket their fees, and allow their shareholders to be robbed. Jabez Balfour has retired to the congenial soil of the Argentine Republic. His brother Directors insist that they had such confidence in him that they accepted the wildest statements and figures, when he vouched for them.

I have much difficulty in believing this. Outside a lunatic asylum a man cannot be so guileless as not to know that there is something wrong when estates are bought by a Company of A, which A had just bought of B for far less than the sale price to the Company, and when increased dividends are declared by one Company selling an estate to another Company, which latter, after having charged a commission on the transaction, returns the estate to the selling Company. There are, I dare say, some simple fools amongst the Balfour Directors, but that they are all such utter idiots as they would have it believed, is simply incredible. Can they be punished? If so, they ought to be. If not, then some change in the law is imperatively demanded.

Last week William Bond was charged before the Birmingham Police-court with having embezzled 4d. He had been the Secretary of a defunct benefit society. He had been chosen at a committee meeting, and his only instructions were a book of rules that gave him power to collect subscriptions and disburse them in sick pay. The defence was, that he had shown no disposition to swindle the society, that he distributed what money he had, that his accounts got muddled, and that he found himself short of 4d., which he was prepared to refund. The Bench convicted him, and sent him to prison for one month. Assuredly this man was not more guilty than a Director of a Company who distributes bogus dividends, assents to bogus accounts, takes his fees out of moneys not really earned, together with a percentage of the bogus dividends.

The examinations in respect to the affairs of the Balfour Companies seem likely to last until "the great globe itself, yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve," to the benefit alone of those engaged in the inquiry. All worth knowing is already known. A vast number of persons made money by double sales of property. The Directors looked on, and only excuse themselves from being knaves by the plea that they were fools. Whether anything now remains for the shareholders is doubtful; that nothing will remain if the inquiry is to be prolonged is pretty certain.

A boy of fifteen was awarded three weeks' hard labour for being found in the garden of Mr. W. H. Bishop in the evening. It seems to have been purely a case of suspicion; but the extraordinary thing about it is that Mr. Bishop, the prosecutor to all intents and purposes, is an ornament of the Croydon Bench. He appears to have sat and adjudicated on the boy's case. The only witness for the prosecution was Bishop's son. The attention of the Lord Chancellor ought to be drawn to these proceedings. Is not this worthy J.P., by the by, the Bishop who was an intimate friend of Jabez Balfour, and for many years Auditor of the Liberator Society?

I am not a judge, nor am I a lawyer, but if I had had to consider the case has made me inquire the meaning of the words "your possession which they were used in, I should have looked to the meaning of "possession" rather than of "insatiable." I make this observation merely as a linguist, for the Judge held that the sentence could be construed in two ways, whilst, even if the way adverse to the lady had been adopted, it by no means follows that the French gentleman, in whose letter to her the words were introduced, was not exaggerating with a keen sense of possible favours to come.

When at the end of last year Mr. Roxburgh, the Assistant-Judge of the Mayor's Court, applied for an addition to his handsome salary of £1,200 a year, I pointed out that as two jobs had been effected for this gentleman's benefit in the space of five years, it was about time to stop. The City Fathers are past-masters in the art of jobbery. In view of the protests raised in TRUTH, they shelved Mr. Roxburgh's application for the moment, and set themselves to wait for a better opportunity. The opportunity seems to have come last week, when Mr. Roxburgh was formally presented with another £500 a year, at the expense of the citizens of London.

Miss Hughes, the Principal of the College Hall, Bangor, has secured a verdict, with £350 damages, against the Weekly Dispatch for libel. The evidence was curious reading, for most of the authorities of the College seem to have been against Miss Hughes. One point in this evidence was remarkable. It seems to have been asserted that a Professor stroked the cheeks of a young lady student with his fingers. This was denied, but it was admitted that he stroked her face with a piece of paper. To most persons it would appear to be a distinction without much difference.

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. It is chiefly notable for one or two characteristic exhibitions of magisterial humour, or what passes, I suppose, for humour on the Bench. I scarcely know which is the drollest performance—that of the Bath Justices in inflicting a fine of 5s. on a man charged with being without visible means of subsistence, or that of the Mayor of Ironbridge in gravely informing some boys who had been wasp-nesting that they were liable to five years' penal servitude. The King's Heath Bench, it will be observed, have again distinguished themselves. From the decision given in the case reported below, it appears that it is now an offence to stand on a road within the jurisdiction of these worthies, although no obstruction is caused except in the purely technical sense of the word. A Birmingham contemporary suggests that the defendants were really fined because the King's Heath Solons disapprove of pigeon-flying on Sundays; and I suspect that this is the true explanation of their action:—

Lexden and Winstree Petty Sessions. Before Mr. J. Bateman and other Magistrates. William Woods, builder, charged with assaulting his wife. He had treated the woman in a most outrageous manner, and besides knocking her about and kicking her had been guilty of shameful indecencies. Fined £5 and bound over.

Barnsley Police-court. Before Messrs. F. H. Taylor, H. Pigott, and T. Dymond. James Collins, convicted of being drunk and disorderly and violently assaulting a policeman, whom he knocked down and kicked. Fined 15s. and costs.

Ayr Sheriff Court. Before Sheriff Orr Paterson. Andrew Aitkin, charged with indecent assault. Fined £5.

David Shaw, charged with a similar offence. Fined £5.

Birmingham Police-court. Before Mr. Colmore (Stipendiary), Mr. A. Chamberlain, and other Magistrates. John Beaufoy and Bessy Shannon, charged with assaulting Mrs. Moran. Shannon knocked complainant down, and Beaufoy kicked her, breaking her collar-bone. One month.

Faringdon Petty Sessions. Before Colonel Edwards, the Hon. W. B. Barrington, the Hon. D. P. Bouverie, and other Magistrates. George Brown, convicted of ill-treating and over-driving a horse. It was never fit for work afterwards. Fined £1.

Norwich Police-court. Before Messrs. F. W. Harmer, J. D. Smith, E. Wild, J. F. Ranson, and J. Hotblack. William Fowler, charged with assaulting his wife. He struck her eight times in the face. Fined 20s., or seven days.

Doncaster Police-court. Edward Horsfield, convicted of assaulting James Aspbridge by breaking a mug over his head. He inflicted two wounds, and complainant was taken to the infirmary. Fined £2 and costs.

Grays Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. R. H. Williams, W. Squier, A. Sturgeon, and L. C. R. Norris Elye. David King and Thomas Perkins, carters, charged with stealing two trusses of hay. King, six weeks; Perkins, one month.

Barnsley Police-court. Before the same Bench. Alfred Ross and Nellie Dykes, charged with sleeping out in a plantation. They said they had no money to pay for lodgings. Ten days each.

Ayr Borough Court. William Dunlop pleaded guilty to stealing a watch. Thirty days.

Kilmarnock Sheriff Court. William Affleck, charged with stealing a pair of gloves and a pair of trousers. Thirty days.

Bristol Police-court. Before Messrs. J. C. Goodwin and W. C. Beloe. Henry Chalinder, convicted of stealing brushes belonging to his employer. Prosecutor appealed to the Bench to deal with the prisoner under the First Offenders Act. The Bench declined to do this. Six weeks.

Faringdon Petty Sessions. Before the same Bench. Thomas Stallard, aged 13, charged with stealing apples from a garden. Fined 12s.

Northallerton Police-court. Alexander Sample, charged with begging. Three months.

Norwich Police-court. Before the same Magistrates. William Carter, a youth, charged with using bad language. Fined 10s., or five days.

Chapel-en-le-Frith Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. W. H. G. Bagshawe and R. H. Ashton. Henry Redfern, charged with poaching. His dog killed two rabbits. One month.

Grimsby Borough Police-court. Before the Mayor, Aldermen Veal and Jackson, and other Magistrates. Charles Hyldon, charged with an aggravated assault on his wife. He knocked her down and kicked her on the side and face. She had been previously assaulted and a separation order was granted. Fined £5 and costs.

Romford Petty Sessions. William Newman, charged with assaulting Betsy Dowsell. He struck her and knocked her down, breaking her arm. Fined £1 and costs.

Torquay Police-court. William Avery, charged with causing a horse to be worked whilst in an unfit state. The animal was lame, and had a number of raw wounds on various parts of the body. Fined 20s.

Wellingborough Divisional Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. Spencer Pratt, N. P. Sharman, E. B. Randall, and E. Sharman. Johanna Farrell, married woman, charged with stealing two ounces of tobacco. One month.

Joseph Smith, a lad, charged with stealing growing onions. One month.

Stonehouse Police-court. George Vines, charged with poaching. Two months.

Torquay Police-court. Michael Brooks, charged with begging. Fourteen days.

King's Heath Police-court. Before Messrs. C. P. Lane, Baldwin, Onions, Bowen, and Lyndon. John Green and Robert Williams, charged with obstructing the highway on a Sunday. They stood in a wide country road to let fly a number of pigeons. Fined 10s. 6d. each, including costs.

Bath City Police-court. John Brown, charged with being found in a shed not having any visible means of subsistence. Fined 5s., or seven days.

Ironbridge Petty Sessions. Before Mr. W. Y. Owen (Mayor), Messrs. W. G. Norris, A. Maw, G. H. Maw, and Colonel Wayne. Five boys charged with damaging Lord Forester's trees. They had been wasp-nesting. The Mayor told the defendants they were liable to five years' penal servitude. Fined 16s. each.

Glasgow Sheriff Summary Court. Before Sheriff Birnie. Two boys charged with loitering about a railway station soliciting luggage to carry. Fined £1 each or fourteen days.

A Cornish Magistrate sends me a report of the Assizes recently held at Bodmin in order to prove that severity and inequality in sentences are evils not confined to the Great Unpaid. He points out that in one case a man found guilty of an offence against the laws of nature was sentenced by Mr. Justice Day to fifteen years' penal servitude, and his companion to ten years. In the same Court a sailor was convicted of an attempt to commit a criminal assault on a little girl whom he met on the road. He used great violence, and a vile disease was communicated to the poor child. Yet he got off with two years' imprisonment. My correspondent hints that the evidence in the first case was not altogether conclusive. Of this I cannot judge, but, even if the men's guilt was fully established, I am quite of my correspondent's opinion that the sentences were so excessive as to appear malignant. I agree also that a heavier punishment was deserved in the second case. That inflicted by Mr. Justice Day is, however, the maximum allowed by the law, so that his Lordship could not have reversed the sentences, as it is suggested he should have done.

Last week I alluded to the action of the St. Neots Magistrates in dismissing certain charges of assault against a gamekeeper named Perkins. The intense indignation and disgust excited by this miscarriage of justice culminated in a remarkable scene on St. Neots Common, where Perkins's effigy, after being carried through the streets, was committed to the flames amidst the derisive cheers of over 1,000 people. Perkins himself has been summarily discharged by his employer, Mr. G. F.

THE IMPERIAL, EAST CLIFF, BOURNEMOUTH.—Position, appointments, and cuisine unsurpassed. 100 rooms. Luxuriously furnished. Electric light. Private omnibuses meet trains. Telegraphic address, Imperial, Bournemouth.—CHAS. A. REINGPACH, Manager.

THE MALVERN HILLS.—Most delightful of English Watering-places. Air pure, dry, invigorating. Lowest death-rate (certified), pure water, perfect sanitation. Matchless scenery, charming walks and drives, hunting, golf. Frequently visited by Royalty.

Rowley, and has left the district, and Mr. Rowley ha also presented £5 to the man Townsend as compensation for the injuries which he received. This is not only creditable to Mr. Rowley, but especially significant in view of the fact that he is Chairman of the St. Neots Bench. Evidently Mr. Rowley, like everybody else, disapproves of the extraordinary decision given by his colleagues.

Sir Peter Edlin last week sentenced a young woman to three years' penal servitude for the theft of an umbrella. Her fate should give pause to many worthy people who regard the annexation of somebody else's umbrella on a wet day as a perfectly legitimate stroke of business. Habitués of clubs and other places where men do congregate may, however, find it difficult to break away from a long-established custom. For their consolation I ought, perhaps, to add that the young woman at Clerkenwell was an old offender. Even Sir Peter would probably let off a beginner with something less than three years.

An Inland Revenue prosecution, which closely resembles an act of persecution, came before the Hythe magistrates last week. George Mintram was summoned for killing a pheasant without a licence. He had been previously convicted of poaching in respect of the same bird, and the Bench inquired whether it was the practice of the Inland Revenue to institute the further charge under such circumstances. Mr. Knox, the supervisor, replied in the affirmative. By the way of showing, no doubt, that Mintram was being let off very lightly, Mr. Knox added that he could be fined four times under the Game Act—for trespass, for taking game without a licence, for taking it on a Sunday, and for taking it out of season. It would hardly surprise me to learn that forty charges can be brought against a poacher, so ingeniously are the game laws framed. But I am certainly astounded by the statement of the Supervisor as to the practice of the Inland Revenue. It seems to me that he is egregiously mistaken, for such cases are, if not unprecedented, most uncommon. Even the Hythe J.P.'s, for whom I can rarely say a favourable word, deprecated this attempt to punish the defendant a second time, and inflicted only a nominal penalty.

Another poaching case which calls for notice occurred the other day at Newport (Isle of Wight) County Petty Sessions. A man named Cook was summoned for an offence under the Poaching Prevention Act. It appeared, however, that the policeman who found the defendant on a public footpath in possession of a ferret and nets had been a little "too previous." Cook could only be convicted if the nets had been recently used, and it was the Constable's impression that they had not been so used but that defendant was "about to begin work." Admiral de Horsey and his colleagues were accordingly compelled to dismiss the case. But there was another charge against Cook of assaulting the Constable, and on this he was sentenced to a fortnight's hard labour. The Constable was struck because he persisted in making a seizure of nets, &c., which, as it turned out, he had no right to make. Cook doubtless knew that the seizure was unjustifiable, and it is monstrous that he should be punished thus severely for resisting it.

In the Glasgow Sheriff Court, last week, a man was convicted of bigamy. It was not a case of cruel deception, the defendant having informed the girl with whom he went through the second ceremony that he was already a married man. Nevertheless, Sheriff Guthrie passed a sentence of fourteen days' imprisonment on the ground that the defendant had been guilty of a fraud upon the public and upon the clergyman. Not for a moment would I suggest that a man who deliberately commits bigamy should altogether escape punishment. At the same time, I fail to perceive why misleading the clergyman should be regarded as an aggravation of the crime. The sentence was apparently increased on this account, and therefore it was too heavy.

Mr. Charlesworth was summoned before the Chesterfield Magistrates for having allowed a horse to stray on the highway. The defendant's case was that for a period of upwards of fifty years he had grazed his cattle on the strips of land between his boundary fence and the metalled part of the highway, and on the particular occasion he had sent the horse with a bridle on in charge of his daughter who led the animal with a rope. A constable and a witness swore that the defendant's daughter was some distance from the horse, and that it was standing partly on the metalled part of the road. On this evidence the defendant was fined. So far there is no cause of complaint, for if the evidence was correct the defendant was liable to a fine. The remarkable feature in the case, however, was a dictum laid down by the Chairman, that the fifty years' use of the strips for grazing purposes on the part of the defendant gave him no right to pasture on them. If this be correct (which I take the liberty to doubt) a vast number of rights of pasture will be affected.

A police prosecution before the Newport (Mon.) Magistrates for allowing drunkenness on licensed premises broke down the other day in consequence of evidence that the alleged drunken man, his hat having suddenly blown off, had chased it down the road, replaced it on his head, and driven home in his donkey-cart. It appears that this is the second police prosecution against the same publican that has broken down within a few weeks, and on behalf of the landlord it was alleged that the house in question (St. Julian's Inn) was the subject of an intolerable system of police espionage. It seems inconceivable that in the first-mentioned case the police honestly believed the man to be drunk. The truth undoubtedly is that publicans who are honestly trying to carry on their business respectably are at present in many parts of the kingdom the victims of an organised police persecution, and Magistrates ought to be a great deal readier than they are to recognise the true state of the case.

FIELALBO.—Cleans buff gloves, belts, liveries, girths, shoes, &c. Perfectly white. Guaranteed not to rub off. Supersedes pipeclay. —FIELALBO Co., 31, Francis-street, Woolwich. Sample free.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER. Restores the colour. Renews the growth. Arrests the fall. Cleanses the scalp.

An extraordinary statement is published by the Scotch papers in connection with the attempt of Laurie, the Arran murderer, to escape from Peterhead Prison. It is alleged that as a punishment for such an attempt the convict has a belt of iron rivetted around his waist, that similar bands are put round his ankles, and that these are all bound together by heavy metal chains, which entirely prevent the use of his legs in running, and considerably restrict his steps in walking. The belts and chains, it is added, have to be worn night and day. The correspondent, who has drawn my attention to the subject, thinks that it is "horrible" to torture a man in this way. It is so horrible as to be almost incredible. The prison authorities will, I hope, lose no time in showing that the report is untrue.

Judging from recent executions in the United States by electricity, I do not think, were I condemned to death, that I should select this mode of leaving the world. The objection to hanging is that it is not absolutely mechanical, and a good deal depends upon the skill of the operator. I once saw a man garotted at Havannah. This is a very ingenious process. The patient sits on a chair, an iron band attached to the back of the chair is passed round his neck; then a screw is turned, on which the band squeezes the neck, and a spike is forced into the spine. On the whole, however, I should prefer to be guillotined, and I have often wondered why we do not adopt this form of execution; still more have I wondered why the Americans, when they gave up hanging, did not adopt it.

Mr. Justice Lawrance deserves public thanks for his onslaught at Liverpool Assizes upon a money-lender who prosecuted a luckless woman for obtaining £5 from him by a forged promissory note. It was the usual story in such cases. Shylock appeared to have held the forgery over his victim in terrorem until her payments fell into arrear, and then he set the criminal law in motion. The Judge addressed him thus:—

> You can't succeed in a case like this. This is not a Court to collect your debts for you. It is bad enough for people to fall into your hands at all, foolish, silly people as they are. If you conduct a business like this, you must conduct it properly. If you come on people for committing forgery you must take proceedings at once, and not hold the matter over their heads. . . . . Prosecutors who come here must come with clean hands, which they have not in this case.

I commend these remarks, enforced as they were by a verdict of "not guilty," to the attention of those West-end usurers who, as the Judge observed in the course of his remarks, "like nothing better than to have a forged bill in their possession."

The man Binet, of the "National Detective Agency," made his congé at the Old Bailey last week, prior to commencing a term of twelve months' hard labour in one of the retreats provided for the purpose. I regret to hear that "the celebrated lady detective," who was advertised as the other leading spirit of the Agency, is still at large; but if it be true, as Binet asserts, that she has returned to domestic service, she will no doubt find many suitable opportunities of displaying her peculiar talents. She might be specially recommended as a real treasure to families contemplating an appearance in the Divorce Court. As regards Binet himself, the police cannot be too highly praised for the activity with which they have brought the man to justice. He was committed for trial within two months of the first exposure of the swindle in TRUTH—an excellent precedent.

Those who let furnished houses and lodgings should be on their guard against a "rogue and vagabond," who occasionally gives the name of "Aubrey D. Bellasys." He is described as a tall, good-looking man, of American accent and manners, wearing a long brown coat and a felt hat. One of his stories is that he is engaged on the staff of the New York Tribune, and he pretends to be a friend of Mr. Henry Irving and other celebrities. He wants rooms pending the arrival of his luggage, but he invariably departs, without notice, before the luggage arrives. He is reported to be one of a gang who are very busy just now, and those who take him in will find that he invariably returns the compliment.

Great Britain and Ireland are not the only countries favoured by the gang who run the Spanish Prison trick. An Austrian paper reports an attempt to victimise in this manner a worthy householder in Gleisdorf. There is a novel feature in this instance in the fact that the proprietor of the buried treasure professes to have been "Secretary" to our old friend Osman Digna, by whom he had been sent on a confidential mission through Europe with the treasure—comprising 4,000,000 francs and valuable State papers. The story this time is told from Madrid, and replies are to be sent, if the German paper has got the address correctly, to "Señor Don Antonio Pena-Toledo, No. 59, Principal interior de recha, Madrid." In vain have I called upon our Government to set the Spanish authorities in motion against this gang of thieves. The German Foreign Office is more energetic, and perhaps it may be induced to take steps for the protection of its subjects.

"Captain" MacVeigh, of Dumfries, is not yet suppressed, I am sorry to see. A gentleman of Scottish family, living at Handsworth, has just received from him a request to purchase the "Scottish Family History" at the modest price of seven guineas, MacVeigh pretending, as usual, that he has been advised to write by "a friend." In reply to an inquiry addressed to him respecting his connection with the work, MacVeigh further stated on this occasion that "the book can only be had from me." This, as many readers of TRUTH are aware, is false. The book in question is the work of another man. MacVeigh obtained possession of a number of copies by a trick, and had them bound up with a title-page representing himself to be the author. Those who desire to obtain the work in its unpirated form should apply to the original publishers, Messrs. Virtue & Co.

SPA, BELGIUM (10 hours from London and Paris.) Racing, tennis, golf, pigeon-shooting, &c. Splendid Casino, with theatre, &c. Waters unrivalled in cases of anæmia and dyspepsia

I learn from one who has known him for many years that Sir Charles Algernon Coote, whose begging letters have lately been referred to in TRUTH, is, as might be inferred from his mode of living, a person in every way undeserving of charitable support. Although he traces his troubles to his sufferings from rheumatism, it would seem that he has really been brought to his present condition by a cause far less deserving of sympathy. I would strongly recommend those to whom he refers as having assisted him, to insist on his ceasing to make further use of their names in this way.

There is no fraud now before the public which brings me more correspondence than the penny-in-the-slot machine that refuses to work but continues to receive pennies. This swindle is now in operation in all parts of the metropolis and the provinces. How should it be met? The victim usually refrains from writing to the proprietor, feeling that this means spending a penny in order to recover a penny. He is tempted to assault the machine, and occasionally yields to the temptation, but the only result of this is his appearance before a Magistrate. In the vast majority of cases the victims are little children, who, not knowing what to do, drop a tear or two over the lost penny and say no more about it. A gentleman residing at Chingford tells me that the sight of the children continually crying round fraudulent machines in the neighbourhood of Epping Forest is quite heartrending. Between the children who don't know what to do, and the adults who won't take the trouble to do anything, the penny-in-the-slot business must be a highly profitable one.

I assume that the proprietors of these machines desire to be honest, and honesty is obviously their best policy; for the man, woman, or child who has once put a penny into the slot without any result, is not likely to invest another penny in the same way for a considerable time. I would, therefore, suggest that on every machine there should be the name and address of some one close at hand to whom application should be made in the event of the apparatus refusing to act. There would be little or no difficulty in doing this, and it might always be done at railway stations and holiday resorts, where there are large numbers of the machines, and where they do a large business. The agent ought to have a key in order to return the money of the party making the complaint, and to close the slot until the machine is in working order again.

Much dissatisfaction prevails among the candidates at the last South Kensington Art examinations. Among thirty pupils of one well-known School of Art only five certificates were awarded, and one of those who failed to obtain a certificate had taken a second-class in the lower grade last year, and was expected to do even better this year. I am told on good authority that this result is far more due to the incompetence of the examiners than that of the pupils. It is not a matter in which I can myself express an opinion, but any statement imputing inefficiency to South Kensington officials is a priori credible.

There is no end to the new inducements to people to get out of London at any opportunity. Residents in and visitors to the Isle of Thanet are to be favoured on next and all following Saturdays during the season with a fast midnight train from Victoria to Westgate, Margate, and Ramsgate, reaching the latter place at 2 a.m. Mr. Forbes has specially designed this convenience for the benefit of the theatrical and journalistic professions, who will thus be enabled to get the whole of Sunday at the sea-side.

I should like to know the total amount of the coal output two years ago; the amount of cash received for the output; the amount paid in wages, including in wages the rent for free cottages; the amount paid in royalties, and the amount at 5 per cent. of interest on capital expenditure; and to have the same figures for the present year. It would then be possible to arrive at a conclusion as to the merits or demerits of the demands of the men. I have no doubt that competition between coal-owners has reduced the price of coal. But what does this mean? That, owing to trade being bad, all coal produced cannot find a market unless the price be low. The doctrine — so far as I understand it — of the men is, that reduction in price is the result of competition, and that it ought to be met by a combination of coal-owners to keep up prices. But if it can be shown that at higher prices the volume of sales would be reduced, the only result of a rise in selling price would be to limit output; for it is evident that industries dependent upon a large consumption of coal might have to close were coal above a certain price. I am all for men getting a fair day's wage for a fair day's work; at the same time, nothing is more certain than that an employer will not employ unless he gets some profit by doing so. The question, consequently, is, after ascertaining the gross profit on a ton of coals, whether this profit is fairly shared between employer and employed? This is why I say that the men are in the wrong in refusing arbitration, although, for all that I know to the contrary, they may be right on the actual issue.

At a village in North Wiltshire, I hear, the benighted farmers refused to attend the annual rent dinner at the inn because the landlord had been guilty of the outrage of allowing the labourers to hold their Union meetings in his house! One of the farmers was actually so infatuated as to write to the Crown authorities (who are the principal landowners in the parish) protesting against the publican allowing meetings of the Labourers' Union to be held in his house. Surely the labourers are as much at liberty to combine together for their own protection as are the farmers.

BRUSSELS.—The GRAND HOTEL. Magnificent establishment. Central position. Latest English hygienic improvements. Post, telegraph, and ticket offices. Unrivalled cuisine and cuisine.—DUBONNET, Propr.

In preparation for the approaching sporting season, ladies and gentlemen should visit Ulster House, Conduit-street, W., where their orders for every kind of garment will have prompt and careful attention.

Following on the attempt of Mr. C. J. Leyland to stop access to Cheviot, the Alnwick Guardian reports another piece of landlord encroachment in the same part of the world, namely, the enclosure of a hill known as "Beal Bank" at the south end of Warkworth Village. This is on the Duke of Northumberland's property, and everybody professes the utmost certainty that the act must be that of an under strapper, and unknown to "the Duke"—who is spoken of in the district with bated breath. Time will show. After the public notice that the matter has now received, "the Duke" cannot any longer be regarded as ignorant of what has been done. This is another of the cases where the Village Council, when it comes, will find its work all ready cut out.

In the World of last week it was stated that at the Liberal headquarters in Parliament-street the authorities are of opinion that there will be no appeal to the country till towards the end of next year, and that the proof of this is a circular addressed to the Liberal agents throughout the country by Mr. Hudson. As a matter of fact, neither Mr. Hudson, nor any other authority, has issued any circular of the sort.

Here is a letter from a Conservative with reference to one of Commissary-General Hamley's touting circulars for the "Junior Conservative Club." I have already shown that the concern is not "Conservative," because it is recruited indiscriminately from the Post Office Directory, and Liberals are invited to join on the same terms as Conservatives. My present correspondent argues, very justly, that it is only a "bogus" political club:—

DEAR SIR,—I enclose some papers relating to an institution called the Junior Conservative Club. I have been pestered with these circulars for some time past. I have complained to Lord Londonderry and to another member of the Committee of the use they allow to be made of their names. But all to no purpose. The circulars still come. If the club is supposed to be a representative one of the Conservative Party, then I am not a Conservative.

To you, an opponent, because it is apparently of no use applying elsewhere, I apply to assist me in getting rid of this nuisance by making public the scandal of supposing that anything but a bogus club could be conducted on a subscription of one guinea a year.

If the representative men of the Party can't or won't put this sort of thing down, then God help the Conservative Party, for it must be in a very bad way.—Your obedient servant,

JOHN R. ADAMS.

July 22, 1893.

The Rangoon Times reports that the Theebaw Sawba has arrived at Rangoon on his way to England, and that "he and his followers are located in an empty house in Pagoda-road, devoid of furniture or even mats; the party having to use their own carpets to sit on." The Rangoon paper remarks that a little more attention on the part of the local Government to our frontier chiefs might be more politic. So I should think. I have no idea who the Theebaw Sawba is, nor what is his business in England, but considering the amount of expense and anxiety which the maintenance of the frontiers of the Empire involves, I should have thought we could not be too civil to any frontier potentate who is disposed to be friendly. Theebaw Sawba is coming to England for two years, I understand, so there will be time to make it up to him.

The future Governors of Victoria are to be paid only £7,500 a year, instead of £10,000, which is Lord Hopetoun's salary. Formerly this too lavish Colony paid her Governor £15,000 a year. It is impossible to understand why the Governor of Victoria should have been paid £10,000 a year, while the salary in New South Wales is only £7,500.

Lord Rosebery appears to have disappointed the Jingoes in his treatment of the Franco-Siamese dispute. His action has been all that could be desired. Mr. Curzon and Lord Lamington evidently imagined that the fact of their having visited Siam conferred upon its territory a sacred character, and made it part and parcel of the British Empire. Lord Rosebery, in his communications with the French Government, utterly ignored these pretensions, and confined himself to delicately hinting that whilst we could not pretend to any right of interference between France and Siam, we ought to have a voice in the disposal of certain territories that we ceded to Siam on the distinct understanding that they should remain under our rule, and that a blockade, to be recognised by neutrals, must be in accordance with international law.

That the territory east of the Mekong River and north of the 18th parallel is of any use, either to us or to France, or to Siam, I greatly doubt, except that its nominal possession by the last Power prevents our frontier marching with that of France. The territory is inhabited by certain Shan tribes, who are robbers when they get a chance, but with whom the chance comes seldom, as there is seldom anything to rob. As I said last week, the buffer-State doctrine is a questionable one, and even if admitted to be sound, it is still more questionable whether such a "no man's land" would serve the purpose of a buffer-State. A portion of the territory, moreover, is claimed by China, and any European Power seeking to exercise sway there might bring down upon it those exceedingly disagreeable hordes termed the Black Flags.

The blockade question is a very simple one. If a country goes to war with another, and, after due notice, effectively blockades its ports, all neutral countries have to accept the fact, and if any of their merchant vessels endeavour to leave or enter the blockaded ports, they are liable to seizure, and to be condemned as good capture by Prize Courts. But if the ports are blockaded without a declaration of war, then it can only be effective against the flag of the State owning the ports, and neutrals have free entry and exit. There is no rule of international law more certain than this. When the French blockaded the Chinese Ports, it was fully admitted by France. During the American Civil War, the Southern Ports were not closed by a blockade, but closed by their being declared by the de jure Government of the country no longer Ports of Entry.

MAJOR HOWE & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. [Klenrusha, Polish.)

In France, by a law which Radicals have always desired should exist here, the Executive cannot declare war without the assent of the Chamber. M. Carnot, therefore, could only declare a blockade against the Siamese flag, which is not operative against neutrals. The question of the effect of a "peaceful blockade" had absolutely nothing to do with the rights or the wrongs of the dispute between Siam and France. Had a neutral vessel been seized under it a Prize Court would have declared that it was not good capture.

Another View of the Siamese Question.

Said the native in his rice-patch,
On the banks of the Mē-Kong,
"For myself, and for my neighbours,
Things are going very wrong.
We are hunted by French soldiers
If we show ourselves on land;
We are shot at by French gun-boats
If we venture near the strand;
We are threatened and we're bullied
By the white men from Annam—
I should like to know the reason,"
Said the native of Siam.

"They say that France is trying,
Here across the ocean's foam,
To obtain some compensation
For the mess she's in at home.
They say she's cross with England,
That the blows at us she's dealt
Are, in point of fact, intended
By that country to be felt;
But whatever her intention,
My own ruin is no sham,
And I cannot understand it,"
Said the native of Siam.

"Why should ever my poor country
Have been made a 'Buffer State'?
Why should strife 'twixt France and England
Bring on me so harsh a fate?
Surely those great Christian nations
Have sufficient of their own,
And might mercifully leave me
And my paddy field alone.
When the wolves begin to quarrel
They at least might spare the lamb;
But I fear they mean to eat it,"
Sighed the native of Siam.

Nothing is easier than to say that we will pass British reforms in the autumn. Nothing is more difficult than to do it. And this is the opinion of those practically acquainted with the working of the House of Commons. With the Estimates unpassed, and with a number of comparatively lesser Bills to carry, I am inclined to think that the Unionists might render our task, not only difficult, but impossible. So far as I am personally concerned, I like an Autumn Session, for I neither hunt nor shoot, and I find the House of Commons as agreeable a place in the autumn as anywhere else. I, however, really believe that if we carry over all Bills now before the House, and unpassed, to next year, meet early in January, and devote the Session entirely to British reforms, we shall have made greater progress this time next year than if we try to force through measures this autumn. If I had my way, I should adjourn, after the Home Rule Bill is carried, until the middle of October, then pass the Estimates, and Bills such as the Employers' Liability Bill, that have come out of a Grand Committee, then prorogue, and meet again in the first week of January. Freed from the incubus of Home Rule, we might, between January and August next year, pass most of the items of the Newcastle Programme. If the Lords throw out any of the Bills that we send up to them, this would only be to our advantage at the General Election, which can hardly be put off beyond the end of next year's Session.

On that election we ought to concentrate all our thoughts, and subordinate everything else to winning it. We have only recently emerged from six years of Tory misrule; it would indeed be a terrible thing if we were landed in a second six years of misrule.

"The Bill" is now through Committee. As a Bill granting Home Rule to Ireland, it leaves much to be desired, for it relegates to the future most of the principal issues involved in Home Rule, whilst, by leaving the Irish to vote on all British matters, it renders it very probable that the Irish will—and I do not blame them—subordinate their votes on all such questions to what they regard as the interest of their own country. I should have preferred a finality Bill, granting full Home Rule to Ireland, and absolving the Irish from the necessity of attending the Westminster Parliament for at least the next ten years.

When we have passed the Bill in the Commons, we shall have fulfilled our pledge to the Irish, for we shall have spent the Session on the Bill to the exclusion of British reforms. We were elected to carry reforms both in Great Britain and in Ireland; it would, therefore, be absurd to allow the action of the House of Lords to precipitate an election before we have dealt with British reforms. The question is how and when we are to deal with the latter. We have stood by the Irish; it is their turn to stand by us.

There is but one remedy for last Thursday's incident in the House of Commons. The scene is only one more proof that a Parliament charged with control over the British Empire, and over every local issue in the United Kingdom, is invested with functions so multifarious that it cannot properly perform them, and that the endeavour tends to convert the Commons into a mob, and to render it necessary to suppress legitimate discussion. The remedy is Home Rule all round, with an Imperial Parliament at Westminster. This Session has furnished us with two object-lessons—1. A Bill fundamentally altering the relations between Great Britain and Ireland is—or, I ought to say, will be—passed, the principal clauses of which have not been discussed. 2. The great Council of the nation has been degraded by a physical struggle that reduced it to the level of a ring at a prize-fight. Unless we recognise these portents, and strive by a radical reform in the constitution of Parliament to remedy them, we shall go from bad to worse, and the principle of popular Government will succumb to vices which are inherent in our application of it.

Herefordshire Cider & Perry, six distinct varieties. Gold Medal, Paris, 1888. The Bishop of Ely writes, 1892, "Your Cider & Perry are excellent." List from H.P. Bulmer & Co., Rylands, Hereford.

SCRUTATOR.

THE FRACAS IN THE HOUSE.

THE blood of some persons is always boiling, and when this occurs it invariably produces a general condition of excitability. Mine seldom boils, and therefore I was able to follow calmly, if regretfully, the wondrous scene that took place in the House of Commons last Thursday. The causa causans was Mr. Chamberlain, and the immediate causes were Sir E. Ashmead-Bartlett, Mr. Carson, and Mr. Hayes Fisher.

Just before ten o'clock Mr. Chamberlain concluded a few observations of the usual acrid character, by comparing Mr. Gladstone to Herod, and his followers to the servile crew who proclaimed that monarch to be a god. This historical epigram, as the Times terms it, was not, it would seem, unparliamentary But it can hardly be said to have been complimentary, and the cry of "Judas" arose from the Irish Benches. Now, "Judas" is unparliamentary. When Mr. Mellor put the question then before the House (an amendment of Mr. John Redmond), Mr. Vicary Gibbs, sitting in his place, and with his hat on his head, as is the rule when a Member wishes to address the Chair after a division has been called, sought to convey to Mr. Mellor that this cry of "Judas" had been raised. But there was such shouting on both sides that Mr. Mellor could not hear him. The Unionists, therefore, insisted upon remaining in their seats until the word "Judas" had been, as it is called, written down, or, in other words, until official cognisance had been taken of it. The Liberals and the Nationalists, on the other hand, began to file off into their lobby. But many remained standing below the bar, and consequently the exit was blocked. Thus a number of the members who had left their seats remained on the floor of the House, not being able to get through the door. Mr. Logan had found himself in the wrong lobby, and passed by the front Opposition Bench in order to get to the entrance into the Government lobby, and he paused to endeavour to hear what Mr. Vicary Gibbs was shouting. On the Opposition Bench, most of whose usual tenants had left it, sat Mr. Carson. He had already attracted attention owing to the yells in which he had been indulging to beguile the time and to relieve his feelings. He is by no means an ugly man, but his expression is suggestive of Law Courts, and not exactly of those portions of them which are occupied by the Bench or by the Bar; indeed, Nature has so fashioned his face that any theatrical manager to whom he applied for an engagement would at once engage him for Iago, if he contemplated producing "Othello." Seeing Mr. Logan near him, this Iago commenced at once to assail him with scurrilous abuse, and urged him to join the "gang of gaggers." On Mr. Logan mildly suggesting that his observations were somewhat impertinent, Mr. Carson and his friends shouted "Bar," a cry which is raised when any one is standing on the floor of the House whilst a debate is progressing, but which was out of place during a division. Mr. Logan, however, recognising that he was technically out of order in standing, at once sank into the nearest seat that was vacant. On this Mr. Fisher grasped him by his collar and pushed him forward, whilst Sir E. Ashmead-Bartlett dragged at him by his heels. The Nationalists who perceived the assault, believing that the whole Tory party would fall on Mr. Logan, pressed forward across the gangway. Their advance was resisted by the Tories. A mêlée occurred, during which blows and pushes were exchanged.

I have no doubt that Mr. Chamberlain indulged in his historical epigram, when the clock was on the stroke of the fatal ten o'clock, in the hopes that a scene of some sort would occur. He, therefore, was the causa causans. Mr. Carson, whose uproarious conduct had attracted attention before Mr. Logan had come between the wind and his nobility, improved the occasion by insolent personal abuse. When Mr. Logan met this by obeying the imperious orders to him to sit down, Mr. Fisher and Sir E. Ashmead-Bartlett, finding that verbal insults did not suffice to create a disturbance, proceeded to assault him, and when the Nationalists pressed forward to prevent further violence to a Home Ruler, they were received with blows, and naturally returned them. It is the old story of the wolf and the lamb. The wolf now finds fault with the lamb.

I have seen it stated that Mr. Logan had no right to take a vacant seat on the front Opposition Bench. This is nonsense. If when the House is clearing for a division, a Member puts on his hat and addresses the Speaker or Chairman, any one standing near any particular Bench at once takes a seat on it, irrespective of his political affinities. Mr. Logan was invited to sit down by Mr. Carson and his friends, and then these friends proceeded to assault him for doing so. As a matter of fact, a Conservative was sitting by my side on the front bench below the gangway during the whole of the scene. It never occurred to me or to the other occupants of the Bench to take exception; still less to lay violent hands on him.

Why to call a man Herod should be Parliamentary, and to call a man Judas should not be, I do not know. There is very little to choose between these two Hebrews, but I think that Herod was the worse of the pair; and certainly the comparison of Mr. Chamberlain to Judas is more appropriate than that of Mr. Gladstone to Herod. The Prime Minister has not killed his wife, nor has he ever allowed the head of a divine to be served up on charger at the request of a niece. Mr. Chamberlain, on the other hand, did join Mr. Gladstone's Cabinet, and, having joined it, he did his best to upset it, precisely as Judas joined the Apostles, and used his position as one of them to work out his wicked ends. As to what followed after Herod had got rid of his wife, and Judas of his Master, there is as little similarity between Judas and Mr. Chamberlain, as between Mr. Gladstone and Herod. Herod was eaten by worms, Mr. Gladstone tramples on the worms and other creeping things that would devour him. Mr. Chamberlain has not hanged himself from despair, nor is he likely to do so. Far from repenting, he glories in his misdeeds, and, whilst still insisting that he is more of a Liberal than those from whom he has cut adrift, he is a favoured guest in the Halls of the Pharisees; he dines with Caiaphas, and sups with Pilate. Having rallied to the Party that he has been pleased to call that of "the gentlemen of England," he does yeoman service to the "gentlemen," for, as a debater, he has few equals, and gives almost every day proof of his forensic talent by arguing against all that in days gone by he advocated. Whether his mode of warfare is likely to strengthen the claim of the Conservative Party to the title of the gentlemen of England, may, it is true, be a question.

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers, solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

But, after all, what harm does it do a man to be compared to Judas or Herod? Public men should not be too touchy. If Mr. Chamberlain dislikes being called Judas, why should he not believe that the reference is to Judas Maccabæus, and take it as a compliment that he is compared to that gallant warrior?

The studied insults, the assaults, and the rowdyism of the Unionists are part of their plan of campaign. They are pitting the House of Lords against the House of Commons, and their object is to endeavour to degrade the latter in order to exalt the former. Scenes are desired by them, and the more disreputable they are the better are they pleased. We had last week a sample of their Michelstown tactics. In that Irish town, a quiet, peaceable crowd had assembled to listen to speeches, and was attacked by the police. After the Nationalists had been bludgeoned and shot down, they were accused of being the assailants, and the country was asked to realise how unfit the Irish were for self-government. Beaten at the polls, the Unionists are transferring their tactics to the House of Commons in the desperate hope of persuading the country that the Radicals are unfit to rule. If they are no longer able to bludgeon Nationalists in Ireland, they console themselves by roughly treating Englishmen in the House of Commons.

These reckless men have dealt a blow to the good name of the country which will be with difficulty effaced. Our House of Commons has served as a model to other nations when seeking to establish representative government. There have before been noisy and not very edifying scenes, but between them and the ignoble quarrel of last Thursday there is a wide interval. What will foreign nations think of us? What will our Colonies? What homilies our Press would have read to Servians or to Bulgarians, to Australians or to New Zealanders, had such a scene taken place in the Representative Assembly of one of these countries. Our Parliament is no mere local Council. It is Imperial and it is the ultimate Court of Appeal for nearly half the civilised world. With loss of respect, it must lose its place, of primacy. The hisses from the public gallery, the sneers of those on board the steamboats passing before the terrace of its Palace, will be echoed far and wide. Every Englishman, reading what occurred, felt a sense of shame. And rightly. For a reputation built on centuries was shattered.

The proceedings on Monday in the House in respect to the fracas were, I think, a mistake, and the right note was struck by Mr. Justin McCarthy. In Paradise the lion, we are told, will lie down with the lamb, but in Paradise the lion and the lamb will not have to submit their rival political views to the arbitrament of a General Election. The homilies of Mr. Speaker, of Mr. Gladstone, of Mr. Balfour, and of Sir Henry James were in excellent taste, and would have been to the point had the fracas occurred without witnesses from outside, and without the public having been informed by various witnesses inside of what had occurred. It was, therefore, as it seemed to me, an ostrich notion to suppose that, by the House agreeing to bury the matter in oblivion, it would be so buried. By the agreement that Mr. Fisher and Mr. Logan should each express his regret, the impression was conveyed that both had been equally in the wrong. Now, Mr. Logan had been in no way wrong, whereas Mr. Fisher had. The gravamen as regards the House and the country was that blows, for the first time in two centuries, had been exchanged between Members in the House. Mr. Fisher had admitted that he had had recourse to physical aggression. Mr. Logan, when subjected to this aggression, had not replied in kind, although an athlete who could, had he been so minded, have pulverised his assailant. It is true that Mr. Fisher stated that he had been under the impression that Mr. Logan contemplated attacking him or his friends. For this there was not a vestige of evidence; indeed, it is not easy to understand how Mr. Fisher could have imagined this, as Mr. Logan was seated when attacked on one bench with his back turned to Mr. Fisher, who was seated on the bench behind him. Obviously, Mr. Fisher had resented Mr. Logan seating himself on the front Opposition Bench, and the attack upon him was due to his having done so. This is a Gladstone Parliament. The tendency of the public will be, consequently, to consider that the Liberals are responsible for what occurred, and that a Gladstone Parliament is inferior in decorum and good manners to a Salisbury Parliament, whilst the habitual abuse of the Irish Members as rowdies by the Unionist Press will lead many to credit the vague asseverations of these journals that the Irish were, in some mysterious way, at the bottom of the matter. This could only be met by accentuating the fact that Mr. Fisher had most improperly resorted to physical force, and that, as he himself wrote, this was the signal for the scrimmage. No Committee of Investigation was needed to collect proof of this. We had Mr. Fisher's own word for it. Under these circumstances, Mr. Fisher ought to have been punished. He and his friends might have pleaded that he was under great excitement. This plea might have served him in mitigation of punishment, but punishment there ought to have been.

I fully appreciate the wish of the Speaker and of others to let bygones be bygones. But the country had a right to exact something more than an apology from the gentleman whose action led to the most disgraceful scene that ever took place in Parliament, and the Liberal Party had a right to demand that this fact should be officially recognised by the temporary suspension of Mr. Fisher. I say this from no personal feeling against Mr. Fisher, who, I believe, is, under ordinary circumstances, a most estimable gentleman. But facts are facts, and I see no reason why they should be ignored, and Liberals and Irishmen be rendered responsible for a fracas which was not the result of any action of theirs.

FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

The Times has not been long in showing the determination of the Unionist Press to make capital out of the "kiss of peace." On Tuesday it published an article on the subject. Taking for its text a letter that it inserts in its columns from the Spectator, it commends it to all "who desire to apportion the blame with accuracy and justice." The letter states that it was the Irish party that shouted "Judas"; the Gladstonian party that shouted down Mr. Gibbs; the Gladstonian party that stood on the floor of the House; Mr. Logan who flung himself on the Conservative front Bench; and the Irish Members who invaded the Conservative Benches to assist Mr. Logan. A more utter perversion of fact by suggestio falsi et suppressio veri I never read. Not one word about Mr. Fisher's action. The article itself throws all blame on Mr. Gladstone, the Liberals, and the Nationalists. The affray was possible, because "upon the most trifling provocation, or upon none at all, the Irish supporters of Mr. Gladstone fill the House of Commons with noises worthy only of pot-house brawlers. Their conduct is a perpetual outrage and insult." Because "the Opposition is dominated by the physical force of their brazen lungs;" because of "the unheard-of violence of Mr. Gladstone's legislative methods;" because Mr. Gladstone has not "given to the Speaker or the Chairman that assistance in maintaining the decency and decorum of debate that they have a right to expect," but "has connived at Irish rowdyism because it suited his purpose:" therefore, in an "atmosphere of persistent and brutal coercion, every form of disorder and brutal coercion naturally flourishes, and it may be well doubted whether any race less patient and phlegmatic than our own would have come so well through the ordeal." What does all this mean? For "race," "Unionists" must be read. The Unionists, therefore, never shout, they did not howl "Gag! gag;" they did not insist upon remaining in the House when a division was called; Mr. Fisher did not attempt to drag Mr. Logan out of a seat. Models of dignified Senators, they sat silent under contumely and insult. When at length they proceeded to blows, they are told that no other human beings would have come so well out of the ordeal. They are, in fact, angels, not men, sadly, calmly contemplating scenes repugnant to their celestial virtues, until a noble indignation gets the better of them, and they proceed to administer punishment to the fiends by whom they are surrounded. Positively they are almost blamed for being too patient and too phlegmatic. This is the only fault in otherwise perfect natures, and, if they only act upon the moral inculcated, they will in future be more ready to rebuke with their fists the demoralised herd that, under the leadership of that arch-fiend, Mr. Gladstone, is converting the august Council of the nation into a bear garden. What more evidence is needed that with such opponents the Liberals cannot hope for fair play, and that they ought to have insisted upon an official recognition that the Tory who boasted of having sought to drag a Liberal out of his seat, and having thus given the signal for the scrummage, should have been adequately punished?

THE VICTORIA VERDICT.

The Victoria Court-martial has endorsed the general verdict previously pronounced by public opinion throughout the country. That the disaster was primarily due to the mistake of the Commander-in-Chief was a foregone conclusion. The Court, however, express, parenthetically, "regret" in regard to one point in Rear-Admiral Markham's share of the transaction, and this is really the matter of most importance raised by the inquiry. So far as Admiral Tryon's blunder is concerned, the milk is spilt, and it is little use to say more about it; but the question of the responsibility of an inferior officer in the face of a patent blunder on the part of his superior has a deep and abiding interest for the Service and the public. The Court-martial limits its expression of regret to the fact that Rear-Admiral Markham did not signal to the Commander-in-Chief his doubt respecting the fatal order. But suppose that he had done this. Something approaching to a remonstrance in regard to the order had already been addressed to Sir George Tryon by the Captain of his own ship; but it had only resulted in the Admiral emphatically repeating his previous instructions. Rear-Admiral Markham did, in point of fact, go the length of ordering the signal which the Court considers should have been made; but it was intercepted by the peremptory inquiry from the flagship as to why the Camperdown was keeping the fleet waiting. From these facts, it seems only too probable that even had Admiral Markham signalled his inability to understand, the reply would have been something more or less to the effect of "Mind your own business and do as you are told." Sir George Tryon does not seem to have been a man with whom a subordinate could argue as to the propriety of his orders with any good effect. The vital question, therefore, remains, supposing that the Rear-Admiral had done what the Court thinks he should have done, and had been met with a peremptory repetition of the order, what would have been his duty then? To the average landsman it seems that his duty would be to disobey, as soon as he saw that obedience involved imminent peril to his own ship or another. That is the view which I have already enunciated. It seems to be supported by the general order of Sir George Tryon himself, which has been referred to in the course of the proceedings, and which is said to have been evoked by the stranding of the Howe. In this order a discretion in regard to obedience is clearly given to the commanding officer of a ship who sees that his ship would be imperilled by a literal execution of the instructions given to him. The finding of the Victoria Court-martial does not purport to deal with the point, though, so far as it goes, it tends in the direction of the "duty of disobedience." What, then, is now imperatively required is an authoritative ruling which will relieve commanders of H.M. ships of all doubt as to how they ought to act in such an emergency. The point is of too much importance to be left in any doubt.

To Overcome Weakness.—Pepper's Quinine and Iron Tonic gives New Life, Appetite, Health, Strength, Energy. Cures Neuralgia, Indigestion, Nerve Debility. Pepper's Tonic. Kepteverywhere.

Although the Court thinks otherwise, the original order does not seem to have been the only error of judgment which Sir George Tryon committed on this lamentable occasion. His order cancelling the summons to the boats of the other ships, if "wise" (as the Court consider it) in itself, can only have been founded on an utter misapprehension of the condition to which the Victoria was reduced by the collision. It has been said that this second order was prompted by anxiety for the safety of the boats should the Victoria sink; but this is only calling in a fresh error of judgment to negative the first. The boats called up could see and measure the risk for themselves, and the possibility of danger to them was as nothing beside the certainty of danger to the hundreds of unfortunates cast into the sea as the flagship sank. One boat, indeed, seems to have in this instance disobeyed the Admiral's order, and kept on her way to the sinking ship. Had this disobedience been more general, the loss of life might have been considerably reduced.

There is another matter to which I would draw attention in connection with the loss of life. It is said as one moral of the calamity that all men in the Navy should be taught to swim. By all means. To teach them all to swim, however, will be a matter of years, whereas, if a contract for the purpose were placed at once, every man in the Navy might have a life-belt at his disposal in a few weeks. Swimming is a very useful accomplishment, but if I were about to go down with a sinking ironclad, I would rather trust to a life-belt than to my own natatory powers. The very strongest swimmer would experience a difficulty in finding his way to the surface under such circumstances. When the Roumania was lost, an outcry was very properly raised over the absence of life-belts at the moment when they were wanted, and when they would have assisted many of the passengers to land. Passenger ships are compelled by law to carry life-belts sufficient for all on board. Why should such an obvious and wise precaution be neglected in the Navy? Had life-belts been available on board the Victoria, in the perfect order and discipline which prevailed, it is no exaggeration to say that every man who made his way on deck might have been saved.

Another question worth raising, while the ill-fated Victoria is still in the public recollection, is the means of communication between engine-room and bridge. Whatever the reason, it is clear that the order to put the Camperdown's engines full speed astern was not correctly conveyed to the engine-room. Whether any interruption of the communication occurred in the Victoria does not appear; but the engines continued to work till the ship disappeared, and it might have been supposed that, if he could have done so, the Admiral would have stopped the engines and ordered the engine-room staff to save themselves, when he saw that the end was at hand. There ought to be on every ship an alternative mode of communication, by speaking-tube or some similar method, which is not liable to be deranged, as electric communication is, just when it is most wanted, in time of storm, collision, grounding, or other emergency. Here, again, the merchant service is in many cases ahead of the Navy. Every matter of this kind ought now, while the iron is hot, to be sedulously hammered into the heads of our naval administrators. A catastrophe like the loss of the Victoria is, in these days of rapidly-moving events, no better than a nine days' wonder. Already it is passing out of the public mind. The lessons which it teaches, if they are to be learnt at all, must be learnt before the calamity is forgotten.

MACLEAN AND HIS SPONSORS.

In consequence of my article of last week on the present position of Mr. Angus Maclean's enterprise, I have received the following letter from Dr. Momerie:—

St. Ermin's Mansions, S.W., July 20, 1893.

Sir,—I was surprised to read in last week's Truth that I was an "honorary member" of Maclean's British and Foreign Association. I have no recollection of having given him permission to use my name. But if I ever did so, it must have been years ago, when I was younger and less wary, and I must have been deceived, as no doubt were the other "honorary members" whom you mention, by a fraudulent account of the purposes of the Association. I shall be much obliged if you will say that, now at any rate, I am not an honorary member. I am writing to Maclean to the same effect.—Your obedient servant,

Alfred Momerie.

I take it that the explanation which Dr. Momerie gives of his connection with the "British and Foreign Association" is very much what would be given by the various other distinguished individuals who are advertised as "honorary members" of this swindle. The extraordinary thing, however, is that again and again during the last two years the names of all these distinguished individuals have been published in Truth, Dr. Momerie's among them, their attention being at the same time called to the frauds which Maclean was perpetrating with the assistance of their names. Some few have responded, as Dr. Momerie has now done, and have informed me that they had ordered their names to be withdrawn; but the rest I have hitherto been unable to enlighten as to the undesirable position in which they were placed. As a final effort to open their eyes, I once more publish the list of "honorary members," revised up to date, as it is given in Maclean's latest programme of his swindle. Dr. Momerie's name I have, of course, eliminated:—

Honorary Members.

The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Dysart.
The Very Rev. The Dean of Lichfield.
Dr. Alberto Nin, Chargé d'Affaires, Uruguay.
Major the Hon. Horace Hobart Hampden.
S. F. Hoffnung, Esq., Hawaian Legation.
Senor A. Paz, Consul Gen. Argentine Repub.
Col. Sir Fitzroy D. Maclean, Bart.
Sir Robert Rawlinson, K.C.B.
Augustin Daly, Esq.
Edward Terry, Esq.
Edward Compton, Esq.
Henry A. Jones, Esq.
Robert Louis Stevenson, Esq.
Bret Harte, Esq.
Paul Blouet, Esq.
Prof. G. H. Darwin, Camb.
Prof. H. Alleyne Nicholson
Prof. A. A. MacDonell, Oxford
Prof. Robert Wallace, Edin.
Sir Frederick Pollock, Bart.
Sir D. Matheson, K.C.B., Glasgow.
Sir William Aitken, M.D.
Sir W. T. Lewis, Cardiff.
Sir R. N. Howard, Weymouth.
Alderman Sir H. Cochrane, D.L., J.P., Dublin.
Sir F. R. Hogg, K.C.I.E., C.S.I.
D. F. P. Barton, Esq., British Consul, Geneva.
Dorabjee P. Cama, Esq.
Sir James Miller, Bart., Manderston, N.B.
Prof. Dragomanov, Sofia
Prof. Sylvester, D.C.L., Oxford
Lady Florence Dixie
Mrs. Anthony Trollope
Mrs. Oscar Beringer
Miss Rosina Brandram
W. H. Grenfell, Esq.
Richard Tangye, Esq., F.R.G.S.
Mrs. Frank Leslie, New York
John Inglis, Esq., Glasgow
Baron de Bush, London

With many others of note.

Minton's (Limited). Minton's China.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

I should be sorry to suppose, or to suggest, that men like Lord Dysart, the Dean of Lichfield, Sir Robert Rawlinson, Sir Frederick Pollock, Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. Henry A. Jones, Mr. W. H. Grenfell, and the rest, are aware that "the British and Foreign Association" is located in a back room in a back street in Westminster, that it owes three months' rent, that the "Chief Secretary and Treasurer" has shut up the office and gone for a holiday, leaving no address, and that the business of the Association has for a long time past consisted in robbing foreign governesses and other helpless persons of half-guineas on the pretence of getting them situations. But I must point out that ignorance of these facts does not excuse the parties who have in times past been induced to enrol their names as patrons of this precious concern. It behoves people who have once lent their names to any undertaking which exists by getting money out of the public, to keep an eye on that undertaking, and to see for what purpose their names are being used. His Royal Highness the Duke of York has just set an excellent example in this respect. From the letter which Sir George Lewis sent to the papers on Monday, it appears that a Mr. J. E. Cracknell obtained, by the careful suppression of a most material fact, the permission of the Duke to use his name in connection with some sort of farm colony in Canada, for which he was collecting subscriptions. It subsequently came to his Royal Highness's knowledge that the Colony was a thing of the future, so that the object of naming it after the son of the Prince of Wales was obviously to obtain money for the undertaking. Upon learning this, the Duke of York at once published through Sir George Lewis an unqualified disclaimer of Mr. Cracknell and all his works. No man under similar circumstances can do more than this; but I would add, no man ought to do less. I do not suggest that Maclean's patrons should place themselves in the hands of Sir George Lewis and send disclaimers to all the papers. They are less important personages, socially speaking, than the Duke of York. But I do say that they owe it to themselves to stop the use of their names by Maclean in his swindling operations, and to communicate to the Editor of TRUTH the fact that they have done so.

I have also received a letter in reference to Mr. Maclean from the proprietors of "Ye Olde Cheshire Cheese," in Fleet-street, asking me to mention that Maclean, so far as they can learn, has never been known at their house. I should be sorry to suggest that an inn or an innkeeper is in any way under a reproach from the fact of a party of undesirable character having obtained refreshment in the house; but I cannot object to make it known that Maclean has not been seen at the "Cheshire Cheese." At the same time, I should be much more glad to hear from any one who has seen him than from any one who has not.

GLACIER is a substitute for stained glass, which has been before the public for nearly 15 years, and more appreciated to-day than ever before as a necessity for the decoration of windows. The list of houses, churches, mansions, public buildings, hotels, &c., that have had it, and the windows of which can be pointed to with pride as specimens of rich decoration, is well worth your perusal. The effect is as good and the price about one-sixth to one-twentieth of stained glass. To be had in every town in the kingdom from agents, or from the manufacturers and patentees, McCAW STEVENSON, & ORR, LIMITED. Linenhall Works, Belfast.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

A "PETIT LOCAL" FOR LEGISLATORS.

VICTOR HUGO used to prophesy that the time would come when Mr. Speaker would need a petit local for honourable members. He went, in doing so, on the radiating power of France, and the habit into which other nations have fallen of imitating her. There are in the House of Commons some ideal rooms for a petit local. They are approached by stone stairs that wind as though part of a donjon, have windows looking on otherwise blind courts of a Gothic character, and are so removed from the hum of life that a captive might fancy himself in an in pace. The petit local at the Palais Bourbon, in which M. Baudry d'Asson was imprisoned as a naughty boy, under a warrant of Gambetta, has none of this old-world colour, and is not in the least grim. As it looked on a garden into which it might be easy to leap, and from which there would be no difficulty in escaping, it was guarded outside as well as inside the building. Baudry d'Asson was, so far, its first and last tenant, and was a good deal tamed by his imprisonment for being obstreperous in the Chamber. I imagine that the fisticuffs at St. Stephen's are attended with worse consequences than at the Palais Bourbon. In all the scrimmages I remember in the French Parliament, I do not recollect a single case of a bruised face or a torn coat. The French Deputy is always an actor, and his blood is seldom up. He flings himself into a scrimmage for a threefold reason. One motive is to let off the nervous fluid that has been accumulating while long speeches were being delivered. Another is to show electors with what zeal he discharges his mandate, and a third is to be delivered from the tedium of sitting and affecting to listen to what is being said in the Tribune. Englishmen have been drilled from childhood by the Sunday sermons to put up with weariness of this sort. The French boy at a high school only hears a hasty mass. Religious instruction is given in a class-room by a chaplain, who takes the measure of each youth and adapts his ministrations to him. The allusion to Herod would not have told in a French Assembly, education here not being at all Biblical. The Bible is not given at all to children, unless manufactured into what is known as l'Histoire Sainte, to which a nice gloss to meet the French taste and Latin orthodoxy is imparted. There are hundreds of Histoires Saintes for the use of schools. Children read them up as they might an abridgment of any other history, and they do not leave any vivid impression on the mind. Herod is chiefly but indirectly known through the Christmas crèches in the churches and the Italian painters at the Louvre. He is known to have caused the flight of the Holy Family into Egypt, and to have, to please the daughter of Herodias, ordered the beheading of John the Baptist. The episode of the worms is glozed over in the Histoires Saintes. Indeed, Herod is to the average French mind so shadowy and far back in the past, as scarcely to have any meaning. Judas, however, is still real, as though the waves of eighteen hundred years had not passed over him. That kiss with which he pointed out his Leader to the limbs of the law, sent to capture him, has been too oft repeated not to keep the memory of Judas fresh.

What a lady killing old gentleman M. Millevoye is! He could if he chose hang a number of long-haired scalps on his girdle. It turns out that he is a friend of a pretty person who may be said to have taken high honours in her particular walk of life, Mademoiselle Mousse, otherwise Baroness de Kurth. The Baroness was l'amie of the Marquis de Reversaux and other personages of light and leading at Cairo. She flies the French flag, holding it high as she does so, and crying "perfide Albion." Her abode is in the Quartier Marbœuf, a new district behind the Avenue Montagne, which is now a perfect warren of ladies of nice appearance and fairly quiet manners, who live to please and please to grow wealthy. She is also the neighbour of many deputies, some artists, and of a knot of eminent diplomatists. M. Millevoye and his confederate informed her of the papers the coloured gentleman Norton "sold" them. She now says she saw in these documents an English trap, and at once said so. The Baroness may be often seen taking carriage airings in the Champs Élysées and the Bois, to which she drives by the Trocadéro and the Avenue Henri Martin, now the more fashionable approach. She is reputed clever, and has the blonde hair and opulent charms of the late Blanche d'Antigny, whom Zola had in his mind's eye in painting Nana. Blanche, as well as the Baroness, starred it at Cairo as a beauty, and was courted there by French diplomatic agents, because she enthralled the now deposed Khedive Ismail.

We shall soon, let us hope, see the last of the fearfully ugly postage-stamps for which M. Léon Say is responsible, they dating from the time when he was Finance Minister. That was when the Republic was extremely fluid, and the Moderates whom he represented were going in for prosaic allegory on coins and stamps. Their allegories had no message to give, and only intimated, in a crooked sort of way, that those who put them forward wanted to reserve their opinions as to the form of government, and leave the door open to whatever Pretender might prove in touch with themselves. The Committee charged to endow us with more artistic postage-stamps opines that they are to have a clearer meaning than the actual ones, and that it is to be Republican. This body includes MM. Roty and Chaplain, the eminent engravers, and Arthur Maury, the owner of the most complete collection of postage-stamps in the world, except, I believe, the Czar's.

Methinks, as one of the public, the best plan would be to follow the example of the Americans in making people familiar with the visages of liberators of whom the country has reason to be proud. I should propose that women be brought in too. Why not give us Joan of Arc, Madame Roland, and, for that matter, Théroigne Mirecourt, who gained over the Artois regiments at the Palace of Versailles to the side of the Revolution? New blood would be thrown into French history by making the stamp department of the Post-office supplement the Panthéon. It might give us neat vignette heads of Voltaire, Condorcet, Carnot, Hoche, Lafayette, Rouget de Lisle, Rabaut de Saint Etienne, and the Abbé Grégoire, who proposed Jewish emancipation, and Schœlcher, the liberator of the negroes. The medallions of David (d'Angers) are ready to hand of most of these celebrities, and of Lamartine, Victor Hugo, Bérenger, and, I believe, George Sand. As the cost of engraving a postage stamp is not great, why not extend the collection as occasion may arise? It might be well to honour a heroine like Grace Darling or Alice Ayres by showing on postage stamps what they were like. But the rule that the dead only should figure on envelopes of letters should be rigid. Else the scramble for the honour would be like an ugly rush of your brewers for peerages.

The attentions lately shown by the most illustrious leaders of Society in London to the Orleans family are resented in the high-handed course just taken by the French in Siam. Curiously enough, a D'Orléans, Prince Henri de Chartres, was the first to prominently call attention to "French rights" on the Mekong. He was longing to convert the slackness of the Republic into a platform for himself, and I fancy is now vexed at finding the Dupuy Cabinet wants to fill its sails at the elections with the wind that he has been raising. He is intensely ambitious and rather fussy, but not in the least daring, and fears exile. I have heard it said that your highest personages in London are free to entertain whom they please. Yes, in so far as they are not representatives of the country whose interests should govern their personal likings and dislikings. The Comte de Paris and his family are put forward very prominently at Court festivities. Figaro and other backers of monarchy in this country boast of the attention paid them. It seems to me that it is too much forgotten on public occasions of a social kind in England that if the Comte de Paris is Royal, his children are not.

It surprises me to find that what I wrote some weeks ago about M. and Madame Decrais was taken ill by their friends. I believe in the maxim that "il n' y a pas de vil métier," and it gives me pleasure to tilt at American heiresses or wealthy widows who are animated by the passion shown so often by brewers' wives to become Peeresses. This borne in mind, it was surely a way to pay honour to Madame Decrais to say that she fell in love with her son's tutor and married him. His subsequent career justifies her choice. There is no more honourable way of earning one's bread than in the conscientiously-discharged tuition of the young. M. Dupuy, the actual Prime Minister, was a teacher in provincial lyceums, and is not ashamed to own it.

"Toilet Lanoline" softens, clears, and preserves the skin, and should be used in every household. "Toilet Lanoline" protects the skin from the effects of exposure, and adds to the natural beauty. In collapsible tubes, 6d.; in small boxes, 3d., from all chemists and druggists. Wholesale depôt, 67, Holborn-viaduct. The genuine bears the trade-mark, "Lanoline."

"Truth" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is, 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the Manager, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

IT was formerly supposed, dear Lady Betty, that when good Americans died they went to Paris. This might be paraphrased by saying that when good stock jobbers prosper they go to Brighton. The recent state of affairs in the City has unfortunately reduced the number of the flourishing to a very small body, and as Brighton is the most sensitive index there is to financial and commercial prosperity, it naturally follows that it has been the first to feel the consequences of the present pressure. The hotels there, which are generally crowded during Goodwood week, have this season only been called upon to supply about one third of their usual accommodation. This fairly gauges the intensity of the depression which exists. The problem, however, is, where has everybody fled to? The West-end emptied this season a full three weeks earlier than it did in other years. Mayfair and Belgravia are already deserted. There are more country houses in the market now than there ever were before, and far less yachts are riding the waters to-day than there have been for several Septembers past. Where, then, has the world fled to? Would it, I wonder, be illegal to offer a prize for the discovery of missing Mayfair?

The annoying element of the problem is that in all likelihood the vast proportion of people have hurried away to the Continent, and are spending the little money which they have to dispose of at the cheap summer resorts abroad. By this means, of course, the country will be still more impoverished.

* * * * *

By the way, why do the Brighton newsboys charge twopence for the London evening papers, and sixpence for the Observer on Sunday? It is, I believe, the only town in England where this is done.

* * * * *

The manly and chivalrous defence made by Captain Bourke before the Court-martial held to inquire into the loss of the Victoria was a fitting climax to an episode which will be for ever memorable in the annals of the British Navy. A single error of judgment made by the most expert and eminent Admiral of our times led in less than fifteen minutes to his own destruction, to the loss of four hundred valuable lives, and to the foundering of a vessel which had cost the nation close upon a million of money. In those fifteen minutes of terrible emotions, it is not upon record that a single man either disobeyed orders or misbehaved himself. Of the survivors of this appalling catastrophe, Captain Bourke, Flag Captain to the late Admiral, has had to bear the brunt of the anxiety, and, indeed, almost of the responsibility. It is, therefore, all the more admirable that his last words before his judges were devoted to the eulogy of one who had not only been his "chief, but kindest friend."

M. Decrais, the newly-appointed French Ambassador in London, will arrive in England in the course of the next ten days or a fortnight. He is expected to present his credentials to the Queen at Osborne almost immediately after the departure of the German Emperor. M. Decrais will afterwards return to London to give orders about the re-decoration and re-furnishing of the French Embassy at Albert-gate, for, though some two thousand pounds were spent last year in re-embellishing the outside of this official residence, all further progress was postponed until the arrival of a successor to M. Waddington.

The Lord Bishop of London was about to transport himself to another portion of the kingdom. His trunks were carefully stowed with goodly contents. But upon the eve of his departure some vulgar modern burglars broke on Saturday into his Palace at Fulham, and ransacked not only these trunks, but the pantry besides. According to the papers, his Lordship's butler communicated to an interviewer that "they ate everything they could lay hands upon—ham, pigeons, and pigeon-pies. They drank port and sherry freely. There was a lot of very good claret there, but they did not touch it, and I can assure you that it is very excellent claret." There is quite a mediæval tone about this incident.

The Admiralty fête at Greenwich this year took place under very favourable circumstances, the beautiful weather making the trip down the river exceptionally enjoyable. A large and distinguished company had been invited, and assembled at the Speaker's Stairs, Westminster, on Thursday morning, the 27th inst., where the guests were received by Mr. E. Robertson, M.P. (Civil Lord of the Admiralty), and Mr. G. T. Lambert (Director of Greenwich Hospital at the Admiralty).

Among those present were Lord Spencer (First Lord of the Admiralty), Sir W. Kay-Shuttleworth (Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty) and Lady Shuttleworth, Sir Evan and Lady Macgregor, Sir Massey Lopes, Mr. and Lady Idina Brassey, Admiral Sir George and Lady Willes, Admiral Sir William Dowell, Sir Gerald and Lady Fitzgerald, Mr. Leonard Courtney, and a large number of Members of the House of Commons. A special steamer conveyed the party to Greenwich, where they were met on landing at the central stairs of the Royal Hospital by Captain Collins, R.A. (Superintendent of the Royal Hospital School). The boys, to the number of about 1,100, were then inspected on the parade, and the march past and the picturesque musical drill were admirably executed. The prizes were distributed in the gymnasium, the boys being addressed in eulogistic terms by Lord Spencer, Sir George Willes, and Mr. Robertson. Swimming exercises in the great bath were then witnessed, after which the company present adjourned to the Painted Hall of the Royal Hospital, where luncheon was served. The fine old hall presented a brilliant spectacle, the tables being laid throughout its entire length and decorated with flowers and the antique plate belonging to the hospital. During luncheon a choir of boys added to the entertainment of the guests by singing a selection of nautical songs.

On the return journey the school band played on board the steamer, which reached the Speaker's Stairs in ample time to admit of Members taking part in the anticipated boisterous proceedings in the House.—Believe me to be, very truly yours, MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

GOODWOOD has been a most successful meeting this year. There were large and good fields for most of the races, and some of the very best horses in training were seen out during the week. Under these circumstances the conductors of one of the principal evening papers cannot be congratulated upon having printed an anticipatory dissertation on the meeting, in which there were references to its alleged decadence and to the "parsimonious policy" and the small value of the prizes as compared with those offered at some other meetings, to which the writer was apparently anxious to give a puff. I have not often read a more grievous farrago of ignorant, mendacious, nonsense. People who have no more practical knowledge of racing than a Hindoo has of skating frequently display their gross ignorance by eulogising the "liberality" of the managers of the principal gate-money meetings, although even the most superficial investigation into the conditions of these great stakes shows that every farthing which is run for comes out of the pockets of the owners, who are becoming sick and tired of these whited sepulchres. If the Duke of Richmond started a couple of £5,000 stakes, arranged on this system, no doubt there would be such a large number of entries that they would not cost him anything in the long run; but the fact is that races of this kind are pretty well played out, and owners much prefer to be offered stakes of smaller value, but arranged on the old-fashioned principles. The only meeting in England where this "liberality" (about which there is such crack-brained jargoning) really prevails is Ascot, and if the revenue at Goodwood was as large as is that of Ascot no doubt there would be a corresponding increase in the value of the stakes. Even at Ascot, however, the rich events did not this year attract adequate fields, and it is clear that no amount of added money will in these days make a Cup race a genuine success. At Goodwood, the revenue is really very small, for the only returns are from the sale of tickets to the stand, paddock, and private stand respectively, and from the rents for the ground which is let for refreshment tents and other purposes. There are neither stalls nor private boxes, nor any of the other manifold dodges for getting money from the public which are now a matter of course at gate-money meetings. If the making of a profit out of the meeting was the object of the Duke of Richmond, he would long ago have built a new grand stand with boxes and stalls, and the lawn would have been covered with a smaller stand consisting of tiers of boxes. So far as the quality of the sport is concerned, Goodwood leaves nothing to be desired by any reasonable creature, and I shall be vastly surprised if any other meeting this year affords better racing.

Bullingdon (by Melton out of Shotover) won the Ham Stakes easily, as I had predicted would be the case, and he beat two of the best bred animals in training—St. Florian, own brother to Silene, and Jocasta, by St. Simon out of Thebais. Mr. Baird's colt is still backward, but I fear that Jocasta will never show herself to be worthy of her high pedigree. The result of the Richmond Stakes was also in accordance with my anticipations, as Galloping Dick won in a common canter, and, as he was for once in a humour to do his best, it is well for the Illuminata colt that Lord Rosebery had decided to reserve him for Doncaster, for he certainly could not have given the winner 12 lb. Galloping Dick literally left the field standing still. Mecca was backed for a great deal of money for this race, and Clatterfeet was not neglected. Hautesse (Mr. D. Cooper's much-talked-of filly by Archiduc out of Hauteur) made a most inglorious début, but she will presently improve on this form. The simpletons who plunged on Melancholy for the Lavant Stakes must have been sunk in muddy darkness if they had inspected Cannon's filly before backing her, as she was palpably amiss, and she went very badly in the betting after the field had gone to the post. She was never dangerous, and Sanderling (who had been beaten in her trial) astonished her owner and trainer by winning cleverly from Amiable. Sanderling is by St. Simon out of Sandiway, and that she was a lucky winner on Wednesday was proved on Thursday, when she ran badly in the Rous Memorial Stakes, for which Vulpecula was favourite; but she was beaten a quarter of a mile from home. Reminder, a scarcely-mentioned colt by Melanion, won for Cannon from the moderate Jocasta. The two-year-old sensation of the meeting, however, was afforded by the Prince of Wales's Stakes, which was worth £2,400. Galloping Dick was, of course, favourite, the slightest shade of odds being eagerly accepted; but he ran a perfect wretch, and "cut it" most manifestly directly Glare tackled him. The opinion which I expressed about Mr. Baird's horse last week is evidently correct—that the only plan with him is to get well away and then come right through. If anything once gets fairly to his head he simply stops, as he did on Thursday and also at Ascot. There was a splendid finish between Bullingdon and Glare, the colt just winning, thanks mainly to Cannon's fine riding. Speed ran very badly, and has evidently lost his form for the present. Prince Soltykoff had better throw him up for a few weeks, and then he may win some good races in the autumn. The high opinion which I expressed of Bullingdon after his unsuccessful début at Ascot has now been thoroughly justified, and what he was doing when he collapsed so ignominiously at Stockbridge it is impossible to conjecture. Bullingdon is now being trumpeted about as a Derby horse, and if he does well in the autumn he will, no doubt, be backed at a short price during the winter; but my own impression is that he is vastly lucky in not having to meet the Illuminata colt this season, for it happens that he is not entered for either the Champagne Stakes, the Middle Park Plate, or the Dewhurst Plate, and the pair cannot encounter each other before the Derby, as that is Bullingdon's first engagement as a three-year-old. The Duke of Westminster's colt will now have rest for a few weeks before being prepared for his engagements at the Newmarket October Meetings, and his next race is to be the Buckenham Stakes (run September 26), in which he may again meet Glare and Speed, and this is a good race, being worth £1,350 if four start. A very mean opinion must have been entertained of Bullingdon as a yearling, for he was scratched for the £5,000 stake at Kempton Park, and also for the Lancashire Plate at Manchester. The Molecomb Stakes was won easily by La Nièvre, as I had predicted, and the manner in which she beat Throstle showed either that Speed has been preposterously over-rated, or else that he was not up to the mark when he ran for the Chesterfield Stakes. A fortnight ago I predicted that Grey Leg would win the Findon Stakes, and so she did; but last week, having heard of Royal Sovereign's good trial, I mentioned him as likely to carry off the race. The gallop must have been a hugger-mugger affair altogether, for Royal Sovereign ran badly both for this race, and for the Halnaker Stakes on Wednesday.

Gamboge won the Gratwicke Stakes by many lengths, beating Joyful, a dark horse belonging to the Duke of Westminster, about which there was so much delirious cackling during the winter that he was positively backed for the Derby down to 25 to 1. Joyful must be a fearfully bad beast, and I should think that he will soon be weeded out of the Kingsclere stable. The Sussex Stakes fell to Harbinger, for whom I gave a plumper, but he had all his work to do to beat Son of a Gun, for whom the course was supposed to be too short. The tip of the "sharps" for this race was Canning, a colt belonging to Sir Robert Jardine, who might well be a good thing if he had any pretensions to form, inasmuch as he was receiving 10 lb. from Harbinger; but he ran badly, and sadly disappointed his numerous supporters. Medora was made favourite for the Nassau Stakes, in the absence of Dame President, on the strength of her Stewards' Cup form, but she was fairly outstayed by Harfleur II. (own sister to Hautesse), against whom extravagant odds were offered. Silene ran very badly, and so did Tressure, who would do better over a longer distance. The race was run at a dreadfully slow pace, and I shall expect Lord Rosebery's mare to win the Park Hill Stakes at Doncaster, in which she will again meet Harfleur II. and Silene, as well as Sir Blundell Maple's pair.

Wrong Course and The Vigil were the favourites for the Goodwood Stakes, but they were both well beaten, after the show of a race, by Red Eyes, a mare that is managed by Morbey, who is said to have won about £8,000 over the race. Red Eyes won with such consummate ease that she would very likely have carried off the Cesarewitch if she had been kept for that handicap.

It is difficult to understand why such comparatively long odds were forthcoming against Medora for the Stewards' Cup, as every one knew that she had won a good trial very easily, and she was certainly well in. Her victory was most popular, as a perfectly open and straightforward policy had been pursued with her. Marly got off very well, and came along at such a cracking pace that several fancied candidates were "chopped" when the flag fell, and they were never fairly in the race. Marly was presumably intended to slip the field, but he cannot get beyond five furlongs, and he raced himself to a stand-still. Over the shorter course he is, probably, one of the smartest horses in training. Prisoner, who was favourite, never for a moment looked like winning, and the cracked-up Persistive also made a miserable show. To think of such a beast having been a favourite for the Two Thousand! The defeat of Acrobat excited the wailings of the gullish herd, but only a mooncalf would suppose that T. Jennings would sell a horse capable of soon afterwards winning such a race as this. Molly Morgan was not up to the mark, and may do better later on; and both Mountain Chief and Haut Brion ought to win good T.Y.C. handicaps before the season is over.

Rational Dog Feeding.—Give wholesome and nutritious food (Spratt's Patent Meat Fibrine Dog Cakes). Do not give tit-bits and dainties because your dog, like a spoilt child, prefers what suits his palate. See that the Dog Cakes are stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "×," as cheap and innutritious imitations are often substituted for extra profit. Pamphlet on Canine Diseases post free, Spratt's Patent, Limited, Bermondsey, London.

Chesterfield did not start for the Cup, and Insurance was favourite, in spite of his Ascot collapse, while Convent was second in demand. Barmecide won with extreme ease. Meddler or Marcion would have made hacks of the whole lot.

Pensioner was generally regarded as a certainty for the Chesterfield Cup, and, having been backed against the field, he won easily from Cousie. That people could be such noodles as to back Mountain Chief over this distance was really miraculous. Roy Neil started without a price in the betting, and finished last. Juvenal was well backed, as he had been "chopped" on Tuesday by Marly, but he is a very moderate horse. M. E. Blanc had a really good thing in Falmouth for the Chichester Stakes, and he won in a walk, being absurdly well handicapped.

The manner in which Orme beat La Flèche on Thursday fully justifies the view which I took of his Sandown Park performance. He is a great horse, and thoroughly game, but he is clearly deficient in stamina, and if the Duke of Westminster be so foolish as to start him for the Doncaster Cup, we shall see what an exhibition Marcion will make of him. The public have been nauseated with the Bedlamitish ravings of Orme's fanatical worshippers, creatures who are always in paroxysms of either enthusiasm or execration about something or other. What can any rational being think on seeing it asserted in one of the sporting papers that on Thursday Orme was where he ought to have been in the Leger, as if there was no difference between a mile and a quarter and a mile and three-quarters. The course on Thursday was the outside distance over which Orme is any good.

There ought to be some interesting sport next week at Kempton Park. Forty-two two-year-olds have been left in for the International Breeders' Stakes of £800, and this will be an important race if the field includes Chin Chin (who was very highly tried before her victory in the Seaton Delaval Plate at Newcastle) and Delphos, the winner of the £5,000 stake at Sandown Park, when he cantered away from Glare, who, however, had 19 lb. the worst of the weights, including the sex allowance. The entry also includes Sweet Duchess and Theseus. I expect that Delphos will win this race, and, having very few engagements, he is tolerably certain to start if he is well. Delphos also looks like winning the Gimcrack Stakes at York. Sixty three-year-olds are left in for the City of London Breeders' Foal Stakes of £1,500, and a very bad lot they are, including nothing better than Turiddu, Siffleuse, Worcester, Bill of Portland, Evermore, Gamboge, Glenwood, Masque, Joyful, and the dark Orford. I shall plump for Siffleuse, who, I hear, has been reserved for this race.

The series of Yorkshire meetings begin next Monday with Redcar, but very little of the sport will be of any general interest. The Redcar Stakes of £600 has a large entry, including Xury, who will probably win if he is all right, and in his absence the best from Enoch's stable (Lord Zetland's or Mr. Lowther's) may be worth following. Marcion will no doubt walk over for the Kirkleatham Biennial, and the two-year-old heat of that stake would be a certainty for Chin Chin if she runs at Redcar instead of trying for the far more valuable race at Kempton Park. There is a huge entry for the Great National Breeders' Foal Stakes of £600, but as Marcion is engaged, one need not speculate further as to the probable issue of the race. The Wilton Plate of £300 may be left to Enoch's stable. There will also be racing next week at Hurst Park, Windsor, and Paisley, but the sport at these meetings will be mere plating.

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one-half West-end price.—PHILLIPS & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate-street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to latest fashion.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN, One of the most anxious settlements that has ever fallen to the lot of the London Stock Exchange was completed on Friday with a comparatively small list of casualties. During the account and at the settlement eleven failures were announced, the majority of which, however, were unimportant. To the most important collapse, that of Messrs. Sutton & Co., I alluded already briefly last week. The loss involved does not prove so heavy as had been estimated, viz., £37,500 instead of £80,000, but it presents several disagreeable features, not the least of which is the small amount of the assets.

The Crisis on the Stock Exchange.

This failure, for the time, caused a very general upset in the markets, as so many different securities had to be liquidated, the most important fall taking place in consequence of the forced closing of some large blocks of Erie Second Mortgage bonds, Mozambique and Oceana, and Oceana Development shares. The latter stocks have now, however, passed into strong hands, and already show a considerable recovery. Although the "House" has outwardly weathered the storm remarkably well, a dozen failures out of a membership of 3,000 being a very small proportion in a time of panic like the present, it must be stated that there have been a good many instances of helping over the stile, and although the view, rather recklessly pronounced, that half the Stock Exchange was "broke" is undoubtedly a gross exaggeration, there is no doubt that a number of small firms are holding on only by the skin of their teeth, while some large ones were much distressed through the heavy fall in many of the securities, in which they were interested. The greatest trouble is now the continued semi-panic in the American market. Were that once to be relieved, we should see a recovery all round, for however heavily certain departments of the Stock Exchange, as well as the outside public, have been successively hit by the collapse of South Americans on the Baring crisis, by the Australian Bank troubles and by the severe fall in silver securities, these losses have been borne remarkably well. There is now some prospect of the tension in the Yankee market being relieved, although this may not come about until after Monday, August 7, when the U. S. Congress meets for the repeal of the Sherman Bill. The financial position in New York and in the West is still very much strained and may lead to occasional sharp spasms, such as happened last week. But I emphatically adhere to my opinion, that now is the opportunity for investors to buy cheap stocks in this as well as in most other departments. Those who followed my advice to this effect on Wednesday and Thursday again got in very cheaply. I repeat, this is not the time for large speculation, but for investment by those who can afford to pay for their purchases. There are indications that such buying is going on at a considerable rate, and that it is gradually absorbing the surplus stock thrown over by necessitous speculators. When once this movement has lasted for some time and financial matters in the United States show distinct improvement, the inevitable general recovery will come about.

Home Rails.

When I ventured on June 1 to give a forecast of the dividends of the chief English Railways, I was not far out under the light of the announcements since made. I distinctly foreshadowed the South-Eastern dividend of 2¼ per cent. for the first half of the current year, making 4½ per cent. for the whole year ended June 30 last, and on this dividend South-Eastern stock at 119 x.d. yields 3½ per cent. As to Dover "A," at the present price of SANITARY SURVEYS.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

72, with their possibilities of future progress, they are no doubt a good "lock up," and would not have touched the present low level had it not been for the Read failure. I am, however, sorry to see that Sir Edward Watkin does not altogether hold those peaceful sentiments towards the Chatham Company with which he has been credited. In referring to the reserves established by the South-Eastern Company against the depreciation or loss of their steamships, he delivered at the meeting a strong thrust at the Chatham management, suggesting that the latter had acted improvidently in the matter of wear and tear and depreciation of steamers. No doubt Mr. J. S. Forbes, the Chairman of the Chatham Company, will retort at their meeting, and so the "neighbours and friends," to use Sir Edward's words, will probably not be friendly and neighbourly much longer, although we had been promised great things from amicable co-operation in the working of the Companies. Sir Edward, at the Metropolitan meeting, also hit at his friends and neighbours the District Company, who, he said, were at their old games, "diverting a portion of the traffic for which the Metropolitan had provided that expensive, costly, and hitherto unremunerative piece of railway, the Metropolitan Inner Circle." Not much chance, therefore, of the lion lying down with the lamb just yet! The Great Northern dividend was announced at the same rate as last year, viz., 3 per cent., the South Western dividend at 4¾ per cent., with £25,994 carried forward, against 4¼ per cent., with £15,167 forward for the corresponding period last year. Both these distributions were according to market estimates. The North-Eastern dividend has been announced exactly at the rate predicted by me, viz., 4¾ per cent., making 5¾ per cent. for the whole year ended June 30 last, on the basis of which the stock at 155 yields 3¾ per cent. on the investment. I had estimated the Midland dividend at a fraction below the announcement of 4¾ per cent., which makes 5¾ per cent. for the whole year, at which this stock at 155½ returns 3$\frac{11}{16}$ per cent. to the investor. Next week the North-Western and Great Western dividends will be announced. There has been a considerable backwardation on the leading "Heavies" at the settlement, operators having, apparently, taken liberties with them. This has prevented any further fall in quotations; but the coal strike has now, unfortunately, become a reality, and must act as a wet blanket for some time. Sheffield "A" have touched the lowest price ever recorded of about 23½, owing to the forced closing of accounts, and Metropolitan Districts are also at the knock-out price of 24¼, a sure indication that speculation is dead at present. Brighton "A" have eased off on the statement made at the meeting of a contemplated further issue of capital. As the purpose for which this is required will undoubtedly prove remunerative, there is not much in this alleged "Bear" point. The weather, however, has been rather broken, and the Goodwood traffic has consequently been poor, so that traffic decreases are expected. In fact, I have already foreshadowed that such must be looked for until the end of August, the comparison being with large returns last year. After that time the traffics fell off in 1892, and the comparison will grow more favourable. But in any case, Brighton "A" at their present price yield considerably more than 5 per cent. per annum, and may be recommended to investors, although I do not advise speculative transactions in view of the possibility of quotations being temporarily affected, in these times of crisis and scares, by circumstances altogether unconnected with intrinsic merit.

Yankee Rails.

The principal unfavourable feature in the position of the Yankee market remains the critical monetary outlook in the United States. It is true that the last New York Bank statement is not so unsatisfactory as had been predicted, but it is by no means encouraging. Currency is, moreover, again required in the West. The event which has also affected this department has been the fact of the Erie line going into the Receiver's hands. This is directly traceable to the stringency of the Money Market in the United States, the position of the line being in no way unfavourable as compared with last year. For the nine months ending June 30, net earnings increased by 63,000 dollars; while for June a net increase of 16,000 dols. is shown, notwithstanding a decline in gross receipts of 74,000 dols., considerable savings in working expenses more than balancing the gross decrease. It is clear, therefore, that only the difficulty of renewing loans as part of the floating debt brought about the receivership. In ordinary times this trouble would not have arisen, and as it is, the receivership is a friendly one, and in the interests of the stockholders, and will, no doubt, be dissolved as soon as an improvement in the monetary position in the States allows of an arrangement of the floating debt. It is not improbable that this may also entail an amalgamation of the New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio with the Company, and some conversion of the Erie Second Mortgage bonds, so that there will be every opportunity for the display of financial genius by the Board. On the whole, however, it may be assumed that quotations will recover considerably above the present low level, and holders should not only stick to their stocks, but average on any of the sudden breaks which may still come about on "Bear" attacks during the next week or two. As regards the Atchison Company, the attacks which have been made upon it by financial writers are simply disgraceful. It is inconceivable almost how the City Editor of the Standard could give currency to the canard that the Company had gone into a receiver's hands, while others are putting about future traffic estimates which are altogether preposterous. The floating debt of this Company is by no means of unmanageable proportions, and, as repeatedly stated by President Reinhart, the Company is in no financial stress. Unless, therefore, any unforeseen circumstances should occur, there is no prospect of a receivership for the Atchison, which the pessimists would be so glad to bring about. Atchison Second Mortgage Bonds "A" and "B" are in fact depreciated to an extent that a receivership could not put them lower, considering that they have the fullest powers of foreclosure. I hold to my view that investors should purchase on the declines which are now and then established on "Bear" pressure, such dividend-paying stocks as Louisville, Milwaukees, Atchison Second Mortgage Bonds, and the various low-priced shares, mentioned by me last week, which cannot fall much lower, but will eventually join in the advance of the more substantial properties. But I give this advice only to investors who can pay for their stocks, not to speculators, as it may be necessary to hold through some of the scares which may still be on the cards. Relief should, however, now be close at hand. Gold shipments to a considerable amount are being made to New York from this side, and on Monday, August 7, Congress meets for the repeal of the Sherman Bill. Far too much importance has of late been attached to the vapourings of the silver men. The recent severe panics and runs on Banks in different parts of the States have educated public opinion to such an extent that Congress will probably come to a decision in this matter much more quickly than is generally supposed. In fact, the worse monetary position in the country looks this week, the more likely is it that the proper measures will be adopted by Congress. And who will say that, if the United States, admittedly one of the wealthiest countries in the world, repeal the silver Bill and adopt wise laws for the regulation of the currency question, they will not very quickly emerge out of the quagmire into which Spreadeagleism and the mad egotism of the silver men has betrayed them? Purchases of American Railroad stocks for investors, both in this country and in Germany, France, and Holland, have daily absorbed substantial blocks during the last week or two, and the position is thus gradually being turned. Canadian Pacifics have quickly recovered their dividend, and are well supported. Grand Trunks are fairly steady, and it would not be surprising to see the stocks of both lines recover to a considerable extent as soon as the Yankee market improves.

The resources of Ulster House, Conduit-street, enable Messrs. Benjamin, in cases of need, to execute orders in 24 hours.

Foreigners and South Americans.

My prediction that the Siamese difficulty would not lead to any serious complications between England and France is in a fair way of being borne out. For all that I cannot see that the position of most of the Old World's securities is by any means improved. Spain must have a new loan, but the foreign bankers to whom she has to look for it, in view of the failure of the recent attempt to raise an internal loan, insist on retrenchments or new taxes, while the Minister of Finance is met with a storm of indignation on the part of the interests affected as soon as he suggests the imposition of a new tax. As for Italy, the banking and financial position is most threatening, and may at any time bring about a crisis. Greeks were at one time exceedingly flat on attempted realisations, the position in Berlin, where these stocks are so largely held, being still weak. Considerable anxiety, too, prevailed here concerning the affairs of a large Paris speculator, who had had a fit of apoplexy, which led to a very doleful feeling on the part of the numerous London brokers with whom he appears to have had accounts open. Some, in fact, are said to have closed his stock on the spur of the moment. It had since been stated that his remittances came duly to hand on pay day, but fresh realisations of Italians and of Yankee Rails for Paris account have since been reported, and it is assumed that the stock of the speculator above referred to has, after all, had to be closed. Argentine Government stocks have been affected by the fluctuations of the gold premium and the unfavourable political outlook in Buenos Ayres. There is now reported a rising in several provinces, including the Province of Buenos Ayres, and if this were to lead to the cleaning of the Augean stable of Provincial finances, the movement would do good instead of harm. Sooner or later, when the Railway guarantees are dealt with, and the settlement of the National Debt is ratified by Congress, an improvement will no doubt set in. Argentine Railway stocks have fluctuated a good deal, but on the whole prices have been fairly maintained. A slight rally seems to be on the cards in such silver securities as Mexican Government stocks and Peruvian Corporation stocks, which have, as I have repeatedly pointed out, depreciated to an inordinate extent. The distribution of the new Chilian Four and a-Half per Cent. bonds to the holders of Peruvian Assets certificates is a welcome feature, quotations of both Chilian bonds and of Perus having benefited. Uruguay bonds have also improved on the payment of the August 1 coupon. South American stocks generally should be held, as the present low level of prices renders a further important fall improbable, while, on the other hand, a substantial recovery is eventually fully assured.

The Kaffir Circus.

Closing of the accounts of weak speculators and liquidation in connection with several of the failures in the "House" caused at one time a considerable set back in South African and other Mining shares, but, the pressure having been removed with the completion of the settlement, a substantial recovery is being experienced, which is likely to make considerable progress during the present account, especially if the July crushings of the Witwatersrand Mines should turn out satisfactory. I need hardly point out again that speculative transactions in this market are still to be deprecated in view of the possibility of further forced liquidation, although the account is now reduced to comparatively small dimensions. Investors, however, will find the present low level of prices of many dividend-paying Mines very inviting for purchases of shares to be taken up and paid for. A decline is still marked in Ferreira, Heriots, Jumpers, &c., but New Primrose, Nigels (now quoted xd.), Rietfontein, Salisbury, &c., are improving, New Primrose and Glencairns deserving special attention. Advices respecting Afrikander continue very favourable. In Land shares a considerable decline on forced liquidation has been followed by a smart, if partial, recovery. While some of the South African Land shares remain in weak hands, and while the position of British Chartered of South Africa remains extremely precarious in view of possible serious complications with the Matabele king, I have reason for stating that some heavy blocks of shares in Transvaal Land Companies, including Oceana, Oceana Development, Zoutpansbergs, &c., have been taken off the market to be locked up for some considerable time, and for higher prices. The shares forced off in the Sutton failure have, moreover, found a resting-place in firm hands, and thus a marked recovery is more than probable. I had an interesting chat with Mr. Harry Weber on his return from a tour through South Africa. He expressed the most favourable views as to the magnificent future of the Transvaal, the business-like development of the Mines and Land Companies, and the facilities now being given by the Transvaal Government, who have executed a complete volte face. The reason for the change is perhaps partly a selfish one, as the Boers have discovered that, so far from their bullocks being likely to be rendered superfluous by the railways, they find full employment on the tracks required as feeders for the new lines. At the present low prices of the leading Land shares, including the Oceana Companies, it is possible by investment in these to obtain an interest in properties in the Transvaal at a lower price than land can now be purchased out there. Mr. Weber had visited the Oceana Coal Company's property, and had personally convinced himself of the thickness of the seams. He also spoke very hopefully of the discovery by Mr. Edward Jones of alluvial gold deposits near Pietersburg, on the Balkis flats, in the immediate neighbourhood of properties of the Balkis's Land Company. Oceana shares have advanced to 2¼, Developments to ⅛ premium, but the view of those best acquainted with the position is that a further advance of from ½ to a full point is at hand in these and in Oceana New shares. Diamond shares, after being offered down on forced closing, are recovering again, De Beers at 15, New Jagersfontein at 14¼, ex the dividend of 10s. Caratal Gold Mining shares are being steadily absorbed, and everything points to an early advance upon the present low quotation of 9d. The best evidence of the value of the property and its prospects is the willingness of the local creditors of the old Company in Venezuela to take payment of the bulk of their claims in fully paid shares at "par." This means 2s. 6d. per share, while the shares now obtainable at 9d. in this market are also of 2s. 6d., with 2s. 4d. credited. Mr. Skertchly's report on the property may come to hand any moment, and, if it turns out all I hear, there can be no doubt that this will prove a valuable mine for its shareholders. My opinion with regard to the Holcombe Valley Mine remains unchanged, and I consider its shares, now fully paid, a good speculative purchase at about 1s. According to latest advices the machinery is erected, and the time is, therefore, ripe for results, which should be very satisfactory.

Australian Banks.

During the last few days the market for Australian Bank shares has again improved, and with the reopening of some of the reconstructed banks the danger of further trouble, as far as the three banks are concerned which have weathered the storm, is minimised. The following communication, which I have received from a reader of Truth in Queensland, refers to the view which I expressed at the outset, that the Union Bank of Australia, the Bank of Australasia, and the Bank of New South Wales would not be involved in the general financial collapse of which I had given warning during the last few years.

Maryborough, Queensland, Australia.
June 14, 1893.

Although I am living in Queensland with the Australian Banks, so to speak, under my eyes, I cannot refrain from letting you know how valuable I found your correspondent's hints on the advisability of going warily in view of the impending financial crisis in Australia. It was most instructing to note how we stood in the opinion of those who could only judge us inferentially, but the conclusion drawn by Moses Moss have become strikingly true. It is a most curious fact that the three Banks mentioned by him as likely to weather the financial storm have actually done so. Reading his prophecies under the light of actual facts, his forecasts appear little short of marvellous. The Commercial Banking Company of Sydney was looked upon as quite above suspicion, and it was a terrible shock to us all when it suspended. I thought when reading your strictures on what was safe and unsafe, it was strange you did not include this bank amongst the invulnerable, but you must have been better informed than we who have the advantage of having the bank under our direct inspection.

I am greatly obliged to my correspondent, and am very glad to have been of use to my Australian as well as to my English readers in this matter, to which I had devoted a good deal of attention at the time, with the result of saving many of my correspondents much trouble and loss.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

N. T.—I know of no special reason for the fall in Costa Rica "A" bonds, but they were not cheap compared with the "B" bonds, and the value is now more fairly adjusted. Max.—Although the worst appears to be over in Australia, no one can tell if some crisis will not recur, and upon the whole I feel inclined to advise you to reduce your holding by one-half. Victoria are, of course, the least eligible. H. B.—I do not see any reason to sell out No. 1—3, unless you have too much locked up in these stocks, in which case you should reduce your holding. Brighton "A," Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent. bonds 1925, Canadian Pacific Land Grant bonds guaranteed by the Dominion of Canada, and Natal Inscribed stock should suit you. Marah.—No reason to sell No. 1—3 at present. Sell No. 4 when the market improves. Hold Nos. 5—8. I have experienced great difficulty in decyphering your letter, and cannot for that reason answer more fully. Perplexed.—City of Mexico bonds are very cheap, and should recover again. Reading First Income Bonds should also be held, and you might average both for a moderate amount. F. C.—You should hold Entre Rios bonds as well as all other Argentine securities, but I should not buy more just now of the first named.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Enquirer.—The two American offices are wealthy Companies, but in your case I should say that it would be desirable to make "assurance double sure," by dealing with a well-established British office—say, the Scottish Widows Fund, the Sun, or the Provident Life Office. T. E., Bradford.—These Land Companies have, of course, greatly suffered, and prospects are extremely doubtful. I should say, sell if you can. Apply to the Secretary for information. W. R.—I am sorry that you have been let in by this outside broker, but I cannot help you. Deal only with members of the Stock Exchange in future. I have always warned my readers to leave these men alone. R. B.—I have already published a number of instances of losses made through Percy Barclay & Co., and other syndicate touts, and need not, therefore, trouble you for a statement of your experiences. Lycurgus.—1. I really cannot advise you on this subject. You should consult your solicitor. 2. A sound and high-class London bank, unaffected by the Australian bank troubles. Veritas.—Ask for the terms of the Sun Life Office, the Scottish Widows Fund, and the Provident Life Office, and make your own selection. I do not recommend the Life office named by you. A. N., Leek.—No, I do not think for one moment that Duncan, Short, & Co. ever bought any stock in their so-called Louisville Co-operation. I have repeatedly advised my readers not to have anything to do with these or any other syndicate touts. Flora.—As you are determined to buy Colonial Government stock, you had better buy Cape of Good Hope or Natal Inscribed stock. Hold the investments named. O. S.—The reply which your bankers have received from the Inland Revenue authorities respecting the deduction of income-tax at the rate of 7d. in the pound on deposit interest paid on June 30 last, is identical with that received also by the Standard Bank of South Africa in a similar case. I fully agree with you as to the unfairness of the attitude taken up by the Inland Revenue, but I do not see how I can help you in your case against red tape. Other depositors are, of course, treated in the same way.

Home Rails.

G. N.—There is nothing very tempting about Great Northern Deferred as an investment. I should most certainly prefer Brighton "A." Credo.—Yes, the South-Eastern dividend is exactly as predicted by me, and this line is undoubtedly progressive.

American and Foreign Rails.

Hopeful.—The whole market has been greatly depressed, but I do not think there is any fear of default in this particular case. I am, however, making special inquiries. Spes.—I think both securities will continue paying interest, and prices will recover again when the panic is over. Andur.—It is stated that the interest on Mexican Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds is secured for four or five years to come, apart altogether from the revenue of the line. They should be held at these low prices. Buttercup.—It looks as if bottom had been touched. I cannot, of course, guarantee this, but with occasional reactions the course will now, no doubt, be upwards. You might safely average—for investment, of course. The Illinois Central is doing well, and Ohio and Mississippi are very promising. Atlantic Firsts are very cheap. Tipperary.—All the talk about the Atchison seems to be moonshine, and the bonds are recovering again. Certainly hold. Berry Head.—Erie have recovered part of their last fall, and should be held, as the receivership of the line is a friendly one, and a favourable change in the Money Market in New York might put it on its feet again. The Mining shares depend somewhat upon the course of silver. S. M. F.—It is impossible to predict the fluctuations in the American market in the near future, but any one buying now for investment, not for speculation, will make money in the stocks mentioned by you, Milwaukees, Atlantic Firsts, and Louisville, as in others. A. L.—I see no reason to sell any of the five investments named Nos. 1-5 at present prices. Atchison Second Mortgage bonds are very cheap and should recover. For the investment of £800 to £1,000 to produce 5 to 5½ per cent. you might select Brighton "A," Chilian Five per Cent. bonds of 1892, throwing in some Louisville and Nashville shares and Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds, 1925. Unglücklich.—Yes; you should hold the Atchison Four per Cent. Gold bonds for a recovery. I have never recommended the purchase of Colorado Midland bonds, but you should not sell them now after the heavy fall. Station.—1. Yes; it is fairly safe to average for investment. 2. Yes; with respect to A, B, C, and D; doubtful as to E. 3. I should divide over the four first named. 4. Yes. 5. No. 6. You cannot do better. 7. You might find a better opportunity to sell a little later on. Clef.—If you hold the Milwaukees as an investment you should average. They will recover again. As Caratals stand you in so dear, you should buy more to average at the present low price. You will see from the remarks under "The Kaffir Circus" that the news is very good. The Boy.—You lost your market in these debentures, and must now wait for a recovery, which is pretty certain. You cannot deal direct with the jobbers, and I do not think that it was the fault of the brokers. H. Barone.—The interest on Pittsburg and Fort Wayne and Chicago Seven per Cent. guaranted was paid on June 15, and they would not stand at 155 if there was anything wrong. There is nothing against the other bonds referred to, but the crisis overshadows all. James, Glasgow.—It is improbable that Reading First Incomes will be assessed, should an assessment be made. You should hold them for a recovery. Elyof.—See under "Yankee Rails" respecting Erie, and hold; they will recover again. Louisville will also improve again. The situation will, in fact, change very suddenly.

Mining Shares.

Catarina N.—Whenever further favourable advices from the Caratal and Holcombe Valley Mines come to hand there will be a good market for them. No. 1. Caratal are 2s. 6d. shares, with 2s. 4d. credited as paid, so that there is only 2d. to call. 2. Yes, you can buy this quantity easily. 3. You should hold these for a recovery. 4. Yes. 5. Yes. 6. What interest do you require? Brighton "A" might suit you, also some of the substantial dividend-paying Mines like New Primrose or Nigels. Do not put the money into one stock only. Nemo.—Yes, you are liable for the call. 2. Yes, also in this case, unless you have bought fully-paid shares. X. Y. Z.—I am sorry that you should be disappointed in the New Mashonaland Exploration Company, but I predicted this from the outset. This Company has, as you say, gone into liquidation more than twelve months ago, and some statement ought to be made to the shareholders as to the state of affairs. If, as you state, the liquidator says that he is himself unable to get the requisite information, the position must be a very curious one. T. P., Southport.—With a little patience you will receive advices respecting the working of the new machinery at the Holcombe Valley property. If these are favourable, as I expect they will be, prices will advance sharply. B., China.—1. I think you ought to have the shares transferred to your name. You would otherwise expose yourself to considerable risk. 2. Some. 3. No. 4. You must not be prevented by any little inconvenience from selecting the best shares, such as New Primrose, Glencairn, Buffelsdoorn, Afrikander, Oceana, and Oceana Development shares. Parkes.—Your stocks have suffered by the severe depression. You should hold Nos. 1-3, and 5, they will recover again. As to No. 4 the reply is no, this has been most disappointing. Carpe Diem.—Hold Balkis Eersteling, they will improve. Theta.—1. Do not average yet, I will give you timely notice, and I consider the prospects encouraging. 2. I should not lock up money in the railway in question. G. H.—I do not see how I can help you further concerning the Sapphire and Ruby affair. Masterly inactivity seems to be the only course. The liquidator would probably have to take some steps, but he would not, perhaps, care to spend much money in law costs. I greatly sympathise with you. It is a costly lesson. Nemo.—Glencairns have been depressed with the rest of the mining market. You may look for a crushing for the last fortnight in July in a few days, with the reconstructed battery. Hold. F. S., Southport.—Shortly. The mine is doing well. Scot.—I should not operate yet in the mining shares referred to. If you desire a cheap mining share you cannot do better than buy Caratals at about 9d., prospects being very good. See under "The Kaffir Circus." I quite agree with you that Mr. John Smith's tips are worthless. Constant.—1. You are entitled to the dividend. 2. No reason to sell these in the existing depression. 3. You could not have compelled the firm to book shares to you at the prices given in their list. The price is now about 20s. Take care not now to be bounced into the shares at 2½, the figure mentioned in your letter to the firm. 4. If the agreement was made as you state, they cannot close your account so long as you pay your differences. You will find it more profitable to deal with a member of the Stock Exchange. Don't buy more shares than you can pay for. H. C. W., San Remo.—What you require has been forwarded to you. A. B.—With reference to the New Vancouver Coal Mining and Land Company there is no market for these Debentures. You had better write to the Secretary of the Company and see if he can negotiate a sale for you. The Debentures have, of course, a charge on the property of the Company.

Industrial Companies.

S. G., S. W.—You should hold St. Louis Brewery shares for a recovery. D. R. O.—When the prospectus of the Automatic and Horton Ice Company was published, I commented adversely upon it, and I see no reason to alter my view. Sell if you can. Ill Advised.—The present is a time of great depression, and no matter what investments you might have had, they would have gone down, the very highest class stocks yielding from 2¾ to 3¼ per cent. alone excepted. But that rate would not have satisfied you. I think you should hold your shares, and New Primrose are certain to come right, whatever may be intermediate fluctuation. A. H. R.—Hold the Brewery shares. They will recover again. Company is doing better now. Jumbo.—I really do not know much about these newspaper enterprises, but if you can get a decent price you had better sell. Dauntmore.—A. No reason to sell now. Hold B for an improvement. C is doing better as per report of meeting just held. D. Some efforts are being made to pull this round. You may feel sure that I am watching these enterprises very carefully. Bess.—You had better wait until this stock comes more prominently before the public. Oudeis.—The offices of the Brussels Palace of Varieties have been moved to 56, Bishopsgate-street Within, E.C. I have never advised this investment. Bristol.—The Company has suffered in common with most industrial concerns. It is thought that the prospects are likely to improve.

Mixed Investments.

L. H., Stockport.—Yes, the proposed private trust of Louisville, Milwaukees, Atchison "B" bonds, Johannesburg Waterworks, Kilkivan, and Caratal Mining shares would answer your purpose very well. Trust.—Brighton "A" will yield over 5½ per cent., Guinness Debentures 4 per cent., and you can get 4½ to 5 per cent. in sound American Railway bonds. 62.—This is a bad time for selling such Trust Debentures, the position is not, moreover, desperate according to the last report. Crédula.—These appear to be £1 shares, with 19s. paid. Hold for the present. Put the money into Brighton "A." Destitute.—1. You should have sold Canadian Pacifics before the fall, when I advised their sale. At present low price hold for a recovery. Hold also No. 2 and 3, they appear to be doing well. No reason to sell No. 4. Sell No. 5. The Founders' shares in question are worthless, and so are the Syndicate shares. Yes, you should buy Cordoba and Rosario Debenture stock and Costa Rica "B" bonds to average.

Various Investments.

Silver has moved within narrow limits during the past week, opening at 32⅞d., dropping to 32⅛d., and recovering to 32½d. Far be it from me to wish to predict the future course of this metal, which depends upon so many different eventualities, but it would almost appear as if, even after the repeal of the Sherman Bill, the very low quotations predicted by some wiseacres, such as 25d., would not be reached, for the very good reason that many of the silver mines are being shut down. Rupee Paper has shown some dulness, and certainly is not fulfilling the sanguine hopes of the speculators who so largely embarked in it on early tips. The India Council is also at present very unsuccessful with its remittances on India, but this should be a temporary trouble only. Mexican Rails have, after a further decline, recovered somewhat, chiefly owing to the cumbersome "Bear" account in the First Prefs., which has caused a stiff backwardation to be charged. This is not, perhaps, a very solid basis for a recovery, as long as the price of the white metal remains so low, but the tip is going round all the same that there is to be a turn upwards. The declaration of an interim dividend at the rate of 10 per cent per annum by the directors of the Paccha and Jaz Pampa Nitrate Company fully confirms my prediction of three months ago. The position of the nitrate producing Companies is, on the whole, satisfactory, the price of nitrate having recovered again, but the general depression prevents for the present any recovery in the prices of the shares. The action taken by the Bank of England has created a fresh change in the position of the unfortunate South American and Mexican Company, and it now looks as if this concern would have to pass into liquidation without the possibility of forming an Assets Company to facilitate the realisation. The reckless statement made by the City Editor of the Standard to the effect that the Trustees, Executors, and Securities Insurance Corporation was issuing a circular to its shareholders inviting them to subscribe for an issue of Second Debentures is emphatically contradicted. The question now arises, Why was such a mischievous falsehood invented and published? The reports of the East and West India Dock Company and of the London and St. Katherine Docks Company are melancholy reading, and fully bear out the discouraging views which I have for some time been obliged to express to inquirers in "My Letter Box." I have received the following communication with reference to the Oriental Pension and Guarantee Fund:—

> You have been good enough to insert one or two paragraphs in your paper with reference to the way in which money has been spent in the liquidation of the New Oriental Bank at the expense of the shareholders. May I ask you to allot a small space to the grievances of the shareholders in the Oriental Pension and Guarantee Fund? This body was composed entirely of employés of the Bank, and the amount due to them represents their savings. These savings were largely monthly payments which they made to build up the fund. Since the failure of the Bank, more than a year ago, only one dividend has been paid (amounting to about a third of the sum due), and as many of the subscribers have been thrown out of employment, and also held shares in the Bank (every penny of which they have lost), it seems a monstrous thing that they should be kept out of their own money any longer, especially as nearly the whole of the fund is invested in easily realisable securities.

I really do not know who is responsible for the administration of this fund, but, on the face of it, my correspondent appears to have a very serious grievance.—Your affectionate uncle, MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

A PAWNBROKER'S PLEDGE.

IN a small and somewhat seedy by-way, within a hundred yards of Regent-street, is to be found the emporium of that well-known pawnbroker, Mr. Zacharias. It is a dingy, shabby-looking shop enough, and its three golden balls are so begrimed with smoke and dirt that you scarcely notice them hanging out above the doorway. But friend Zacharias is too notorious to need any advertising; and plenty of customers, great and small, find their way into that poky little door at the side of the shop, without requiring to have their attention called to it.

If you were to watch there, near the corner, at any hour of the day, you would be surprised to see how many people pass in and out of the door under the golden balls. All ages, many classes, both sexes, are familiar there. Some walk boldly in, with the self-possession of frequent custom; others slink guiltily in, as though bent on the commission of some deadly crime; and a few—but these are the very green—make a point of carefully examining the unredeemed articles exposed for sale in the window, thereby hoping to make passers-by suppose that they are only intending purchasers.

It is with one of this latter class that we are now concerned. She was a youngish woman, shivering with the cold, who, despite her many evident tokens of poverty, still carried in her face and manner an unmistakable air of gentle birth and breeding. It was a vain pretence for her to survey the rings and watches in the window so carefully, as if she could not settle which she should buy. Those hungry, hollow eyes, that pinched face, those threadbare garments, bespoke, alas! too clearly, the state of her purse, and showed that the getting and not the spending of money was her object in visiting Mr. Zacharias.

By and by she slipped quickly in at the side-door. The pledge-office was empty, except for the pawnbroker himself, who was sorting and ticketing some bundles at the back of the counter. He was a short, obese little man, with a very white face and very black, sharp eyes, out of which shrewdness and suspicious cunning peered upon an evil world. He was not an amiable character. It was commonly affirmed that the devil himself would have had the worst of him in a deal. And his heart was as hard as Parian marble. But, for all that, he had an extensive clientèle, chiefly because he was not over-particular or over-inquisitive about the proper ownership of the goods which were pledged with him, merely remitting a liberal discount in his own favour to cover risk.

Birds of a feather flock together. The first grey hair will soon have companions, unless their coming is rendered impossible by the use of Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer.

As the woman approached the counter, Mr. Zacharias came forward and asked her briskly what was her business.

She fumbled for a minute in her pocket, then produced a small gold bracelet, and, pushing it nervously across to the pawnbroker, inquired, in a low voice, how much he could let her have upon it.

He took it to the light, and, holding it up there, examined it carefully.

"Two—ten," he answered, on his return.

"Can't you make it three pounds?" she asked timidly.

He shook his head. "No," he rejoined, with decision. "Two—ten's the highest I can go."

The woman hesitated. Then she held out her hand for the bracelet.

"I can't take less than three," she said.

"As you please," returned Zacharias, shrugging his shoulders. "Wait a minute, though" (balancing the bracelet on one finger, and suddenly changing his tone). "Is it a matter of importance to you to have the three pounds?"

"It is."

"Ah, well, it's rather weak of me, for the security ain't a bit worth it; but still, if you're very hard up I'll accommodate you to the extent of three sovs. There now!"

Mr. Zacharias made this offer with a particularly virtuous and generous air, as of one who makes a great sacrifice to benefit a fellow-creature, and assumed his most benevolent expression, which was not, however, very engaging at that.

The woman thanked him, and stood looking anxiously and nervously about her while Zacharias made out the pawn-ticket. As soon as this, together with the three sovereigns, was handed to her she at once bade him good evening, and hurried, almost ran, from the office.

When she was gone the pawnbroker called up an assistant to mind the shop, and betook himself into a small back parlour, still holding the bracelet in his hand. He turned up the gas, sat down at the table, and, placing the article before him, gazed at it with critical eyes.

"Strange," he reflected. "Very strange indeed. I knew it at a glance. The bracelet which I made all those years ago for Lady Branksome, according to her special design. I wonder how that young woman came by it! Odd, her bringing it to me of all people! Very odd!"

The pawnbroker's recollections carried him twenty years back, to the time when, before he set up in business for himself, he had been head designer and workman in the employ of a certain distinguished firm of jewellers in Bond-street. While so engaged, he had been commissioned to make a bracelet for a lady customer, one of the requisites in which was that it was to contain a locket with a secret manner of opening, which to outward appearance should simply have the effect of a solid ornament.

Mr. Zacharias had carried out this design by attaching to the bangle three circular pendants, set with small opals; the middle one of which could be opened, as desired, by carefully removing one of the stones and pressing a spring beneath. On closing it, the opal could easily be replaced by bending the light gold setting back into its former position. Altogether, it was so ingeniously constructed, and so exactly like the other two dummy pendants, that no one, not in the secret, would ever have discovered the opening.

The peculiar make and appearance of the bangle, when the woman had handed it to him just now across the counter, was enough to tell him, at a glance, that it was the very one he had made himself so many years ago, recalling to his mind circumstances which he had long, long forgotten, and awakening in him the dormant curiosity—which he had felt at the time of making it—as to the object of that secret compartment. That it would now contain any clue to satisfy such curiosity was improbable, surmising—at least, as Zacharias did—that Lady Branksome, who was notoriously in financial straits on account of her husband's extravagance, had sold the bracelet along with other jewellery. For she would, of course, have emptied the locket before parting with it.

But it was just possible that the bracelet had been stolen from her; in which case the clue to the mystery might still remain there.

With no very keen hopes or high expectations, the pawnbroker found the right stone on the central pendant; carefully bent back the gold setting with the point of a jeweller's knife, removed the opal, and pressed the spring. The locket flew open, and there fell out on to the table something which made Zacharias literally gasp—a diamond of extraordinary size and brilliancy, which flashed and glittered with dazzling effect in the full rays of the gas-light.

The pawnbroker inspected the splendid jewel, with eyes that blazed and sparkled almost as brightly as the object on which they were bent. That it was a stone of the first water, worth many thousand pounds, it scarcely needed his professional acumen to determine. It was a fortune, and a handsome fortune in itself! How had it come there? Presumably, Lady Branksome had placed it in the secret locket. But for what reason? And yet was it likely that when she was known to be in such straits for cash she should have kept this priceless stone, and not have converted it? Zacharias knitted his brows, and pored, in puzzled absorption, over the flashing brilliant.

Perhaps, however, Lady Branksome had nothing to do with it. She might have sold the bangle years and years ago. One thing, at least, seemed clear now—viz., that the article had been stolen, for the woman who had pawned it could not have known of the secret locket and its contents. Three sovereigns! How Zacharias chuckled! A thousand times that sum would be below the proper value of the pledge. . . .

After ruminating for nearly an hour over his extraordinary find, he replaced the diamond in its hidden abode, and locked the bangle up in his private safe, determined to await the upshot of events. For the person who had lost it was certain to advertise for it, and that would give him the necessary clue to its ownership; when he arrived at that he could then decide how he could best turn the matter to his own pecuniary advantage, and how far it would be safe to try and sell so conspicuous a stone.

That evening a piece of intelligence reached him which appeared to throw an extraordinary light upon the affair. A constable came into the pledge-office with a roll of large handbills, one of which he left upon the counter for Mr. Zacharias' perusal, stating that he was under orders to distribute them among all the jewellers and pawnbrokers in the district.

The contents of the handbill were as follows:—

METROPOLITAN POLICE.

TO DIAMOND MERCHANTS, PAWNBROKERS, AND OTHERS.

TAKE NOTICE that WHEREAS some time on the morning of July 22, a LARGE AND VALUABLE BRILLIANT was stolen from the GREAT TIARA now on view with the other wedding presents at the IMPERIAL INSTITUTE, will be paid to any person giving such information as shall lead to the recovery of the diamond and the conviction of the thief.

A REWARD OF £250

(By order) JOHN JONES, Chief Commissioner.

Such were the lines in the handbill that were printed in heavy type. There was attached, also, in smaller print, a technical description of the stone—for the benefit of experts—which left no doubt whatever in Mr. Zacharias' mind that the diamond found by him in the secret locket was one and the same with the brilliant filched from the great tiara.

But who could have stolen the jewel? And how, when so carefully guarded, could it have been possible to wrench it from its setting unperceived? . . . Ah! . . . The colour came and went in the pawnbroker's Israelitish face, and he breathed hard and quick with excitement. . . . For he suddenly remembered having seen it in the papers that Lady Branksome, who was persona grata at Court, was on the committee of ladies appointed to superintend the grouping and arranging of the presents! . . .

Mr. Zacharias felt so feverish and excited over his discovery that he took his hat and went out for a walk in the night air to cool his heated brain and collect his reasoning faculties. He was so absorbed in his reflections that he walked aimlessly along through street after street, without in the least noticing where he was going. But, strange to say, in the course of these peregrinations he stumbled upon the one link he needed to make his chain of evidence complete. On pulling up opposite a corner shop in Oxford-street to take his bearings, his eye fell upon the following poster conspicuously placed behind a gas-jet in the window:—

£10 REWARD.

LOST, in or near the IMPERIAL INSTITUTE, on July 22, SMALL GOLD BANGLE, with gold and opal pendant.

The above reward will be paid to any one who returns the bangle to

LADY BRANKSOME
—, Mount-street,
Grosvenor-square, W.

As he read this, you might easily have knocked Mr. Zacharias down with a feather. Here, in black and white before him, was the one fact he wanted to know—viz., the present rightful ownership of the bangle. What could now be plainer? The proverbial pikestaff was nothing to it. Lady Branksome, taking advantage of her exceptional facilities, had evidently filched the diamond and hidden it in the secret locket; and the bracelet, to which the latter was attached, had been stolen from her as she was leaving the Institute. And further, naturally supposing that no one except herself knew of the opening in the locket, she had boldly advertised for it; never expecting—as indeed how should she?—that the pawnbroker to whom the thief offered it should prove to be its original maker.

"But, expected or not expected," Mr. Zacharias soliloquised with elation, "so it is, your ladyship, and I've only to say the word to put you in quod, and that £250 into my pocket."

The pawnbroker passed a sleepless night, trying to decide what course would pay him best; for from the very outset, no other aspect of the affair had engaged his attention for an instant. Two hundred and fifty pounds were a tidy little sum; but still to gain it by the surrender of a jewel worth twelve times the amount hardly seemed good enough. On the other hand (as had doubtless been calculated in assessing the extent of the reward), it would be difficult to sell the stone in its present form; the risk would be too great. . . . Yes, ah, yes! That would be the best; to keep the diamond for the present, on the chance of the reward being increased; and in the meantime to blackmail Lady Branksome by dark hints of exposure. Hard up as she was, she would doubtless contrive, by some means or other, to raise the sum demanded, which (for the first time of asking) Mr. Zacharias determined to fix at £500. Having duly arranged his plan of action, the pawnbroker went next morning to Mount-street, and requested an interview with Lady Branksome. Her ladyship, after some little delay and difficulty, consented to see him, and he was ushered into her august presence.

"Good morning, Mr.—Mr. Zacharias," she said, stiffly, glancing at the card which he had sent in to her. "As I understand that your business is pressing and important, I have, at some inconvenience to myself——"

"It is most pressing and important," he interrupted her, fixing his keen eyes upon her face, and coming straight to the point. "It relates to the lost bangle for which you are advertising."

"Oh, that is it!" she exclaimed, quite changing her tone, and speaking with unaffected anxiety and eagerness. "Have you—have you—brought it with you?"

"No," he replied, quietly, "it is not in my possession. But I know where it is, and might get hold of it for you. Only——" Mr. Zacharias made an impressive pause, and looked very straight indeed into her ladyship's face.

"Only what!" she cried, impatiently.

"There is a little matter," he went on, slowly and incisively, "which must be first of all settled. The matter of a certain valuable diamond——"

"Good God!" she gasped, suddenly turning an ashen white, and trembling all over. "You have discovered my secret."

"I have, your ladyship. It is all as clear as daylight to me. Your connection with the arrangement of the wedding presents—the time when the diamond was stolen—its discovery in a secret locket attached to your bangle, of which you alone were aware—these points make the case complete and conclusive, as you must see."

She had given a little start, and had opened her trembling lips to speak; but either words would not come or she had thought better of it, for she remained silent, looking with frightened eyes into Mr. Zacharias's evil, ugly face.

"W-w-hat do you mean to do?" she murmured at length.

"A reward of £250 is offered, which I have merely to reach out my hand to take," he said, with a menacing smile. "But I should be sorry to consign your ladyship to hard labour, I should indeed. I therefore propose to hold my tongue, in consideration of which you are to pay me—£500."

"And the diamond?" she exclaimed.

"The diamond," he said, "will be retained, at present, by the person in whose possession it now lies."

Lady Branksome looked helplessly from side to side, evidently chafing with suppressed fury under the cool insolence of Mr. Zacharias' demands. But—and he knew it too well—she dared not show fight.

"I have not the money now," she said sullenly; "but I will try to raise it by to-morrow. Call again, then, at the same time."

"Very good," he answered, with insulting politeness; "and, for your ladyship's sake, I hope that the amount—in cash—will be ready for me when I call."

As soon as he was gone, Lady Branksome rang, in a great hurry, and ordered her carriage; and, twenty minutes later, she was driving rapidly to Scotland Yard, for an interview with her friend, the Chief Commissioner of Police.

"If only the news may fail to reach him for an hour or two," she murmured to herself as she went. "Fortune favour me in this!"

* * * * *

Mr. Zacharias, highly satisfied with the manner in which he had conducted his interview, was just taking an extra glass of wine, on the strength of it, after luncheon, when he was fetched away from his bottle to see two gentlemen who had called on important business.

The pawnbroker was not very pleased at being thus disturbed, and he was still less pleased when he found that his two visitors were from Scotland Yard. But he received them with that suavity which he always showed to officers of the law, and asked them, with some inward uneasiness, how he could serve them.

The answer which he received took him aback not a little.

"We have come," said one of the officers, in a confidential voice, "to see you about that diamond stolen from the Imperial Institute, as we understand that you are in possession of important evidence on the subject."

"How the deu——," began Mr. Zacharias, unable to

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. It is the best that money can buy.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Has been awarded Five Gold Medals.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER Guaranteed to be free from alum.

repress a start. "I—I—that is, I do not quite understand you!"

"Come, my good sir," interposed the other officer, briskly, "that won't wash, you know. I may as well tell you that we have had a watch set on Lady Branksome from the first, and, in point of fact, your conversation with her this morning was overheard. You must hand over both diamond and bangle to us immediately, and also be prepared to give your evidence at the Westminster police-court to-morrow morning."

"I have not either diamond or bangle in my possession," replied Zacharias, doggedly.

"Won't do," laughed the officer. "Come! No nonsense! I have a search warrant, which I shall execute at once, if you refuse. And, furthermore, I shall arrest you, on suspicion, as a receiver. If, however, you hand over without a fuss, and give your evidence properly, you will be indemnified against risk, and perhaps get some of the reward. Which is it to be?"

The pawnbroker, inwardly cursing his own precipitation in visiting Lady Branksome, but feeling himself "held" all round—for, apart from other considerations, it would never do to have his place searched—produced the bangle with a very bad grace; and, with still worse grace, showed the detective, at his request, how to open the secret locket. The two officers carefully examined the diamond; and, having satisfied themselves as to its being the right one, took their departure, leaving Mr. Zacharias in a far from enviable frame of mind.

Next morning he had the following letter from the Chief Commissioner's secretary:—

SIR,—I am directed to inform you that the diamond, supposed to have been stolen from the Imperial Institute, has been duly found, having merely slipped from its setting and fallen underneath the velvet covering of the stand, where it escaped notice. The diamond found in your possession—which has been mistaken for the other, to which it bears a close resemblance—proves to be the personal property of Lady Branksome, to whom it has accordingly been restored, together with the bangle.—Your obedient servant, THOMAS SMITH.

Such was, indeed, the case. Lady Branksome, an eccentric woman, had treasured up that one large diamond (the only one of her family jewels which had not long ago been converted) as a safe provision for her daughter. In order to keep its existence from her spendthrift husband's knowledge, she had hit upon the peculiar expedient of shutting it up inside the secret locket. When Zacharias accused her of stealing the brilliant from the great tiara, she had just heard of its having been found. But, with commendable readiness, she had seized the opportunity to outwit the impudent rascal and insure the restoration of her own jewel.

MUSIC.

THE DEPARTED OPERA SEASON.

THE opera season ended on Saturday, and Sir A. Harris is already thinking of its successor. He has, I believe, not yet secured Covent Garden after next spring, but no difficulty is anticipated on this head, while the De Reszkes, who are now engaged only season by season, have promised to come back, and the manager has visions of mounting Berlioz's "Damnation de Faust," Cowen's "Signa," Mascagni's "Vestilia" and "William Ratcliffe," and very possibly Puccini's "La Ville," or "Manon Lescaut," and Verdi's "Falstaff." Sufficient unto the present year is the business thereof, but it may fairly be said in passing that if the manager proposes to get through this Brobdingnagian list of novelties during the summer of 1894, he will have to engage a double chorus and orchestra, or to begin his rehearsals a good deal earlier than he started them this year. "I Rantzau," "Amy Robsart," and "Mefistofele" this summer required no fewer than twenty-three band rehearsals for a solitary performance as to the first two works, while Boito's opera, which needed even still further preparation, could eventually not be given at all.

In his closing speech Sir A. Harris declared that the season had proved a financial, as it undoubtedly has been an artistic, success. It certainly has given the company a good deal of work. In eleven weeks, which included sixty-four working-nights, five-and-twenty operas were mounted, five of them being absolutely now to England. The most successful was "Pagliacci," which was played twelve times; while, at the bottom of the list were "Irmengarda," "Rigoletto," "La Juive," and "Les Pêcheurs de Perles," which were given only once. Three of the novelties, "I Rantzau," "Amy Robsart," and "The Veiled Prophet," were likewise performed only once, but the last-named work, belated until the final night but three of the season, is to be revived next year. "Carmen" has crept up again in the opera lists, and it was given seven times, mainly, of course, owing to Madame Calvé, whose impersonation of the dare-devil gipsy-girl is one of the finest performances now to be witnessed on the operatic stage. M. Jean de Reszke has stuck to his old repertory, Lohengrin, Faust, and Romeo being the parts most frequently repeated. "Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" have, however, far and away earned most money this summer, and to a manager who in less than three months has to deal with a turnover of something like £50,000, such successes must always be very welcome. Some of the Wagner operas—"Siegfried" at Drury Lane, for example—have drawn much less than usual, and if the German colony desire Sir Augustus Harris to continue the Wagnerian season in the Teutonic tongue, they will have to rally in support of it in far greater numbers than heretofore. Operatic representations are organised for profit, not for pastime.

The last of the productions of the season was Professor Stanford's "Veiled Prophet." It would, perhaps, have been better if a work like this, entirely new to England, had not been given at the fag end of the summer; and, still better, if, when Dr. Stanford had the chance of a rehearing at Covent Garden, he had come forward with an opera of a newer cut. The "Veiled Prophet" contains some very charming music, particularly the Oriental dances and songs in the harem scene, but it is hopelessly overweighted by an absurd libretto. Its first act is poor, and the duets with which each act is bountifully provided are all a great deal too long. To the vast majority of the audience, who nowadays do not read their Thomas Moore, the reason why the false prophet veiled his face must have been quite incomprehensible. In the original legend Mokanna, whose eye had been hurt in battle, wore a mask, pretending that his countenance was too radiant for mortal eyes to look upon. Signor Ancona's handsome face was, however, plainly visible through the thinnest of gauzes, and, so far as the audience could observe, the deformity could have been nothing worse than a pimple on his nose. The operatic hero who sings a passionate tenor solo, and forthwith goes to sleep in the most uncomfortable attitude, shading his face with his hand and slumbering placidly on while Mdlle. Zucchi and a bevy of houris dance round him, and Miss Lucille Hill sings literally at him the daintiest of soprano airs, is also nowadays an absurdity to a public accustomed to have its operatic wares dished up hot and strong in the style of "Pagliacci." Then, again, there is the grotesque incident of the moon in the third act. The false prophet, to astonish his disciples, who are on the point of deserting to the enemy, promises to perform a miracle by causing the moon to arise out of a lake. He utters the monotonous incantation, and forthwith there appears a luminary as big as a soup-tureen, travelling millions of miles a minute across the sky, while the deluded Persians, after the manner of the operatic chorus, show their surprise by turning their backs on the strange thing and singing wildly to the footlights. The suggestion which has been mooted in some quarters, that Mokanna was able to do this moon-making, thanks to his superior knowledge of astronomy, is not justified by the facts; for in the original of D'Herbelot, from which Moore derived the legend, it is expressly stated that the prophet repeated his strange trick every night for a couple of months. But the whole thing savours of pantomime, and in modern opera it is supremely ridiculous. I find it a more pleasant task to speak of the literary excellence of Mr. Barclay Squire's verse wherein, by the way, whenever practicable, he quotes Moore himself and of the beauty of much of the music. The heroine's long solo in the first act, the female choruses, tenor song, ballet music, and Fatima's air in the second, and the watchman's song, the duet for two women, and the heroine's new air in the third act, are numbers which amply demonstrate that even the composer of "Eden" is, when he likes, a master of genuine, unforced, and most acceptable melody.

BRANDAUER'S CIRCULAR-POINTED PENS. Neither scratch nor spurt. Glide over the roughest paper with the ease of a soft lead pencil. A 6d. assorted sample box of any stationer.

A good deal of fuss is being made in Worcester because a strong contingent of the Leeds choir have again been engaged to reinforce the local chorus. The rights of local amateurs may, however, be all very well, but the Worcester committee have to consider the success of the festival, and without the Yorkshire voices the west country chorus would not make a particularly brave show. Something seems to be required at Worcester akin to that accomplished by Mr. Lee Williams at Gloucester, where in the intervals between the triennial celebrations the local talent is thoroughly worked up. The weak point of the Worcester festival really, however, lies in its programme. A prospectus which boasts no further or better novelties than a "Te Deum" by the assistant organist and a short orchestral piece by Dr. Hubert Parry is hardly worthy of a musical festival.

At the Promenade Concerts which open on Saturday week it is proposed to perform M. Saint-Saëns's "Samson et Dalila" as an oratorio in French, with Madame Sanz as the hair-cutting heroine and the composer as conductor. An oratorio in French at a Promenade Concert will be a strange experience, although to hear the music may be interesting enough. Among the débutantes at these concerts during the season will, I hear, be a soprano negress.

The affection of the Welsh for their Eisteddfodau is notorious, and for the national celebration at Pontypridd it has been found necessary to set up a pavilion capable of holding 20,000 people. In other words, the building where the contests are held and the concerts are given is a good deal more commodious than the Albert Hall. Pontypridd is among the coal-fields of Glamorganshire, which boast some of the finest voices in Wales.

If the requisitions of the County Council in regard to Covent Garden be well founded, the authorities have not taken steps before it is full time. The document is addressed to the owner, and not, of course, to Sir A. Harris, who is merely tenant from year to year. But considering that the Opera-house is during several weeks in the summer nightly filled with the flower of the British aristocracy, and during the autumn by large audiences of the middle-classes, the Council are right in insisting that scenery and lumber shall be moved from under the auditorium, or the floor be made fire-proof, that the painters' store-room and lamp-room be moved from under the stalls (a queer place, by the way, to put a lamp-room), the lumber and beer store be removed from under the gallery, which is certainly not an ideal spot for the storage of beer, the ceiling of the gasmen's workroom under the stage, and the property stores above the ceiling of the auditorium be made fireproof, and the lumber and properties be removed from the space under the entrance vestibule (or crush-room), now, it appears, used as supers' dressing-rooms. After this formidable catalogue, it seems almost simple to require that bolts, locks, and fastenings, should be removed from all doors used by the audience, and that all barriers should be made to open outwards. Six months is allowed to do all this. Six days would appear to be nearer the mark.

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—Mr. Rudyard Kipling is a Philistine of the Philistines, but with all the brute power of Goliath of Gath. He is a braggart, too, like Goliath—a British braggart of the blatant type he sneers at as distinctively American. When one of his "Three Musketeers," Ortheris, swaggers: "I'm a private sorvin' of the Queen, an' as good a man as 'e is, for all 'is commission an' 'is airs an' 'is money," Mr. Kipling comments: "Ortheris, being neither a menial nor an American, but a free man, had no excuse for yelping." Yet no music-hall Jingo thunders more frequently or more furiously on the big, big British drum than Mr. Kipling. There is also in many of his stories a note of personal, as well as of patriotic, arrogance, which grates upon you, suggesting that Mr. Kipling is intoxicated with his sudden success. But, indeed, some of the stories in "Many Inventions" (1) would suggest this by their mere appearance in the collection. Only a truly colossal conceit of himself or scorn of his public can account, for instance, for such slobbering imbecility as "Brugglesmith" being offered to you as something so irresistibly humorous that "never since the Metropolitan Police was founded did three policemen laugh as those three laughed at the story of the sinful old ruffian in the ambulance." Well, it is just possible that a brutal street boy might find matter for a flying grin in the sight of a drunkard being wheeled along in an ambulance; but it is not possible that any sane creature should find fun in Mr. Kipling's elephantine elaboration of this farce of the gutter. If "Brugglesmith" is brute farce, "The Record of Badalia Herodsfoot" is brute melodrama. Is this butcher's description of the murder of a woman by her husband art, or nature, or humour, or pathos, or such a shrill screaming parody of them as an Arkansas penny-a-liner might furnish to his paper?:—

> The voice ceased as the grip tightened, and Tom heaved Badalia against the bed. Her forehead struck the bed-post, and she sank, half kneeling on the floor. It was impossible for a self-respecting man to refrain from kicking her; so Tom kicked with the deadly intelligence born of whisky. The head drooped to the floor, and Tom kicked at that till the crisp tingle of hair striking through the nailed boot with the chill of cold water warned him that it might be as well to desist.

Possibly Kiplingites will find something exquisite in the humour of this description, and something intelligible in that crisp tingle, chilling as a spurt of cold water, of a woman's hair felt or forced through a nailed boot, but for my life I can neither see the fun, nor the force, nor the sense of it. And I defy even a Kiplingite to see any meaning, moral, or interest in the pretentious parable, "The Children of the Zodiac"; but, on the other hand, I defy any one, however antipathetic to Mr. Kipling, not to enjoy the singular imaginative force and reach shown "In the Rukh" and in "A Matter of Fact," and the luridly vivid descriptions through which you seem to see the sea and the forest scenery by flashes of lightning.

It is a little blinding after seeing things by flashes of lightning to put your eye to Mr. Henry James's microscope, and watch the exquisitely, if finically, minute movements he delights to trace. Mr. Henry James opens his collection of short stories, as Mr. Kipling closes his, with a parable, which, however, is spoiled by the precisely opposite defect to that you find in "The Children of the Zodiac." For while Leo, the Girl, the Bull, the Ram, and the Crab remain to you as mere and

(1) "Many Inventions." By Rudyard Kipling. (London: Macmillan & Co.)
(2) "The Private Life, and Other Stories." By Henry James. (London: James R. Osgood, McIlvaine, & Co.)
(3) "The Shadow of Desire." By Irene Osgood. (New York: The Cleveland Publishing Company.)
(4) "From Whose Bourne, and Other Stories." By Robert Barr (Luke Sharp). (London: Chatto & Windus.)
(5) "Verses." By Dora Sigerson (London: Elliot Stock & Co.)

dull symbols as the x and y of an algebraic equation, the personages of "The Private Life" are so real that you resent the discovery at the close of their being but figures in a somewhat shallow parable. There is no need of all this supernatural machinery to explain why an author should be "an inspired idiot," and "write like an angel, but talk like poor Poll;" nor to account for the exclusively social existence of Lord Mellifont, who, unlike all other apparitions on record, appears only to numbers. All this supernatural machinery is as much out of proportion to its purpose as though the Ghost had really appeared to Hamlet only to assure him:—

> There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark
> But he's an arrant knave.

Far more unaccountable is the appearance — especially amongst Mr. James' cynical personages—of an incredible ingénue who dies of the mere shame of having made an indirect, though successful, proposal to a young gentleman! Accounting on her death-bed for her otherwise inexplicable death she confessed "I broke out to him, I told him," she began at last. But she couldn't continue; she was powerless to utter it. "Yes, I know what you told him. Millions of girls have told young men that before." "They've been asked! They didn't speak first!" And of this, and this alone, a perfectly healthy young girl dies! Don't you feel inclined to use the tremendous language old Sam Johnson used to the clerk who came to unburden to him a conscience crushed with the sense of guilt? "I—I have been in the habit of taking odds and ends of twine from the office," faltered the clerk. "Oh, well; tell your employer and there's an end on it." "I have told him," he moaned, "and he said it didn't matter." Whereupon old Sam lifted up his voice in such a roar of rage that the morbid penitent nearly fell back down the stairs. It is not on record, however, that he died of remorse. The heroine of "The Shadow of Desire" (3) is by no means of the over-sensitive sort that would > Die of a rose in aromatic pain.

She is, however, an interesting, natural, and even admirable study which redeems an otherwise inartistic and somewhat prolix story. Of more uniform interest are the three stories in "From whose Bourne" (4), the first of them being manned mainly by spirits of the dead. I remember one of the most popular of our novelists saying to me once, with a sudden gasp of horror, "Suppose we were to go on in the next world as we left off in this, and pretty much in the same dreary round!" This precisely is what the disembodied spirits in "From whose Bourne" do in their groping efforts to trace home a supposed murder. To most readers, perhaps, the moral of the story will be that of the poem in which the soul of a dead wife is permitted, at the cost of a millennium of purgatory, to return for a moment to earth to see her husband, and sees him issuing from the church with his bride! Returning to serve out her millennium of purgatory, she is informed by an angel that she has served the whole thousand years of torture already in the anguish of that glance which told her she was forgotten. Exquisite is the treatment of a similar subject in "All Souls' Night," which I have come upon in a collection of "Verses" (5) by a poetess who has a future, and a brilliant future before her—Miss Dora Sigerson. These "Verses"

> Are of imagination all compact.

If you are as sick as I of the thin tinkle of most modern verse, where an affected and fantastic obscurity is so made to conceal a lack of ideas that you cry, "Il dit tout qu'il veut, mais malheureusement il n'a rien à dire," you will welcome the singular wealth of imagination, and depth, and delicacy, and wistful Irish tenderness and weirdness of such poems as "The Flight of the Wild Geese," "The Little Brother," "Eclipse," "Remorse," and "Good-bye." For my own part, I may say that, albeit not given to poetic abandonment, I read these exquisite poems, and many others in the volume, again and again. —Believe me, dear Mr. Wyndham, very sincerely yours,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—You ask me what are now the regulation width and style of fashionable skirts. They are greatly various in character. The tailor-made dresses measure about four yards or four-and-a-half round the hem, but elaborate gowns for afternoon or evening wear are much wider. One is always sure to see the latest fashions at Jay's, so I went there to see for myself what the new skirts are like before answering your question. I saw a perfectly lovely evening dress in white satin, the skirt very wide round the feet where it stood out in bold pleats, but fitting closely to the figure on the hips. The bodice was covered with accordion-pleated rose-pink chiffon, and over the skirt the same soft fabric fell in vandykes with the loveliest effect, the kiltings falling open and thus making the tender tone of pink look paler still at the edges. The sleeves were cut like large lily petals in white satin, with the pleated pink chiffon falling over them. A band of white satin formed a belt, being fastened with a rosette at either side. Low on the skirt in front were two rosettes, white and pink. The bodice was finished round the top with a little beautiful real lace in a warm tone of cream colour turned back from the shoulders. A group of shaded pink roses was fastened at the left. The whole dress was just like a flower. Another evening gown was in black satin, with a very full skirt, the breadths being cut in a new way, so that they turned out in points about the feet. The bodice was all jet and cream-tinted lace, a corselet of the former ending in a point at the back, while in front it was slightly opened up towards the waist. The rest was all lace, except that the short sleeves were composed of several double frills of black chiffon, with a deep fall of the creamy lace over them. At the back this lace was carried on down to the waist in a cascade. You cannot imagine what a becoming bodice this was. A little cluster of shaded pink and red geraniums with velvet petals was fastened in the front.

A sweetly pretty low bodice for a girl, to be worn with a pink silk skirt, covered with pink lisse and with three kiltings of the latter round the hips, was in pink satin, with pink lisse gathered over it in bébé fashion. Frills of pink lisse and of cream trimmed it round the shoulders, and the sleeves consisted of the same, with a bow of black velvet above them. A cluster of black blow-aways, with a few sprays of white jessamine, was fastened on the bodice. A band of black velvet was fastened at the waist with a pretty paste buckle. For a matron a silk dress in a tone of aubergine had been designed, the skirt trimmed with a very deep flounce pleated on and made with two rows of cream-coloured guipure, under which a band of pale heliotrope silk, which showed through the meshes of the lace. Above the flounce and hiding its point of junction with the skirt, was a row of jet embroidery in a leaf design. The bodice was rather elaborately arranged, with full pieces of the aubergine standing out above a full trimming in front. You would have much admired a simple black cloth, the skirt of which was unlined and finished with a few perpendicular rows of black braid, alternately short and long. The bodice was a short coat, coming to the waist, and worn with a white shirt and a black satin tie with very wide ends. The coat, which was much the same shape as an officer's undress jacket, was arranged with braid as described above. The fronts are turned back and trimmed horizontally with braid of two different lengths in alternation. The whole effect is smart and rather coquettish, and this is assisted by the sailor hat of grey felt with up-curved brim, trimmed with black, one or two quills of peacock glinting tints being thrust into the loops of the bows.

We also saw a lovely tea-gown made of soft white

COSTUMES FOR SCOTLAND, &c.—Messrs. REDFERN beg to announce that they have designed some very practical Gowns for ladies visiting Scotland, either for Shooting, Travelling, Golfing, &c., to which they invite an inspection.—27, New Bond-street, W.

crêpe de chine, embroidered with fine black jet beads. A zouave in heliotrope cashmere was of the shape that is cut up the back and rounded off, and was covered with a lovely embroidery of silver, jet, and silk cord in two shades of mauve. This zouave ended in wide sleeves across the front, and the crêpe de chine fell loosely from the bust over a tightly fitting lining. It was a charming tea gown, so graceful and poetic. The way in which the Watteau at the back floated out from under the zouave was particularly pretty.

Some of the new felt hats are very becoming, the brim being turned up at any sort of angle, and pinned back with large jet stars, the trimming consisting of black ostrich feathers. A little bonnet with a gold crown jewelled with pearls and emeralds was smart, and a very large Gainsborough hat in black velvet, with splendid feathers for trimming, was very effective.

Mabel has just made for her mother a quite lovely dinner dress of velveteen in the softest and brightest possible shade of heliotrope. As you know, they are very poor and have to manage to be as well dressed as possible, as the friends with whom they associate are all well off, and they must either give up society altogether or else appear sufficiently bien mises not to offend people's susceptibilities. This is one of the cruel necessities of poverty. One dare not be as openly and honestly poor as one would like to be, for the feelings of friends and relatives have to be considered. However, Mabel is very clever, and as she learned the real, original, and genuine system of scientific dresscutting, of which so many worthless imitations have of late sprung up, she can make her own and her mother's dresses and mantles as well as a professional. She declares that new materials are so cheap, they can dress for very little money. She bought a length of beautiful summer cloth for 15s. the other day, enough to make a skirt and coat. Her mother's velveteen dinner gown she has made with a square bodice, trimmed with some lovely old lace in a delicious tone of deep cream colour, and the elbow-sleeves have deep falls of the same. The front breadths open over cream-coloured satin, which Mabel has embroidered along the hem, and in light sprays of irregular height up the front, with gold and crystal beads and chainstitch. You cannot think what a lovely gown it looks, and Mabel is so delighted with her nice old mother in it. Watching them together, and seeing how devoted they are to each other, it occurred to me that poverty has its silver lining. When the nature and disposition are good and sweet, they seem to be made better and sweeter by a few hardships, and when people share these together uncomplainingly and pleasantly, it promotes affection and good feeling. But oh, Amy! Does not poverty soon find out the selfish ones and show them up in a strong and vivid light?

I have received the following amusing letter from "An Old Bachelor":—

Flowers are always lovely, even artificial ones worn in hats and bonnets are charming, and for many reasons. In the first place they have none of the horrid suggestiveness of the murder of the innocents about them, like the feathers and tiny stuffed birds that are worn as head-gear, or as the still more cruel aigrette that so many affect. Then again, artificial flowers supply such a truly womanly means of livelihood in their manufacture; made by women to be worn by women.

As an old bachelor, but not a misogynist, I am a great admirer of the fair sex, and thoroughly appreciate anything pretty they wear, but I cannot abide feathers and birds upon the top of their sweet faces—it gives them such a wild Indian, cannibal kind of look. But, oh! crowned with flowers I think them completely adorable. Alas! that even to this there is a great if or why! If they only would wear flowers in their proper seasons; or why will they flaunt all the wrong flowers at the wrong moments?

Perhaps it is only that I am growing old, but surely the year already gallops too fast away, and, therefore, why keep us perpetually reminded of it? The woman who in January wears clusters of primroses on her head is saying to you, "Be quick, be quick, it is time for you to be paying your March quarter's bills," and this before you have recovered from Christmas. Oh, the cruelty of it! You have hardly regained your peace of mind from being hustled in this way, when "Primrose Day" really comes round, and then some woman (lovely woman, of course!) sits before one at an afternoon concert or matinée crowned with roses, probably a hat with large bows of magenta velvet, and a garland of pink roses, which not only gives you an inward cramp from the dread of colours, but flusters you by suggesting the end of the season, the house painters invading your body of holes, and you vainly and perspiringly packing your portmanteau to escape from your chamber for a short holiday abroad.

And this gives you another great heave forward to hurry the year mercilessly away, and this in April, it is really too thoughtless and provoking of women. But I shiver to think of it, I have often seen poppies and cornflowers and such like harvest thanksgiving decorations sported in May, and so on through the year.

It only remains to be seated comfortably in church, say, one balmy day in July, and to be awakened ruthlessly from a happy half slumber by seeing a lady decked with holly sprigs on the top of her dark tresses; one will wake with a horrible start, and a feeling of over extension and over weight, and the sense of a surfeit of beef and turkey, and realising that here, just before one is the plum pudding arrived already, and only waiting to be set alight.

If the dear fair ones cannot be satisfied with nature's glorious variety and choice of flowers and foliage for each successive season, and give us the enjoyment of each to its full extent, then maybe they will forgive an old man's suggestion; suppose they wore mistletoe all the year round on the top of their heads, surely that would meet the requirements of all parties!

The "Old Bachelor" is quite right. But we all do such dreadful unorthodox things just now, do we not? We trim washing-gowns with velvet, satin, or moiré silk. We wear the most screeching mauves and blues, greens and yellows, violets and purples in combination, and young girls go to balls with masses of diamonds about them, while old ladies wear bonnets garlanded with daisies or forget-me-nots. And then, too, how many women have of late committed the atrocious solecism of wearing pearls in the daytime?

I have a letter from Ursula in which she says:—

During this last week Edinburgh has been absolutely excited, and although to you, my dear but Sassenach friend, this may convey nothing, I assure you that it is most unusual for such a thing to be chronicled in the dead season. The why and wherefore have been the simultaneous holding of the Highland and Agricultural Society's Show and a monster Carnival, Floral Fête and Fancy Fair (nothing like a comprehensive title!) in aid of the Simpson Maternity Hospital and the Institution for Incurables. These two entertainments existed within a stone's throw of each other in the Stockbridge Park and Cornely Bank Grounds respectively, and although beforehand there was some slight friction in consequence between the promoters, I am glad to say that it was all smoothed down and both sides have scored a great success. The crowds have been enormous, the admissions to the Cattle Show on one day exceeding 36,000 for example, and the street traffic in the neighbourhood was, of course, to correspond. Not being very well versed in bucolics, I cannot discourse learnedly about the Agricultural Show, but suffice it to say that there was a splendid turn-out of horses, from the Clydesdale giants to a diminutive pony, with an equally tiny foal, the latter being about the size of a collie dog; that we were able to admire the fine Highland cattle with the greater appreciation from the fact they were on the other side of a stout wooden fence; that the display of agricultural implements was both extensive and—let me write it gently—wearisome; that the milking machine attracted a large crowd; that there was the usual number of fat and panting sheep and other unhappy prize animals; and, lastly, that the refreshment stalls seemed to be doing an enormous trade. Close by was the Collie Dog Show, where one saw "Heather Chance," the collie presented to H.R.H. the Duchess of York by Miss Leith and a few other ladies; "Ben," the celebrated card-playing dog, and other specimens of their kind.

In the Carnival all was noise and frivolity—bands playing, pipers skirling, people chattering, laughing, and shouting, and every form of diversion was there. Striking-looking Irish gipsies told your fortune after you had been up in the balloon, or taken a ride on the merry-go-round. Then you could watch the 12th Lancers performing their picturesque musical ride, or thrill with horror at the mimic battle (which included the storming of a farmhouse, capture of spies, fierce firing, and death on the field), gallantly fought by the 91st Highlanders, refreshing the inner man afterwards at the Café Chantant, while listening to Durward Lely. If your purse was full you could speedily empty it at the flower stall or country market, even before reaching the large marquée in which the fancy fair was held; and this even after, perhaps, resisting the many young men and maidens who were roaming about with those fatal raffle-books in search of victims. There were certainly some wonderful prizes to be gained by the lucky few. Fancy a Whitechapel cart for 6d., an Erard grand piano for 1s., a first-class ticket for a trip to South Africa by the Union line for 2s. 6d., or a billiard-table for a shilling, and these are only a few. Other pitfalls for the unwary and opulent were shooting-galleries, a theatre of entertainments, a doll exhibition, cocoa gardens, and a circus.

The principal stall in the Fair was presided over by the Marchioness of Tweeddale and Mrs. J. P. B. Robertson, wife of the Lord President. The distinguishing badge here was a yellow sash, which was worn by Lady Tweeddale on the first two days, with a black dress, the skirt formed of two deep flounces of accordion pleated crêpon, each edged with two bands of narrow satin ribbon, the body slightly trimmed with cream guipure lace, and a tiny black and yellow bonnet. On another day she wore dark blue. Mrs. Robertson appeared on the first day in cream satin striped with blue. The adjacent "Incurables" stall was in charge of Lady Campbell of Succoth and Miss Stirling, the badge being sashes of a pale shade of crushed strawberry; and the Highland stall, presided over by Miss Colquhoun of Luss, was draped with the Colquhoun tartan. The tempting-looking sweet stall found a large share of patronage, and amongst other prettily-decorated tables were the "East Lothian" and "Trinity."

HOUSE DRAINAGE.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

The Carnival was opened on Tuesday by the Lord Provost, who was accompanied to the platform by Lady Tweeddale, the Hon. Mrs. Hope of Belmont, Miss Muir (whose engagement to Colonel Wauchope, Mr. Gladstone's opponent in Midlothian, has just been announced), and other personages of light and leading both masculine and feminine, while the Lord Mayor of Dublin performed the same office on Friday, and in company with your Lord Mayor, Sir Stuart Knill, visited the Carnival in State on Saturday. Every evening the grounds were illuminated with Chinese lanterns, &c., and there was a fine display of fireworks by Messrs. Pain, so that altogether the energetic managers had catered for the amusement of the populace in every possible way.

I fancy you will approve of this recipe for crab scallops:—

Mince finely the whole of the meat from two parboiled crabs; put it into a saucepan with a wineglassful of white wine, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, half a nutmeg grated, and pepper and salt to taste. When the mixture comes to a boil add a quarter of a pound of fresh butter, two boned, blanched, and pounded anchovies, and the beaten yolks of two fresh eggs. Stir this into the heated crab until all is thoroughly blended. Butter half a dozen scallop shells, sprinkle on them finely-minced parsley, fill with the mixture, and screen with breadcrumbs. Lay on each shell a tiny piece of butter and hold a red-hot salamander over it. Stick small three-cornered pieces of toast around and in the scallops. Arrange them on a white china dish, outlining each shell with well-washed and drained tips of watercress. Send to table hot and serve with half lemons.

This is a perfectly lovely cake jelly:—

Cut the top from a round stale sponge cake, and remove the inside, leaving a wall and ground an inch and a half thick, line the interior with cold jelly, which is nearly set, about a quarter of an inch in thickness. When this is firm, place in the centre a tall narrow jar filled with broken ice, around it pour alternate layers of jelly and newly-made jam, allowing each layer of jelly to set before the jam is added. When the cake is full, remove the jar and fill the space with whipped cream, replace the top of the cake and fasten it on with jelly. Spread over the top with a wet knife the following icing:—Mix six ounces of castor sugar with the juice of an orange, and beat for half an hour. Decorate with candied cherries and slices of angelica.

Have you ever tried mushrooms and tomatoes cooked together? If not, you will thank me for this recipe:—

Remove the peel and stalks from seven or eight good-sized fresh mushrooms; lay them, the hollow part upward, on a buttered sauté-pan, put a small piece of butter on each, season with salt and pepper, cover with a lid and cook them in a hot oven for twenty minutes. Meanwhile, prepare a similar number of round pieces of toast buttered on both sides. Fry an equal quantity of thick slices of ripe tomatoes. Now place a slice of tomato on each piece of toast, and finish with a mushroom on the top. Dish on a white paper and serve very hot.

And this is an excellent way of stuffing mushrooms:—

Remove the stalks and peel, and scrape out the gills from a sufficient number of large fresh mushrooms. Fill the hollow part with good veal forcemeat, smooth it with a palette-knife dipped in hot water, egg the farce, and cover it with nicely-browned bread-crumbs; place them in a buttered sauté-pan, and bake them in a moderate oven about twenty-five minutes. Dish each mushroom on a round piece of fried bread, and serve with white sauce, which should be flavoured with the stalks of the mushrooms.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

OLD SILVER FOR PRESENTS.

The Choicest Stock of genuine Old Silver in London, at moderate cash prices, with 10 per cent. discount.

SPINK & SON,
Goldsmiths and Silversmiths,
17 & 18, PICCADILLY, W.
and at
2, GRACECHURCH ST. CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.

ESTABLISHED 1772. Under the Patronage of H.M. the Queen.

JAY'S
Annual Sale
WILL CONTINUE
THROUGHOUT THE MONTH.
Great Reductions in Mantles, Costumes, Millinery, and Ladies' Underwear.
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

THE MANUFACTURING
GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY
Show Rooms—112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)
Supply the Public Direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving Purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Fine Diamond Half-hoop Rings, from £15 to £200.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £8.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
THE
GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE LTD.
(A. B. Savory & Sons), late of 11 and 12, Cornhill, E.C., is sold to this Company, and the business is transferred to the above address.

Fine Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Ring, £18 10s.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

The Largest and Choicest Stock in the World of Novelties specially prepared for WEDDING & COMPLIMENTARY PRESENTS.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Border Ring, £25.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Bracelet, £35.

REGISTERED DESIGN
Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, £5.

Fine Diamond Cluster Ring, £25.

CRITERION RESTAURANT, Piccadilly.

NO. 1 EAST ROOM—CUISINE VERITABLEMENT FINE.
SPECIALLY DEVOTED TO THE SERVICE OF
À LA CARTE DÉJEUNERS AND DINNERS in the most Recherché Style of French Cookery.
CUISINE UNRIVALLED IN ENGLAND. LARGE SELECTION OF CHOICE WINES.
NO. 2 EAST ROOM.
A Special Dinner at 10s. 6d. each Will be served in this Room at Separate Tables, between the hours of 6 and 9 p.m.
COMPOSED OF A SELECTION OF DISHES FROM THE CARTE DU JOUR OF THE EAST ROOMS.

LADIES LEAVING TOWN,

GOING ABROAD, OR INTO THE COUNTRY, SHOULD BUY A BOTTLE OF

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR,

a cooling and emollient preparation for the face and arms during the heat and dust of summer. It prevents the skin becoming red or sunburnt, removes Tan, Freckles, Roughness of the Skin, soothes Irritation and Insect Stings, and produces a fair and delicate skin. Bottles, 4s. 6d. Half bottles, 2s. 3d.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO,

an antiseptic preservative and aromatic dentifrice, which whitens the teeth, prevents and arrests decay, and sweetens the breath. It contains no mineral acids, no gritty matter or injurious astringents, keeps the mouth, gums, and teeth free from the unhealthy action of germs in organic matter between the teeth, and is the most wholesome tooth powder for smokers.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL

prevents the hair falling off or becoming dry during hot weather. Is the best preserver and beautifier of the hair of children and adults; prevents it falling off or turning grey, eradicates scurf and dandruff, and is also the best brilliantine for ladies and everybody's use, and as a little goes a very long way it really is most economical for general use. Is also sold in a golden colour for fair-haired ladies and children. It contains no lead or mineral ingredients. Bottles, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. Sold Everywhere.

HOWARD & SONS.

PATENTEES OF

ENGLISH-MADE

PARQUET

FOR COVERING OLD FLOORS.
NEVER WEARS OUT.

DIVANS, SOFAS,

AND

EASY CHAIRS.

FURNITURE DESIGNERS & MAKERS. NEW CATALOGUES FREE.

25, 26, & 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.

THE NEW PATENT

TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE.

NO. 20,778,

For Ladies and Children.

These goods are spliced at the instep, where, in the case of lace-up boots and shoes, stockings first show signs of wear. In the heels and feet there is also a splicing thread more than is found in ordinary goods. Thereby the wearing power is doubled without the slightest clumsiness or discomfort. The improvement is particularly advantageous in the thinnest summer makes of stocking, where the extreme fineness of the yarn makes the ordinary goods very apt to wear out almost immediately.

Made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

See Reg. Trade Mark "MUSA DYE" on each pair.

To be obtained of the best Hosiers and Outfitters in the United Kingdom, and

Wholesale only of the Patentees:

DEBENHAM & FREEBODY,
FLETCHER GATE, NOTTINGHAM.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.
300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.
ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.
Weavers of Dress Silks,
Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

PAINTERS. MORANT & CO. DECORATORS

91, NEW BOND STREET.

SPECIAL DESIGNS REGISTERED IN	Genoa Velvets, Brocades, Wall Papers, Furniture, Decoration. FOUR DOORS FROM OXFORD-ST.	NOT TO BE SEEN ELSEWHERE.

The Claret of the Season.

CHÂTEAU LA MARNIÈRE

(VINTAGE 1888, BLANQUEFORT.)

21s. Cash, delivered. Sample bottle, 2s. by post

Order through your Wine Merchant or Grocer.

SOLE PROPRIETORS:

ARNOLD, PERRETT, & CO., LIMITED,
WINE MERCHANTS,
7a, Lower Belgrave Street, S.W. & Country Branches.
PRICE LIST OF CHOICE WINES AND SPIRITS POST FREE.

Messrs. SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY beg to announce as just ready a New Edition, at Half-a-Crown, of Mr. BLACKMORE'S famous Story, "LORNA DOONE," with a Photogravure Portrait of Mr. Blackmore, taken in June last expressly for this Popular Edition. Bound in cloth extra; uniform in style with the Cheap Editions of WM. BLACK'S and THOMAS HARDY'S Novels now being issued.

WESSEX NOVELS BY THOMAS HARDY.

New Edition, Uniform crown 8vo volumes, bound in cloth, HALF-A-CROWN each.

FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD. With a New Photogravure Portrait from a Photograph.
THE MAYOR OF CASTERBRIDGE. [Ready.
THE TRUMPET MAJOR. [Ready.
A PAIR OF BLUE EYES. [Ready.
A LAODICEAN.
THE RETURN OF THE NATIVE.
THE HAND OF ETHELBERTA.
TWO ON A TOWER.

NOVELS BY WM. BLACK.

New and Cheaper Re-issue, in Uniform crown 8vo volumes, bound in cloth, HALF-A-CROWN each.

A DAUGHTER OF HETH. With Portrait of the Author.
THE STRANGE ADVENTURES OF A PHAETON.
A PRINCESS OF THULE.
IN SILK ATTIRE.
MADCAP VIOLET.
KILMENY.
THREE FEATHERS.
THE MAID OF KILLEENA.
GREEN PASTURES AND PICCADILLY.
MACLEOD OF DARE.
LADY SILVERDALE'S SWEETHEART.
WHITE WINGS.
SUNRISE.
THE BEAUTIFUL WRETCH.
SHANDON BELLS.
ADVENTURES IN THULE.
YOLANDE.
JUDITH SHAKESPEARE.
THE WISE WOMEN OF INVERNESS.
WHITE HEATHER. / Just Ready.

Other Volumes in Preparation.

Fashions of To-day.

AUGUST NUMBER. PRICE ONE SHILLING. With Presentation Portrait of PRINCESS FERDINAND of BULGARIA, and about 40 Illustrations of Dresses and Fancy Work.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD., St. Dunstan's House, Fetterlane, E.C.

Messrs. WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THIS WEEK WILL BE PUBLISHED.

STRAY SPORT. By J. MORAY BROWN, Author of "Sketch Sketches," "Powder, Spur, and Spear," "The Days when we went Hog-Hunting." 2 vols., post 8vo, with numerous Illustrations, 21s.

NEXT WEEK WILL BE PUBLISHED.

MILITARY TOPOGRAPHY. Illustrated by Practical Examples of a Practical Subject. By Major-General W. E. MONTAGUE, C.B., P.S.C., Late Garrison Instructor; Intelligence Department, &c. With Forty-one Diagrams. Crown 8vo, 5s.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

ROUND THE BLACK MAN'S GARDEN. By ZELLIE COLVILE, F.R.G.S. With 2 Maps and 52 Illustrations from drawings by the Author and from Photographs. Demy 8vo, 16s.

"The great charm of Mrs. Colvile's book lies in its freshness and utter absence of affectation....It is one of the cleverest as well as most informing books of its class that has been published for a very long time." St. James's Budget.

"It is excellent reading and free from cant and gush of all kinds; moreover, she has a story to tell, and can observe and describe with vigour and humour. ....A charming volume, illustrated as well as written while the ever-changing scenes of African life were fresh in mind." National Observer.

NEW NOVEL AT ALL LIBRARIES.

BALMORAL: a Romance of the Queen's Country. By ALEXANDER ALLARDYCE, Author of "The City of Sunshine," "Life of Lord Keith," "Scotland and Scotsmen in the Eighteenth Century," "Clarke Kirkpatrick Sharpe." 3 vols., crown 8vo, 25s. 6d.

"No one who wishes to read a really first-rate novel should miss reading 'Balmoral.'" Observer.

"A stirring tale of love and adventure."—Black and White.

"The whole book, full as it is of adventure and incident, is well worth perusal."—Speaker.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 934. AUGUST, 1893.—2s. 6d.

CONTENTS.—AT THE GREEN DRAGON, by Beatrice Harraden.—THE STORY OF THE AMERICA CUP: INTERNATIONAL YACHT RACING, by R. Jope Slade.—RUSSIAN PROGRESS IN MANCHURIA.—A FRENCH STUDY OF BURNS.—IN ORCADIA.—EARLSCOURT. Chaps. XXVIII. XXXI.—AMONG FRENCH CATHEDRALS, by the Hon. Lady Stafford Northcote. Fontinalis IN SCOTLAND, by C. Stuart.—PRIEST-RIDDEN IRELAND.—NEW BOOKS.—THE INDIAN CURRENCY COMMISSION.—The Coup d'Etat.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

COACHING DAYS and COACHING WAYS.

By W. OUTRAM TRISTRAM. With 200 Illustrations by Hugh Thomson and Herbert Railton. New Edition, uniform with "Cranford." Crown 8vo, 6s. Edition de Luxe, limited to 250 Copies, 30s. net.

GUARDIAN.—"It is just the right companion for an English holiday."

THE ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

A SHORT HISTORY of the ENGLISH PEOPLE.

By JOHN RICHARD GREEN. Vols. I. and II. have been published, and Vol. III. is now being issued in parts. Part XXIII. now ready. Super royal 8vo, 1s. net each part.

MANY INVENTIONS.

By RUDYARD KIPLING. Crown 8vo, 6s.

TIMES.—"Mr. Kipling's volume is fully equal to anything he has done Exhibiting unimpaired all his characteristic excellences, it is remarkable for a wider choice of topic. This may fairly be taken as a sign of ripening powers."

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 405. AUGUST. Price 1s.

CONTENTS.

1.—PERLYCROSS. By R. D. BLACKMORE. Chapters IX.—XI.
2.—THE TRAGEDY OF MR. THOMAS DOUGHTY. By JULIAN CORBETT
3.—A FORGOTTEN WORTHY. By J. W. SHARER.
4.—THE PERPETUAL CURATE.
5.—THE LITERATURE OF THE SEA.
6.—OLD-FASHIONED CHILDREN. By FREDERICK ADYE.
7.—MISS STUART'S LEGACY. By Mrs. STEEL. Chapters XX.—XXII.
8.—LEAVES FROM A NOTE-BOOK.

MACMILLAN & CO., LONDON.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.
AUGUST.

An Answer to Some Critics. By Dr. C. H. Pearson.
The Wanderings of the North Pole. By Sir Robert Ball, F.R.S.
British Farmers and Foreign Imports. By Professor James Long.
The Serpent's Tongue. By W. H. Hudson.
The Poor of the World. By Samuel A. Barnett.
The Limits of Animal Intelligence. By Professor Lloyd Morgan.
Missionaries in China. By R. S. Gundry.
Plays and Acting of the Season. By William Archer.
Thomas Paine. By Leslie Stephen.
The Needs of the Navy. By Admiral Sir Thomas Symonds.
The Loss of the Victoria. By Admiral Sir G. Phipps Hornby.

Now ready, at all Libraries.

The LIFE of Sir RICHARD FRANCIS BURTON,

K.C.M.G., &c. By his Wife, ISABEL BURTON. With numerous Portraits, Coloured and other Illustrations, and Maps, 2 vols., demy 8vo, 42s.

"Burton stands forth in these humdrum days as a rare and almost unique personality. No one is so well qualified to do justice to his strange and eventful career as his devoted wife, the sharer and interpreter of his inmost thoughts, his associate in not a few of his singular experiences.....The two volumes are full of multifarious interest.... The book presents a striking and faithful portrait of a very remarkable man, and a stirring record of a very romantic career."—Times.

"It is a long time since a work so replete with varied and thrilling interest has been produced.....The book is not only a valuable contribution to the history of the Victorian age, but a noble tribute of affection, reverence, and admiration to the memory of a dead hero by a woman in every way worthy of association with his astounding life achievements and unique intellectual powers ....a product of rare and highly cultivated intelligence."—Daily Telegraph.

"Richard Burton was so fascinating a man, his virility was so gigantic, his intellectual powers so remarkable, his activity so ceaseless, his courage so splendid, his adventures so numerous and so thrilling, that his 'Life' cannot fail to partake of these qualities. No man has ever been a specialist in so many subjects: soldier, linguist, explorer, swordsman, translator, ethnologist, politician if he had been only one of these his career would have been interesting reading, and the present work deals, of course, with them all. Everybody will read it."—Daily Chronicle.

"The work will be read with interest for the biographer's sake, as well as that of the eminent person to whom it more particularly relates. It is the most personal book in the sense of the revelation of character in a writer that we have had in this class of literature in our time.....The present volumes abound in interest of every sort."—Daily News.

"Her work is rich in varied interest; the portrait she paints with loving fidelity is instinct with life and masculine character; and we have been fascinated by the reminiscences and sparkling descriptions, whether they are written by herself or by Sir Richard."—Saturday Review.

NEW BOOK by W. H. HUDSON.

BIRDS IN A VILLAGE.

By W. H. HUDSON,

Author of "The Naturalist in La Plata," "Idle Days in Patagonia," &c. Square crown 8vo, buckram, 7s. 6d. [Ready this day.

CHAPMAN & HALL, Limited, London.

Hatchards, Booksellers, 187, Piccadilly, London.

ALL THE NEW AND STANDARD BOOKS.
Post Orders Promptly Executed. Usual Cash Discounts.

For Aches and Pains.

ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION

"An Excellent Good Thing." One Shilling and Three Halfpence.

"AND IT I WILL HAVE, OR I WILL HAVE NONE."

Taming of the Shrew, Act IV., Sc. 3.

ELLIMAN'S AT THE FRONT.

W. Stanfield Stürges.

LUMBAGO.

From a Justice of the Peace.

"About a fortnight ago a friend advised me to try your Embrocation, and its effect has been magical."

STRENGTHENS THE MUSCLES.

From "Victorina," "The Strongest Lady in the World."

"It not only relieves pain, but it strengthens the nerves and muscles."

SORE THROAT FROM COLD.

From a Clergyman.

"For many years I have used your Embrocation, and found it most efficacious in preventing and curing sore throat from cold."

BRONCHITIS.

From Mr. R. J. Callis, 5, Trelawn-terrace, Hendon. January 26th, 1891.

"My two children, two and four years old, were attacked, last November, with bronchitis. The Doctor could give them little relief, and finally it appeared in an aggravated form. At last I thought I would try your Embrocation, and, I am pleased to tell you, with gratifying results. They are both well now, and I have no hesitation in saying through using your splendid Embrocation."

PREPARED ONLY BY

ELLIMAN, SONS, & CO.

SLOUGH, ENG.

1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. Of all Chemists.

BACK HURT.

From Mr. J. A. Dickson, 170, Belsize-road, South Hampstead, N.W., May 29th, 1891.

"A month ago, whilst playing a somewhat rough part, I fell and hurt my back. The next morning I could not move, but I sent for a bottle of your Embrocation, and had it well rubbed in, and in two hours could get up, and by the time the bottle was empty was cured."

CYCLING.

From L. Fabrellas, St. Sebastien, Spain.

"I am a member of a Cycling Club here, and can testify to the excellent results to be obtained by using your Universal Embrocation."

RHEUMATISM.

From A. Barton, Esq., The Ferns, Romford.

"I write to say that had it not been for Elliman's Embrocation I should have remained a cripple up to the present moment."

Now Ready. Foolscap 4to, Illustrated, Cloth, Gilt edges. 10s. 6d. net.

THE

EARLY DAYS OF MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE;

Or, PUBLIC SCHOOL LIFE BETWEEN FORTY AND FIFTY YEARS AGO.

To which is added

A Glimpse of Old Haileybury; Patna during the Mutiny; A Sketch of the Natural History of the Riviera; and Life in an Oxfordshire Village.

By EDWARD LOCKWOOD, Indian Civil Service (Retired).

Author of "The Natural History of Monghyr."

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, HAMILTON, KENT, & CO., Limited.

THE UNITED SERVICE MAGAZINE.

SIXTY-FIFTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.—AUGUST, 1893.

The Loss of the "Victoria."	Admiral Sir G. PHIPPS HORNBY, G.C.B.
The German Strategist at Sea.	Major Sir G. S. CLARKE, K.C.M.G.
The Royal Marine Artillery.	Lieut. J. M. ROSE, R.M.A.
The Loss of Horses in War.	Veterinary-Captain F. SMITH.
Sir Charles Napier's Indian Orders.	Captain F. A. ADAM.
Foreign Post Offices: The United States.	C. J. WILLDEY.
Sailors' Rations.	A NAVAL OFFICER.
The United Service Institution Prize Essay.	A REGULAR OFFICER.
The German Army Bill.	KARL BLIND.
The Oudh Police.	H. STANLEY CLARKE.
Some Curiosities of Naval Promotion.	W. LAIRD CLOWES.

TWO SHILLINGS MONTHLY.

OFFICES—15, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

And at all Railway Stations and Booksellers.

THE ART JOURNAL FOR AUGUST, 1893.

Price, 1s. 6d.

HOLIDAY ARTICLES. ALL ILLUSTRATED.

GERMANY.—A German Revolutionary.

SICILY.—The City of the Golden Shell.

SCOTLAND.—The New Galleries in Glasgow. The Wizard of the North.

SPAIN.—A Spanish Palace, Madrid.

CHICAGO.—Women's Art Work at the Exposition.

Together with Articles on "General Impressions of the Royal Academy, 1893"—How to Wear Jewellery—Reviews—Art Notes—Publications, &c., &c.

ETCHING.—"Flax Spinners," by Max Liebermann.

EXTRA PLATE.—"Evening Song," by George Clausen, R.W.S.

London: J. S. VIRTUE & Co., Ltd., 26, Ivy-lane, E.C.

F. V. WHITE & CO.'S RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

(To be obtained in Town or Country.)

I.

By Mrs. HUNGERFORD (Author of "Molly Bawn.")

A MAD PRANK. In paper covers, 1s., cloth, 1s. 6d. (At all Booksellers and Bookstalls.)

II.

By Mrs. ROBERT JOCELYN.

ONLY A HORSE-DEALER. Cloth, 2s. 6d. At all Booksellers and Bookstalls.

III.

By MAY CROMMELIN.

THE FREAKS OF LADY FORTUNE.

In picture boards, 2s. (At all Booksellers and Bookstalls.)

F. V. WHITE & CO., 14, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NOW READY AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

ROBERT CARROLL. By M. E. Le Clerc, Author of "Mistress Beatrice Cope," "A Rainbow at Night," &c. 2 vols.

KINGSMEAD. By Henry F. Buller. 3 vols.

THE FATE OF SISTER JESSICA. By F. W. Robinson, Author of "Grandmother's Money," "The Youngest Miss Green," &c. 3 vols.

THE WINNING OF MAY. By the Author of "Dr. Edith Romney," "A Woman at the Helm," &c. 3 vols.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

AUGUST, 1893.

India between Two Fires. By the Hon. George N. Curzon, M.P.
The Crisis in Indo-China. By Demetrius C. Boulger.
Evolution in Professor Huxley. By Professor St. George Mivart.
The Future of Education. By Professor Mahaffy.
"My Stay in the Highlands." By Lady Catherine Milnes Gaskell.
Recent Science. By Prince Kropotkin.
Public Playgrounds for Children. By the Right Hon. the Earl of Meath.
The Abbé Gregoire and the French Revolution. By the Hon. William Gibson.
The Poetry of D. G. Rossetti. By W. Basil Worsfold.
An Open Letter to Lord Meath. By Bishop Fitzgerald.
Esoteric Buddhism: a Rejoinder. By Professor Max Müller.
The Art of Household Management. By Colonel Kenney-Herbert (Wyvern).
An Incident in the Career of the Rev. Luke Tremain. By the Rev. Dr. Jessopp.
"How long, O Lord, how long?" By W. H. Wilkins.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free 3s. 8d. London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

NOW READY.

The Two Lancrofts.

By C. F. KEARY,

Author of "A Mariage de Convenance." Three vols., crown 8vo, cloth, 31s. 6d.

NOW READY.

The Crime of Maunsell Grange.

By FREDERIC BRETON.

Three Vols., crown 8vo, cloth, 31s. 6d.

"A finely-told tale of feminine loyalty and devotion, contrasted with womanly frailty and fickleness. . . . Few recent novels have deserved such praise as may cordially be allotted to 'The Crime of Maunsell Grange.'"—The Daily Telegraph.

NOTE.—New List of Books free on application.

JAMES R. OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO., 45, Albemarle-street, London.

NEW VOLUME OF SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S POPULAR 2s. and 2s. 6d. SERIES.

Now Ready, POPULAR EDITION, fcap. 8vo, boards, pictorial cover, 2s.; or, limp red cloth, 2s. 6d.

THE NEW RECTOR. By STANLEY J. WEYMAN, Author of "The House of the Wolf," &c.

LONDON: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, WATERLOO PLACE.

NEW VOLUME EDITED BY VAL C. PRINSEP, A.R.A.

Now Ready, crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

THE STORY OF ABIBAL THE TSOURIAN.

Translated from the Phœnician by EDWARD LOVEL LESTER. Preceded by an Account of the Finding of the Manuscript by EMILY WATSON. Edited by VAL C. PRINSEP, A.R.A., Author of "Virginie."

LONDON: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, WATERLOO PLACE.

NOW READY.

The Anglo-American Library of Fiction.

Crown 8vo, 336 pp., with Five Full-page Illustrations, paper cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

THE SPANISH TREASURE.

A STORY OF LOVE AND THE LOVE OF GOLD.

By ISABELLA CASTELAR.

Crown 8vo, 346 pp., with Four Full-page Illustrations, paper cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

THE KING OF HONEY ISLAND

AN HISTORICAL ROMANCE OF THE CREOLE COAST.

By MAURICE THOMPSON.

London: JAMES HENDERSON, Red Lion House, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C. New York: ROBERT BONNER'S SONS.

PALL MALL MAGAZINE.

Edited by Lord FREDERIC HAMILTON, M.P., and Sir DOUGLAS STRAIGHT.

AUGUST NUMBER NOW READY. PRICE ONE SHILLING.

THE SOCIETY SERIES CONTINUED BY LADY * * * * *

COLOURED FRONTISPIECE.
"WHEN BERRIES RIPEN."

Twelve Full Page Illustrations:—"Our Highway to India": No. 1, Gibraltar; No. 2, Malta. "A Retrospect," by G. L. Seymour. "People we have Met. No 2, The Pessimist," by "Rab," &c. Other Illustrations by Enoch Ward, T. H. Robinson, A. Ludovici, A. P. Blunt, Sidney Cowell, Sidney Adamson, Charles E. Fripp, Miss Ada Bowley, Hall Hurst, L. Baumer, &c.

"SOCIETY: A RETROSPECT," by "A WOMAN OF THE WORLD."

"Society: A Retrospect," being a continuation by "A Woman of the World" of the much-talked-of series of papers by Lady Cork, Lady Brooke, and Lady Jersey, on the aspects of English Society.

PALL MALL MAGAZINE for August. Now Ready.

SIR CHARLES DILKE, Bart., M.P., on ENGLAND'S POSITION IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.

POEMS by Lewis Morris, Hon. Roden Noel, and A. Conan Doyle.

CONTRIBUTIONS by E. Lester Arnold, W. H. Mallock, Hon. Geo. Curzon, M.P.; W. E. Norris, Vice-Admiral P. Colomb, I. Zangwill, Miss Braddon, Mrs. Parr, and others.

PALL MALL MAGAZINE DRAWING COMPETITION (No. 2), a novel, interesting, and diverting feature of the new magazine.

"EVERYONE IS ASKING WHO IS 'THE WOMAN OF THE WORLD.'"

Copies on sale at all Booksellers, Newsagents, and Railway Bookstalls in Great Britain and Ireland. Editorial Offices: 18, Charing Cross-road, W.C. Publishing Offices—London: George Routledge & Sons, Limited, Broadway, Ludgate Hill, E.C.; Manchester: George Routledge & Sons, Limited, 16, Jackson's-row; New York: The International News Company; Toronto: The Toronto News Company; Montreal: The Montreal News Company.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

ALDRIDGE'S.
31
"NEW TIMES" GUILDFORD COACH HORSES
(The Property of MR. WALTER SHERBREE)
Will be SOLD without Reserve, on Wednesday, August 16.
They can be seen daily at work on the road between the Berkeley Hotel, Piccadilly, and Guildford, until August 7th. Catalogue forwarded
W. & S. FREEMAN.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES. — Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

HOMBURG. — VILLA QUELLENHOF, 91, Kaiser Friedrich Promenade, opposite Park, and close to Springs and new Bath House. With or without board. Terms moderate. Good English references. English spoken.—Address, A. SAUERBREI, Proprietor.

QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS,
ST. JAMES' PARK, S.W.
(OPPOSITE ST. JAMES' PALACE).
A FEW SUITES TO LET AT REDUCED RENTALS.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c.—Address, Mr. O. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

FOR SALE.—SPLENDID SEA-GOING STEAM YACHT. Great Bargain. Ready for Cruise. Crew for Season. 8 Berths, 6 Sofas. Price £2,350, in easy instalments.—Address, "YACHT," Lee & Nightingale, Liverpool.

Price Sixpence.

THE HARROGATE MINERAL WATERS and HOMŒOPATHY. A new Analysis. Reprinted from the Monthly "Homœopathic Review."

Published by E. GOULD & SON, London, and can be purchased at any Booksellers'.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

IN THREE VOLUMES, AT THE LIBRARIES.

AS A MAN IS ABLE.

By DOROTHY LEIGHTON.

"An extremely clever book. . . . . The literary talent evinced in 'As a Man is Able' calls for unstinted recognition."—Daily Telegraph.

SECOND THOUSAND.

THE LAST SENTENCE.

By MAXWELL GRAY,

Author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland."

"'The Last Sentence' is a remarkable story; it abounds with dramatic situations, the interest never for a moment flags, and the characters are well drawn and consistent."—Standard.

THIRD THOUSAND.

THE HEAVENLY TWINS.

By Madame SARAH GRAND,

Author of "Ideala."

"It is so full of interest that one feels inclined to give oneself up to unreserved enjoyment of it. The twins are among the most delightful and amusing in fiction."—Athenæum.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS AND BOOKSTALLS.

IDEALA. A Study from Life. By Madame SARAH GRAND, Author of "The Heavenly Twins." New Edition, 1 vol., 6s. [Ready August 4.

THE JEW. From the Polish of J. I. KRASZEWSKI. With an Introduction by EDMUND GOSSE (Heinemann's International Library). Cloth, 3s. 6d.; paper, 2s. 6d. [Ready August 4.

DONALD MARCY. By ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS, Author of "The Gates Ajar," &c. 3s. 6d.
"A most delightful tale. . . . Will be prized by old and young."—Liverpool Mercury.

PERCHANCE TO DREAM, and other Stories. By MARGARET S. BRISCOE. 3s. 6d.

FROM WISDOM COURT. By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN and STEPHEN GRAHAM TALLENTYRE. With 30 Illustrations by E. COURBOIN. 3s. 6d.
"It is the book to take upon a punt, to carry to the hills, to dream over on a hammock; a holiday book par excellence, of a sort which is not forgotten with the return to work."—"The Optimist" in The Sun.

UNIFORM WITH THE ABOVE.

THE OLD MAIDS' CLUB. By I. ZANGWILL. With Illustrations by F. H. TOWNSEND. 3s. 6d.

WOMAN—THROUGH A MAN'S EYEGLASS. By MALCOLM C. SALAMAN. With Illustrations by DUDLEY HARDY. 3s. 6d.

LONDON: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, BEDFORD STREET, W.C.

AMUSEMENTS.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.
Lessee and Manager, Mr. HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE,
EVERY EVENING, at 8.30,
A WOMAN OF NO IMPORTANCE,
By Mr. Oscar Wilde.
Matinee Saturday Next, at 2.30. On this Evening there will be no performance. Doors open, 8. Carriages, 11. Box office (Mr. Leverton) open 10 to 5 and 8 to 10. Seats may also be booked by letter or telegram. HAYMARKET.

ADELPHI THEATRE. A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers. A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8 o'clock. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, Rudge Harding, John Carter, and Arthur Williams; Misses Elizabeth Robins, Gertrude Kingston, F. L. Forster, and Fanny Brough. Box plan at theatre. Telephone 2,645. Open at 7.30.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8, MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine and Charles Danby; Misses Florence Dysart and Letty Lind. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30. Next Matinee Saturday, August 12.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.45.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music, and Varieties. At 8.40, the New Grand Romantic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, entitled FIDELIA. At 10.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 35,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Leicester-square.—Grand Programme.—Two Grand Ballets, Second Edition of ROUND THE TOWN and KATRINA. Unqualified success. Unrivalled VARIETY ENTERTAINMENT. Magnificent Orchestra. Doors open at 7.45. No free list.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Lottie Collins, Jenny Hill, James Fawn, F. H. Celli, Nance Maries, Mons. Ganivet; Lotto, Lillo, and Otto; the Great Athos Troupe, Ada Blanche, Marie Le Blanc, Brothers Griffiths, Ada Reeve, Dutch Daly, La Petite Amoros, Clara Torr, G. W. Hunter, Alice Maydue; Ara, Zebra, and Vora; Eugene Stratton, Fred Harvey, Arthur Rigby.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—FULL LICENCE.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Prices from 6d. EVERY EVENING at 8.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations. Lighted throughout by electricity. THE LIBERATOR FAILURE.—Portrait Model of Jabez Spencer Balfour. The PANAMA SCANDAL.—Portrait Model of M. Ferdinand de Lesseps. CABINET MINISTERS.—New Portrait Models of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Sir William V. Harcourt, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, and Lord Randolph Churchill, &c., &c. New and graphic Tableaux, A FOOTBALL SCRIMMAGE. Over 400 other Portrait Models in Wax. Historical Tableaux. Grand scenes representing British Sports, Nursery Rhymes, &c. Eminent People "At Home." Music all day. Chamber of Horrors—Lambeth Poisoning Case, Portrait Model of Thomas Neill Cream. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Extra rooms, 6d. Open from 9 to 10.

THE GRAND PANORAMA.
NIAGARA FALLS in WINTER.
Nature's Greatest Wonder
In the World's Greatest City, at NIAGARA HALL,
York-street, Westminster.
St James's Park Station.
OPEN daily, from Ten to Ten. Admission 1s.
Tickets, including admission, at all Dist. and Met. Ry. Stations.

EARL'S COURT EXHIBITION
OF
GARDENING AND FORESTRY.
THE GARDEN OF LONDON.
OPEN DAILY, 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.
ALL ROADS LEAD TO EARL'S COURT.
BANDS of H.M. SCOTS GUARDS and the EXHIBITION BAND, GRAND ORGAN, STRING BAND.
Miss NELLIE GANTHONY'S ENTERTAINMENT.
ILLUMINATIONS.
Tens of Thousands of Electric, Gas, and Vauxhall Lights, arranged with regard to colour.
FERNERIES, FOUNTAINS, WATERFALLS.
ADMISSION ONE SHILLING. SEASON TICKETS (Half Price), 10s. 6d., available till End of Season, admitting to the Main Building, Exhibition of Gardening and Forestry, Central and Western Gardens, and to one of 2,000 Free Seats at Captain Boyton's World's Water Show.

CAPTAIN BOYTON'S WORLD'S WATER SHOW,
EARL'S COURT.
PHENOMENAL SUCCESS.
COOLEST PLACE OF ENTERTAINMENT IN LONDON.
THE THRILLING SENSATION, SHOOTING THE "CHUTES," and
A HOST OF STARTLING NOVELTIES.
TWO PERFORMANCES DAILY at 3.30 and 8.30.
RAIN OR SHINE.
ADMISSION, 6d. to 5s. (2,000 Free Seats.)

ROYAL DUBLIN SOCIETY.—GREAT IRISH HORSE SHOW, 1893, Balls Bridge, Dublin, August 22, 23, 24, 25. 1,200 Entries. Trotting, Driving, and Jumping Competitions.—Programmes and Tickets to be had on application. RICHARD J. MOSS, Registrar. Leinster House, Dublin.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Admission Daily One Shilling. SPORTS and PASTIMES EXHIBITION, with CARRIAGE SECTION and POACHING and NATURAL HISTORY ANNEXE. Daily till Aug. 8.
MILITARY MANŒUVRES of the FAMOUS WOMEN WARRIORS of DAHOMEY. The Greatest Novelty in Europe, and the Sensation of the London Season. Several Displays Daily.
MAGNIFICENT FIREWORK DISPLAYS by C. T. BROCK & CO., at 9 on THURSDAY and SATURDAY, and at 8.45 on BANK HOLIDAY.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards, Tennis Lawn.

BOURNEMOUTH. - HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table-d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 10s. 6d. per day.
According to the position of rooms selected.

BUXTON.—The PEAK THERMAL ESTABLISHMENT. A High-class Hydropathic Hotel. Mineral water and other baths. Resident physician. Electric light. Passenger lift. Magnificent public rooms. Excellent cuisine. Table d'hôte 7 p.m., separate tables. Terms moderate.—Telegrams, "Thermal, Buxton."

CALLANDER & TROSSACHS HYDROPATHIC.—
Splendid Drives. Good Fishing. Lawn Tennis. Golf.
Terms from £2 12s. 0d. per week.
Apply to the MANAGER.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Leas. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

GAIRLOCH HOTEL, LOCH MAREE, ROSS-SHIRE.—This magnificent hotel is situated amidst the finest Highland scenery in the West coast of Scotland. Accommodation for over 200. Good Fishing. Large posting establishment. Swift steamer from Oban every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden. Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 2780.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

MATLOCK BATH.—ROYAL HOTEL.—Hydropathic Baths of every description. Medical Man. Healthful situation; extensive grounds, greatly admired. Large swimming bath. Billiards. Dairy farm. Splendid fishing.—Also NEW BATH HOTEL, with extensive grounds, fishing, &c. &c. Terms very moderate. 'Bus meets all trains.—T. TYACK, Proprietor.

NEWQUAY, Cornwall, The Biarritz of England.—ATLANTIC HOTEL, "the finest Hotel in the county." Splendidly situated. Full view of the Atlantic from Trevose Head to St. Ives. Ocean view from every window. Beaches, caverns, and cliff scenery unrivalled. Bracing climate. Bathing, yachting, fishing. Delightful excursions. Magnificent rooms. Strictly moderate charges.

NORWOOD (UPPER).—The QUEEN'S HOTEL, near the Crystal Palace. Specially adapted Suites of Apartments for families and permanent residents. Winter boarding. Terms from Three Guineas. A limited number of single rooms at 2½ guineas.

PARAMÉ, near St. Malo.
HÔTEL DE LA PLAGE.
Under English Management.

PORTRUSH (Giant's Causeway), co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL. Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing, sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner, from 6 to 8 p.m. French cuisine. Charges very moderate. The HOTEL is UNDER RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.

SALISBURY.—The WHITE HART FAMILY HOTEL, nearly opposite the Cathedral. The largest and principal Hotel in the City. Table d'hôte (two hours each meal) at separate tables daily. Carriages for Stonehenge and other places of interest in the neighbourhood at fixed inclusive charges. Tariff on application to H. T. BOWES, Manager.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hote at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

SEA VIEW.—ISLE OF WIGHT, PIER HOTEL. The most modern and best appointed hotel in the island. All public rooms, private sitting-rooms, and greater number of bed-rooms face the sea and pier. Splendid bathing and boating. Royal I.W. Golf Links, ten minutes' walk.
G. ROWLAND ROBERTS, Proprietor.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—ROYAL KENTISH HOTEL.—Largest, best appointed, facing the Common, close to Chalybeate Springs and Parade. Table d'hôte (separate tables). Inclusive terms, 12s. per day. Tariff of MANAGER.

BRISTOL HOTEL,

Burlington Gardens, London, W.

(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.

THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.

SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.

Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.

NO SUPPERS.

TELEPHONE No. 3,507.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL

BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.

Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.

TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

THE

BURLINGTON RESTAURANT,

169, Regent Street, W.

The most recherché 5s. Diner Parisien in London.

Luncheons and Dinners à la carte.

BATHS OF HOMBURG
GERMANY.

Only Hotel opposite the beautiful Park, in the most FASHIONABLE, QUIETEST, and HEALTHIEST POSITION. New Reading, SMOKING, and Billiard Rooms, recently enlarged and embellished.

RITTER'S PARK HOTEL

PATRONISED BY H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

FINEST RESTAURANT.

HYDRAULIC LIFT, BATHS ELECTRIC LIGHT THROUGHOUT.

ARRANGEMENTS ARE MADE AT MODERATE CHARGES IN THE EARLY AND LATE PART OF THE SEASON.

Proprietor—CONRAD RITTER

—(PURVEYOR TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES).—

HOTELS, &c.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.
(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).

Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, baths, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

ALBANY HOTEL (ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.

Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Lift. Hydro with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance.
C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

BUXTON, DERBYSHIRE.

THE PALACE HOTEL.

This large and elegantly appointed high class Hotel contains upwards of 200 rooms. The hotel occupies the finest position in Buxton, and is surrounded by its own grounds of six acres. Ground floor sitting rooms and bed-rooms. Magnificent public rooms. American elevator. Table d'hôte at separate tables.
A. CROSS, Manager.

THE MANAGER, IMPERIAL HOTEL, ABERDEEN (patronised by the Royal Family), begs to call the attention of old customers and intending visitors to the fact that it is through no fault of his that their Porter or Boots is not visible on the arrival of the trains, but because the Palace or Station Hotel Company have monopolised the right to have their porters within the barriers at the station to the exclusion of those of the other hotels in town.

SEAFORD.—The ESPLANADE HOTEL.
Admirable summer resort; five minutes from terminus. The healthiest place on the South Coast. Adjoining the Sussex Downs, facing and within 50 yards of the sea. A model modern hotel. Golf links (the best on the South Coast) close by.
G. REEVES SMITH, Proprietor.

OATLANDS PARK HOTEL, Walton-on-Thames (17 miles from London, Waterloo Station), formerly the favourite residence of H.R.H. the late Duke of York, charmingly situated in its own extensive picturesque grounds; family suites, large airy bedrooms, home comforts, table d'hôte, lawn-tennis. Board terms, from 12s. per day. Stabling.—Postal address, Weybridge.

GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.

LARGEST AND BEST APPOINTED HOTEL IN CHANNEL ISLES, AND THE FINEST SITUATION IN JERSEY.
Directly facing the Channel. Best Sands and Safest Sea Bathing opposite the Hotel. Magnificent Public Rooms. Swimming Bath. Tennis Courts, &c. TABLE D'HOTE DINNER at 7 p.m. (separate tables) "best in Jersey." Terms Moderate (inclusive or à la carte).
Telegrams—"Grand, Jersey." SYDNEY ROGERS, Manager & Secretary.

VISITORS to NEW YORK

Seeking COMFORT, QUIET, and an ELEGANT HOME,
WILL FIND THE

Westminster Hotel

SIXTEENTH STREET and IRVING PLACE,
Replete with every Modern Convenience and Comfort. Moderate Tariff.

LOCATION.—One block east of Union-square. Convenience of Broadway, without its noise. Accessible to all Railways, Ferries, the Shopping Centre, and places of Amusement.

NEW YORK.—16th STREET AND IRVING PLACE.
(Cable Address: "Westminster, New York.")

RECOMMENDATION.
A permanent or transient home of quiet elegance, with generous management, and a cuisine of noted excellence.

REPUTATION.
An enviable one among people of taste and discrimination, desiring comfort and luxury, without the confusion and publicity of the larger hotels.

INCLUSIVE TERMS.
$3.50 (about 15s.) per day and upwards, according to location of rooms.

The water used in THE WESTMINSTER is purified by the "Buhring" patent process.
E. N. ANABLE, Proprietor.
W. W. SCHENCK, Manager.

ILFRACOMBE.—ILFRACOMBE HOTEL.—Unrivalled sea frontage and open surroundings. Eight lawn-tennis courts. Large swimming bath. New lounge hall. 250 rooms.—Tariff of MANAGER.

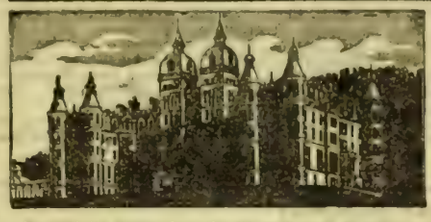
ILFRACOMBE. The RUNNACLEAVE Private HOTEL. [illegible] to seat 250, with fitted stage, carriage, yacht, tennis, playing fields, [illegible] billiards, and in-door skating rink, free of charge until August. Chef de cuisine. Moderate tariff.

SOUTHPORT. PALACE HOTEL. Summer Season. Charming Sensible Family Resort. Extensive grounds. Electric light. Tennis. Golf links. Splendid baths.

LANGHAM HOTEL,

PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.

Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6 to 8.30.
Under the Management of WALTER GOSDEN.



Peebles Hydropathic.

Largest & Finest Hydropathic in Scotland.

Beautifully situated on the River Tweed, 20 miles south of Edinburgh. Over 30 acres of Pleasure Grounds, including Lawn Tennis and Bowling Greens, Golf Course, large Conservatory. Bedrooms are very large and airy. Magnificent scenery. Splendid drives. Terms from £3. 3s. per week.—For rooms apply to the MANAGER.

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET

Packed free of charge on receipt of cheque.

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5/-, Polished Nickel, 7/6.

SCOTTADIE

THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE

115 & 115A REGENT STREET
LONDON W.

For
Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Mauds.
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns.

Telegraphic Address—Scott Adie, London

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING! Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000." Tobacconists Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1866.

SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.—AUGUST BANK HOLIDAY. For full particulars of the USUAL EXTENSION of all RETURN TICKETS, &c., see Handbills and Programmes.

CHEAP EXCURSIONS will run from Waterloo as under, calling at the principal Stations:—

EVERY FRIDAY at 10.15 p.m., a Special Cheap Excursion to Exeter, Okehampton, Plymouth, Barnstaple, and Ilfracombe, &c., the Tickets being available to return on the following Monday, Saturday, Monday week, Saturday fortnight, or Monday fortnight following the day of issue.

EVERY SATURDAY at 8.10 a.m. and 3.40 p.m., for 8 (to certain Stations), 10 or 17 days to PLYMOUTH, EXETER, TAVISTOCK, Tresmeer (for North Cornwall by 8.10 only), Bude, Barnstaple, Lynton, Ilfracombe, Bideford (for Clovelly), Radstock, Bath, &c.

At 8.40 a.m. and 3.40 p.m. for 8, 10, or 17 days to ANDOVER, MARLBOROUGH, SWINDON, CHELTENHAM, SALISBURY, YEOVIL, AXMINSTER, HONITON, SEATON, SIDMOUTH, and all Stations between Salisbury and Exeter inclusive.

EVERY SATURDAY at 10.10 a.m. to Winchester, Southampton West, Brockenhurst, Christchurch, and Bournemouth, for 7, 9, 14, or 16 days.

At 12.5 p.m. for 10 or 17 days to WEYMOUTH, DORCHESTER, BOURNEMOUTH, Christchurch, Poole, Wimborne, Wareham, Swanage, Lymington (for Yarmouth and Freshwater), NEW FOREST, &c.

FOUR DAYS EXCURSIONS as follows. At 1.15 p.m. for PORTSMOUTH, viâ Direct Line, Ryde, Sandown, Shanklin, Ventnor, Petersfield, Midhurst, Havant, &c.

At 1.20 p.m. for Southampton, Cowes, Newport, Gosport, Salisbury, Winchester, Basingstoke, Romsey, Fareham, &c.

At 3.40 p.m. EXPRESS SERVICE to Ryde, and Stations in the Isle of Wight. 12s. tickets for 8 or 11 days will also be issued to Stations in the Isle of Wight.

ON SUNDAY, 6th AUGUST.—Special Cheap Excursion at 8.0 a.m. for Yeovil, Seaton, Sidmouth, Exeter, Barnstaple, Torrington, Ilfracombe, Tavistock, Devonport, Plymouth, &c., the Tickets being available to return on Monday 7th, Saturday 12th, Monday 14th, Saturday 19th, or Monday 21st August, by certain Trains. On Bank Holiday a Special late Train for London will leave Plymouth Friary at 10.0 p.m., Exeter 12.15 midnight, calling at principal Stations. The Cheap Tickets are available by this Train.

For full particulars and times of return Trains, see handbills, which can be obtained at any of the Company's Offices, or by post from the Office of the Traffic Superintendent, Waterloo.

CHAS. SCOTTER, General Manager.

SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.

AUGUST BANK HOLIDAY.

SPECIAL CHEAP EXCURSIONS TO

BOULOGNE and back. Charing Cross dep. 1.0 p.m., Cannon-street 1.6 p.m., London Bridge 1.10 p.m., and New Cross 1.16 p.m., Saturday, August 5th, 21s. (1st cl.), 12s. 6d. (3rd cl.). Returning from Boulogne at 3.0 p.m. on Bank Holiday. Cheap Tickets will also be issued from 4th to 7th August, available until 12th August. Charing Cross and Cannon-street dep. 10.0 a.m., 30s. (1st cl.), 25s. (2nd cl.).

CALAIS and back on Bank Holiday. Charing Cross and Cannon-street, dep. 8.0 a.m., 17s. 6d. (1st cl.), 12s. 6d. (3rd cl.). Cheap Tickets will be issued from 4th to 7th August, available until 12th August. Charing Cross and Cannon-street dep. 8.0 a.m. or 8.15 p.m. 31s. (1st cl.), 26s. (2nd cl.). Cheap Saturday to Monday Tickets will also be issued on 5th August, Charing Cross and Cannon-street dep. 8.0. a.m., 22s. (1st cl.). 13s. 6d. (3rd cl.).

PARIS and back. Charing Cross and Cannon-street, dep. 8.15 p.m., 37s. 6d. (2nd cl.), 30s. (3rd cl.), 2nd to 7th August. Tickets available for 14 days.

BRUSSELS and back, viâ Calais. Charing Cross and Cannon-street, dep. 8.0 a.m. or 8.15 p.m., 54s. (1st. cl.), 40s. 6d. (2nd cl.), 25s. 9d. (3rd cl.), 4th to 7th August. Tickets available for 8 days.

BRUSSELS and back, viâ Ostend. Charing Cross and Cannon-street, dep. 8.0 a.m., 10.0 a.m., 5.55 p.m., and 8.15 p.m. (1st and 2nd cl. only by 10.0 a.m. and 5.55 p.m. Trains). 40s. 7d. (1st cl.), 30s. 1d. (2nd cl.), 19s. 11d. (3rd cl.), 4th to 7th August. Tickets available for 8 days.

OSTEND and back. Charing Cross and Cannon-street, dep. 8.0 a.m., 10.0 a.m., 5.55 p.m., and 8.15 p.m., 32s. 6d. (1st cl.), 25s. 6d. (2nd cl.), 4th to 7th August. Tickets available for 8 days.

CHEAP DAY EXCURSIONS TO

ROCHESTER, CHATHAM, SHEERNESS, TUNBRIDGE WELLS, ST. LEONARDS, HASTINGS, CANTERBURY, RAMSGATE, MARGATE, DEAL, WALMER, ASHFORD, HYTHE, SANDGATE, SHORNCLIFFE, FOLKESTONE, DOVER. From LONDON and NEW CROSS. Fares there and back (3rd cl.).

BANK HOLIDAY.

Ashford	3s. 6d.
Tunbridge Wells	4s. 0d.
Other Stations	5s. 0d.

Rochester, Chatham, and Sheerness, 2s. 6d.

Children under Twelve, Half-Fares.

SPECIAL TRAINS for HAYES, BLACKHEATH, GREENWICH, GRAVESEND (for ROSHERVILLE GARDENS), &c.

Cheap Tickets from Country Stations to the Sea-side and other Stations.

Various special Alterations and Arrangements.

Continental, Mail, and Club Services as usual.

For Further particulars see Bills, &c.

MYLES FENTON, General Manager.

AUSTRALIA and NEW ZEALAND.—NEW FAST PASSENGER ROUTE, viâ Vancouver, by fastest Atlantic steamers (any line) to Montreal or New York; thence viâ Canadian Pacific Railway, taking in the grand scenery of the Rockies, only actual trans-continental line running through trains under one management.

Atlantic to Pacific. Many optional routes, including Niagara and Chicago. Break of journey allowed.

New steamships, 5,000 tons each, of New Zealand and Australasian S.s. Co., largest, fastest, and finest running from American Continent to Australasia, leave Vancouver about as follows:—

S.s. WARRIMOO .....September 14th,
S.s. MIOWERA .....October 14th,

monthly thereafter, calling Honolulu, Brisbane, and Sydney. Electric light good cuisine, exceptionally large cabins.

For pamphlets and berths apply to Passenger Department, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, King William-street, London, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

ORIENT COMPANY'S YACHTING CRUISES by the steamships "CHIMBORAZO," 3,847 tons register, and "GARONNE," 3,870 tons register, leaving LONDON as under:—

For NORWAY,
2nd August, for 24 days. | 16th August, for 15 days.
Calling at LEITH two days later.

The Steamers will be navigated through the "Inner Lead," i.e. inside the fringe of islands off the coast of Norway, thus securing smooth water, and will visit some of the finest fiords.

For SICILY, GREECE, the LEVANT, and CRIMEA,
leaving 2nd September, for 46 days.
For the MEDITERRANEAN,
leaving 12th September, for 31 days.
For MADEIRA, TENERIFFE, WEST INDIES, AZORES, &c.,
leaving 22nd November, for 65 days.

The Steamers are fitted with Electric Light, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Baths, &c.

Managers { F. Green & Co. / Anderson, Anderson, & Co. } Head Offices, Fenchurch-avenue, London.

For passage apply to the latter firm, at 5, Fenchurch-avenue E.C.; or to the West-end Branch Office, 16, Cockspur-street, S.W.

WINDERMERE HOUSE, BARNES, S.W.

Head Master . . MERVYN F. VOULES, M.A.

PREPARATORY SCHOOL FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS, ARMY, NAVY, &C.

The School is within three minutes' walk of the station. Convenient trains from the West-end. Small classes and individual attention. Good cricket ground. Organised games. Day boarders have dinner and tea at the school, and prepare their work under the superintendence of a Master. No home lessons. Limited number of boarders received.

For further particulars apply to the HEAD MASTER.

Tea WITH FLAVOR

POST FREE

On Receipt of Remittance.

PURE & FRAGRANT

Blended Tea ... 1/4, 1/8, 2/- per lb.
Indian Tea ... 1/6, 1/10 per lb.
Ceylon Tea ... 1/6, 1/10 per lb.

DICKINS BROS. Tea Blending Warehouses, BEDFORD.

(Quantities of 3 or 6 lb. packed in Drums.)

PATRONISED BY H.I.M. THE EMPRESS OF GERMANY.

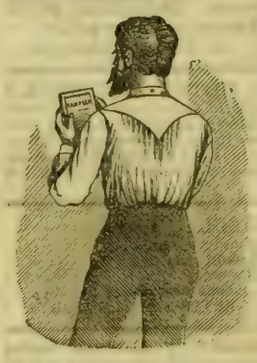
THE NOTED

"IPSWICH" POTTED MEATS.

Nothing can be better for the Yachting, Fishing, or Picnic Basket.

Sole Maker—R. SEACER, IPSWICH.

Ask your Grocer.



SURPLICE SHIRT.

MADE TO MEASURE.

MADE ON THE PREMISES.

GENTLEMEN'S Complete OUTFITTERS.

PRICE LISTS ON APPLICATION.

SAMPSON & Co.

268, 270, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.

THE MILDEST OF MILD INDIAN CIGARS are

OAKES & Co.'S SUPERS

NO. 3,

THE PAGODA BRAND. QUALITY & FLAVOUR UNEQUALLED.

The Cheapest and Best INDIAN CIGAR in the Market.

SAMPLE BOX of 100 SENT to ANY ADDRESS for FIFTEEN SHILLINGS.

OAKES BROS. & CO., 46, NEW BROAD-STREET, SOLE IMPORTERS.

FAC SIMILE OF STAMP ON BACK OF EVERY TWO YARDS OF ALL GENUINE

CHIPPING NORTON TWEEDS

W. BLISS & SON, MANUFACTURERS

W. BLISS C. NORTON

Specialty for HUNTING & RIDING BREECHES

-Tweed Suits, Boys' Wear & all HARD WEAR

MILD INDIAN CIGARS. OBTAINABLE EVERYWHERE.

BAHADUR

TAYLOR'S CIMOLITE

Is the only thoroughly harmless SKIN POWDER. Prepared by an experienced Chemist, and constantly prescribed by the most eminent Skin Doctors. Post free. Sent for 14 or 36 penny stamps. MOST INVALUABLE.

J. TAYLOR, Chemist, 13, Baker-street, London, W.

NORWEGIAN YACHTING CRUISES

(FORTNIGHTLY) FROM NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

Shortest route to Norway. Only one night at sea.

By the ALBION STEAMSHIP CO.'S (Ltd.) Fast and Splendidly-fitted Yachting Steamer

"MIDNIGHT SUN" (Captain NIVISON, R.N.R.), 3,020 tons, 2,860 horse-power.

Fares from 12 Guineas, including a sumptuous table.

NEXT SAILINGS—JUNE 17; JULY 1, 15, 29; AUGUST 12, 26; SEPTEMBER 9.

All applications for Berths to be made to the Yachting Steamer "MIDNIGHT SUN" Passenger Office, 4, Lombard-street (Tel. Add., Tourist), Newcastle-on-Tyne. Write for Itineraries.

"JAP" CARPETS

We have just received a shipment of Carpets and Rugs of Japanese Manufacture from our Agents in Hiogo, and as we are able to sell them at a very low price, we offer them to our Customers in preference to submitting them to the Wholesale Trade. They are novel and artistic in design and colouring, and of thick pile.

CARPETS.				RUGS.
8 feet long	by 6 feet wide	... ...	28- each.	3 feet long	by 1 ft. 6 in. wide	...	2/6 each.
10 „	9 „	... ...	50- „	4 „	2 feet wide	... ...	5- „
12 „	9 „	... ...	63- „	6 „	3 „	... ...	8/6 „

A FEW MIRZAPORE CARPETS, 9 ft. by 6 ft. ... 27/6 each.
KURD RUGS, 5 ft. by 3 ft. ... 5/9 „
BANGALORE RUGS, 6 ft. by 3ft. ... 5/- each.
KURD CARPETS, 9 ft. by 4 ft. 6 in. ... 21/- „

Catalogues of all the best Floor Coverings free.

TRELOAR & SONS

LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

TO CONNOISSEURS.

ST. EMILION .... CLARET .... 18/- per dozen.
MEDOC ..... CLARET .... 15 6 per dozen.
ST. GEORGE'S ... CLARET .... 13/- per dozen.
Price List of other CHATEAU CLARETS, from 21/- to 74/- per dozen, posted on application. LE MONNIER & CO., JERSEY.
CARRIAGE AND DUTY PAID.

THE ROYAL WEDDING PERFUME.

H.R.H. The Duchess of York has graciously accepted a supply of "ATKINSON'S WHITE ROSE," describing it as a "Charming Scent."

It is the "sweetest of sweet odours." Atkinson's is the only genuine.

Of all Chemists, Perfumers, and Dealers, and of the Manufacturers, 24, Old Bond Street, London.

"The Cup of the Prince, the Peer, and the Peasant."
"The most popular and healthful Beverage of the Century."

By Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.

"MERSANO"

A SPARKLING NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE.

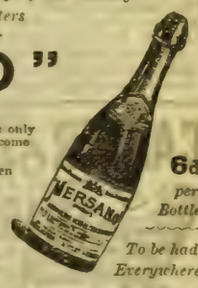
Recommended by all the leading medical faculty as the only perfect and health preserving table drink. The most welcome friend in every sick room, and indispensable in every table.

CERTIFICATE OF HONOUR and GOLD MEDAL have been awarded for the special excellence of "Mersano."

Wholesale from Local Agents in all parts of the Kingdom. Any difficulty with local supply, communicate with the Patentees:—

Forbes, Maxwell, & Co., Ltd., Aberdeen

SAMPLE BOTTLE POST FREE NINE STAMPS.



6d. per Bottle. To be had Everywhere.

MAPPIN & WEBB'S PATENT TABLE KNIVES.

SAMPLES & PRICES FREE.

"UNEQUALLED FOR HARD WEAR."

Only London Addresses, { 2, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Facing the Mansion House) 158, OXFORD STREET, W.

MANUFACTORY—NORFOLK STREET, SHEFFIELD

FARADAYS'

FITTINGS

Electric Light Works

3 BERNERS ST. W

Protection from Chill in every Climate!

JAEGER

TRADE MARK.

PURE WOOL CLOTHING

TESTED FOR PURITY,

NON-SHRINKING, AND STRENGTH.

(THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST.)

The "JAEGER" Goods are tested for purity in the Company's laboratory, and guaranteed by this Trade Mark, without which none are genuine.

"Dr. Jaeger's HEALTH CULTURE," 188 pp., and Illustrated Jaeger Catalogue free.

LONDON DEPOTS.—3 and 4, Princes-street, Cavendish-square, W., with Tailoring; 30, Piccadilly (next to St. James's Hall); 30, Sloane-street (Knightsbridge end); 456, Strand (close to Trafalgar-square); 85 and 86, Cheapside (close to King-street); 158, Fenchurch-street (close to Lime-street); 42 and 43, Fore-street (close to Moorgate-street Station), with Tailoring.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.

PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE

For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1 1s.

INVALID COMFORTS

Walking Machine for the lame

Adjustable Couches and Beds, £2. Exercising Chairs £5. 5s. Reclining Boards £1. 1s. Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d. Easy Chairs £2. 10s. Commode Chairs £2. 10s.

Carrying Chairs, £1. Bed Tables 7s. 6d. Crutches 10s. 6d. Folding Couch Chairs 10s. Bed Rests 10s.

BATH CHAIRS

From £1. 5s.

SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS

£2. 2s.

Invalid Carriages

Perambulators

Rubber Tyres

From £1. 10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.

Telegrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

ANNA RUPPERT'S

COMPLETE Establishment for Natural Beauty includes MOST ARTISTIC MANICURING, 4s. 6d. SKILFUL CHIROPODY. Full line of Toilet Articles and Manicure Cases complete. New American LONG WAISTED CORSET, 12s. 6d. None better sold. RUPPERT'S DYSPEPSIA CURE and LIVER REGULATOR. Best article ever sold, Vegetable, 4s. 6d.; and the only RELIABLE SKIN TONIC on the market. Does not bleach or whitewash, tones, cleanses, and invigorates. Don't forget, there is only one CELEBRATED LECTURESS, one ANNA RUPPERT, who has given her life to this branch. Send 4d. for her new and Illustrated Book of Beauty—valuable hints. SKIN TONIC, perfectly harmless. Price, 10s. 6d.; three bottles, 25s. Sent all over the world. All matters sacred. Correspondence cheerfully solicited. No charge for advice, either in person or by letter. Don't forget THE ONLY

MRS. ANNA RUPPERT,

Celebrated American Lecturess and Complexion Specialist, in person at

89, Regent Street, London, W.

Branches where all goods are sold and advice freely given:—124, Western-road, BRIGHTON; 3a, Shandwick-place, EDINBURGH; 74, Grafton-street, DUBLIN; 8, King-street, MANCHESTER; Clarence Chambers, Corporation-street, BIRMINGHAM; 66, Mariland-place, SOUTHAMPTON; 17, Rue de la Paix, PARIS; BERLIN, VIENNA, MADRID, BARCELONA, CALCUTTA, SYDNEY, &c.

The ONLY Antiseptic Saline.

SALT REGAL

FOR ALL

Bilious and Nervous Disorders,

SUCH AS

Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion,
Disordered Liver.

At all Chemists throughout the world, in bottles, 1/6 and 2/9.

Office: 49, ISLINGTON, LIVERPOOL.

SIX GOLD MEDALS. Non-Mercurial.

Goddard's Plate Powder

THE BEST and SAFEST article for CLEANING SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE. Sold in Boxes, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Oilmen, Chemists, &c., everywhere

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.

WHAT TO DRINK?

PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement and biliousness, it has been pronounced by medical men of high authority as most efficacious.

"I use the Aerated Pitkeathly largely, and value it."—Dr. MATTHEWS DUNCAN.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT

PURELY VEGETABLE, Perfectly Harmless. Will reduce from two to five pounds per week: acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into Fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.

Botanic Medicine Co., 3, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

Royal Amateur Photographers.

THE
STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY
Have been favoured with Orders for Photographic Apparatus from
H.M. THE QUEEN.
H.R.H. The Princess of Wales.
H.R.H. Princess Christian.
H.R.H. Princess Louise.
H.R.H. Princess Henry of Battenberg.
H.R.H. Prince Henry of Battenberg.
H.R.H. The Duc d'Orleans.
H.R.H. Princess Henry of Prussia.
H.R.H. The Prince of Naples.
H.R.H. Prince Damrong of Siam.
H.R.H. Prince Sanpasaght of Siam.
H.R.H. Prince Rabi of Siam.
H.I.H. Prince Christian Victor.
H.S.H. Princess Catherine Yourievsky.
H.S.H. Prince Boris Czetwertynski.
H.E. The Governor-General of India.
Etc., etc., etc.

AS USED BY H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES

Has a finder the exact size of the plate to be used.

Has dark slides of a novel description and adapted for Plates or Films.

Can be focussed even during the transition of the object to be photographed.

Has an instantaneous shutter capable of various speeds, also time exposures.

Can be used as a Hand Camera as well as on a stand for ordinary photography.

Is fitted with exceptionally rapid Lenses working at F/6.

PRICES, COMPLETE WITH 2 LENSES AND 3 SLIDES.

To take pictures

	£ s. d.
5 × 4	15 15 0
6½ × 4¼	25 0 0
7⅞ × 5	26 12 0
8½ × 6½	35 0 0

FREE

LESSONS IN PHOTOGRAPHY

ARE GIVEN BY THE

Stereoscopic Company,

106 & 108, Regent-st. W

AND

54, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

200 pp. List Free by Post for Seven Stamps.

CAMEO CIGARETTES

A PHOTOGRAPH IN EVERY PACKET.

A SEPARATE MOUTHPIECE FOR EACH CIGARETTE.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

PUREST IN ENGLAND.

BOURNE TABLE WATERS

SODA, SELTZER, LITHIA, POTASH, LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, ETC.

Supplied in 6 Dozen Cases Carriage Paid by

Analysis, &c., on Application.

R. M. MILLS & CO.,
BOURNE,
LINCOLNSHIRE.

West-End Agent, D. WHEATLEY, 16A, North Audley-st., W.
City Agents, ALEX. D. RAE & CO. (late Hardy & Co.), Chemists, 23, Fenchurch-street, and 6, Railway-place, E.C.;
And of all CHEMISTS, WINE MERCHANTS, &c.

CARPET CLEANING.

CARPETS and TAPESTRIES Cleansed from dust by PURE AIR.

Impossible to damage the most delicate fabric.

Collection and Delivery free.

Send for Prices and Particulars to your Upholsterer, or

The Compressed Air Carpet & Tapestry Cleaning Co.

Brook Green, W. Office: 94, Victoria-st., Westminster.

N.B.—The Trade and Public are invited to visit our Works, and convince themselves of the bona fides of our process.

BENGER'S FOOD.

For Infants, Children, and Invalids.

"Humanly speaking, 'Benger's Food' entirely saved baby's life. He could digest nothing until we began the 'Benger.' He is now rosy and fattening rapidly."—Extract from Private Letter.

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED
INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION.

TINS, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s., OF ALL CHEMISTS, &c.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.

Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

The SUBSCRIPTION LIST will OPEN on WEDNESDAY, the 2nd of August, 1893, at 10 a.m., and will CLOSE for TOWN applications on or before FRIDAY, the 4th of August, at 4 p.m., and for COUNTRY APPLICATIONS on or before SATURDAY, the 5th of August.

THE SAVOY HOTEL, Limited.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1883.

SHARE CAPITAL — — — — — — £200,000.

ISSUE of £125,000 FIVE PER CENT. DEBENTURES, ranking after an issue of £200,000 Four per Cent. Perpetual Debenture Stock, secured by Mortgage on the Freehold, and having a floating charge on all the other property of the Company. The Debentures will be of £100 each.

Directors.—The Right Hon. the Earl of Lathom; Sir Arthur Sullivan, Kt.; Hwfa Williams, Esq.; Michael Gunn, Esq.; R. A. Handcock, Esq.; R. D'Oyly Carte, Esq., (Chairman).

Bankers.—Messrs. Goslings & Sharpe, 19, Fleet-street, E.C.

Auditors.—Messrs. Deloitte, Dever, Griffiths, & Co., 4, Lothbury, E.C.

Brokers.—Messrs. Linton, Clarke, & Co., Bartholomew House, E.C.

Secretary and Registered Offices.—C. F. Munro, Beaufort House, Beaufort-buildings, Strand, W.C.

Trustees for the Debenture Holders.—Herbert Gosling, Esq. (Messrs. Goslings & Sharpe); R. D'Oyly Carte, Esq. (Chairman Savoy Hotel, Limited).

Messrs. Goslings & Sharpe are authorised to receive Subscriptions for the above Debentures at Par, payable as follows:—£5 per cent on Application; £10 per cent. on Allotment; £25 per cent. on September 1st, 1893; £60 per cent on October 1st, 1893—£100.

The Debentures will be registered in the books of the Company, and the interest will be payable half-yearly, on January 1st and July 1st, to proprietors registered on December 24th and June 24th of each year. The first warrant will be issued on January 1st, 1894, and will be for the amount of the interest calculated from the dates on which the several instalments fall due and are paid. The Debentures will be repayable at par on the 1st day of July, 1918, or at the option of the Company they may be paid off at any earlier time at a premium of 5 per cent. on six months' notice being given.

PROSPECTUS.

The issue of the Perpetual Debenture Stock and of these Debentures is made to enable the Savoy Hotel, Limited, to acquire the freehold of the hotel premises situate on the Victoria Embankment, London, and to pay off the existing Six per Cent. Debentures.

The principal and interest of the Perpetual Debenture Stock is secured by a first mortgage of the hotel premises and by a floating charge on all the other property of the Company, including the valuable wines, stock, &c. The land is all freehold (land tax redeemed), but that on which Beaufort House stands is subject to a rent charge of £100 a year.

The present issue of Debentures will be secured on the whole of the above properties and assets, subject to the mortgage referred to for £200,000.

The hotel and the land held therewith were valued by Mr. Robert Vigers for the Law Debenture Corporation, Limited, who issued the Debenture Stock, and annexed is a copy of his report:—

4, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry, London, E.C.,
April 21st, 1893.

To the Directors of the Law Debenture Corporation, Limited.

GENTLEMEN,

THE SAVOY HOTEL AND BEAUFORT HOUSE.

I treat this property as freehold and land tax redeemed, and offered as a security free from charges of all description, except a rent-charge of £100 per annum issuing out of the land on which Beaufort House stands.

Its situation, with approach from the Strand, and good uninterrupted frontage to the Victoria Embankment, is excellent either for the hotel or for residential chambers.

The building was constructed in the first instance for chambers, and the arrangements of suites of rooms is very convenient. As a hotel it has been proved to be suitable, and no doubt with proper management it will as such continue a remunerative property, but in the event of its ceasing to be used as a hotel, it will be a good property to let as chambers, and in this event an outlay of possibly £10,000 might be necessary for internal alterations.

The buildings are sound and good, and have as far as possible been erected of fire-proof material, and with the view of making them of such a character that they will cost a minimum sum to keep them in good repair and decoration.

The rooms and passages are all lighted with electricity, and the fittings and plant are suitable both for hotel or chamber purposes.

The hot and cold water supply is as good as can be found in any establishment of the kind, the water supply being obtained from the artesian well upon the premises, which, I understand, has never failed.

The Hotel building contains 300 rooms upon the principal floors, with numerous other rooms, offices, and cellarage in the basement.

The land comprises an area of about 33,200 feet, and having been proved available and suitable for lofty buildings, it is worth, in my opinion £208,000

Add cost of buildings		320,000
Add furniture, fittings, electric light installation, plate, linen, china, glass, &c., at cost price	£31,630
Deduct 50 per cent.	15,815
		15,815
Add for goodwill two years' profits of £38,645		77,290
		£621,105

This, in my opinion, is ample security for an issue of £325,000 Debentures, viz., £200,000 First Debentures, and £125,000 Second Debentures.

The Hotel has been proved to be a profitable undertaking, and the profit of £38,645 made in 1892 would pay the interest on both series of Debentures, and leave a very large balance.

In the event of the premises ceasing to be used as a hotel, I am of opinion that the building, having regard to its suitability for conversion into chambers, would produce a net rental of far more than the amount required to satisfy the interest upon both series of Debentures, and that when so converted the property would still remain a sound security for £325,000 (three hundred and twenty-five thousand pounds).—I remain, yours obediently, (Signed) ROBERT VIGERS.

The profits for the year 1892, as certified by the auditors, were £38,645, subject to the ground-rent and Debenture interest now to be extinguished. The yearly profit will be chargeable with interest on the £200,000 Four per Cent. Debenture Stock, amounting to £8,000 per annum, and on the £125,000 Five per Cent. Debentures now to be issued, amounting to £6,250 per annum.

The profits for the current year continue to be quite as satisfactory as in 1892, and taking the profits of that year as a basis, the following result is shown:—

Profit at the rate of last year			£38,645
Deduct	4 per cent. on £200,000	£8,000
	5 per cent. on £125,000	6,250
			14,250
Surplus Revenue after paying all outgoings			£24,395

Where no allotment is made the deposit will be returned in full. If the amount allotted is less than that applied for, the balance of the deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on allotment. Failure to pay any instalment will render the previous payments liable to forfeiture.

Application for a settlement and quotation will be made to the Committee of the Stock Exchange in due course.

The original valuation of Mr. Robert Vigers, the Trust Deed, and the Form of Debenture, can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

Applications must be made on the form accompanying the prospectus, and delivered with the deposit at Messrs. Goslings & Sharpe, Bankers, No. 19, Fleet-street, E.C., where Prospectuses and Forms of Application may be obtained.

28th July, 1893.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN,

and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

TOO FAT. Dr. GORDON'S Elegant Pills cure STOUTNESS, rapidly and certainly. State height, weight, and send 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., or 11s. to DR. GORDON, 24, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE

"CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE is entirely "free from any poison "or metallic impregnation, does not contain any injurious "ingredient, and is a "good, safe, and useful "medicine."

ALFRED SWAINE TAYLOR M.D., F.R.S., Lecturer on Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology.

Warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities from WHATEVER cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the blood and bones. Thousands of testimonials. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent for 33 or 132 Stamps, by the Proprietors—THE LINCOLN AND MIDLAND COUNTIES DRUG CO., LINCOLN.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

ANÆMIA
Or Bloodlessness.

DEEKS' ANÆMIA PILLS.

Blood Producing. Tonic. Non Constipating.

IN BOTTLES OF ALL CHEMISTS. Half course, 1s. 6d.; whole course, 2s.; or

---

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited,
No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.

General Accidents. | Personal Injuries.
Railway Accidents. | Death by Accident.

C. HARDING, Manager.

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.

The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.

No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.

[ESTABLISHED 1867.]

ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,

From £30 to £5,000,

To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their NOTE OF HAND ALONE.

ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.

Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.

NO SURETIES REQUIRED.

Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.

FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO

A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.

Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.

Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.

Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.

Apply to the SECRETARY.

MESSRS. H. HALFORD & CO., Stock and Share Brokers, 2, Royal Exchange Avenue, London, E.C. Daily CLOSING Price List and marked report on application. Speculative accounts opened on terms to be mentioned. Special business in "Options" at CLOSE MARKET PRICES.

Parr's Banking Company and the Alliance Bank, Limited, as Bankers of the Company are authorised by the Directors to receive subscriptions at their Head Office, Berthol mew lane London, E.C., or at any of their Branches.

The Subscription List will be opened on Wednesday August 2nd, and will be closed on or before Saturday August 5th, for town and country.

†A. B. C. CONCESSIONS, Limited. AERATED BREAD COMPANY'S CONCESSIONS; (Incorporated under the Companies Acts 1862 1890, whereby the liability of Shareholders is limited to the amount of their Shares.) Capital £150,000, in 150,000 Shares of £1 each. First issue of 100,000 Shares, at par, payable as follows: 5s. per Share on application, 10s. per Share on allotment, and 5s. per Share one month after allotment. Fifty thousand Shares will be reserved for future issue whenever Capital be needed for the purposes of the Company's business, a moiety of which the Shareholders of the Aerated Bread Company will have the option of subscribing for, at par.

DIRECTORS.

Vincent A. Applin, Esq., late Secretary of the National Exhibitions, Earl's Court.
*Marcus John Bolton, Director of the Aerated Bread Company, Limited.
Alfred Pickard, Esq., Engineer.
*John R. Whitley, Esq., late Director of the National Exhibitions, Earl's Court.
Managing Directors—
W. Rosbury Few, Esq.
Arthur Whitley, Esq.
* Will join the Board after allotment.

Bankers—Parr's Banking Company and the Alliance Bank, Limited, Bartholomew lane, E.C., and their branches.
Brokers—William Godfrey & Co., 1, Copthall-court, E.C., and Stock Exchange; Redding, King, & Co., 14, Angel-court, E.C., and Stock Exchange.
Solicitors—Ashurst, Morris, Crisp, & Co., 17, Throgmorton-avenue, E.C.
Auditors—Ogden, Palmer, & Langton, 6A, Austin-friars, E.C.
Secretary—John Oates.
Temporary Offices—51, Cheapside, E.C.

†So called because the Concessions comprise (1) an exclusive Licence under Patents taken out for the benefit of the Aerated Bread Company, and (2) the goodwill, rights, and privileges pertaining to "Staminal Foods" which were originated, and are solely manufactured, by that Company.

PROSPECTUS.

The "A.B.C. Concessions, Limited," has been formed for the purpose of acquiring from the Aerated Bread Company, of London, a section of their business, viz.:—

(1.) The A.B.C. Licence. An exclusive Licence, except within a radius of five miles from the Royal Exchange, London, to use, sell, or let on hire the Aerated Bread Company's Patented Pressure-Heaters and Machines connected therewith, in the United Kingdom. This Company acquires the exclusive right to manufacture, sell, and use the Pressure-Heaters and Machines throughout the whole of the United Kingdom, with the exception of the London district.

(2) The A.B.C. Staminal Foods.‡ The goodwill, rights, and privileges pertaining to "Staminal Foods," for all parts of the world, except within the above-mentioned radius, but this Company will acquire the right to sell "Staminal Foods," also, within this area, if the buyers be shippers or wholesale factors.

The A.B.C. Licence. This Company acquires an exclusive Licence (subject to the above-mentioned reservation) to use eight different patents and all future improvements thereon.

Among the principal factors which have contributed to making the Aërated Bread Company one of the most successful trading concerns in England (its £1 Shares are quoted at £7 15s. to £8 per Share) are the valuable Pressure-Heaters and Machines covered by Patents, which enable the Aerated Bread Company to supply tea, coffee, and cocoa rapidly, of unsurpassable quality, and freshly made, either in small or large quantities. It is intended that this Company shall manufacture the Pressure-Heaters and Machines and sell them to the proprietors of hotels, restaurants, clubs, stores, and schools, &c., and to refreshment contractors, private families, and others. It is further proposed to let the patented Pressure-Heaters and Machines, on hire, to the above classes of customers, and others, at remunerative rates, with option of purchase, and, in certain districts, to sell sub-licences for their use, enquiries for which have already been received.

Hitherto the supply of the Pressure-Heaters and Machines covered by these Patents has been exclusively limited by the Aërated Bread Company to their retail depôts in London, for the purposes of their own business, where they have proved a great success. The more recent of the Patents taken out have effected such important improvements in the utility and value of the inventions as to ensure a large trade in the manner above indicated, and this branch of this Company's business will be materially extended by the opening of a warehouse in London, where the Pressure-Heaters and Machines will be kept in stock, ready for immediate delivery. The Pressure-Heaters and Machines are also adapted to numerous other Trades, from which a lucrative business is expected to be realised.

The Pressure-Heaters and Machines have been largely instrumental in increasing the dividends of the Aërated Bread Company, in recent years, and if this Company considers it desirable to open Depôts in several of the larger provincial cities (similar to the Aërated Bread Company's London Depôts), their successful working will be dependent in a great measure on the use of these Pressure-Heaters and Machines. All the improvements which have been made therein, from time to time, are covered by the above-mentioned Patents.

In order that this important branch of this Company's business may forthwith become a profit-earning one, arrangements have been concluded by which, for the present, the Pressure-Heaters and Machines will be supplied to this Company by the same makers, who have hitherto manufactured them for the Aërated Bread Company.

The A.B.C. Staminal Foods.—These foods, the result of careful and extended scientific research, are preparations of cocoa, oatmeal, sago, tapioca, wheatmeal, &c., for use both in liquid and solid form (including biscuits, &c.). They contain, in large proportion, brain and muscle-forming elements, thoroughly incorporated, are perfect in solubility, and possess the important qualities of being not only nutritious and easy of digestion, but also an aid to the assimilation of other foods.

This Company will acquire all the rights of the Aërated Bread Company to manufacture and sell "Staminal Foods" in all parts of the world (except within a five-mile radius from the Royal Exchange), the Aërated Bread Company undertaking to furnish all the requisite information, and communicating from time to time, without further charge, whatever improvements may be introduced into the processes of manufacture; but it is not intended that this Company shall at once commence to manufacture, it being deemed more expedient, for the present, that this Company should purchase "Staminal Foods" from the Aërated Bread Company, on terms and conditions which will leave to this Company a very satisfactory profit.

The Aërated Bread Company will transfer to this Company all orders for "Staminal Foods" received by them from any part of the world, except from within the above-mentioned five-mile radius, and also all such orders from that district for "Staminal Foods," the destination of which is the provinces, or which are for shipment abroad.

"Staminal Foods" have not been advertised or offered for sale outside the London district, yet the quantities sold by the Aërated Bread Company have increased yearly. With so vast a field as that covered by the Concessions, which this Company acquires, the business should become one of considerable magnitude.

The Aërated Bread Company have been, and are, so fully occupied with the management of their London Depôts, that they have not sought to do business beyond the Metropolitan area, which still offers scope for further development.

During the negotiations between the Aërated Bread Company and the Vendor to this Company, facilities have been afforded him of gaining considerable experience in connection with the organisation and management of the Aërated Bread Company's business, and the Vendor has agreed to take an active part in the development of this Company's affairs, and to join the Board after allotment. One of the Directors of the Aërated Bread Company will also join the Board of this Company.

Having acquired the above-named exclusive Licence and Concessions, it is the intention of this Company to take a leading position in connection with the development of other scientifically prepared hygienic foods for the million.

The large income realised annually by the Aerated Bread Company from their business (now exceeding £) is another indication of the probable character of the business to be undertaken by this Company, which will comprise (1) A wholesale trade in "Staminal Foods," at home and abroad; (2) The sale of Licences to use the patented Pressure-Heaters and Machines to retail dealers; (3) The selling and letting on hire of these Pressure-Heaters and Machines throughout the United Kingdom (except within the five-mile radius from the Royal Exchange), and (4) The opening of a retail trade in Depôts similar to the Aerated Bread Company's London Depôts, on account of the larger provincial cities.

Mr. John Robinson Whitley, who is the promoter of, and Vendor to this Company, has fixed the price to be paid by this Company to him for the Licence and the Concessions, at £75,000 in cash, and 75,000 fully paid £1 Shares of the Company, of which the Aerated Bread Company will receive £15,000 in cash and 15,000 fully paid £1 Shares, the Vendor defraying the cost of printing and posting the copies of the Prospectus, and of the charges and fees of solicitors and brokers, in connection with the formation of this Company, up to, and including, allotment.

The following Agreements have been entered into: (1) An Agreement dated March 14th, 1889, between James Childs of the one part, and Hayward Tyler & Co. of the other part. (2) An Agreement dated August 14th, 1889, between James Childs of the one part, and the Aerated Bread Company, Limited, of the other part. (3) An Agreement dated July 28th, 1893, between the Aerated Bread Company, Limited, of the one part, and John Robinson Whitley of the other part, for the purchase of the Licence and Concessions. (4) An Agreement dated July 29th, 1893, between John Robinson Whitley of the one part, and this Company of the other part, for the resale of the Licence and Concessions to this Company at the price above mentioned.

Copies of the above-mentioned Contracts and the Memorandum and Articles of Association can be inspected at the Offices of the Company's Solicitors.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares can be obtained at the temporary offices of the Company, or from the Bankers, Brokers, or Solicitors.

Applications for Shares should be made on the form accompanying the Prospectus, and forwarded to the Bankers of the Company with the amount of the deposit. If no allotment is made the deposit will be returned in full, and where the number of Shares allotted is less than the number applied for, the balance will be applied towards the payment due on allotment, and any excess returned to the applicant.

‡ The Trade Mark, comprising this designation, was duly registered June 22nd, 1882, for bread, biscuits, staminal foods, &c., and April 17th, 1888, for cocoa, chocolate, and cocolate, and it appears upon all packets and tins containing the various "Staminal Foods."

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, £1,600,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES.

LONDON OFFICE: 81, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

ASSETS OVER .. .. £31,800,000.
SURPLUS EXCEEDS .. .. £6,400,000.

This Society originated the Tontine System of Life Assurance, under which the premiums paid form a lucrative investment, and not an expense, affording provision for old age as well as immediate family provision in the event of death.
ABSOLUTE SECURITY. LOW PREMIUMS. LARGE PROFITS.
Before assuring elsewhere, send for Prospectus and Illustrative Pamphlets.
A. MUNKITTRICK, Manager for Great Britain and Ireland.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.
(FIRE.)

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £16,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT.

BEAUTIFULLY COOL AND SWEET SMOKING.

Sold only in 1-Ounce Packets, and 2, 4, 8-Ounce, and 1-lb. Tins, which keep the Tobacco in fine Smoking condition.

Ask at all Tobacco Sellers, Stores, &c., and take no other.

SMOKERS ARE CAUTIONED AGAINST IMITATIONS.

The GENUINE bears the Trade Mark—"NOTTINGHAM CASTLE"—on every Packet and Tin.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT CIGARETTES, in Packets containing 12,
And Tins of 24, 50, and 100.

By Royal Warrants of Appointment to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN,
H.R.H. The Princess of Wales; H.I.M. The Empress Frederick; H.M. The Queen of Denmark, &c.; and under the Patronage of the Courts of Great Britain, Germany, Russia, Austria, Italy, Denmark, Spain, Sweden and Norway, and Greece, &c.

Egerton Burnett's Royal Serges

IMPERATIVE CAUTION.

EGERTON BURNETT'S SERGES are only sold direct from the JUBILEE ROYAL SERGE WAREHOUSE, WELLINGTON, SOM. Any person offering for sale Serge, pretending it to be Egerton Burnett's, is liable to legal proceedings for obtaining money under false pretences.

And other Pure Wool Fabrics and High-class Washing Materials in the Latest Styles for Ladies, Children, and Gentlemen.
Unsurpassed for Beauty and Novelty of Design, Perfect Finish, and Admirable Wearing Qualities. For Travelling, Tourists, and General Wear, in all Climates and all Seasons. NEW PATTERNS POST FREE. ANY LENGTH SOLD. NO AGENTS.
The ROYAL NAVY BLUE SERGES will not turn a bad colour with Sun, Rain, or Salt Water.
Carriage Paid on Orders of £1 in value to any Railway Station in the United Kingdom. Goods packed for exportation.
SPECIAL RATES for the CONTINENT, INDIA, and the COLONIES. Mention this Paper.

EGERTON BURNETT, Royal Serge Warehouse, Wellington, Somerset, England.

PEARS

·ich· diene·

SOAP MAKERS
BY Special Appointment
To HER MAJESTY
The Queen
and HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS The
Prince of Wales.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE. No. 753.—IN MEMORIAMS TANZAS ON THE LOSS OF H.M.S. "VICTORIA."

IVANHOE (real name and address will be given next week) £2 2 0

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 758.

Though it is not at all certain when Parliament will rise for its autumnal holiday, it is not probable that the recess will be very long delayed. It is thought, therefore, that this event may be so far anticipated as to make it the subject of our weekly competition, in the following way. It is proposed to offer the usual prize of Two Guineas to that competitor who is most happy in suggesting

THE PLACES AT WHICH IT WOULD BE MOST APPROPRIATE FOR THE FOLLOWING MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS TO PASS THEIR HOLIDAYS, VIZ., MR. W. E. GLADSTONE, MR. A. J. BALFOUR, SIR W. HARCOURT, MR. JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, MR. JOHN MORLEY, LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, AND MR. TIMOTHY HEALY, FURNISHING IN EACH CASE A BRIEF REASON WHY THE SUGGESTED PLACE IS SUITABLE FOR THE PURPOSE NAMED.

Only one place should be suggested for each politician named, and all answers must reach me by the morning of Monday, August 14, next.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 754.

It will not be possible to make the announcement of the Prize winner's name in this competition until next week.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand: whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

T. O. R.—The Puzzle Cheques are sent out in batches periodically.

JULIEN.—I am much obliged to you for your kind suggestion.

N. B.—Your letter did not come into my hands until after you had left London.

CARTLEAN and ZEALANDIA.—Your Shakespearian quotations on Lawn-Tennis safely reached me, and ought to have been acknowledged last week.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 755.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

STANZAS INTENDED TO SUGGEST THE COOLING SENSATION MADE BY THE TINKLING OF ICE AGAINST THE SIDE OF A GLASS.

Like a dewdrop's plash in a fairy well,
Like elfin chimes of a crystal bell,
The clear sweet chink, the mellifluous clink,
Of glace with glass, in an ice-cool drink.
Netherby.

The musical clink
Of the ice on your wine-goblet's brink.
Bret Harte.

At the brink the crystals clink in tinkling morrice,
Lilting lightly on the shivering champagne;
Who may catch their cooling chirrup, save a Horace,
Or Catullus in his dainty-welling vein?
Gee-Dux.

Delicious dreams of coolness o'er me pass,
The ice clinks lightly in the slender glass;
Lazily I watch its cool clear crystals swim,
And list its tinkling ring against the rim.
Burgage.

Cooling morsels swim and sink,
From bubbling depth to foaming brink,
Singing 'mid the fizzing drink,
Ting-a-ting with pleasant chink.
Awful Warrior.

Tinkle, tinkle, little glass,
While the summer moments pass,
While the crystal ice I drink,
Tinkle, tinkle, tinkle, tink. Beta.

Tink, tink! a silvery sound, tho' faint, so clear,
An echo it might be of sweet bells rung
In far-off elfland, falling on the ear
So full of promise to the parched tongue.
Bobus.

O drink delicious, foaming to the lip,
Where bright ice-morsels cool the hissing bowl,
Colliding, tinkling, as I idly sip—
Thou art a poem to the thirst soul. Hugo.

The icy crystals tinkle in my glass,
The cold dew sparkles on its frozen side;
My vintage chills like glacier stream; alas,
To think that e'er must ebb such wintry tide.
Mona.

Let the bucket arise from the mossy old well,
And the water-drop's tinkle be heard through the dell;
Fill the glass up with ice, and then fill it again,
It surpasses in coolness the best of champagne.
D. E. F.

Ice—ice—ice,
Tink—tink—tink,
Once—twice—thrice,
Drink—drink—drink. Alpha.

How the cold-frosted, opal-hued goblets entice,
As the lemon in fragrance upcurls,
To the glug-glug of claret, cascading down ice,
'Mid the frolicsome frou-frou of girls.
Goat.

A marble hall; cool fountains softly sprinkling
Their million jets 'mid palms that wave between,
And far away, like sleigh-bells gaily tinkling,
Sweet music flowing from a harp unseen!
Sea Dew.

How musical the tinkling
To thirsty souls
Of glist'ning ice set clinking
In crystal bowls! Fig.

From yon snow-clad mountain river
Fill my goblet to the brim;
That my parchèd throat may shiver,
Ice must on the surface swim. Gil.

Ping, ping! the tingling hailstones crisply clink
With a clatter, pit-a-patter, on my glass of ice-cold drink;
Pelt, pelt! the icy pellets fall like rain,
Sharply stinging with their pinging, icing well the draught I drain.
Bel Demonio.

A SHERRY COBBLER.

"With beady bubbles winking at the brim,"
The crystal tube, stirring the ice-blocks, goes,
Tunefully tinkling 'gainst the tumbler's rim;
Adown my throat, the liquid amber flows.
J. McGrigor Allan.

Limpid, pellucid trickles from the lips
Of Nereids, the cool flood,
Sprinkling and splashing the chill sod—and drips
In pools where lilies bud. Esperanza.

By the rippling brook we wandered, my heart's delight and I,
Where gurgling waters from the rocks rolled musically by;
And playfully we swished the drops that from a mossy chink,
Fell merrily on the shimmering stones with pleasant, plashing clink. Emily Culverhouse.

Gaily I drink while the ice gives a chink,
Bobbing and tempting my lips with its blink,
Catching my eye with its sparkle and twinkle,
Charming my ear with its jingle and tinkle.
Stanchion.

A cone of ice, by lemon diadem'd,
Laved by the ripples of the tinted cup,
The crystal bowl surrounding it all gemm'd
With frosted dew, and then I drink it up!
Seejaem

Weary and hot we seek a welcome shade,
And quaff the cooling cup by Chloe made.
Chink! chink! Seducing sound, we think, to drink,
Against the tinkling glass the twinkling crystals clink. Eboracum.

When wearied, languid, jaded, parched,
O! seek some glacial drink;
The ice, so crystalline and clear,
Sinks quickly, clink, clank, clink!
Gradatim.

The slippery block of ice is dropped in the glass so thin;
The liquid grows frigidly cold with that tiny iceberg within.
You lift it up—bump goes the ice—a cooling drink to take;
Oh when it trickles down your throat it makes you shiver and shake. Victor.

Starlit sky and plashing water; willows stirred by rustling breeze;
Coolest raiment, soft and scanty; dreamy tales of northern seas;
Icy cold the crystal goblet, crystal-clear the floating ice;
Scent of dew and fresh-mown meadows; this my summer paradise. Eva Charlotte.

The melting depth, where slanting sunbeams seek
To bathe, and on each flowing drop to dance,
Seems almost in soft ecstasy to speak,
Answering with secret sound the wistful glance.
Mos.

Crystal-clear and crisply crashing,
Ice and glass together clink,
Like the fairies' sleigh-bells clashing,
Rings the tiny tink-a-tink.
Wildfowler.

THE MERMAIDS.

Spent by the blazing noon, we mermaids swim,
Through rippling crystal, to our cavern dim;
Seek, there, the coolness of the nether deep,
And, sheltered by cærulean shadows, sleep.
Jap.

Better, to thirsty souls, than chink of gold,
The "tinkling," crackling sound of brittle ice!
In crystal goblet sparkling, clear and cold,
Melting, in "champagne cup!" what drink so nice? Cæsar's Corner.

Take a clear-cut crystal bowl, half fill with glist'ning fresh-crushed ice;
Lightly toss in candy sugar, and a fragrant lemon slice.
Fill to brim with ruby claret, set 'neath trees by grotto cool;
With the ice still twinkling, tinkling, drink from frosted glasses cool. Imara.

"Quadrupedante putrem sonitu quatet ungula campum";
Well does this line imitate horses' hoofs when they gallop and stamp 'em.
But, to describe what we're asked to, it seems to me very hard, I know:
Molliter in vitreo pulsat dum frigida vino.
Note.—Virgil's well-known line:
Vitreum vinum, the bright wine—frigida, to agree with glacies, understood. Plumepierre.

Tinkle! tinkle! Jingle! jingle!
Silvery ice and champagne mingle;
And the crystal cup is ringing
Like sweet sound of fairy singing.
Paramá.

Stella, let the beaker's brim
Catch the star-shine from thine eyne;
Whilst upon the beady wine
Icy crystals clink and skim.
Moonlighter.

A dripping-well in a deep glade,
Where fern-grown stones, half ice-inlaid,
Receive the chinking drip, chink, drip
Of ice-flakes from the fountain's lip.
Celia O'North.

Gaily lapping the mossy stone,
Rippling and splashing with silver tone,
Like the tinkle of fairy bells,
The flowing water gurgles and swells.
Collis.

The sound of ice in tankard can
Be set in lines and made to scan,
Then drop it, let it sink and clink
The side, then let it melt, then drink!
Turns.

Ice tinkling silv'ry in cup, sparkling merrily,
Clinking against the cool sides of cut glass;
Ah! to a thirst one such a drink, verily,
Carries "délices" that naught can surpass.
Malignant.

When the soul is athirst what sound may surpass
The gurgle, as liquid and ice commingle;
The delicate tingle, the musical jingle,
As the lumps ring melodious peals on the glass?
Netherby.

In India.

Drink! drink! for the day is hot!
"Gilde low, belata panee!"*
Tink, tink! put in a lot!
"Burruf! burruf!"† will do for me.
W. S. R.

* "Bring quickly soda-water." † "Ice! ice!"

Jingle, jingle, list how the tumblers clash,
Hearing, seething, see the bright liquor flash:
Freezing, freezing, hear how the ice lumps pass,
Plunging a ringing chime into the tinkling glass.
Waggy.

The clattering ice falls ringing in the chalice,
As it tinging, tinging bubbles head the brim;
Cool drinks! nectar sipping, sink all malice,
And bless the tiny tinkling icebergs as they swim.
Dry Fly.

Bring forth the ice—come, let it clink—
To make for me a freezing drink,
Combined with raspberries cooled in snow,
I quaff it, and then take a row. Singelet.

Distinct, and clear, and cold, they strike the brink,
These crystal chips of ice, each time I drink;
Delicious rest is found, I truly think,
Whilst listening to their quick metallic tink.
Bennie.

Swelt'ring, I swallow tepid muck
The whole year round,
So that some ice within my glass
Would be all sound. Jasmine.

Tell me now of sounds that cool;
The splash of water in the pool,
The murmur of the summer sea,
The sheep-bells' tinkle on the lea.
Vicar.

Above the ice the sun was glittering bright,
Icicles sparkled in its brilliant light;
Hark! with a crack the glacier dashed apace,
And flashed and sparkled in its mad, wild race.
Scotland Yard.

Cool, sparkling champagne cup in crystal glass,
Most welcome 'neath shady trees on grass;
The crackling icicles rising, sinking,
Go tinkling 'twixt cup and lip while drinking.
Dora.

There's music in the trickling rill,
That ripples o'er its pebbly bed;
Furrowing a channel down the hill,
Eager the nobler stream to wed.
Excelsior.

At the brink the cooling crystals clink and glisten,
Here a cymbal, there an icy-tinkling bell,
Like the tiny strains of flower-music—listen—
For a fairy-prince's wedding in the dell.
Gee-dux.

'Tis sweet when summer's fire is overhead—
Fresh fruit before, and boughs above me spread—
To hear within the crystal beaker's pool
Ice fragments tinkling, musically cool.
Cestrian.

Dental operatic wrenches,
Fines from melancholic Benches,
Law costs, writs, etcetera, still
Certainly instil a chill. E. C. L.

And it's oh! for a dream in some shady bow'r, with a brook gurgling by o'er the stones,
To think that at last we've got rid of our flesh, and nirily sit in our bones;
Then, grateful we'd think of the wittiest clerk who first formed this scheme that so nice is,
Surrounded by myriads of phantom-like forms, of pretty, pale girls eating ices. Wild Cat.

List to the song of the sea and the shingle,
Sweetness and coolness they melt and they mingle;
Like the tinkle of bells with silver tongue
Is the song of Old Ocean, ever young.
Lancastrian.

Oh! for a rest in shady groves, a screen from noon-tide heat,
Where purling brooks run temptingly your out-stretched hand to greet,
Whose cooling waters whisper tales of meads and pasture fair,
And the tinkle of the sheep-bell is wafted on the air. Cecil Culverhouse.

The cooling drink stands waiting for the ice,
On foaming surface throw the lemon slice;
Now lift and quaff! Ah! what delicious sound,
Like bells—against the glass that ice clinks round!
Bill Brewer.

The sound of the whispering breeze,
As it sighs through the tops of the trees;
The tap of the woodpecker's beak
On the bark of the iron-bound teak.
Heurteloup.

A fairy well of crystal thin,
Naiad, fling thy necklace in;
Hear the wild enchanted thing,
Tinkle, jingle, clank and ring.
Point d'Espoir.

Cooling splash of tinkling rill,
Waving leaves of daffodil;
Twinkling ripples singing clear,
Tinkling, sprinkling far and near.
Boiled Rice.

Refreshing and sweet to the ear, I think,
As you lift the glass and its cooling drink,
Are the pieces of ice, as they kiss the brink
With their sharply clear and silvery tink.
Snooks.

When feeling faint from heat some sultry noon,
How sweet a treat, in cosy bar saloon,
To slowly sip the fizzing iced champagne
Whose cool deliciousness thrills through each languid vein! Shamrock.

Scene: At the Empire American bar.
Enter: Two chappies—"genus, la-di-da"—
With thirst all aflame. On the gong they tink, tink!
Soon ice-chips and ivories pleasantly chink.
Gherkin.

Soft as the song of a rivulet rolling in miniature billows,
Kissed by a summer zephyr breathing sweet scents o'er the lea,
Tossing its crystal dewdrops in the cool shade of quivering willows,
Slipping by Iris and Dogrose, and bubbling its way to the sea. Falcon.

The icy clappers 'gainst the crystal bell
Ring out, as from th' enchanted depths of some cool well,
A silvery chime, like echoes of the tune
Of fairy symphonies thro' summer nights in June.
Poppy.

It is too hot to think,
And the cool chink and clink
Of the ice on the brink
Of my glass, bids me drink.
Albericus.

The breezes blow from the frozen North,
Aurora Borealis blazes forth,
An iceberg floats in the glassy main,
And the Arctic voyagers shiver again.
Hope.

What cooling sounds fall on my ear!
The murmuring rushes in the mere,
Old Ocean's song on the shingly strand,
The burn's glad notes in my fatherland.
Gyton.

The running water sings a song,
Twinkling gaily it flows along,
Ripples laugh like silver bells,
Fairy feet twinkle in mossy cells.
Comtesse Olga.

A gentle tinkle falls on the ear:
Lemon and ice, in water clear,
Bubble and splash as we drain the bowl,
Cool and delicious for thirsty soul.
Ivy Leaves.

'Tis dropped in the glass—how it cheerily rings!
The sweetest of music is its rustling clink.
Deliciously cool the sensation it brings—
Refreshingly bracing to look on or drink.
Tommy Atkins.

I prithee, pretty Phyllis, trip away and quickly bring
A little drop of whisky, and cool water from the spring;
A tiny bit of sugar, and some lemon-peel in chips,
And apply a beaker brimming with the nectar to my lips. Whig.

When high and strong is summer's noontide glow,
'Tis nice to sit in cavern's rocky cell,
While on the senses steals with freshening flow
The cold, clear trickle of its crystal well.
Camodein.

COALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES; Londonderry Wallsend, 27s.; Pittington Wallsend, 26s.; Primrose, 25s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 24s. per ton. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

WORLD'S FAIR route to Chicago.
JAPAN and CHINA.—Fastest, finest, and only twin-screw Royal Mail Steamers on Pacific Ocean leave Vancouver every three weeks.
AROUND the WORLD Trips for £125.
SUMMER TOURS through Canadian Lakes and "Rockies."
FREE FARMS and Cash Bonus for Settlers.

For Tickets and Free Guide Books, apply Passenger Department, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, KING WILLIAM STREET, LONDON, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 106, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-treet, Glasgow.

HOT MINERAL BATHS OF BATH.

Daily yield 507,600 gallons F. at 120.
FOUNDED BY THE ROMANS IN THE 1ST CENTURY.
ΑΡΙΣΤΟΝ ΜΕΝ ΥΔΩΡ.
BATHERS DURING 1890—97,299.

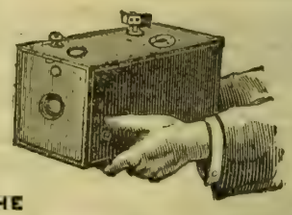
These Baths are unrivalled in Europe for luxury and extent, and contain all that modern improvements can provide for the comfort and relief of the invalid or the enjoyment of those in health.

Bathing, Deep, and Swimming Baths. Thermal Vapour Baths, for Painful conditions of Joints, &c. Douche, Inhalation, Aspiration, Pulverisation, &c., and Ear, Eye, Throat, &c. The Aix les Bains Massage System and Douches and Douche-pipes.

The Medical profession sends patients who suffer from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Dyspepsia, Eczema, and other skin affections.

Letters to the General Manager will receive every attention.

The Camera that takes the World!



THE KODAK

No previous knowledge of Photography necessary.

"YOU PRESS THE BUTTON, WE DO THE REST,"
(Unless you prefer to do the rest yourself)
AND THE PICTURE IS FINISHED.

Price from £1 6s.

EASTMAN PHOTOGRAPHIC MATERIALS CO. LD., 115-117 OXFORD-ST., LONDON, W.

SEND FOR PRETTY, ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, POST FREE.

PERSONAL LOVELINESS

is greatly enhanced by a fine set of teeth. On the other hand, nothing so detracts from the effect of pleasing features as yellow or decayed teeth. Don't lose sight of this fact, and remember to cleanse your teeth every morning with that supremely delightful and effectual dentifrice

FRAGRANT SOZODONT

which imparts whiteness to them, without the least injury to the enamel. The gums are made healthy by its use, and that mortifying defect, a repulsive breath, is completely remedied by it. Sozodont is in high favour with the fair sex, because it lends an added charm to their pretty mouths.

PUNISHMENT for LOOKS.

Among the ancients, if two persons were suspected of having committed a crime, and it was not clear which was guilty, the better-looking one was released and the other punished. Whether rightly or wrongly, people are still largely judged by their faces. High character may shine out through every feature and yet the face be made almost repulsive with pimples or other disfigurements. Much harm may be done to the complexion by strong, highly-scented, coloured soaps, and the public is appreciating more and more every day the importance of a pure soap for toilet use. In perfect health the skin may withstand powerful or impure soap, but not so if there be a little dyspepsia or biliousness. A soap which embodies the most modern advances in manufacture is "Vinolia" Soap, which is guaranteed pure by the makers, and is one usually recommended by medical men and especially dermatologists.

"Vinolia" Soap—Premier 4d., Floral 6d., Balsamic 8d., Toilet 10d., and Vestal 2/6.
"Vinolia" Cream (for Itching, Face Spots, &c.), 1/1½ and 1/9 per box.
"Vinolia" Powder (for Redness, Roughness, &c.), 1/- and 1/9 per box.

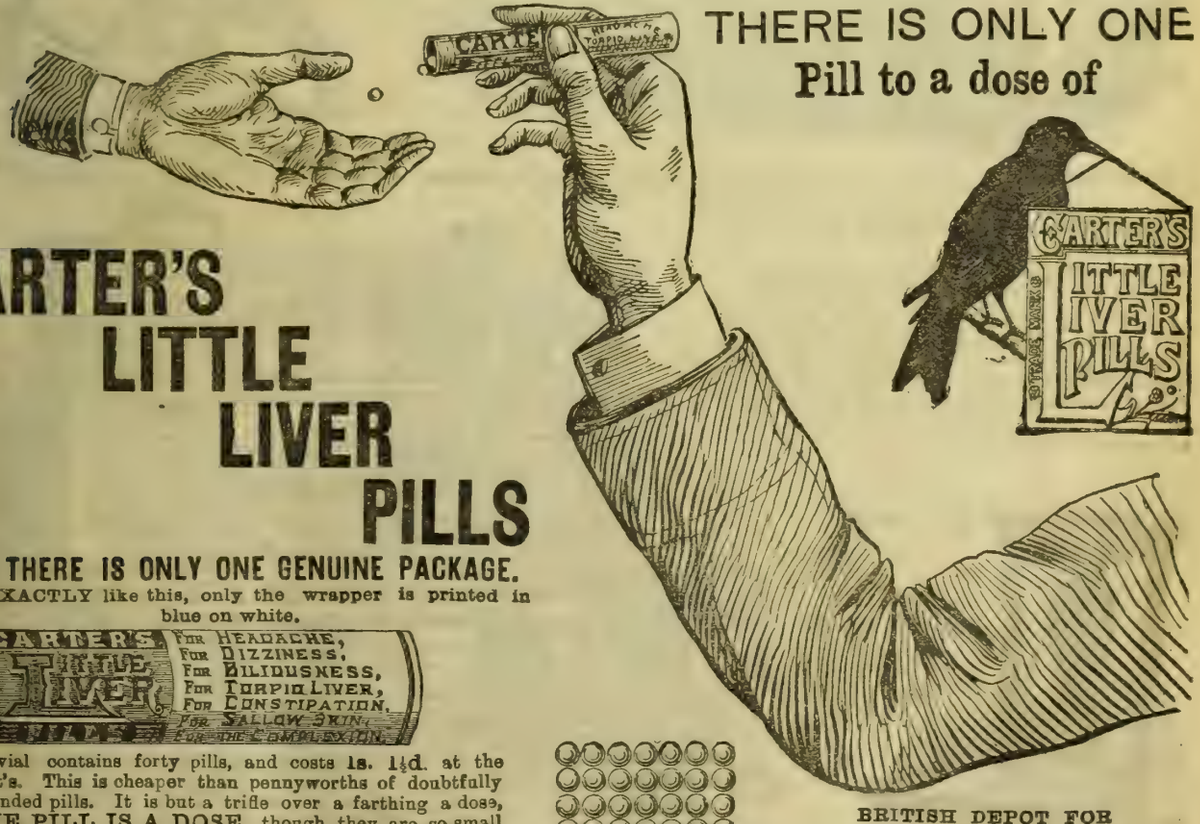
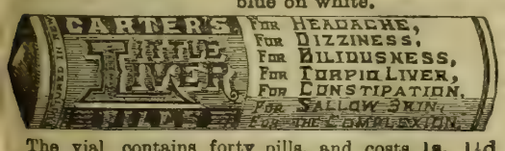
BLONDEAU ET CIE., Ryland Rd., London, N.W.



THERE IS ONLY ONE
Pill to a dose of

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

AND THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE PACKAGE.
It is EXACTLY like this, only the wrapper is printed in blue on white.



The vial contains forty pills, and costs 1s. 1½d. at the Chemist's. This is cheaper than pennyworths of doubtfully compounded pills. It is but a trifle over a farthing a dose, for ONE PILL IS A DOSE, though they are so small that FORTY-NINE of them only measure one inch square.

Cure TORPID LIVER WITHOUT FAIL. SICK HEADACHE, MALAISE, DISTRESS FROM EATING, and SALLOW COMPLEXION promptly done away with.

BRITISH DEPOT FOR
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS,
46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C

MAPLE & CO

LIMITED

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD

LONDON W

THE LARGEST AND MOST CONVENIENT

Furnishing Establishment

IN THE WORLD

ESTABLISHED FIFTY YEARS.

The CHANTRY TABLE, in antique carved oak, with under-tray; top measures 18 by 18 in., 27 in. high, £1 8 6

The WENLOCK TABLE, in antique carved oak; top 20 by 20 in., 24 in. high, £1 4 6

The MALMESBURY SIDEBOARD, in antique carved oak, fitted with cupboards and drawers, and cupboard enclosed by glass panelled door above; 5 ft. long, £8 8 0

SEVEN NEW SHOWROOMS

FOR

ANTIQUE FURNITURE

MAPLE & CO. are now exhibiting in the New Show-rooms a remarkably fine Collection of Antique Carved Oak Furniture, including numerous reproductions of fine old specimens collected from ancient Baronial Halls, Castles, Mansions, Priories, &c., all of which are marked at purely commercial prices.

The QUATFORD ELBOW CHAIR, in finely carved antique oak; seat 17½ in. high, £2 18 6

SEVEN NEW SHOWROOMS

FOR

ANTIQUE FURNITURE

MAPLE & CO.'S selection of Antique Carved Oak Furniture comprises unique and interesting specimens of Buffets, Dinner Wagons, Chimney Pieces, Book-cases, Writing Tables, Flap Tables, Cists, Coffers, Friar Anselm Benches, Corner Cupboards, Flower Stands, Spinning Chairs, &c. A handsome piece of Carved Oak Furniture is always an acceptable present.

NEW DESIGN SHEETS of QUAINT OLD OAK FURNITURE POST FREE.

The YATTON CHAIR, in antique carved oak; seat 17½ in. high, £1 13 6

The CLARENCE SIDEBOARD, in antique carved oak, with cupboards and recess below; upper part fitted with cupboards enclosed by glass panelled doors and recesses; 5 ft. 3 in. long, £15 15 0

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici.—Cicero."

No. 867. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, August 10, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICES.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Queen is to hold a Council at Osborne on the 22nd or the 23rd, just before the Court proceeds to Scotland. The usual Council at the close of the Session will be held this year at Balmoral.

Her Majesty proposes to erect a cairn, as a memorial of the marriage of the Duke and Duchess of York, on the Coyles of Muick, near Ballater, where there is already one cairn, raised by the Queen in remembrance of the wedding of the Prince and Princess of Wales. On one of these Coyles is still to be seen the Laird's Bed, a sloping rock, where Gordon of Abergeldie took refuge when he fled from Birkhall after the rebellion of 1715.

Extensive alterations are to be carried out during the next two months in the private chapel at Windsor Castle. The Queen and the Royal family occupy a large gallery which is approached from behind by a staircase. This arrangement does not suit the Queen, who now finds it troublesome to get up and down these steps, which is the reason that her Majesty has always attended a special service in the mausoleum at Frogmore during her recent residence at the Castle. It is proposed, therefore, to place the Royal gallery on a level with the floor of the chapel.

The Hereditary Prince and Princess of Saxe-Meiningen are coming to England next month on a visit to the Queen at Balmoral. The Hereditary Princess, who is the eldest daughter of the Empress Frederick, has been for many years a prominent figure in the Court society at Berlin, but H.R.H. and the Hereditary Prince are about to take up their residence at Meiningen, and the Prince has resigned his appointment in the Army, in consequence of the precarious state of the health of his father, the Grand Duke of Saxe-Meiningen.

One of the magazines has published an account of the Princess of Wales's pets at Sandringham, in which it is stated that her favourite mare, Viva, "accompanied the Princess to France on the occasion of the wedding of H.R.H. the Duc d'Aumale." There is certainly a grave error in the statement, for the wedding of the Duc d'Aumale took place nearly forty-nine years ago, consequently before the Princess of Wales was born.

The Prince of Wales, who is to arrive at Homburg on Saturday or Sunday next, will stay there for three weeks, after which H.R.H. is to pay a short visit to the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh at Coburg, and then he will go to Denmark for a week before returning to England. The Prince will be in Scotland for about a month from the middle of September.

It is probable that the Princess of Wales and the Duke and Duchess of York will pay a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland at Gmunden in the course of the autumn.

Where is adulation to end? The Duke of York, probably, has his fair share of good qualities, and is neither better nor worse, wiser nor less wise, than the average young man of the period, except that he has had the advantage over many of them of having knocked about the world as a sailor. But the stars in their courses are called on to testify to his being a perfect intellectual and moral phenomenon. His nativity, it would appear, was "truly regal," and for this we have to be grateful to Aries, Mars, Leo, Jupiter, Sagittarius, Venus, Taurus, and Saturn. Thanks to the stars, he is "benignant, good, fond of dancing, zealous, abhorring wickedness, delighting in the arts, affectionate, refined in taste, easily reconciled, tractable, entirely amiable, philosophical, of scientific mind and good genius, poetical, delighting in learning and elegance, luxurious, intelligent, emulous of worth, judicious, and high-minded; indeed, England will be proud of her fifth King George, and his fame will descend to posterity as one of the wisest and best of monarchs." And only to think that, had his Royal Highness not have been heir to the Monarchy, we should never have known what the stars had done for him!

Several papers have announced that the Duke and Duchess of Fife intend to reside for some time at Innes House, their place in Morayshire, which is quite a mistake. They merely went over to Innes last week for a couple of days, in order that the Duke might take part in some county functions, and the place has been let for the shooting season to Mr. G. Williamson. The Duke and Duchess of Fife will leave Duff House, their Banffshire place, in a few days for Braemar, and they intend to reside at New Mar Lodge until the end of October.

The Duke and Duchess of Teck, who are to be abroad during the next few weeks, have been invited to join the King and Queen of Denmark's family party at the Castle of Fredensborg during the visit there of the Duke and Duchess of York. The Duchess of Teck, who is now staying at the baths of Neuenahr, near Bonn, is a first cousin of the Queen of Denmark, who was a daughter of the late Landgrave William of Hesse-Cassel, the eldest brother of the late Duchess of Cambridge.

I learn that the Emperor William has invited both the Duke of Connaught and the Duke of York to attend the German autumn manœuvres, which are to be held next month in Alsace-Lorraine; but his Majesty's uncle has been long engaged to go to Hungary, and his cousin will be then in Denmark.

The late Grand Duke of Hesse was never tired of recommending the waters of Nauheim to his English relatives, and he cherished hopes of being able some day to induce the Queen to visit his favourite watering-place; so that he would have been delighted to hear of Princess Christian's arrival there, more especially as she will probably be followed very shortly by the Duchess of Connaught. Nauheim is a pretty little place, between Frankfort and Cassel, with a large kursaal and a very well arranged bath-house. The waters are strongly saline, and they have a great reputation in Germany.

A report having got about that typhoid fever is prevalent in Aix-les-Bains, Dr. Brachet and other leading physicians have published a letter in which they state that the health of the town and neighbourhood is excellent, and that there is not to their knowledge a single case of typhoid fever or other infectious and contagious disease. A private letter that I have received from a friend staying there assures me that the reports alluded to are entirely destitute of foundation.

The Braemar Gathering is to be held this year at Old Mar Castle on Thursday, August 31, and the Queen has expressed her intention of being present, with a number of "Royals" from Balmoral, while parties will be brought by the Duke and Duchess of Fife from New Mar Lodge, and by Mr. and Mrs. Farquharson from Invercauld House.

Lord Houghton entertained a party of visitors at the Viceregal Lodge last week, the chief guests being the Zingari, who are visiting Ireland earlier than usual this year on their annual cricketing tour. Matches were played each afternoon, when there were large gatherings on the Viceregal ground to enjoy the play, with the added attractions of a military band under the trees, and tea and refreshments in tents. The military predominated largely amongst the spectators, Dublin being at present deserted by Society. Whether the many understand and are capable of appreciating cricket, it is certain that they appreciate military music, and perhaps even refreshments. Several dinner-parties were given at the Viceregal Lodge during the week, amongst those entertained being the Lord Chancellor and Sir Gerald and Lady Fitzgerald.

Dublin and the neighbouring seaside resorts are expected to be crowded for the Horse Show week. Most of the rooms in the leading hotels are already engaged. The number of those from across the water—whether ocean or Channel—who attend the Horse Show grows each year, and if the favourable weather continues, the forthcoming show will be an unprecedented success. Amongst the visitors to Dublin during the week will be Lord Roberts, with Lady and Miss Roberts.

The Royal Hospital, Kilmainham, is at present shut up, Lord and Lady Wolseley being absent from Ireland. It is rumoured that Lord Wolseley is not anxious to stay long in Dublin. The pay of the Commandership of the Forces in Ireland is not commensurate with the position, and the amount of entertaining expected from any one who holds it. Very often, however, in years previous to Lord Wolseley's time, the entertaining did not get past the expectation stage.

Lord and Lady Fitzwilliam have gone to Ireland to pass the autumn at Coollatin Park, county Wicklow, where they will reside until they return to Wentworth Woodhouse in November for the hunting season. Mr. Henry and Lady Mary Fitzwilliam will entertain a small party at Wentworth during the Doncaster race week.

Lord and Lady Zetland have been cruising off the Orkney and Shetland Islands during the last week, in the late Duke of Bedford's steam yacht Northumbria, which they have hired for three months.

The Duke and Duchess of Westminster are about to take their final departure from Clieveden, where they have been residing almost entirely since the middle of May, and after a short stay at Eaton Hall they will go to Scotland to pass the shooting season at Stack Lodge, Sutherlandshire, which is one of the residences in Reay Forest, and they are to entertain a party there for deer-stalking and salmon-fishing.

Lord Ripon and Lord de Grey will have a party at Studley Royal for the opening of the shooting season on the famous Dallowgill Moors, which are among the best in Yorkshire, and usually afford very heavy bags of grouse.

About thirty years ago, the late Mr. Money-Wigram paid £49,000 for the Esher Place demesne in Surrey, and he subsequently spent £14,000 in improving the property. The other day Esher Place was offered for sale at the reserve of £29,000, but there was not a single bid. It is close to Claremont, and it is one of the most attractive residences in Surrey.

Judging by a wine list sent me from one Chicago hotel, I should imagine that the McKinley Act includes among other things a tax on drinkers of intoxicants. I confess I did not know that the teetotaller was a native production of the United States, but he is evidently "protected"

For the Truth Serial List, see page 301 in the present issue.

For Amusements, see page 303.

at Chicago, as will be seen by the following items. These are the prices for whole bottles of the cheapest wines in each class; the others range upwards:—

Medoc	1.00
St. Julien	1.50
Sauterne	1.50
Macon	2.00
Hochheimer	1.50
Sherry ("Table")	1.50
Beaune	2.50

Champagnes, regardless of brand, are all 4 dols. a bottle, except Piper Heidsieck, brut extra, which is 5 dols.

Can any reader of TRUTH tell me where to find a young lady with (natural) hair more than 6 ft. 9 in. in length? A member of the Reform Club (belonging, I take it, to one of the old Whig families) has a relative whose hair reaches the aforesaid length; and he has asked me to try and find out whether this is, in the language of sport, "a record." I feel a delicacy myself about asking my lady friends to let me measure their back hair; but I am confident that in the event of any lady possessing locks measuring 6 ft. 9 in. her friends will have heard about it, and be willing to divulge the secret. I don't know whether my friend at the Reform Club intends to offer a prize to any one who can beat his records; but I would suggest that, if the Committee would allow him to get up a show of back hair at the Club, it would be a new and attractive feature in that institution.

A valuable diamond-headed pin was picked up two or three weeks ago in Sloane-street. An advertisement appeared in the Morning Post stating that whoever took the pin to a certain house in a fashionable district of London "would be rewarded." The pin was brought, and the reward claimed. The butler, who opened the door, said that his mistress would send the reward, but nothing of the kind was done. After a few days a lady wrote to the owner on behalf of the girl who had restored the pin—a servant-girl at a lodging-house—but no reply was vouchsafed. What, then, could have been the meaning of the advertisement? Perhaps that honesty is its own reward, or that the restoration of the pin would be rewarded in the world to come. But it hardly requires an announcement in the Morning Post to tell us this.

An elaborate biography of William James Fox, written by his daughter, will be published in the autumn. Fox, who died in 1864, was the most eloquent Unitarian preacher of his day, also a zealous political agitator, and for many years a prominent member of the House of Commons. He was a graceful writer, and a keen and discriminating critic. Fox was a regular contributor to the Westminster Review, and for some time he wrote slashing political articles in the Weekly Dispatch, under the pseudonym of "Publicola."

I am glad to hear that Messrs. Black are publishing an unabridged edition of Lockhart's delightful "Life of Scott," in five volumes, at fourteenpence each. Lockhart's book is generally acknowledged to be the best biography in the English language, next to Boswell's immortal work, and it is full both of instruction and entertainment. Mr. Gladstone declared the other day that no library should be without the Waverley novels, and, most assuredly, it might be added that no library should be without Lockhart's Life of their author.

Not long ago an individual applied to the custodian of a certain Cathedral library for permission to examine a valuable manuscript book, which is one of the gems of the collection in question. No sooner had the visitor left the library than the custodian looked into the volume, and, to his rage and horror, he discovered that three or four leaves were missing. He hastily consulted with the Canon in residence, and then rushed to the police-station, the result being that the visitor was brought back in custody. The Dean, who was also in residence, was communicated with, and he came at once to the library, where the prisoner and his captors were waiting. This divine asked for the volume, looked at it, and then demanded the catalogue of the Cathedral collection, wherein—lo, and behold! there was discovered a note stating that these leaves in this book had been missing when the catalogue was compiled, more than a hundred years ago. Of course there was nothing to be done but apologise to the visitor for the outrage to which he had been subjected; and he, being something of a philosopher, contented himself with recommending the Cathedral authorities always to have an official in attendance in the library whenever the old books and manuscripts are being examined by strangers.

Brighton College held its speech day on Tuesday last, and there was special interest in the proceedings owing to the fact that the new Head-Master had to give an account of his first year of office, and a very satisfactory account it was. The Examiner's report was most flattering, and he compared the work at the College very favourably with a much larger school which he had just previously examined. Brighton College, in addition, however, to its scholastic advantages, claims to hold the record of public schools in the matter of health, and there is no gainsaying that it has produced some fine athletes as well as some excellent scholars, and I only wonder that it is not even more popular, though I am glad to see that it is gradually pushing its way to the front.

In a paper read before the British Medical Association last week, Dr. R. B. Rentoul, of Liverpool, strongly advocated the registration and inspection of still-born children. This seems to me a highly desirable reform, for I have little doubt that among the thousands of children interred as still-born every year there are many who have been born alive and died through neglect or violence. The present state of the law indirectly encourages crime of this kind, and the fact that England is almost alone amongst European countries in dispensing with the registration of still-births, is far from creditable to us.

The Bishop of Winchester's living of Meonstoke, Hants, which is worth £1,100 a year, according to the "Clergy List," has become vacant by the death of the Rev. Charles John Hume, who had been rector for sixty-one years, having been presented by Bishop Sumner in

C.O.M. WHISKY.—This well-known Brand, 50s. [illegible]
C.O.M. WHISKY. [illegible]
C.O.M. WHISKY. [illegible]

1832. Mr. Hume was formerly well known in the diocese as having been instrumental in abolishing the Sunday Fair at Farnham, where he was Curate for several years, and his good work there caused his preferment to the living of Meonstoke. He was an old-fashioned Evangelical, an admirable preacher, and indefatigable in his parochial work.

Mr. J. D. Allcroft, who died last week, was an enthusiastic and a most munificent supporter of the more austere section of the Evangelical section of the Established Church, and he will be a great and irreparable loss to the Church Association. Mr. Allcroft was a disciple of Charles Simeon, and, following his example, he purchased a number of important livings, with the object of securing them for the Evangelical Party. He was a very generous supporter of many religious and philanthropic institutions.

The Daily News on Friday gave publicity to a painful scene which occurred at Portsea Cemetery. Three funeral parties were kept waiting for some hours through the failure of a Curate to keep his engagement to conduct the services. Incidents of this kind are frequently reported, but, as in this instance, the name of the defaulting cleric is almost invariably omitted. I would suggest to my contemporaries that if they have any genuine desire to put an end to such scandalous negligence they should give the name of the guilty party. Dread of an exposure would prove a wonderful aid to the memories of these reverend gentlemen.

Some inquiries have been made of me as to the position of my promised investigation of the finances of St. John's Hospital for Diseases of the Skin. From one cause and another, over which I have had little or no control—the last of them being the heavy and protracted inquiry into the affairs of Mr. and Mrs. Zierenberg—I regret that I have been unable to conclude my researches at St. John's Hospital. The arrival of the holiday season is, I fear, likely to delay the matter still further. It is due, therefore, to the Hospital authorities that I should now state that they have fully acted up to the promise they made to give me access to the Hospital books and other information necessary to form an opinion; and although I have only as yet gone superficially into the matter, what I have seen leads me to believe that a very different state of things now exists in regard to the financial management from that which has previously called for unfavourable notice in TRUTH. It is impossible at the present stage to give a final opinion; but as I understand that subscriptions have been held back in expectation of the result of my inquiries, I think it right to make this statement.

I have received the following amounts towards Lady Jeune's Holiday Fund for poor London children:—C. H. T., 10s.; Officers of H.M.S. Blonde, £3; J. C. K., £3; S. F., £1; X. Y. Z., £3. 3s.; Pringle Hughes, £5.

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one half West-end price. PHILLIPS & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate-street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to latest fashion.

A non-commissioned officer has asked me to use my efforts to improve the language of Thomas Atkins This N.C.O. draws an alarming picture of Tommy's vocabulary, and asserts that within his experience it has greatly deteriorated. As I said the other day, when appealed to respecting the language used by officers, I don't quite know what I can do. It seems to me a matter for the Chaplains' Department. Indeed, I am surprised to hear such a complaint at all, in view of all that I have been told as to the magical powers of the young ecclesiastics with whom Dr. Edghill has leavened the Service. If it be true, as I am credibly informed, that the language of officers is occasionally not all that could be desired, I would suggest that reform should begin in that direction and work downwards. I happen to know that this is a matter on which the Commander-in-Chief holds very strong views, and I think that H.R.H. and the Chaplain-General should lay their heads together and start a little crusade.

Personally, I am indifferent to the use of bad language by anybody, because I regard it as meaningless. Expletives are merely inarticulate expressions of temper, like the corresponding noises made by animals. If they are offensive, it can only be from the tone and manner in which they are uttered. In that case, they stand precisely on a level with making a grimace, or putting the fingers to the nose. The other day an excited Unionist hurled the word "bloody" at his Irish opponents in Parliament. The fact being undeniable, he forthwith wrote to the papers to explain that he used the word in its "Pickwickian sense"—that is to say, in a sense which not one in a hundred of those who heard it would attach to it. The word in itself is really inoffensive, though it is both stupid and low; but the Unionist was more anxious to have it understood that he had intended to be offensive than that he had used a low, but meaningless, word in a moment of excitement. This shows how false are current ideas on the subject of "bad language."

It is, of course, better that men should express their meaning intelligibly—supposing them to have any meaning capable of expression—than that they should fill up the gaps in their discourse with odds and ends of speech borrowed from bargees and costermongers. But in practice this is evidently regulated by fashion. After what we have seen lately, I should say that there is rather a run on bargees' and costermongers' lingo just now, even in august circles; and very likely it is owing to this that my friend Tommy Atkins has been using such exceptionally bad language. No doubt the tide does set this way now and then. It did a century ago. But when it comes to quarrelling with the fashions, who will have the courage to begin? Not I.

An expert in such matters gives me an explanation of the difference in the price of khaki clothing in the bazaars and in the regimental tailors' shops, respectively. It is this: Native merchants get material at "trade" prices, whereas regiments pay the "market" prices; and European labour costs more than native labour, while the native workman takes lower wages from his own countryman than he will from a European. This explains the how of the thing, but hardly the why. Why should not the Indian Army authorities be able to buy cloth at "trade" prices? and why, if the Indian merchant can get the garments made up cheaper, should not Tommy be allowed to avail himself of the difference? Of course, if the regimental tailor employed European labour, it may be said that there is better workmanship to show for the higher price; but I understand that the master-tailors are largely assisted by natives.

HOUSE DRAINAGE.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

Apropos to what I said last week about Tommy's brass buttons, I have, by a coincidence, just heard from a correspondent in the Far East, that these articles are highly esteemed in Thibet. The writer, who seems to know the country well, states that Indian rupees and the buttons of the British uniform have been regularly imported into that country from the days of Warren Hastings; and that nearly every regiment in the Service is represented by its buttons upon the persons of the Thibetan population—Llamas as well as laymen. At this rate, I shall hear next that even the Mahatmas are going about in Tommy's old clothes.

Luckily for the country, it is very seldom that a retired officer draws his pension for nearly seventy years. Mr. Stronach, of Ardmellie, Banffshire, who died recently at the age of ninety-eight, entered the Army in March, 1818, and retired in September, 1826. From that time he drew the half-pay on his commission until his death.

Last week I had a communication from Chatham informing me that the Royal Engineers there are "compelled to walk out now as if they were tied up in sacks, and with forage caps almost touching their ears;" and that in consequence they have to put up with "all sorts of remarks passed by civilians on their slovenly appearance compared to other corps and regiments." Another letter on the same subject, since received, states that what used to be a smart corps has been transformed into a detachment of "Guys," special soreness being expressed on the subject of trousers, which are said to be too large at the knees and too tight at the ankles. As it seems that there is some strong feeling in the corps on the subject, I trust that these growls may meet the eye of the Commanding Officer. From the allusion to the unkind remarks of civilians, and their unflattering references to other corps and regiments, I should imagine there is a lady in the quesion—perhaps more than one.

In consequence of what was said on the subject in TRUTH the other day I have received a very clear and succinct statement of the case of the Sergeant-Cooks. I cannot do better than give it verbatim:—

1. A Sergeant-Cook who does his duties conscientiously, is at work from 5 a.m. to 5 p.m. on seven days of the week.
2. He is expected to appear at all times clean and tidy, which, from the nature of his work, necessitates his continually putting his hand in his pocket, for clothing, &c.

[N.B.—Certain Commanding Officers, taking this into consideration, have supplemented the Cook's pay from Battalion funds, but this has not been done at all generally.]

3. The Sergeant-Cook is held responsible for bringing to notice all irregularities and neglect connected with the Companies' messing books; in doing this he is continually brought into conflict with the Colour Sergeants, who occasionally do their best to throw difficulties in his way. It is absolutely impossible for the Cook to perform his duty in this direction effectually, unless he is placed on an equality of rank with the Colour-Sergeants.

From the point of view of the Service, the third of the foregoing heads appears to be the most important. I appreciate, of course, that there may be another side to this question, and that it may be desirable to exercise some sort of check over the cook himself. The Aldershot system, however, makes him—and quite rightly, up to a point—responsible for the honesty and economy of the mess management, and if his responsibility is to be a reality, it must be accompanied by a measure of authority. I am told that there are cases in which men have passed through the School of Cookery with credit, but have failed utterly as regimental cooks, simply because they were not able to cope with the difficulties of their position away from the pots and pans. As regards the other two heads of the above statement, there can, I imagine, be little difference of opinion. The three points in the Army Cooks' charter shou 1 therefore be:—(1) Reduction of hours; (2) Allowance for clothing; (3) The rank of Colour-Sergeants.

The system of granting extensions of service to officers in exalted stations appears to be on the increase in India. The heads of the Military Accounts, Medical, and Survey Departments have each been favoured in this way within the last few years, and in the case of the last-mentioned official there is now talk of a further extension. The prospect of this last iniquity has already excited the utmost consternation and disgust, for no less than seven steps, which a few years ago a junior might have looked upon as certainties, have been recently suppressed. Jobbery of this kind, when perpetrated, as it usually is, in defiance of explicit rules, is at once an injury and an insult to those who are thus deprived of promotion; for while robbed of what they have a right to expect, they are invariably given to understand that it is because they are not competent to fill the place efficiently. "Il n'y a pas d'homme indispensable"; and least of all is a man indispensable when he is approaching, or has passed, his three-score years.

Some months back I had the pleasure of chronicling sundry welcome concessions made to Farriers of cavalry regiments. I understand that regiments serving in India have not got the benefit of these concessions—I refer more particularly to the Army Order which provides that a Sergeant Farrier, after three years' service as such, shall be eligible for promotion to the rank of Staff-Sergeant Farrier. A soldier ought not to be at a disadvantage because he is serving abroad; but in the case of India, at any rate, it seems that he very often is.

In connection with this point, I should like to ask why the increase of pay granted by an Order of August last to Quartermaster-Sergeants was not also given to Farrier-Quartermaster-Sergeants. The latter seem to have an equally good claim to it, and as there appears to be a disposition at present to do justice to the Farriers, I would suggest that this omission be now rectified.

Two discharged N.C.O.'s, both men of first-class character, have laid a complaint before me of their uncivil reception on Friday last at the office of the Association for the Employment of Discharged Soldiers. I am quite sure that the management would not approve of this sort of thing, and doubtless they will look into the matter. Not long since I had a similar complaint from Manchester or Liverpool, and from what I hear, I should say that the value of politeness is not sufficiently understood by the clerks in some of the Association's offices.

The answer which Sir John Hibbert gave to Sir F. H. Evans last week respecting the Temporary Civil Assistants of the Ordnance Survey can only be explained on the assumption that it was given under a complete misapprehension of the facts. Sir John Hibbert stated, with the air of one announcing a valuable concession, that fifty or sixty of the Temporary Civil Assistants are to be placed on the permanent and pensionable list. As a matter of fact, forty of those who are to be so treated are already in receipt of pensions for service in the Royal Engineers. Their service ranges from a few weeks up to fifteen years; they are already in receipt of the highest rates of pay, and they have never asked for any improvement in their position. On the other hand, a number of Temporary Civil Assistants, with from fifteen to twenty-two years' service to their credit, who, as I have repeatedly pointed out, have an unanswerable claim to pension, are left out in the cold—apparently for the sole reason that they have never been in the Army. It is important to note that these men have not had a fair chance of obtaining the rank of Superintendent, it being a standing rule that this position is "to be given to the Royal Engineers when practicable." The last step taken by the authorities appears to be only one more example of their determination to make the Ordnance Survey an exclusively Military Department.

Admiral Hillyar, who died on Thursday at Plymouth, was a very well-known officer, who had seen a great deal of service, and he had much distinguished himself on several occasions, notably during the first China war, at the capture of Prome, and during the Crimean war, when he was specially promoted for gallantry in the trenches before Sebastopol, while serving with the Naval Brigade. Admiral Hillyar's meritorious naval career terminated with his appointment to be Senior Officer on the coast of Ireland, from which he retired in 1878. All his ranks were gained for war services.

A correspondent writes:—

"Every one who has visited Malta of late years will be sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Harry, whose house and lovely gardens had become one of the great sights of the island. Mr. Harry, who has died at the age of seventy-six, had lived at Malta since his retirement from the Army. His house was a perfect museum, being crammed with curiosities and objects of art, and his gardens were famous for their profusion of beautiful flowers and plants, notably the roses and ferns. His informal afternoon parties were much enjoyed. One of Mr. Harry's latest visitors was the Princess of Wales, who spent a day in his garden during her stay at Malta last May.

The Imperial, East Cliff, Bournemouth.—Position, appointments, and cuisine unsurpassed. 100 rooms. Luxuriously furnished. Electric light. Private omnibuses meet trains. Telegraphic address, Imperial, Bournemouth.—Chas. A. Reingpach, Manager.

A country clergyman has favoured me with a somewhat lengthy dissertation upon the Victoria catastrophe and the lessons it conveys. With much that he says I agree. But I fancy it would hardly be prudent of me to publish it. If I allowed a parson to air his ideas as to how the Victoria should have been saved, some Naval officer would retaliate by expounding his views on the salvation of souls. This might prove embarrassing. My friend should bear in mind the old maxim, ne sutor ultra crepidam.

My attention has been called to the case of the Begum Jamil Oon Nipa, daughter of the third son of Azim Jah Bahadur, first Prince of Arcot. As it is represented to me, the case appears an extremely hard one. The Begum's father received from the Government of Madras an allowance of Rs. 100 per month, and her stepmother, Ghousiah Begum, Rs. 900 per month, their annuities being derived from a settlement of the first Prince of Arcot upon his children. The father's allowance, by bequest endorsed by the Government of Madras, descended to the daughter. The stepmother also bequeathed her allowance to the same lady. The second bequest, however, was not ratified by the Madras Government, in consequence, it is said, of an official report, after some inquiry for the purpose, that she was an illegitimate daughter of her father. As the result of this decision, the stepmother having died, her annuity has reverted to the present Prince of Arcot.

The Begum's complaint is that the inquiry which led to her being pronounced illegitimate, and deprived of her share of the family inheritance, was held while both she and her stepmother were absent at Bagdad, and without notice to her, or opportunity being given her of defending her rights. If this allegation be correct, the lady has been most unjustly treated. She asserts that she can prove her legitimacy, according to Mohammedan law, and that she has obtained counsel's opinion in support of her contention. I refrain from speaking more forcibly regarding the case, because the Begum has already appealed to the Madras Government and the Governor-General without success, in face of which it is necessary to assume that there is another side to the question. But as the above allegations of the Begum impute gross injustice to both the Governor of Madras and the Governor-General, I hope that no time will be lost in explaining what this other side is.

A case of over-assessment to poor-rate, parallel to that at Croydon recently described in Truth, is reported to me from Hampstead. The Assessment Committee of that parish insisted on assessing a householder at £70, notwithstanding that he produced a letter from the landlord proving that the rent was £60; and, pending an appeal, the helpless citizen has to pay rates on the £70 valuation. This grievance would not be such a serious one if, on subsequent reduction of the assessment, the ratepayer were entitled to claim a return of the amount previously paid in excess of the sum properly due from him. That is the only fair course in such cases, and the Assessment Acts ought to be amended so as to give such a right.

Messrs. Rhodes & Evans, of Halifax, are, I do not make the slightest doubt, the most respectable of men and attorneys, but for the sake of their clients I trust that they will be wiser in their interests than in their own. There was a divergency of opinion at Sowerby Bridge respecting the action of the Local Board of Health in regard to the purchase of certain properties. I espoused one side, on which Messrs. Rhodes & Evans, being Clerks to the Board, wrote me a letter rectifying my "inaccuracies." I published a précis of the letter, and said that I would make further inquiries. On doing this, I learned, on the authority of several members of the Board, that the inaccuracy was on the side of Messrs. Rhodes & Evans This I also published, together with an expression of my astonishment that the Clerks to the Board should fall into error upon such a matter. Messrs. Rhodes & Evans thereupon commenced an action for libel against me, and the issue was heard last week at Leeds. Where the libel came in, I failed to perceive. The Chief Justice who tried the case pointed out that it was not, in his opinion, possible for newspapers to discuss anything, as in respect to a public body, if they were to be deemed guilty of libel should they demur to the assertions of the officers of the public body, and that, as a matter of proved fact, Messrs. Rhodes & Evans had been inaccurate. As to the question whether the contention of the members of the Sowerby Bridge Board who sided with me were right or whether they were wrong, his Lordship said that this had absolutely nothing to do with the case. The Jury awarded to Messrs. Rhodes & Evans the solatium of one farthing, adding their opinion that this verdict ought not to carry costs against me. This was the result of a compromise between the large majority of the Jury, who were in favour of a verdict for me, and of a small minority who did not see matters in this light; the majority considering that the verdict of one farthing against me would be more in accordance with justice to me than if the case were retried, owing to want of agreement amongst the Jury. For this I am greatly obliged to them, for probably a new trial, assuming that I should have won it, would have been more expensive than the payment of the farthing and my costs.

However, I cannot help thinking that in libel and such like civil actions it would be most desirable that the verdict should be the opinion of two-thirds of the Jury, instead, as now, of unanimity being required. In this instance the opinion of the majority was that there ought to have been a verdict for me. But the opinion of the minority prevailed, with the result that I have to pay a lot of costs for defending an action for libel when there was no libel, and when, even supposing that it be a libel to question the accuracy of a clerk of a Board of Health when writing as to what concerns the Board and in no way the personality of the writer, it was proved that the communication was inaccurate.

I rejoice to find that I was "a little previous" in regard to Mr. Roxburgh's salary. The Court of Common Council has not yet made up its mind on the subject. There is, therefore, time for this scandal to be averted, and with a view to that result, I would suggest that the City Fathers, before deciding that Mr. Roxburgh, after five years' service, is worth several hundreds a year more than any County Court Judge in the Kingdom, should take the opinion of those who practise in the Court upon this point.

They might also with advantage study a little scene which occurred in the Mayor's Court one day last week, when Mr. Oswald, Q.C., who was briefed for the plaintiff in a case some distance down the day's list, arrived in Court about twelve o'clock to find that the case had been struck out, although others in front of it had not been tried. Mr. Oswald, as is his wont, expressed his mind freely upon the iniquity of this and other proceedings in vogue in the Mayor's Court—and with good cause. It is the practice in this Court to call over the list at the commencement of the day's proceedings, when every plaintiff who is not present, or represented, is summarily dismissed. In other words, all parties who appear in the day's list are expected to be present when the Court opens, and then to sit kicking their heels until the Court is at liberty to attend to them, which may not be for five or six hours. The penalty for failing to do so is that the case is struck out, and the day lost, while heavy expense must be incurred in reinstating the case. In no other Court in the country does such a practice as this obtain. It only obtains in the Mayor's Court because that tribunal, being under the jurisdiction of the Corporation of London, is privileged to swell its fees by every device for tormenting suitors and frustrating justice.

Birmingham must be in a bad way. Not long ago Judge Chalmers referred to the alarming amount of perjury committed in the County Court. He intimated that even in his Indian experience he had never known such wholesale lying. It now appears that the bearing of false witness is not the only vice for which Birmingham exhibits an exceptional proclivity. In a money-lending case the other day a woman admitted that she had paid half-a-crown to have her husband's signature forged to a promissory note. Counsel remarked that such cases were not uncommon in that Court. "No," said his Honour, "I think 30 per cent. are forgeries." Far be it from me to suggest that there is any subtle relation between the political deterioration of Birmingham and its moral backsliding. At the same time, Judge Chalmers' statement that forgery and perjury are "demoralising the town," ought really to receive the serious attention of the eminent individual who is popularly regarded as the Boss of Brummagem.

The late Sir James Mackenzie made such a dreadful muddle of his testamentary arrangements that the lawyers have absorbed a considerable part of his personalty, and the attempt to settle matters by means of a private Act failed, as the House of Lords refused to pass the Bill which the trustees promoted. Shortly before Sir James Mackenzie died he added a holograph codicil to his will, which ran as follows :—

PFUNGST FRÈRES' EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNES.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents. J. L. PFUNGST & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

Midland Third-class Luncheon and Dining Carriages Glasgow (St. Enoch) and London (St. Pancras). 1.30 p.m. in each direction. Table d'Hôte Lunch, 2s.; Dinner, 2s. 6d. Service à la carte. Excellent cuisine. Popular prices. "A Model Restaurant on Wheels."—NOTE:—Midland Railway Company's Hotels at London (St. Pancras), Liverpool, Leeds, Derby, and Bradford. Excellent cooking. Choice wines.

My executors may let Glenmuick until it is sold, but not to a cad, or one who would damage it, or be disagreeable to the Royalties, from whom I have always received the greatest kindness.

The project for an organisation of the Junior Bar, to be called the Bar Association, whose object will be to guard the interests of the unfortunate class of which it is composed, has not been taken up with much enthusiasm. I never thought it would. Such an organisation is in this dilemma: To be influential, it must contain a large proportion of juniors in good practice, and then it will be conservative. To be radical, it must consist of the briefless alone, and then it is impotent. The Bar Committee fulfils the first condition, and it will do nothing. The projected Bar Association, as far as it has gone, conforms to the second condition, and it is clear it will never be capable of doing anything. If dissatisfied juniors would be content to agitate for some definite and pressing reform, instead of starting associations with ambitious programmes, some good might be done. For instance, why do not they demand the publication of an annual balance-sheet by the Benchers of each Inn? It is a crying scandal that in this democratic age the funds of a whole profession should be administered by a set of men who are responsible to nobody but themselves.

Apropos of my remarks last week upon a poaching case at Newport, Isle of Wight, I have again been reminded of the monstrous monopoly which the Tories possess on the Bench of the island. There is, it is believed, one solitary Liberal on the commission of the peace, but this gentleman can scarcely be taken into the reckoning, as he lives in London. Clearly the Isle of Wight should be one of the first districts to receive the attention of the Lord Chancellor when he sets about the reform of the County Benches. The sooner he does this the better.

Mr. Justice Hawkins has again entered a strong protest against the practice of committing prisoners for trial at Quarter Sessions when they can be dealt with earlier at the Assizes. At Birmingham, last week, his Lordship found that there were twelve persons in custody awaiting their trial at the Sessions, which will not be held till October next. It is, as the Judge said, a monstrous thing that men and women, some of whom may be innocent, should be left to linger in prison month after month in this way, when they might just as well be tried at the Assizes. Fortunately, Mr. Justice Hawkins is always ready to take vigorous measures for the removal of such a scandal, and he decided to try the Sessions cases himself; or, if in any instance that was not practicable, to admit the prisoner to reasonable bail. If all the Judges would adopt a similar course, the Magisterial custom of sending prisoners over to the Sessions when Assizes intervene would soon cease.

I referred last week to a case in which a man was twice prosecuted for practically the same offence—first for poaching and then for killing game without a licence. The Supervisor of Inland Revenue stated (it will be recollected) that two other charges could also be brought against the defendant for shooting the same pheasant. This has brought me an inquiry as to whether, by adopting a similar course, it would not be possible to fine a man three times for being once drunk, charging him with being guilty of the offence (1) in a particular parish, (2) in the borough in which the parish is situated, and (3) in the county in which the borough is situated. Of course, this could not be done. It is only under the Game Laws that such an abominable system of persecution is permitted.

It is always a satisfaction to me to observe any sign of reform on the part of Justices whose misdeeds have called for censure in these columns. A short time ago I had to make some strong comments upon the action of the Aston Bench in sentencing a man to six weeks' imprisonment for being found asleep and snoring in a furniture van. Last week a similar vagrancy case came before the same Court, two men having been found sleeping and snoring in an empty bakehouse. Instead of repeating their former monstrous performance, however, the Magistrates discharged the prisoners. Some good, at least, is evidently done by a little wholesome criticism of the Great Unpaid.

It seems that I erred in saying that Sir Peter Edlin sentenced a young woman to three years' penal servitude for the theft of an umbrella. A gentleman who was in Court tells me that the prisoner was also convicted of two more serious robberies. She had been in trouble before for similar offences, and the evidence undoubtedly showed her to be a persistent and systematic thief. Considering all the circumstances, the punishment inflicted was not perhaps, excessive, and I regret that an inaccurate newspaper report led me to think otherwise.

By the way, would it not be advisable for judges to explain a little more explicitly the grounds on which their decisions are based? In these days sentences are subjected to a keen public scrutiny, which is, generally speaking, of great service to the cause of justice. But sometimes misconceptions arise which might be prevented or cleared away if Judges were not so prone to keep to themselves the knowledge on which they act. Why they should be thus reticent and regard the giving of an explanation as undignified is to me a mystery.

Scarlet Fever Precautions. Thirty gallons of the most powerful non-poisonous Disinfectant can be made with a Half-Crown bottle of "Izal," which is safe to use under all conditions, and is harmless to everything but disease. To prevent the spread of Fevers, Small pox, Diphtheria, Cholera, &c., "Izal" should be freely used, diluted in the proportion of 1 part to 200 parts of water. "Izal" is sold everywhere in Bottles, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., and Gallon Tins at 10s. A sample Bottle or Tin sent Carriage Paid, in the United Kingdom, for Postal Order. The "Izal" Rules for Disinfection may be had free on application to Newton, Chambers, & Co., Ltd., 19, Great George-street, London, S.W.

Major Howe & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. As an example of ruthless severity in dealing with the most trumpery offence against property, the performance of the Dover Bench will not easily be surpassed. Having regard to the circumstances, ten days would have been an excessive punishment if the prisoners had been grown up and incorrigible thieves, and that such a sentence should be passed on boys of fourteen, against whom nothing seems to have been known, is absolutely monstrous. Of what use are measures like the First Offenders Act, when their application has to be entrusted to such Solons as Messrs. Bradley and Edwin? Another case to which I would particularly direct attention is that from Belfast. It clearly shows that, however much of a Draco he may be in some matters, the Irish R.M. vies with the average English J.P. in the tenderness of his treatment for wife-beating brutes. An admirable example of the correct treatment for such ruffians was supplied at one of the Metropolitan Courts on Friday, when Mr. Sheil sentenced a man named Dawson to six months' hard labour and granted a judicial separation:—

Sheffield Police-court. Before Alderman W. J. Clegg and Mr. W. Llewellyn. Robert Riches, charged with assaulting Sarah O'Brien, who had given evidence against him in another case. The Chairman said witnesses would receive the protection of the Court. Fined £2. 11s. 6d.

Sheffield Police-court. Before the Stipendiary. Chas. Blackburn, charged with stealing a cabbage from a garden. Fourteen days.

Samuel Elsham, a small boy, charged with a garden robbery. Fined 20s.

Blackburn Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Kenyon, H. Livesey, and G. Green. Alfred Mason, charged with assaulting his wife. He struck her in the eye and "kicked her up and down the mill-yard." Fined 20s. and costs, or a month.

Preston County Police-court. Before Messrs. D. Smith, W. P. Park, J. Statterthwaite, W. F. Anderton, and J. J. Sidgreaves. Thomas Southworth, charged with night poaching. Six months, and three months' further imprisonment in default of finding sureties.

Worksop Police-court. Before Messrs. Foljambe, Mellish, Eddison, and Huntsman. Henry Brown, convicted of an assault, which the Bench considered "most brutal," on a boy. Fined 40s. and costs.

Chester County Petty Sessions. Nathan Jones, charged, under the Poaching Prevention Act, with being in possession of rabbits and nets. Fined £5 and costs, or two months.

Edinburgh City Police-court. Before Bailie Macpherson. George Somerville, convicted of assaulting Margaret Aitchison. Without any provocation he struck her in the face, knocked her down, and kicked her. Fined £2.

Nelson Police-court. Mary Hay, married woman, charged with stealing a shirt from a shop. The Bench said prosecutor tempted people by exposing his goods. Twenty-one days.

Belfast Custody Court. Before Mr. Eaton, R.M. William John Mullan, a sailor, charged with assaulting his wife. A constable said prisoner "pounded" the woman in a frightful fashion, beating her about the face and head with his clenched fists. Her face streamed with blood. He had not contributed anything towards her support for eleven years. Fined 20s. and costs.

Petworth Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. R. G. Wilberforce and H. Upton. Thomas Whitehouse, charged with begging. Seven days.

Ilfracombe Police-court. Before Mr. C. H. Dickenson. John Williams, charged with sleeping out. Seven days.

Florence Busse, charged with begging. Seven days.

Reading Police-court. Before Messrs. Nalder, Clarke, and J. W. Hounslow. William Mabbett, charged with assaulting his wife. After spitting in her face, he caught hold of her hair, knocked her against a door, and struck her several times on the head. Bound over.

Reading Police-court. Before the Mayor (Mr. J. W. Martin) and Messrs. C. J. Andrews and M. J. Sutton. Elizabeth Caines, married woman, charged with being drunk and disorderly. Fourteen days.

Dudley Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Garratt, J. H. Smith, and J. Smith. John and Henry Marsh, charged with being drunk and disorderly and assaulting Henry Pelliter, tram-conductor. Pelliter was violently assaulted by defendants, and the Bench said they were desperate characters. Fined 2s. 6d. each for the first offence, and 40s. and costs for the assault.

Worcester County Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. R. Berkeley, T. R. Hill, P. S. Williams, W. Holland, and other Magistrates. George Gwillam, convicted of assaulting Mary Jones, a married woman. The circumstances were such that the Bench were doubtful whether they should not commit the prisoner for indecent assault. Fined £1, and costs.

Dover Police-court. Before Messrs. J. L. Bradley and H. F. Edwin. William Adams (14), George Edward Lawrence (14), and George Jones (12), charged with stealing some pieces of wood, value sixpence, from the ground in front of the Ordnance Stores. A policeman shouted to them, and they dropped the wood and ran away. Jones to receive six strokes with the birch-rod. Adams and Lawrence ten days each.

Bromsgrove Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. R. Smallwood and Wiggin. Daniel Binkin, aged 17, charged with stealing a tin of salmon. He had had nothing to eat for a day, and was penniless. The Bench were "reluctant to send him to prison." Fine and costs £1, or fourteen days.

Manchester City Sessions. Before Mr. H. W. West, Q.C., Recorder. William Gibson, Thomas Brown, and Joseph O'Brien, charged with breaking into a shop with intent to steal. Gibson, six years' penal servitude and three years' supervision; O'Brien, three years' penal servitude and two years' supervision; Brown, twelve months and two years' supervision.

Frank Ashton, convicted of stealing 14s. 6d. Five years' penal servitude and three years' supervision.

Wirksworth Police-court, William Johnson, pedlar, pleaded guilty to hawking without a licence. Seven days.

Mr. W. H. Bishop, of Croydon, writes to inform me that he retired from the Bench on the occasion of the hearing of the charge of trespassing in his garden, which was commented upon in last week's TRUTH. This is, of course, a sufficient answer to my remarks, and I am sorry that the local newspaper reports, which represented Mr. Bishop as sitting on the Bench, should have led me astray. As, however, Mr. Bishop had occasion to write me, I cannot help thinking it a pity that he did not answer my questions regarding his relations with Jabez Balfour and his works.

So far as the licensing laws are concerned, the Great Unpaid seem at present to be divided into two equally irrational classes—those who will believe nothing against a publican, and those who will believe nothing in his favour. The Truro Bench are of the latter class. Mr. Binmore, landlord of the Highertown Inn, was charged with permitting a man named Webber, who had absconded, to be drunk on his premises. The facts were of a most extraordinary character. Webber, who had been drinking cider in the house with a man named Rundle, was standing outside with Rundle, when a constable, who was a cousin of Rundle's, came up, and, having other business in the house, took Rundle in and stood him a pint of cider. Webber came in with them, and Rundle gave him some of the drink. The constable said that if he had known Rundle was going to do this he would not have given him the liquor, as Webber was drunk. This led to an altercation between Webber and the constable; after which the constable went off, laid his information, proved the case, and got the landlord convicted and fined. It had to be proved, of course, that Webber was drunk when he entered the house. The constable swore he was. Then why did he let the man come in and have more

In preparation for the approaching sporting season, ladies and gentlemen should visit Ulster House, Conduit-street, W., where their orders for every kind of garment will have prompt and careful attention.

BRUSSELS.—The GRAND HOTEL. Magnificent establishment. Central position. Latest English hygienic improvements. Post, telegraph, and ticket offices. Unrivalled cave and cuisine.—DUBONNET. Propr.

drink? Rundle corroborated; but Rundle was the constable's cousin, and had to admit that he and Webber had had exactly the same quantity of drink, namely, three glasses of cider apiece. The landlady positively denied that Webber was drunk, and denied that the drink he had had would have made him drunk; in which I should think any person of average intelligence would concur. Yet in this state of the evidence "the Bench were of opinion that the case against the defendant had been clearly proved." I should say that such a Bench is incapable of weighing evidence, and ought no longer to have the liberty and property of their fellow-subjects at their mercy.

The country Police-court reports just now teem with cases of mushroom stealing which admirably illustrate the eccentric variations of the Magisterial judgment. In some districts a nominal penalty of sixpence or a shilling is imposed; in others a precisely similar offence is visited with a heavy fine and costs, and poor defendants are sent to gaol in default of payment. It would be interesting to know how any penalty whatever comes to be inflicted in the majority of these cases. As a writer in the South-Eastern Gazette pertinently puts it, there is no statute against Trespass in Pursuit of Fungi. The defendants are prosecuted for stealing, and they can only be convicted if the mushrooms are cultivated. What do the Magistrates consider proof of cultivation? I suspect that many convictions rest upon extremely slender evidence in this respect.

At Liverpool Assizes last week, the captain and mate of a British ship were convicted of the manslaughter of a sailor. The evidence showed that the deceased was subjected to the most atrocious ill-treatment. He was knocked down, kicked, and jumped upon, beaten with ropes-ends and belaying-pins, and finally chained, with his hands above his head, to the mizzen-mast. There the poor wretch was again rope-ended, and left exposed in a nearly naked state to a cold wind and constant drenchings. Such a story may well, as Mr. Justice Lawrance said, make one shudder to think what is occurring on the high seas. Many people will, however, shudder much more at the thought that the ruffians found guilty of this diabolical cruelty were let off with nine months' imprisonment—probably less than they would have received had they committed some trifling fraud on the shipowners.

Another manslaughter trial at the same assizes brought out in striking contrast the different combative habits of two civilised races. An Italian organ-grinder was convicted of fatally stabbing a Lancashire collier. The latter did not, of course, use a knife. Like all true-born Englishmen, the Lancashire collier detests that as a practice worthy only of barbarians. He prefers "puncing," which means getting your adversary on the ground and then kicking him on the head with your clogs. The operation was so described by a witness, who frankly admitted that he had performed it many a time, and it appeared that the accused Italian had been treated somewhat in this style. After all, we have not much right to boast of our national dislike of the knife. A clog at the end of a muscular collier's foot is quite as murderous a weapon.

Two members of a German band who were haled before the Exmouth Magistrates the other day were found to have in their possession postal orders for £43. Of course, all the Teutons who favour us with their presence do not set up as philanthropists, and the defendants in this case made no secret of their intention to transmit the £43 to their relatives in the Fatherland. The fact that they had saved this sum in nine weeks is interesting as an indication of the profitable nature of their profession. However much its performances may be derided, a German band is obviously a paying concern. There is little doubt, indeed, that hundreds of more or less musical aliens obtain more money by a short summer visit to England than they could earn in a year in their own country.

I am, myself, a thorough-going Free Trader; but if ever I felt inclined to become a Protectionist I should certainly support the proposal of an Exmouth correspondent for a tax upon these German and Italian immigrants. There is surely enough native talent to provide us with itinerant musicians. Besides, how can the intelligent foreigner help looking down upon us as an unmusical people so long as we draw even our street bands from abroad?

The following description of Jabez Balfour by Lord Rosebery in his despatch to the British Representative at Buenos Ayres may interest the friends and victims of the exile:—

> Age 50, looks 55; height 5 ft. 6 in.; broad shoulders; very corpulent; hair dark, turning grey, parted in the centre, thin on top of head; eyebrows dark; nose short; face full, complexion florid; straggling beard; dark slight whiskers turning grey; dark slight moustache; appearance of having weak legs; usually dressed in dark jacket; gentlemanly appearance.

This is a very fair portrait in words of Balfour, except that I should have said that he looks (unless altered by exile) rather under than over fifty, is as round as a beer-barrel, and has a bloated and puffed-out face, with pendent cheeks.

Mr. Jabez Balfour did not spare money in improving his residence at Burcot, the tennis-court alone having cost upwards of £2,000, and in the course of seven years he expended about £25,000 on the place.

Victims of the irrepressible Stockham will see from the following letter that the advice which I have given them may be implicitly relied upon:—

> Dear Sir,—I am an old retired parson, and have been just such another ass as the Essex Rector in the matter of "the irrepressible Stockham." I, however, within forty-eight hours after the receipt of his circular withdrew my name from his list of houses to be let furnished. Upon this I had a bill for services, about £3. 0s. 9d.
>
> I at once put the matter in my solicitor's hands, and have refused to pay one shilling.—Yours, &c.

My correspondent is over modest, however, in writing himself down an ass. The asses are those who submit to Stockham's impudent demands.

The South of Ireland seems to be a locality specially favoured by the proprietors of the Spanish Prison Trick. I have already given one or two examples from that part of the world, and, unfortunately, in one of them no less than £40 was got out of the victim—which, no doubt, encourages the gang to renewed exertions in the same region. A letter of the usual tenor was recently received by a small tradesman in County Limerick, in whose neighbourhood the ubiquitous revolutionary treasure has also been buried. The local newspapers would therefore do well to warn their readers against this impudent fraud. The address given by the owner of the treasure in this instance was "Senora Dona Julia Royas, Calle de Molino de Viento, No. 28, piso 2°., Madrid."

Spa, Belgium (10 hours from London and Paris.) Racing, tennis, golf, pigeon-shooting, &c. Splendid Casino, with theatre, &c. Waters unrivalled in cases of anæmia and dyspepsia.

I am told that on Brighton Pier some of the "penny in the slot" machines already bear the address of some one in the neighbourhood to whom application may be made in the event of the machine refusing to work after taking the money. Possibly the same plan is adopted in other places—at any rate, it is evident, from what has been done at Brighton, that the proposal which I made last week is a practical one. A correspondent writing on the subject suggests that municipal authorities should, by their by-laws, require a notice of this kind on all such machines. I doubt whether municipal authorities have the power to do this; but it might certainly be done by pier companies, railway companies, and others who allow the machines to be set up on their premises. They order this matter better in France, however, for I see that in Paris the Municipality have ordered all these machines to be removed from the streets.

The following advertisement, from the Standard, is highly characteristic of a certain type of parson. Such is the "high position" occupied by this cleric that he apparently expects a lady, not only to act as his housekeeper for nothing, but to contribute out of her superfluities to the household expenses in return for the distinguished privilege of ministering to such a family. Blessed are the meek!—

A clergyman, widower, with family, much needs a kind lady to superintend his household; she must have good means, to keep up the high position.—Address, in the first instance, O. A. M., &c.

As if it were not enough that private landowners should filch common rights and block public rights of way, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners have now gone to work in this direction. A vigorous campaign has been opened at Childs Hill against an attempt to close a footpath leading from West End to Hendon Church. The antiquity of the right of way is proved beyond question, but the Ecclesiastical Commissioners unceremoniously put up a notice closing the path; and when remonstrated with by the Local Board, they only went so far as to offer to leave the path open on condition that the Board would go to the expense of fencing it—a proposal only one degree less impudent than their original proceeding. Not long since, the Commissioners enclosed and built over a common in the same district, known as Golders Green; and recently a piece of waste land adjoining Cricklewood-lane has been filched by them. By such methods is "the patrimony of the Church" acquired!

We hear enough of all the causes at work to ruin the British farmer, but, until I see very strong evidence to the contrary, I shall always believe that landlordism is the most potent among them. Here is a story strongly pointing to that conclusion. I give it exactly as the farmer himself gives it to me, with the exception that the names are suppressed. I suppress them partly because the nobleman on whose estate the case occurred is a minor, and apparently in no way responsible for the proceedings, and partly because I do not believe that it is such an extreme case that special odium should rest on those concerned in it. Rather I give it as illustrative of the process of confiscation which goes on in all directions. The "Protection" which farmers would go for, if they were wise, is protection against the landlord as he appears in the following narrative:—

I took from the late Earl —— at Michaelmas, 1888, a farm of about 160 acres, at 30s. per acre; a high rental, there being extensive orcharding upon the farm. His agent, Mr. ——, transacted the business with me. The agent had not then held this appointment long, and had had no experience in such matters. He had been unsuccessful in a very different line of business. He had then become organising secretary to the Conservative Association at a small salary, and the fact of his holding such office was supposed to have been the reason of his appointment by the late Earl to the agency. Upon my applying for the farm, he inquired as to my financial position, also as to whether I was an active politician, as the Earl would not upon any account accept a Liberal as tenant. My assurance that I did not take an active part in politics appeared to satisfy him, and I signed the usual agreement, which contained some most unjust clauses, one of them stating that the thirty-third section of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883, would not apply to this tenancy. Relying upon the reputation, the late Earl had for his honourable dealings with his tenantry, I raised no objection. The state of the farm was deplorable. This the agent freely acknowledged. The late tenant had lost during his tenancy of sixteen years a large sum. He was wholly without experience in farming, and the farm was therefore in a shocking condition. The agent, I should mention, at the time I took the farm, informed me that an allowance of 10 per cent. had lately been made to the tenants, and would, he had no doubt, be continued. I farmed the place for two years, paid full rent, and never had a penny allowance, although other tenants were receiving certain allowances. My crops, particularly the fruit, failed. The plough land could not be planted in consequence of its foulness. I fallowed it at enormous expense. I planted hops extensively (this is a most expensive operation), pruned orchards, laid out large sums in manure, &c. During this time, through no fault of mine, the receipts were not so large as the expenditure by 75 per cent. In the end, I found myself short of capital, and was unable to pay my rent, due in January, 1891. I asked for time, and offered security. In reply, I received notice to give up the place. At Michaelmas, 1891, I paid, and, after a difficulty, the notice was withdrawn. About this time the Earl died and left his affairs in the hands of trustees. My next crops again turned out badly, and I was unable to pay rent due to be paid in January, 1892. Within nine weeks I received notice to quit at Michaelmas, 1892, the agent stating that this notice would under no circumstances be withdrawn. Immediately after the next rent day the agent called and said he had instructions from the trustees to get the rent and he should have to distrain, but if I would make everything I had over to him, he would pay the pressing creditors and would not distrain. I did this. He charged me at the rate of 50 per cent. per annum for the advance. I appealed to the trustees to allow me to continue my tenancy and reap the benefits of my capital and time, and also asked the young Earl to intercede upon my behalf, but the agent told them that I could not go on, and my appeals were ignored. I am positive from what I have seen and heard that the reports the agent made to them were false, but I never had an opportunity of meeting them, and I had to leave. I had improved the farm by about £1,500. I was given £150 for hop planting. Certain things which ought to have been valued the agent would not have valued. Had I given notice of six months of certain claims for manures, &c., I could have substantiated them, but the agent took advantage of my not doing so, and would not allow anything. In short, I took this farm in a dreadful state four years ago, ruined myself in getting it in order, and putting it in a paying condition, and was then turned out because I was poor, and the landlord has reaped the whole benefit.

Herefordshire Cider & Perry, six distinct varieties. Gold Medal, Paris, 1888. The Bishop of Ely writes, 1892, "Your Cider & Perry are excellent." List from H. P. BULMER & Co., Rylands, Hereford.

BIRDS of a feather flock together. The first grey hair will soon have companions, unless their coming is rendered impossible by the use of Mrs. S. A. ALLEN'S World's Hair Restorer.

The Lord and the Commons.

By a Rural Commoner.

[In the Grand Committee of the House of Lords, in considering the Bill to amend the law relating to commons, on Thursday last, Lord Salisbury attacked the measure, saying that, "the cry about the preservation of commons, except in the neighbourhood of large towns, had, he believed, a large element of bunkum. To nobody in the rural districts, except to those who rode on horseback, was it important that commons should be preserved."]

My lord, 'tis well known you've estates far-extending,
Have acres of gardens through which you can roam;
That the parks and the pleasances seem never-ending
Which amply surround your magnificent home.
You have lovely parterres decked with blooms that are rarest,
You have woodland and meadow, and upland and dell,
Where Nature has lavished her gifts which are fairest,
To add to the charms of the place where you dwell;
In short, blessed by Fortune, 'tis yours to possess
Ev'ry favour and gift that existence can bless.

Then, surely my lord, it is scarcely becoming
That you should our claim to the commons begrudge;
And, as the result of a biassed up-summing,
Should lightly dismiss our contentions as fudge.
You, at least, might have shown a more just disposition,
You, at least, might your cynical sneer have repress'd;
And have left us, to temper our wretched condition,
The rights that our fathers, unchallenged, possess'd.
You, dowered with plenty in basket and store,
Should not, at our cost, be so greedy of more.

The lords of the manor, you say, need protection,
Their fanciful wrongs you are quick to discuss;
But cannot you show a less partial affection?
Is there not to be also protection for us?
Are we to be robbed of the rights we've inherited,
To add to the landowners' ill-gotten gain?
Are we to be met by coercion unmerited,
To be forced from the commons by fraud and chicane?
And then, if we venture to mildly protest,
To be told that our plea smacks of bunkum at best?

If it's bunkum, my lord, for poor folk to be yearning
To breathe the free air where its scent is most sweet;
If it's bunkum to long from the road to be turning
To feel the soft turf 'neath our labour-worn feet;
If it's bunkum to love to lie down on the heather,
To list to the lark till it's lost in the blue,
To see where the earth and the sky meet together,
And to taste old delights which for ever are new—
If it's bunkum, my lord, of such joys to take heed,
Then our plea for the commons is bunkum indeed!

The life that we live knows but little of pleasure;
Our labour is sore, rough and hard is our fare;
Of the favours of Fortune, of wealth and of leisure,
'Tis little, alack! ever falls to our share.
Stop, my lord, then, and think what it is you are doing
When greatly abusing the might you possess,
And blindly the ends of your order pursuing,
You'd add to the hardships you ought to redress.
Stop my lord, then, and think, lest your folly you rue—
If our commons are doomed, why our Lords are doomed too!

The Canadian Government has decided to sell the Thousand Islands in the river St. Lawrence. There are upwards of twelve hundred rocky islands in this romantic group, and they are situated in an enormous expansion of the river opposite Kingston, and between the State of New York and the Province of Ontario. I should fancy that some of these islands might be converted into charming summer residences for millionaires.

A Trinidad paper, the San Fernando Gazette, has just published a strong article upon another aspect of the coolie immigration question, to which I referred a few weeks ago. From the last prison statistics for the island it appears that the convictions of coolies during the year 1892 were at the rate of over 20 per 1,000 of the coolie population. It is also stated that the majority of convictions are for the worst class of offences, highway robbery and robbery with violence, outrages on women, and unnatural crimes. These facts speak conclusively for the character of the coolie element with which the colony is flooded in order to benefit absentee landlords at the expense of the native labourer. There were, at the time of the last return, over 70,000 coolies in Trinidad. It stands to reason that, besides their being a standing danger to the rest of the community, contact with this horde of savages must exercise a demoralising effect throughout the lower ranks of the native population. Evidence that this is so is not wanting.

Whenever a Liberal goes over to the enemy, he is at once declared by the Unionist Press to be a gentleman, wise beyond the generality, and most influential. Such, a few weeks ago, was Mr. Bolton represented to be. Now it is the turn of Mr. W. H. Grenfell. His conscience will no longer permit him to remain true to a Party that allows the Irish to legislate upon British affairs, but that even if the Home Rule Bill does justice to Ireland, this is overweighted by the crime of not joining in a Conference to make silver a universal currency. The Daily Telegraph explains that Mr. Grenfell is a "man of character, of intellectual culture, and of varied experience in affairs," and his defection "is a serious blow to the Government." As a matter of fact, he is a young gentleman of wealth and fashion, who can punt and row to perfection, and who once held the important position of a Groom-in-Waiting, whatever that may be. His uncle is a bi-metallist, and he himself probably accepts blindly the opinions of his uncle, with as little knowledge of the currency question as a sheep that eats grass in one of his uncle's fields. Socially eminent he may possibly be, politically he is utterly insignificant. He is, if indeed he can be said to be anything, a Whig; and the sooner that the Whigs assume their true position as supporters of a Tory Government, the better will it be for the Radical Party. Mr. Grenfell, however, deserves approval for having surrendered his seat, and thus given his constituents an opportunity to elect a representative in accordance with their views.

The Pall Mall Gazette in alluding to an article in last week's Truth, in which the rival demerits of Herod and Judas were discussed, opines that I am not strong in my Scripture. Possibly; but in regard to the family of Herod I am strong. I know perfectly that there were several of the family. Herod the Great killed his wife Mariamne, Herod Antipas put John the Baptist to death, and Herod Agrippa was eaten by worms. Mr. Chamberlain, in indirectly comparing Mr. Gladstone to Herod, used the word in the sense that Pharaoh is used when reference is made to the old Egyptian Kings, and Cæsar when reference is made to the Roman Emperor. In like manner, Herod is a general term covering all the rulers of the Herod family in Judæa. In my remarks, therefore, I included all the family in the name of Herod.

Star & Garter Hotel, Richmond Hill, S.W. High, dry, & healthy. Famed for its Guild and Corporation banquets, wedding breakfasts, balls, &c. Unrivalled winter residence.—Chas. James, Manager.

In one constituency—and I am sorry to say a Liberal constituency—the "mostly fools" dictum reigns supreme, if I am to credit a story which has appeared in the newspapers. The constituency is, it would seem, represented by a Liberal, and this Liberal had contemplated having some friends to stay with him in the country during the month of September. Assuming that the House would still be sitting, he had paired for the period of his party. On this, the Liberal electors notified to him that they could not allow any such proceeding, and told him that they expected him to be in his place prepared to vote, so long as the House sat. They do not wish their Member, so far as I can gather, to take an active part in discussion, and how anything is gained by this unfortunate man and a Conservative being forced mechanically to troop through a division-lobby every evening instead of neutralising each other by pairing, I fail to understand. I really am ashamed to think that Liberal electors should be such thoroughgoing asses.

I consider that the House of Commons is behind-hand in its work because (1) it met late instead of early; (2) before Easter more Bills were brought in than it was possible to pass in the Session in which Home Rule was to be pushed through; (3) the Unionists were allowed to fool away several weeks of precious time in abstract discussions upon the wording of the first two clauses of the Home Rule Bill. If we had by this time got through Home Rule, and made real progress in the Estimates, we might have had an autumn sitting in which one or two controversial British Bills might have been passed. But Home Rule will not leave the House before the end of August. Taking the number of days to be passed over the Estimates as the average that were occupied on them in each Session of the last Parliament, they will not be through before the end of September. Allow a holiday of six weeks, and this would bring us to the middle of November. This would leave us with not much more time than would be needed to pass the Employers' Liability Bill, the Indian Budget, the Appropriation Bill, and the various small non-controversial Bills that have reached their third reading. We may regret that there are not more hours in each day, and that there are not more days in each month; but this regret will neither increase the length of days nor of months. It sounds all very well to say that we will do this or that. But what we shall do must depend on what we can do.

My contention is, that we shall make no real progress by attempting to carry out a programme in which we shall probably fail. The best course would be to prorogue after the Estimates, the Indian Budget, the small non-contested Bills, and a Resolution carrying over Bills in which progress has been made to next Session, are passed. With the knowledge that Parliament would rise as soon as this modest bill of fare is over, an effort would be made by all to bring the Session to a close. The next Session might then commence on November 1, and we might, with a short interval of a holiday at Christmas, sit on until the principal British Bills of the Newcastle Programme have been sent up to the Lords. By this time next year we should in this way have made far more progress than if we engage in a fight to push through Bills this Session.

The real fact is this. Everything depends upon whether the next Session is to be a British Session, or whether we are to pass the time sending up Home Rule again to the Lords. We British have given up one Session to Home Rule, and, so far as regards the House of Commons, it will have passed. We have a right, therefore, to claim that our Bills be sent up to the Lords once, before the Home Rule Bill is sent up twice; all the more as sending it up a second time to the Lords will not advance Home Rule by one single day. The Irish ought to be—and I presume are—grateful to us for putting their Bill in the forefront. Our Bills are as important to us as Home Rule is to them. If the Irish are not prepared to do for us next Session what we have done for them this Session, the alliance which is based upon "give and take" must come to an end. No one is a more ardent Home Ruler than I am. But I am not one of those who live alone for Home Rule. I live for the triumph of Democracy in all parts of the United Kingdom, and I am not prepared to subordinate, in matters of procedure, everything to the arbitrary will of the Irish Members. This would, indeed, be a very strange mode of giving effect to an alliance between the British Radicals and the Irish Nationalists.

If we fail to carry our Bills, and if we go to the country with only Home Rule, we shall in all probability be beaten. To pass, therefore, British measures is as essential for the Irish as it is for us. The success of Home Rule, in truth, depends upon progress being made with British measures.

It is suggested by some very ardent Radicals that the Estimates should be closured. If this means that after each vote has been, if wished by any members, fairly debated, and any objections incidental to it answered, the Closure should be applied to the particular vote, I am all for the suggestion; but if it means that the Estimates should be reported to the House on a fixed day, and that the votes should be taken without debate, I am not for any such scheme, which would withdraw votes of money from the cognisance of Parliament. Even supposing that the Liberals were always henceforward in power, this would be most undesirable; but it is not likely that this will be the case. That discussions on Estimates are often abused, and much time wasted on unimportant items, is true. On the other hand, their submission to the House of Commons in detail gives Members the opportunity to raise all matters incident to every public department. A nice crop of jobs we should have, were this right of criticism to cease.

I hardly think that the objections to a House of Hereditary Legislators would disappear were these Legislators to be allowed to throw out any Bill coming from the Commons twice, and the Bill, if passed in the RIMMEL'S TOILET VINEGAR has for over half a century sustained its high reputation as an indispensable toilet requisite. Delightfully cooling to the skin.—96, Strand; 180, Regent-st.; 64, Cheapside.

Commons a third time, then to become law. Whether there be two Legislative Chambers or one is a mere question of detail; that all Legislators should be elected to their functions by the people is a question of principle. This is why I have brought forward again and again a resolution against all hereditary rights to legislate. On my first moving it, a very few voted for it; when I last brought it in, the entire Liberal Party voted for it. It only remains, therefore, for the Party to give legislative effect to the principle that they have accepted.

It is said that a Bill abolishing the House of Lords would not pass, because the Lords would never assent to their own extinction. This is idle nonsense. If the country pronounces in favour of this extinction, it is no more likely that five hundred Lords would be able to resist the decision, than that a condemned criminal would not be hanged because he refused to express his approval of this mode of expediting his passage into another world. Were the Lords not to attend, this would be met by creating a sufficiency of new Peers, pledged to extinction, to secure a majority for the Bill.

There is nothing unconstitutional in this. When a Bill was discussed limiting the power of the Sovereign to create Peers, it was defeated on the ground that it would make the Peers independent of the will of the nation. The Ministers of Anne did not hesitate to create a batch of Peers to secure a majority. The Reform Bill of 1832 was passed by the following declaration being published:—

> The King grants permission to Earl Grey and his Chancellor, Lord Brougham, to create such a number of Peers as will be sufficient to ensure the passing of the Reform Bill.

The servile doctrine that a Prime Minister may not, as the executive head of the Government, bring the Lords into line with the Commons by new creations is a very modern one. If Mr. Gladstone, on the Home Rule Bill passing the Commons, were to make public a declaration such as that of Earl Grey, it would not even be necessary to create Peers. Their Lordships, as in 1832, would at once succumb. It is because this will not be done that I have very little heart in the proceedings of the House of Commons. To pass a Session in carrying a Bill through the Commons, and to allow the Lords to act on their declared threat to throw it out, is, to my thinking, a betrayal of the cause of popular Government.

There is little doubt that, had the Conservatives been in power, we might have gravitated into a war with France on account of the Siam incident. Our position was very satisfactorily stated by Lord Rosebery when he said that he declined to give any advice to Siam, as that country must settle its own differences with France; but that we had handed over to Siam certain territories abutting upon our frontier on condition that they were not ceded to any third country, and that Siam consequently could not cede them to France. The French at once admitted the force of this, and from that moment the entire question, so far as it regarded us, was settled.

The idea that, because we own India, we have a right to prevent any European Power from approaching its confines, does not hold water in the present day. We must accept the fact that our possession of a portion of Asia gives no special right to bar the entire Continent to all other European Powers. Of course, it would be advantageous to us if neither France nor Russia had any territories in Asia, because this would render it more easy for us to defend India. We have, however, to recognise facts, and that there are other Powers in the world as well as ourselves. I am myself a believer in a clearly-defined frontier. I have no great belief in buffer States. As matters stand, I think it very probable that Siam will gravitate within the sphere of French influence. But unless we are prepared to assert that this country is within our sphere of influence, I do not well see how this can be helped. At the same time I do not perceive the danger. India is a big country, with a huge army. The French territory in Asia is very small, and has practically no army. If we remain masters of the sea, I do not think that we have anything to fear from France, even should she be mistress of Siam.

But I do most sincerely hope that something will be done in regard to Egypt to place our relations with that country on a permanent and definite footing. The present state of things is a persistent danger to us. From the military standpoint we gain nothing from the occupation of the country; from the diplomatic standpoint we place ourselves in a false position. There are three ways in which the question may be settled: (1) by direct negotiation with France; (2) by direct negotiation with Turkey; (3) by direct negotiation with all the Great Powers. The latter would probably be the best, but if we could come before a Conference with a preliminary agreement with France this would greatly tend to a proper solution. I fully admit that there are difficulties, but I contend that the objections to doing nothing are greater than those to doing something.

SCRUTATOR.

"MACLEAN AND HIS SPONSORS."

THE article under the above head in last week's TRUTH has brought me a letter from the Earl of Dysart, enclosing the following copy of a letter to Angus Maclean, which it is due to his lordship that I should publish at once:—

> Ham House, Petersham, S.W.,
> August 2.
>
> SIR,—From an article in last week's TRUTH" I see that you still continue to make use of my name in connection with your society. I should be glad to know how it is that no notice has been taken of the letter which I wrote to you some time ago requesting you to remove my name immediately.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully, DYSART.
>
> Angus Maclean, Esq.

I have also received communications from Sir Robert Rawlinson, Sir James Miller, Professor Wallace, of Edinburgh, Professor Sylvester, of Oxford, Baron de Bush, and Dr. Alberto Nin, the Uruguayan Minister. All of these gentlemen deny that Maclean has any authority to make use of their names. Several, having been members, have at different times withdrawn their names, and Dr. Nin is unaware that he has ever been a member. Sir James Miller's statement is a specimen of the way in which several "honorary members" have been treated:—

> On June 28 my attention was called to the then current number of TRUTH, in which my name figured as an honorary member of the British and Foreign Association. I immediately requested my solicitors to see that my name was withdrawn from this list, and they wrote to Maclean to this effect. If the list which you publish is taken from a circular of a later date than the above, I shall be much obliged if you will inform me, that I may take such steps as will ensure my name being removed. I may say that I have no recollection of ever having given Maclean permission to use my name, though I find I did some years ago, deceived, no doubt, by some specious circular, send a donation to a society of some such name as this. Beyond this I have no connection with the so-called British and Foreign Association.

Sir Frederick Pollock writes me a letter, in which he states that he became a life member of the Association some years ago, in the belief that it was a genuine undertaking, and that as long as he continued to receive the journal of the Association, he concluded that it was doing what it professed to do. Sir Frederick goes on to say that he "does not conceive that he has any power to prevent the directors from publishing the fact that he was an original life member;" but he intimates that any one who infers from such publication of his name that he continues to approve of the Association, does so at his own risk. I should myself conceive that a "life member" has the power to resign his membership, and that having done so he can prevent his name being published among the present members. But in view of the past history of Maclean and his Association, and the facts in regard to him which I have recently published, the introduction of these legal subtleties seems a trifle out of place.

With regard to Sir James Miller's question respecting the date of the circular from which I quoted the names of honorary members, I cannot at the moment speak positively. Maclean, as I have explained, has been for some time past living by answering the advertisements of governesses, secretaries, and others in want of employment, and inviting the advertisers to call at his office in Westminster. He then invites them to subscribe to his Association as a simple means of obtaining all they desire, promising, if the victim shows any reluctance, that the half-guinea subscription will be refunded if an engagement is not secured in a specified time—though in no instance that I can discover has he ever refunded the money. The particular circular from which I quoted last week had been handed to one of the parties recently swindled in this way, but I cannot say whether this was before or after June 28. I may say, however, for the information of Sir James Miller and all others concerned, that Maclean appears to have had no new circulars printed for several years past. He is still using up his old stock, and most of them still bear the address at Temple Chambers which Maclean must have left at least two years ago. The address is altered by pen and ink, and the names of the few "honorary members," who have ordered Maclean to desist from making use of them, are usually eliminated in the same way. But this mode of procedure, of course, always leaves open a possibility that some of the names which have been ordered to be removed may still appear.

As regards the way in which the names originally got on to the list, I have no doubt that many of the "honorary members" are in the position of Sir James Miller; that is to say, "years ago, deceived no doubt by some specious circular," they sent a donation. That, however, is no reason why they—I refer to the large majority from whom I have still to hear—should look on indifferently while their names are used to back what has degenerated into a swindle of the lowest and most barefaced description. I must point out that I have as yet been unable to elicit any response from a number of persons whose names are peculiarly likely to impose upon girls and young men in search of literary or secretarial work—for instance, Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, Mr. Bret Harte, Mr. Paul Blouet, Mr. Edward Terry, Lady Florence Dixie, and Mrs. Oscar Beringer. Since I last wrote on this subject, Mr. W. H. Grenfell has withdrawn his name from the roll of the Liberal Party, but I would suggest that it is of vastly more consequence to his fellow-creatures that he should withdraw it from the list of Angus Maclean's patrons.

Just as I am going to press I have received information that Maclean's holiday is likely to be prolonged indefinitely. He has never returned to the "Offices of the Association" in Millbank-street since he departed. The landlord has now entered and taken possession, and the room has been let to somebody else. For the present, therefore, the "British and Foreign Association" has a name but no local habitation, unless it be the particular spot where Angus Maclean is now hiding.

SANITATION AT ALDERSHOT.

In view of the probability, or possibility, of a discussion of the subject at some not distant date on the Army Estimates, I desire to draw attention again to the sanitary condition of Aldershot Camp. Since the matter was last referred to in TRUTH, some few attempts have been made to remedy the more glaring of the evils which I then pointed out. The new married quarters have been so far pushed on that it is not likely that women and children will be condemned to pass another winter in the ramshackle huts described in my previous articles. The threatened building round the Cambridge Hospital has, I understand, been abandoned, at any rate for the present. Progress has also been made towards providing the requisite sanitary accommodation in connection with the new barracks.

But while a few items like these are to be set to the credit of those in authority, there remains enough on the other side of the account to make the state of Aldershot a disgrace to the Government of this country. The first matter which calls for attention is the sewage farm, which under the influence of the drought and the hot summer appears to have developed into a public nuisance of the first magnitude. This sewage-farm has long since been officially condemned, and how it ever came into existence is a marvel. The site is within two or three hundred yards of the Camp buildings—the nearest being, as might be expected, the North Camp Hospital. The ground itself is probably the most unsuitable for the purpose in the district, there being

A Fair Beautiful Skin.—By washing with Sulpholine Soap the natural tint and peach-like bloom of a perfect complexion is ensured.

MINTON'S (Limited). MINTON'S CHINA.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

hereabouts, in place of the gravel which underlies the greater part of the Camp, a stratum of clay at a depth of a few feet, which effectually prevents the absorption of liquid matter. On to this spot is poured the whole sewage of the Camp; and, either from the surface soil having become saturated with sewage owing to the character of the lower strata, or from an unusual amount of evaporation and fermentation having been set up owing to the heat of the summer, the stench from the place is described as having been during the last few months perfectly intolerable. One witness with an extensive experience in some of the most odoriferous districts of Asia, deposes that he has never smelt anything approaching it; and I am informed that throughout the hot weather those persons whose quarters are within reach of the smell have been compelled to live with their doors and windows shut. The consequences of such a state of things are not likely to end in mere inconvenience. I understand that English cholera has been so prevalent in the North Camp during the summer as almost to amount to an epidemic. Sore throat has also been rife. That the sewage-farm is the source of the mischief in both cases there can hardly be a doubt. What the effects have been on the patients in the hospital only the doctors can say.

One of the worst omens for the future is that the string of huts dignified with the name of the North Camp Hospital has quite recently been beautified with a new coat of paint. This apparently implies that the huts are to have a fresh lease granted them, and the term for which their existence has been renewed is understood to be three years. I cannot say that the North Camp Hospital has, like the sewage-farm, ever been officially condemned; but by everybody outside official circles the huts have long since been pronounced a disgrace to the Government which puts them to their present purpose. That in the face of all that has been said on the subject—I may refer more especially to the denunciation of the shanties some two years ago in the British Medical Journal—it should be deliberately decided to utilise this wretched makeshift as a Hospital for another three years, is nothing less than a scandal. I understand that within quite a recent period there have been several deaths from erysipelas in the Hospital. This can only be the consequence of the foul condition of the huts and the accumulations of filth under the floors; and it would be well if exact particulars on this head could be obtained in Parliament. It should be added that in close proximity to the Hospital huts are now established a range of marquees holding the overflow of the infectious disease patients; so that between these and the sewage-farm nothing has been omitted which could bring the external surroundings of this precious hospital into keeping with its interior economy.

Another matter closely analogous is the want of decent hospital accommodation for women and children. For this section of the community a few beds are provided in a tumble-down shed, which for the most part serves the purpose of a lying-in ward. Cases which cannot be accommodated here are sent to Guildford Infirmary, or other places for which letters of recommendation can be obtained. It is idle for the authorities to plead that the money is not available to remedy this disgraceful state of things. The most scandalous point in connection with the present state of Aldershot is that, while women and children have been herded like beasts in huts which are scarcely weather-proof; while a sewage-farm which has been officially condemned is left month after month festering and breeding disease at the very doors of the Camp, while the North Camp is furnished with a "hospital" which would not be tolerated in a pioneer settlement in the backwoods; and while the women and children of the Camp are dependent for hospital treatment on the charity of neighbouring districts, money has been plentifully expended on such objects as racquet-courts, drill-hall, transport stables, and the utterly superfluous new church.

There seems every reason to hope that Lord Roberts will succeed Sir Evelyn Wood in the Aldershot command. I trust that nothing will occur to prevent this appointment; for nowhere else—outside the Horse Guards—could the talents and experience of the ex-Commander-in-Chief in India be employed with more advantage to the Army and the country. Should Lord Roberts go to Aldershot, before everything else his attention ought to be devoted to the matters mentioned above, and many others of the same class which I have no space to deal with now. I do not doubt that it will be, but it would greatly strengthen his hands if in the meantime Parliament were to express its mind freely upon the manner in which money has hitherto been muddled away, and the lamentable state of things now existing.

Caution.—The Goldsmiths' & Silversmiths' Company, 112, Regent-street, W., beg to state that they have purchased the whole of the business of the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Limited (A. B. Savory & Sons), late of Cornhill, but the stock being old and unsuitable for the Company's trade was disposed of to the Public by Auction at Christie's, and any statement to the contrary is inaccurate and misleading. The Company, having also bought the dies of the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Limited, is the only firm in a position to supply the Goldsmiths' Alliance patterns.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

"FONETICS" IN FRANCE.

